Markdale Standard

VOL. 3.--No. 8. MARKDALE, ONT., NOV. 2, 1882. No. 112.

The Markdale Standard

IS PUBLISHED

EVERY THURSDAY EVENING,

At Markdale Ontario.

$1 Per Annum

IN ADVANCE.

$1.25 in three months. $2 if not paid till the end of the year. No paper discontinued until all arears are paid up, except at the option of the publisher, and parties refusing papers without paying up will be held responsible for the years subscriptions until they comply with the rules.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING:

One column one year		$50 00
Half do.	do.	27 50
Quarter do.	do.	15 00
Eighth do.	do.	8 00
Card	do.	4 00
Over ten lines, first insertion per line		8
Each subsequent insertion		3

The number of lines to be reckoned by the space occupied measured by a scale of solid brevier. Advertisements without specific directions will be published till forbid and charged accordingly. All transitory advertisements must be in the office of publication by 11o'clock on the wednesday proceeding their publication.

JOB PRINTING

Of every description executed with neatness and despatch at the Office of the STANDARD, Markdale.

C. W. RUTLEDGE.

EDITOR & PROPRIETOR.

PROFESSIONAL AND BUSINESS DIRECTORY,

Drs. Sproule & Armstrong,

Physicians, Surgeons, Accoucheur &c.

OFFICE --Medical Hall; residence at Markdale House.

B. Ghent, M.D., M.R.C.P. & S., O. Physician and Surgeon, Priceville, Graduate of University. Vict. College.
" " New York, and
Hon. Graduate, of the same,
" " Ayleth Medical Institute.
" " Optnalmic Hospital, N.Y.
Member Coll. Physicians & Surgeons, O. 104

Dental Card.

Cameron & Knight,

DENTAL SURGEONS,

Office over D. A. Cameron and Co's Drug Store, Poulett St., OWEN SOUND.
Every attention given to the preservation of the natural teeth. Artificial Dentures mounted on Gold, Celluloid, and Rubber bases.

Will be at Markdale the last Tuesday in each month,

A. Cameron, M.D., & L.F.P. & S. Glasgow, L.D.S., Ont. C. F. Knight, L.D.S. Medalist Royal College Den. Sur., Ont

Legal.

Frost & Frost,

BARRISTERS, AND ATTORNEYS-AT Law, Solicitors in Chancery, Conveyancers, &c., Owen Sound, have resumed at Flesherton, Office open every Thursday, as heretofore.

ALFRED FROST, County Crown Attorney. J. W. FROST, LL. B. 1

J. MASSON,

BARRISTER, MASTER AND DEP. REG in Chancery, Notary Public, Conveyancer, &c.

MONEY TO LEND AT SIX PER CENT.

Offices--Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block Poulett St.; and in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week. 57.ly

Creasor & Morrison,

BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, CONVEYANCES, &c. &c.

OFFICES in Owen Sound, Dufferin Block, over W. F. Wolf's Store and in
MARKDALE;
Over W. J. McFarland's Store on Thursday and Friday of each week.

☞ Funds to lend on reasonable terms.

JOHN CREASOR, Q. C. DUNCAN MORISON
Markdale, March 15, 1882. 79-1y

Alexander Brown.

ISSUER of Marriage Licenses, Fire and Life Insurance Agent. Commissioner in B. R. &c. Conveyancer and Licensed Auctioneer for the County of Grey. Farmers, Merchants, and Land Sales, Punctually attended to and charges made very moderate.

Priceville, Sept. 17, 1880. 1-y

A CARD.

To all who are suffering from the errors and indiscretions of youth, nervous weakness, early decay, loss of manhood, &c., I will send a receipe that will cure you, FREE OF CHARGE. This great Remedy was discovered by a missionary in South America. Send a self-addressed envelope to REV. JOSEPH T. INMAN, Station D, New York City.

Subscribe for the STANDARD and get that splendid horse book free. Commence any time.

Hotels.

REVERE HOTEL,

MARKDALE.

T. SPROULE, - Proprietor.

THIS popular Hotel has had a large addition added to it, thoroughly refitted, and is now second to none in the county. Good stabling and attentive ostler. First-class accommodation for commercial travelers. $1 per day. Barber's shop in connection. 17-ly

Markdale Hotel.

Good Accommodation for Travellers. 'Bus to and from all trains. Charges moderate.
Markdale. A. RUTLEDGE, PROP.

COMMERCIAL HOTEL.

PRICEVILLE, Ont.

Large and commodious Sample Rooms Good Bed Rooms, &c. The Bar and larde well supplied with the best the market affords; good Stabling and attentive Hostler's
THOS. ATKINSON, Proprietor

Miscellaneous.

John McDonald,

CHATSWORTH,

DIVISION Court Clerk, Issuer of Marriage Licenses, Commissioner in B.R., Conveyancer, &c. Deeds, Mortgages, Wills, &c., attended to promptly, accurately, neatly, and cheaply. Private funds to lend in small sums on easy terms. Notes discounted

R. M. Galbraith,

AUCTIONEER AND GENERAL LAND Agent, Williamsford Station. Auction Sales attended in all parts of the County. Goods sold on commission. Rates moderate. Pianos, Organs, and Sewing Machines; also Fruit and Ornamental Trees, Vines, Agricultural Implemennts, and Machinery of all kinds on sale.

Williamsford, Jan. 27, 1881.

T. E. DAVIS,

BUILDER & CONTRACTOR, (Stone and Brick). After completing 13 buildings his season is still on the track and is still prepared to do all kinds of stone and brick work, plastering and tuck pointing. Those who contemplate building will find it to their advantage to give him a call.

Residence corner of Brown and Sproule Stetes. MARKDALE. 16-y

Wm. Brown,

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.

Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.

N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate security.

Joseph Gibson,

PLAIN & ORNAMENTAL

PLASTERER,

WHITEWASHING—CALSOMINING in Shades and Colors.

All work guaranteed. Charges moderate.

Markdale P.O.

LOYAL MARKDALE LODGE,

Of C. O. O. F. No. 78, will meet in their hall on Monday evening, Nov. 14th, at eight o'clock p. m.

108 W. L. YOUNG, Sec'y.

EUCENIA

Grist, Saw and Lath Mills

Having made extensive improvements in my Grist Mill I feel confident I can give good satisfaction.

GOOD FLOUR ALWAYS ON HAND.

Chopping Done Every Day.

Custom Sawing and Bills Filled on the shortest notice.

LUMBER AND LATH ALWAYS ON HAND.

Cherry, Butternut, White Ash, Black Ash, Basswood, Pine and Hemlock Logs wanted.

69ly. M. AKITT, Eugenia.

JOHN NOBLE,

MARKDALE.

GENER'L BLACKSMITH

HORSE SHOEING

A SPECIALTY.

ROBT. ASKIN,

MARKDALE,

Has opened out a First-Class

Furniture!

—AND—

UNDERTKING ESTABLISHMENT.

And therefore has supplied a want long felt, especially in the Undertaking Line.

COFFINS,

CASKETS, SHROUDS,

and all

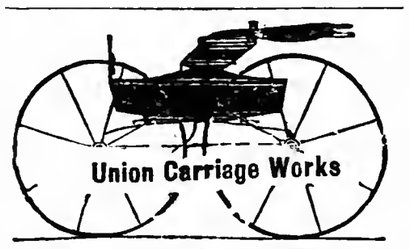
FUNERAL FURNISHINGS,

supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse

for hire at moderate rates.

FURNITURE!



From the Common to the

Best and Latest Styles,

in everything in the line.

Call and see for yourselve .

ROBT. ASKIN.

Union Carriage Works.

All work manufactured from

FIRST CLASS MATERIAL

In the Lateat and Best Improved Style, and finished with English Varnish.

Painting & Trimming Rigs

will receive prompt attention.

All Repairs executed in the shortest possible time consistent with good workmanship.

GOOD WORK A SPECIALITY.

Remember the Shop, opposite the Cheapside

D. J. SHANAHAN,

Proprietor.

Markdale, Dec. 2nd, 1881. 64.

QUICK AS A WINK

is the way Photos are taken by

J. L. Browne,

MARKDALE.

$3 00 per dozen for FINE FINISHED CABINETS

$4 00 FOR Panels

For One Month.

Fine Lot of Photo Frames on hand. Over Standard office

HAIR CUTTING AND SHAVING

By T. D. Smith.

Razors, Straps, and Shaving Brushes for sale. Razors sharpened.

☞ Orders filled for Tomb Stones.

STARTLING DISCOVERY!

LOST MANHOOD RESTORED.

A victim of youthful imprudence causing Premature Decay, Nervous Debility, Lost Manhood, etc., having tried in vain every known remedy, has discovered a simple self cure, which he will send FREE to his fellow-sufferer, address J. H. REEVES, 43 Chatham St., N. Y.

$66 a week in your own town: $5 outfit free. No risk. Everything new. Capital not required. We will furnish you everything. Many are making fortunes. Ladies make as much as men, and boys and girls make great pay. Reader, if you want a business at which you can make great pay all the time you work, write for particulars to H. HALLETT & Co., Portland, Maine. 71-126

WARNING!

There is great danger of taking cold from wet feet. If you want to Guard Against Sickness!

Keep your feet dry and warm by procuring your

BOOTS!

—FROM—

KAY & THOMAS.

Satisfaction Guaranteed. Medicated Cork Soles, all sizes, kept on hand. Remember the place opposite the new STANDARD Office. 49

Best business now before the public. You can make money faster at work for us than at anything else. Capital not needed. We will start you. $12 a day and upwards made at home by the industrious. Men, women, boys and girls wanted everywhere to work for us. Now is the time. You can work in spare time only or give your whole time to the business. You can live at home and do the work. No other business will pay you nearly as well. No one can fail to make enormous pay by engaging at once. Costly outfit and terms free. Money made fast, easily and honorably. Address TRUE & Co., Augusta, Maine. 71-126

REST AND COMFORT TO THE SUFFERING

Brown's Household Panacea has no equal for relieving pain, both internal and external. It cures pain in the Side, Back or Bowels, Sore Throat, Rheumatism, Toothache, Lumbago and any kind of a Pain or Ache. "It will most surely quicken the Blood and heal, as its acting power is wonderful." "Brown's Household Panacea," being acknowledged as the great Pain Reliever, and of double the strength of any other Elixer or Liniment in the world, should be in every family handy for use when wanted "as it really is the best remedy in the world for Cramps in the Stomach, and Pains and Aches of all kinds," and is for sale by all Druggists at 25 cents a bottle. 75-127

EARS FOR THE MILLION

HOO CHOO'S BALSAM OF SHARK'S OIL positively Restores the Hearing, and is the Only Absolute Cure for Deafness known. This Oil is abstracted from peculiar species of small White Shark, caught in the Yellow Sea, known as CARCHARODON RONDELETII. Every Chinese fisherman knows it. Its virtues as a restorative of hearing were discovered by a Buddhist Priest were discovered about the year 1410. Its cures were so numerous, and many so seemingly miraculous, that the remedy was officially proclaimed over the entire Empire. Its use became so universal, that for over 300 years no Deafness has existed among the Chinese people. Sent, charges prepaid, to any address at $1.00 per bottle.

Hear what the Deaf say:

It has performed a miracle in my case.
I have no unearthly noises in my head, and hear much better.
I have been greatly benefited.
My deafness helped a great deal—think another bottle will cure me.

Its virtues are unquestionable and its curative character absolute, as the writer can personally testify, both from experience and observation. Write at once to Haylock and Jenney, 7 Dey Street, New York, enclosing $1 and you will receive by return a remedy that will enable you to hear like anybody else, and whose curative effects will be permanent. You will never regret doing so."—EDITOR OF MERCANTILE REVIEW.

☞ To avoid loss in the mails, please send money by Registered Letter.

Only imported by HAYLOCK & JENNEY, late Haylock & Co.,

Sole Agents for America. 7 DEY ST NEW YORK 93-145.

$2 Watches, stem winders $3.50. White metal Hunting Case $5. Imitation gold $6. Solid gold $12. Cheapest and best for your own use or speculative purposes. Valuable catalogue free. THOMPSON & CO., 283 Hanover St., New York.

Wm. Lucas & Co.,

BANKERS,

Money Loaned

IN large or small amounts, at all times, on good endorsed notes, or on collateral security.

INTEREST AT 6 PER CENT.

Allowed on Savings Deposits.

☞ Drafts issued and Collections made on points, at lowest rates.

W.M. LUCAS,
Manager.

September 23, 1880. 2-ly

ESTRAY CATTLE.

CAME INTO THE PREMISES OF THE undersigned, Lots 37 and 38, 1st concession W. T. & S. Road, on or about the 12th of October, three head of cattle—two steers and one cow. Steers are about three years old. The owner is requested to prove property, pay expenses and take them away.

JOHN SARGEANT.

October 24th 1882, 111-4w,*

FLESHERTON STATION.

The grist mill is doing a good business, and gives satisfaction to customers.

The fifth of November will be celebrated by Flesherton L. O. L. in due form. A banquet dinner will be served by mine host of the Railroad House on Monday, the 6th.

John Ormsby, Esq., of the "Dominion Brewery," paid us a visit a few days ago at our Flesherton Station, and we hail his presence. We wish more beer and less whiskey.

HOPEVILLE

Is progressing. A new general store has been opened by Mr. John Hopkinson.

A grand squirrel hunt, as well as other game, takes place to-morrow, the 3rd inst., twelve marksmen a-side; the losers to pay a dinner for all hands; the feast to be prepared by mine host Scarlett. The public generally are cordially invited to attend; and from Mr. Scarlett's success as a caterer for the comforts of the inner man, a good time may be expected.

EUGENIA.

(From our own correspondent.)

We have delayed our congratulations as to the improvement of the STANDARD, preferring to wait for the public verdict, which is briefly given in such expressions as "big improvement," "it's a good paper now is the STANFARD," "there's quite a lot of reading now in the STANDARD," &c.

Large barns with stone stabling is all the rage along the Meaford road.

Mr. John Warling, near Vandeleur, has an apple tree in blossom. How is that for Artemesia. Yet appearances indicate the approach of winter.

Mr. John McKee, 4th line of Artemesia, whose team ran away last Saturday smashed the democrat to pieces. Mr. McKee, however, escaped.

We hear of some deer being killed around here.

OSPREY COUNCIL.

This Council met at Maxwell, on the 13th inst.

All the members present.

Minutes of last meeting adopted.

Communications and papers received—From W. Ferguson, P. S. Inspector, re children between 5 and 16 on assessment roll. From Clerks of Melancthon, Nottawasaga and Collingwood, and from Trustees of S. S. 2 and 8, requisitions for school moneys. From County Judge, certified voters' list From B. S. Kerr, notice of dangerous places on roads. From W. Pearson, bill for plank, $2.83, From Clerk, Collector's Roll for 1882. From Melancthon Council, plan and specification of drainage outlet.

McIntyre, Speers, that Allan Bell receive a grant of $10, to open sideroad 35 southward.

Johnston, McIntyre, that Joseph Taylor repair Whitson's hill, on the gravel road.

Taylor, Speers, that W. Pearson be paid $2.83 for 472 feet of plank purchased in 1881 by J. R. Sing, for culverts on townline and omitted to be paid by him.

Speers, Johnston, that E. Horton be paid $6.00 for repairing Feversham bridge.

The Reeve of Euphrasia, Messrs Grier and Hickling appeared before the Council asking cooperation in opening the townline between Artemesia and Osprey, from Con. 14, northward.

Speers, McGirr, that the road and bridge committee meet the Artemesia committee and inspect the townline between Artemesia and Osprey, on the 14th Con., and report to this Council, and that the Clerk notify Artemesia council to appoint the date of meeting.

The Collector appeared before the Council with his bondsmen.

Moved by Mr. Speers, seconded by Mr. McIntyre, that the Collectors' sureties be accepted the bond signed and handed to the Treasurer for safe keeping, and that the clerk hand the roll to the Collector.

Taylor, Speers, that Thomas Johnston be appointed to confer with the Clerk or Reeve of Melancthon, respecting that part of the Melancthon drain extending into the municipality, and that he have power to let the job if necessary.

Speers, Johnston, that the Clerk notify D. K. Preston, to cause the hole on the 10th sideroad, opposite the O. Hall, Charleston, to be filled by Statute labor.

Speers, Johnston, that this council adjourn to meet at Feversham, on 11th Nov. at 10 o'clock.

W. MILNE, Cler.

MARRIED PEOPLE.

By Louise Chandler Moulton.

The only possible secret between two married people should be those which are confided to either one of them by others. While some people, who call themselves worldly wise, will laugh at the idea of such perfect confidence as this implies, others still, especially the newly married, who have but small worldly experience, will be shocked that I should suggest the keeping of any kind of secret by either wife or husband from the other. I am not prepared to say that these last are not the wiser of the two. Only, in that case, when any confidence is proffered to either husband or wife, the recipient of it should make his or her position clearly understood.

Possibly there is a certain hardness toward old friends in requiring them either to dispense with the sympathy we have been wont to give them, or else to submit their weakness and trials to the cold judgment, the cynical consideration of a man or a woman who has for them no tender toleration born of loving intimacy. Yet it would be better to refuse ever to listen to another confidence while the world stands than to receive a secret to keep when its custody wou'd be a wound to the one whose happiness should be our first object. Some wives and some husbands are large-minded enough and free enough from jealousy not to be troubled by the knowledge that a confidence has been bestowed in which they cannot share, and then there can be no harm in such a confidence.

But no personal secret can fitly belong to one only of the two people of whom love and and law have made one flesh. The very ideal of marriage has been realized by that old Judge, who had knelt for so many years to say a last prayer at night beside his wife, and when at last she had left him, his lips were dumb, and without her he could not even open his heart to God.

One frequent cause of trouble in married life is want of openness in business matters. A husband marries a pretty thoughtless girl, who has been used to taking no more thought as to how she should be clothed than the lilies of the field. He began by not liking to refuse any of her requests. He will not hint, so long as he can help it, at care in trifling expenses—he does not like to associate himself in her mind with disappointments and self-denial. And she, who would have been willing enough, in the sweet eagerness to please of her girlish love, to give up any whims or fancies of her own whatever, falls into habits of careless extravagance, and feels herself injured when, at last a remonstrance comes. How much wiser would have been perfect openness in the beginning!

"We have just so much money to spend this summer. Now, shall we arrange matters thus or thus?' was a question I heard a very young husband ask his still younger bride not long ago; and all the womanhood in her answered to this demand upon it, and her help at planning and counseling helped and proved not a thing to be despised, though hitherto she had "fed upon the roses and lain among the lilies of life." I am not speaking of marriages that are no marriages—where Venus has wedded Vulcan—because Vulcan prospered at his forge—but marriages where two true hearts have set out together, for love's sake to learn the lessons of life and live together till death shall part them. And one of the first lessons for them to learn is to trust each other entirely. The most frivolous girl of all "the rosebud garden of girls," if she truly loves, acquires something of womanliness from her love, and is ready to plan and help make her small sacrifices for the general good. Try her and you will see.

But if you fail to tell her just how much you have, and just what portion can be properly spent, and what portion should be saved for the nest-egg, in which her interest is not less than your own, then you cannot justly blame her if she is careless and self-indulgent, and wishes to-day to want-to-morrow.

There are thousands of little courtesies, also, that should not be lost sight of in the cruel candor of marriage. The secret of a great social success is to wound no one's self-love. The same secret will go far toward making marriage happy. Many a woman who would consider it unpardonable rudeness not to listen with an air of interest to what a mere acquaintance is saying, will have no least scruple in showing her husband that his talk wearies her. Of course, the best thing is when talk does not weary—when two people are so unified in taste that whatever interests the one is of equal interest to the other, but this cannot always be the case, even in a happy marriage; and is it not better worth while to take the small trouble of paying courteous attention to the one who depends on you for his daily happiness than even to bestow this courtesy on the acquaintance, whom it is a transient pleasure to please?—Our Continent.

A Miner's Stoicism.

The other night Roger Stinson had both of his legs broken while at work in the Chollar croppings. The accident occurred 50 feet below the surface of the ground. There were two cave-ins or falls of rock. When Mr. Stinson was knocked down and partially covered up by the first, his comrades did not hesitate to run to his assistance and do all in their power to extricate him, though a second fall of rock upon the same spot was imminent. Indeed they were only driven back when the second mass was in actual motion—falling. Twice was the unfortunate man covered up in caves of earth and rocks, but his friends stood by him, though all about them was crumbling and threatening to come in. When he was finally dug out he was utterly helpless as regarded locomotion. He was carried back to a place of safety, when a messenger was sent for a surgeon. As there was a shaft 50 feet in depth to be ascended, and the only way of reaching the surface was by means of a rope and bucket, the miners thought that a surgeon could come down into the mine and in some way so mend the legs of their wounded companion as would enable him to go up in the bucket. When the surgeon came he said it was of no use to try to do anything with the man down in the mine; he must be brought out. The miners descended and set to work upon the problem. The strongest man among them stood erect in the drift, when the other lifted Stinson upon his back. With a long rope the two men were then lashed together, Stinson being so placed that his broken legs were well up from the ground. The miner, with his living load thus lashed upon his back, got into the bucket and was hoisted to the surface. At the surface the wounded man was carried into a blacksmith's shop and laid upon the ground. The surgeon split up some old barrel staves and bandaged these temporary splints upon the broken limbs, preparatory to placing him upon a waggon for removal to his home. When laid upon his back in the blacksmith's shop, instead of howling and bellowing with pain, Stinson asked his companions to fill his pipe and give it to him, which, being done, he smoked as calmly as any old Indian brave could have done under like circumstances.—Virginia (Nevada) Enterprise.

Woman's Beauty.

It was a very proper answer to him who asked why any man should be delighted with beauty, that it was a question that none but a blind man could ask; since any beautiful object doth so much attract the sight of all men that it is in no man's power not to be pleased with it.—[Clarendon.

Beauty comes with scarce know how, as an emanation from sources deeper than itself.—[Shairp.

The beauty that addresses itself to the eyes is only the spell of the moment; the eye of the body is not always that of the soul.—[George Sand.

We do love beauty at first sight; and we do cease to love it, if it is not accompanied by amiable qualities.—[Lydia Maria Child.

The criterion of true beauty is that it increases on examination; of false, that it lessens. There is something, therefore, in true beauty that corresponds with right reason, and is not merely the creature of fancy.—[Greville.

To give pain is the tyranny, to make happy the true empire of beauty.—[Steele.

Every trait of beauty may be referred to some virtue, as to innocence, candor, generosity, modesty and heroism.—St. Pierre.

Socrates called beauty a short-lived tyranny; Plato, a privilege of nature; Theophratus, a delightful prejudice: Carneades a solitary kingdom; Domitian said that nothing was more grateful; Aristotle affirmed that beauty was better than all the letters of recommendation in the world; Homer, that 'twas a glorious gift of nature; and Ovid alluding to it, calls it a favor bestowed by the gods.—[From the Italian.

A delusion, a mockery and a snare.
—[Lord Denman.

Loveliness
Needs not the foreign aid of ornament,
But is, when unadorned, adorned the most.
—[Thompson.

What's female beauty but an air divine
Through which the mind's all gentle graces shine!
—[Young.

There's nothing that allays an angry mind
As soon as a sweet beauty.
—[Beaumont and Fletcher.

A thing of beauty is a joy forever;
Its loveliness increases; it will never Pass into nothingness, but still will keep
A bower quiet for us, and a sleep
Full of sweet dreams, and health, and quiet breathing.
—[Keats.

Beauty, like wit, to judge should be shown:
Both most are valued where they best are known.
—[Lyttleton.

A Terrible Typhoon—Sixty Thousand Families Homeless.

The typhoon destroyed in Manilla all wooden and thatched houses and carried away the iron and tiled roofs of others. Sixty thousand families are homeless. The barracks, hospitals, government offices and factories were destroyed. The loss of life, however, is relatively small. Malacan and Boulacan were also devastated. Communication is interrupted between Manilla and other towns on the Island of Luzon.

[Manilla is the capital city of the Island of Luzon, and of all the Phillippine Islands of the Malay Archipelago. It is one of the emporiums of the east, and exports sugar, tobacco, indigo, manilla hemp and cordage, gold dust, coffee, cotton, rice and other products. There are great manufactories of cigars and cordage in the city. Among its principal buildings are the Cathedral, the palaces of the Governor and the Archbishop, 10 churches and four colleges. The University of St. Thomas has an attendance of 500 students. Manilla was founded in 1571. In 1645 it was nearly destroyed by an earthquake. In 1762 it was taken by a British fleet and held for fifteen months. Its population, with the suburbs, is 160,000. The Phillippine Islands are in the possession of Spain].

A Prosperous Colony.

British Burmah is growing populous and prosperous under order and good government. The imports and exports have become more varied and have greatly increased. The value of exports for the past year was six crores of rupees, and that of imports three and a half. Independent Burmah, on the contrary, has become the home of anarchy, and is rapidly going down hill in every way. British traders are being attacked on the river, and the bold depredations of rebels in Upper Burmah have spread dismay even as far as the capital itself, Mandalay. It appears only a question of time when it will become necessary for the safety of British Burmah, as well as for the welfare of its own people, that independent Burmah should pass under British rule. Had it not been for the Afghan war it would probably have been subdued at that time. It is said that the success of the British arms in Egypt has already had a salutary effect upon the Burmese officials. It is curious how far-reaching the results of Tel-el-Kebir, which was won in twenty minutes, have proved to be.

A Coincidence.

It was rather a remarkable coincidence that the eighty-seventh Psalm, appointed by the Episcopalian prayer-book for the Sunday evening service the week of the British victory in Egypt contained the following passage: "Thou hast subdued Egypt and destroyed it; Thou hast scattered thine enemies abroad with thy mighty arm."

—Careful cooking is the important rule to insure health and strength from the table. No matter what the quality of the food to begin with may be, a bad cook will incur heavy doctors' and druggists' bills.

ABOUT PROMINENT PERSONS.

Notable People, Such as Dukes, Kinks, Princes, and Duchesses.

Mme. Patti has thirty-five servants in and about her Welsh castle.

The former chief of the Omladina, the dreaded secret Sclavonic society of Southern Russia, Meletich, has become crazy.

Eugenie has sent the uniform worn by her son in the Zulu campaign to the Vienna artist Canon, who is painting the portrait of the Prince Imperial.

For a course of two hundred lectures on popular science to be delivered in the United States, Professor Huxley has been offered five hundred dollars an evening.

Dr. John Rae thinks the Esquimau, instead of being diminutive, is as tall as the average Londoner, and has found that he lifts five hundred pounds with ease.

The Duchess of Talleyrand takes her gun under her arm, and goes over hill and dale, over fences and ditches, after game, in a woolen gown, with felt hat and water-proof.

Revivalist Penn prayed fervently for the death of two Texas ruffians who disturbed his camp meeting, and, as one died next day, the followers of Penn believe that the prayer was answered.

The Rev. Mr. Waite of Savoy, Mass., wrote a letter to "Darling Truey," and, as the person thus lovingly addressed is a giddy girl of 20, who had accompanied the parson to a camp meeting, Mrs. Waite is trying to get a divorce.

It is now a fashion in France for the gardeners to paste the monograms or crests of the family on the sunny side of the peaches and pears, which brings them to ripeness stamped with the design in quite an improvement on nature.

They illustrate the grandiloquence of M. De. Lesseps by telling the story of his piercing a boil on the finger of his child. "How you tremble!" said his wife. "Tremble?" said the count: "I tremble at piercing a fester—I, who have pierced an isthmus!"

The summer house of Elizabeth Stuart Phelps is on a point of the sea-shore a little east of Gloucester. She lives there with her companion and her pet dog during the warm weather, as remote as possible from all noises that assist the insomnia which troubles her.

Mrs. W. Seward Webb, and Mrs. Hamilton McK. Twombley are to have houses built for them by their father, W. H. Vanderbilt, on Fifth Avenue, in New York; at an expense of three hundred and twenty-five and three hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars respectively.

The officers of the Grenadiers in Egypt wash their own clothes, and sit in the shade while they dry. Lord Algernon Lennox is thought to be the best hand at the laundry of smaller articles, Lord Henry Russell is spoken of as having a talent for lighting a fire, and Colonel Smith for preparing vegetables.

Prince Bismarck has addressed a letter of congratulation to the Electoral Committe of Osthavel on their choice of the famous Herr Stoecker as their candidate for the Landfag. Herr Stoecker was formerly an enemy of the Chancellor, but his crusade against the Jews is believed to have secured him the patronage of Prince Bismarck.

The wife of the present Khedive is known as the Vice-Reine, and receives the world in state on fete days dressed in Parisian toilettes, and covered with some of the most magnificent jewels in the world. She is stout, fair, with brown hair and eyes, rosy, young, pretty, and very intelligent. She speaks French and English, and is acquainted with affairs. She is enormously rich in her own right, being the granddaughter of Abbas Pasha, a former Viceroy of Egypt.

Signor Tosti, the author of the songs "Let it be Soon," "For Ever and Ever," etc., is the pet musician of royalty in England at present. He has staid at Osborne as the teacher of the Princess Beatrice, and he gives lessons to the Duchess of Counaught, the Duchess of Teck, and the Duke of Albany. Two or three times a week he is summoned to St. James' Palace to sing his own songs to the Duchess of Cambridge. He is also the particular friend of Prince Borchese, Prince del Drugo, the Princess Massimo, and others of the sort in Rome. Altogether he has a good time.

The Dowager Duchess of Galleria not long since bestowed two splendid estates on the Pope. The way this old lady became so rich is curious. The Duke possessed a fortune of 300,000,000 francs, which would, by the ordinary course of devolution, go to his only son. The heir, however, in his father's lifetime, declared that he intended to renounce the world. Instead of retiring to a cloister, as he would have done in the middle ages, he went in his twentieth year into the territory of Nice and applied for a situation as a village schoolmaster. His father regarded this thing as a mere freak, and sent his son every year 300,000 francs. The young man, however, sent this sum every year to Paris, requesting it should be expended on the poor. After three years the Minister of Instruction, finding out who the schoolmaster of Nice was, appointed him to a high official post, and his father dying about the same time, he became the Duke of Galleria and owner of immense wealth. He declined the post, and allowed his mother to use his fortune without interference, content with his position and income as a teacher at Nice.

A Foul Murder.

The recently announced revolt of the Bahtiares tribe against the authority of the Shah of Persia, in the province of Ispahan, is said to be due to the murder of their chief and his eldest son by the heir to the Persian throne, who is Governor of Ispahan. Prince Vill-es-Soltanes sent for the chief of the Bahtiares and entertained him very sumptuously, placing him in the apartment of the palace reserved for his most intimate friends. After the chief had retired for the night, three servants of the Prince brought him some coffee, informing him that their master had sent it as a special compliment. The chief, who at once saw that he had been betrayed, declared that he would not touch it, and that if the Prince meant to get rid of him it must be by violence. The three men then fell on him and strangled him. Soon afterward his eldest son disappeared, and the Bahtiares, who attribute this to foul play on the part of the Persians, are waiting an opportunity to avenge the death of their two leading men.

CONRAD'S CRIMES.

A Wretch Who Murders His Wife and Six Children at Once.

For the last two days the First District Criminal court and a jury have been engaged in the trial of a case which would certainly have afforded De Quincy some interesting material for his essay on "Murder as One of the Fine Arts." Berlin has not had to listen to such a sensational and painful story of crime for a long time, and certainly the black calender of the city of intelligence is by no means pleasant reading. The chief actor in the present tragedy was a man named Conrad, aged 34, who began life as a philosophic tailor, somewhat after the style of Kingsley's Alton Locke, and after roaming through the gamut of various occupations, including military service, ended by strangling in one night his wife and four children. The trial of the murderer, which excited the deepest interest, as it was feared that the evidence against him might possibly break down, has disclosed a terrible degree of social depravity well calculated to make the humanitarians of the nineteenth century pause and think. Conrad, the "family murderer," as the newspapers term him, is a man, for his station in life, of great force of character, intelligent, inquiring, well-read, inventive, ready, and of remarkable self-possession. He had been a diligent reader of the poet Schiller and of the naturalist Charles Darwin, and his desultory course of study had ended in making him, like many others of his class in Germany, a believer in nothing whatever. Not only had he renounced all his religious faith himself, but he had compelled his wife to leave the Church, and brought up his children in heathen darkness.

The struggle for existence grew ever harder with him. He transferred his affections from his own wife to another unmarried woman. He denied the paternity of two of his children, and his household became a perfect hell. He wanted to be free to marry the object of his second love, and with one blow he cut the five-fold knot that bound him to his vows. In the night between the 11th and 12th of August last he strangled his wife and four children while they slept. In the morning the corpses of the mother and her youngest children were found hanging at the back of a door, while the dead bodies of the other three were discovered similarly suspended in a wardrobe. On the mother's bed lay a volume of Schiller open at the poem of the "Kindermorderinn" (child murderess) which the father had placed there so as to suggest to the officers of justice that his wife had committed both infanticide and suicide. This was the critical point of the whole case—whether the father or the mother had committed the terrible crime, and but for the judicial habit here of cross-questioning prisoners, there is no saying how far the diabolical craft and coolness with which Conrad planned and executed the deed, with his calm and self-collected demeanor in court, might not have aided him. A letter of triumph, however, which he wrote to his mistress before the breath could have been long out of his wife's body, formed a strong link in an otherwise somewhat fragile chain of circumstantial evidence, so he was found guilty and condemned to death. His own theory was that, having had a quarrel with his wife on the night in question, he rushed out of her insupportable presence into another room, where he fell asleep, and that then the mother did the fearful havoc. In the morning he sent for a locksmith to pick the lock which he himself had fastened, and he made a most dramatic pretence of weeping and fainting when confronted with the results of his nocturnal handiwork. Fiction, however, yielded to reality when sentence of death was pronounced upon him, and when, altogether collapsing, he had to be brought round with wine. To detail the social depravity revealed by this trial would only shock your readers.

A Russian Crisis.

Fears are expressed in Russia at the probability of another severe commercial crisis similar to that of 1873. The main cause is the remarkable drop in the price of corn which has resulted during the last few weeks from the abundance of the harvest in Western Europe and America. A little while ago merchants were readily buying up wheat at the rate of a rouble and forty copecks (2s 10d) the pood (thirty-six pounds), giving a quarter that amount in cash as hard money to clench the bargain. Suddenly the demand for corn from abroad ceased and the price dropped heavily, until a few days ago 85 copecks, or 1s 8d per pood was being refused on the exchanges of Russia. In this manner there are thousands of merchants in Russia who have beught corn for 2s 10d the pood, which they cannot hope to sell for more than eighteen pence, or little more than half that amount. How enormous the losses must be in consequence is illustrated by a remarkable piece of generosity on the part of Count Branitzky. All the corn on his estates, amounting to 800,000 poods, or over 10,000 tons, had been sold for a rouble and 40 copecks the pood, and when he found that the buyers could only obtain 80 copecks for it in the market, he released them from their contracts, thus relinquishing £50,000 at a stroke. Few persons, however, are of the magnanimous disposition of Count Branitzky, and if the present low prices prevail throughout the month the result must be almost universal bankruptcy in the Russian corn trade. Already, according to the Kieff correspondent of the Golos, the bankruptcies in that province amount to 6,000,000 roubles, although the crisis has hardly commenced there yet. The Novoe Vremya, in appealing to the Government for prompt assistance in the matter, declares that the competition of America in the corn trade has now attained such proportions as to menace the commercial fabric of Russia with ruin. But, in this instance at least, it would appear that another course has been at work besides transatlantic rivalry. Fearing that the Egyptian conflict would develop into a serious European war, and that the harvest in Egypt would be lost, the corn importers in Western Europe made large purchases of Russian corn during the summer, thus causing prices to rise to an abnormal extent. Ignorant of the real reason of the demand, the buyers in Russia went on making extensive purchases until the sudden cessation of orders led them into their present predicament.

People who do not object to fat—printers and legatees.

A Bank Teller's Trick.

David Burt, Teller in the Bank of North America in this city, was arrested Wednesday afternoon, and yesterday charge of felonious embezzlement was ed against him. Burt was teller of the in this city up to three months ago, he was detailed to take the place of the employes of the bank absent in the and another teller was appointed arily in his stead. The principal of the bank is in London, England, and office here is one of the many branch the United States and Canada. An tor is employed by the bank, whose is to visit the branch offices and examine accounts. Last Wednesday he paid cial visit to the office in this city. he reached the teller's room he began ing the gold on a tray which was sup to contain $29,000. To his surprise he that the back rows were composed of ers, and when they gave out there rows of half-dollar pieces cemented with shellac. Chief Bowley was noti the matter and Detective Bohen was d ed to work up the case. The present was interviewed and readily gave formation he could in regard to the and appeared to be innocent of the Mr. Burt, on being questioned, did sire to have anything to say about it, curtly answered he was innocent and not want to have any talk about the A number of attaches of the office were amined, among others the messenger bank, who said that about nine months he bought two set of checkers for Burt the other hand, Burt denied that any bought checkers for him. The presen ler keeps his accounts and his own b matters very correctly, all money being counted for. Burt has quite a stock with Coffin, Sanders & Cook, and his transactions with that firm amounting over $7,000. The amount missing from tray is about $7,000. The bank is se against loss, as all their employes are bonds—Burt for $10,000. The accused native of Scotland, 35 years of age, came here about five years ago from a b of the bank in Canada.—San Francisco

"The Irreproachable Waltzer."

Some of the severest sects of Methodists are known rigorously to condemn waltzing. It is not the rotary movement, as has a tendency to giddiness, of which they disprove. It is extremely pleasing, therefore to find all possible objections to the waltz removed by a recently invented machine. This is an ingenious contrivance called the M'Goneral's Patent Irreproachable Waltzer, and in it are found all the advantages, with none of the drawbacks, which appertain to the ordinary practice. The "Irreproachable Waltzer" is described in the New York Times as consisting of "a stout framework light wood of about five feet in height, remotely resembling an old-fashioned clothes frame. At the top of a frame is a padded 'rest' for a lady's hand, and at about the middle of the frame is a jointed arm, capable of being placed around a young lady's waist, and securely fashioned in that position with a thumbscrew. The frame has two feet furnished with castors, each of which has a universal joint, so that it will turn freely in any direction. The whole affair weighs only five pounds, and it is easy to fold together, so that a lady can carry it in her hand, either with or without a shoulder strap," The ban against waltzing has been removed by some of the strictest Presbyterian ministers, who, until M'Goneral came to the rescue, have never ceased to denounce the impropriety of the dance. It is confidently anticipated by the inventor that the machine which never treads on the lady's dress, scrupuously respects "gathers," and can never lose step, will be preferred before the old-fashioned animate partner, who was often guilty of these enormities.

Cairo's Sacred Carpet Ceremony.

Never within the memory of the oldest inhabitant of Cairo has the well-known ceremony of the departure of the camel bearing the Sacred Carpet for the sanctuary been the commemoration of Zobedia's tragic pilgrimage been celebrated with so much splendor. At an early hour on a recent morning a considerable portion of the British garrison, including the whole of Gen. Wood's brigade, Sir Evelyn Wood being himself in command, were drawn up below the citadel and round the Kiosk, wherein the Khedive and dignitaries of State were assembled. Sir Garnet Wolseley and Sir Edward Malet were also present to witness the procession, which started after the usual prayer and blessing in the Mosque. The departure of the caravan was announced by the thunder of the guns of the citadel. The procession was headed by detachments from the Indian regiments, infantry and cavalry, all the Mussulmans in these corps being on duty. Their martial air and proud bearing were in strong contrast to the motley horde of fanatics who formed the immediate cortege of the sacred offering. The route lay through the narrow and densely crowded streets of the native quarter, and two hours were spent in almost fighting a passage to the station, where, amid repeated salvos of artillery, the gifts of the Khedive for the Holy Shrine were finally packed into a gayly decorated truck for conveyance to Suez, whence they will be shipped direct to Djeddah. Generally the caravan travels by the desert route, but this year a change was made, owing to the unsettled state of the Bedouins, who, now armed with Remingtons, are a terror to the country districts.

Cured.

Years ago there was a pauper who was always on the point of committing suicide much to the annoyance of all the people who had anything to with him. His case, the medical attendant of the workhouse invited him to drive into the town one day, and on the way the pauper remarked, "Doctor, please give me a few pence to buy some arsenic, I want to make an end of myself." Then the doctor replied: "That's the reason why I asked you to drive. I shall take you down to my surgery and put a couple of drops of a certain acid on your tongue. It will kill you in less than half a minute and I shall tell the people that you died in a fit. Then the parish will bury you in good style." The pauper waited to hear no more, but jumped from the trap and bolted back to the poor-house. His life were sealed for ever after on the subject of suicide.

LOTTA'S BURGLAR.

A College Sketch.

It was unprecedented at Erisham for the students to break out so late in the term. Still more unprecedented was it for a potent grave and reverend senior to have any share in the mischief. Yet, only three night before commencement the students "made things howl," and Tom Anstruther was head and front of the offending. They nailed up over the chapel door the sign "To Providence and way-stations," stolen from the railroad. They serenaded obnoxious members of the faculty in terms anything but flattering. They built a large bonfire on the campas, and indulged in a promiscuous song and dance performance around it.

In the midst of the uproar there was the cry of "Faculty! faculty!" followed by an instant hush. The students scattered in all directions, Anstruther as fast as any——faster, indeed, when he found himself closely followed. His particular pursuer appeared to be one of the younger and more active of the professors, who quite caught the spirit of the chase. Tom found it impossible to shake him off. Was the valedictorian of the graduating class to be caught thus ignominiously?

An open basement window gave him an inspiration. He sped past it; then, doubling cleverly on his foe, sprang through it, laughing to hear his pursuer's footsteps grow fainter in hot pursuit up the street.

Up stairs Lotta Desmond was brushing out her pretty brown hair preparatory to retiring. On her daintily-frilled toilet-table, looking oddly out of place, lay Cousin's Jim's revolver. Her uncle and cousin had solemnly installed Lotta as the man of the house during their absence. Jim had reminded her of the exploits of brave Mrs. Brown and plucky Mrs. Peters, as recorded by the Daily Chronicle. The first of these ladies had, unarmed and alone, held a burglar captive until help came. The second, under like circumstances, had completely routed two desperate villains.

And Lotta had demanded Jim's pistol, and declared that she only longed for a chance to emulate their heroism. And Jim had promised to watch the papers for a similar mention of Miss Desmond.

So Lotta smiled when her eyes fell on the pistol, for as yet no opportunity for glory had come to her, and Jim would be home tomorrow.

Just then her aunt came into the room, fancying, as she had fancied every night since her husband's departure, that she "heard a noise, and would dear Lotta, who was so fearless, mind going down stairs to investigate?"

So Lotta thrust her little bare feet into slippers, threw on a wrapper, and sallied forth, pistol in hand.

Aunt Lucy detained her with a last word: in case it should be any one, to "let her know immediately, but otherwise not to disturb her, as she was exceedingly fatigued."

With a dim recollection that the dinner-room window had been closed, the young girl made her noiseless way thither at once. The gas had been put out and a miserable candle left burning. What Lotta saw by its dim light was a tall young man, rather roughly clad.

Alas! Tom, usually something of a dandy had that night donned his poorest array, his hair disordered, his clothes grimed with dust and soot, from which not even his face had escaped, stood coolly examining her uncle's silver. Spirit of Mrs. Brown and Mrs.——the old lady——inspire her.

"Drop that, or I fire!"

Tom turned with a start. What he saw was a pretty girl in a charming negligee, whose voice and hand shook as she uttered this doughty threat, and in whose face a certain look of determination, a look of one frightened at her own daring, appealed to his sense of humor. But it would never do to laugh at her. Besides, that pistol in her uncertain, unfamiliar hand was no joke. So he said, with due humility:

"I surrender. But, for Heaven's sake, put up that revolver! You are as likely to shoot yourself as me."

"Not at all," she replied, evidently nettled; "I am perfectly accustomed to using it."

Need it be said that this was a deliberate lie, uttered with intent of striking terror to the bosom of the robber?

For the same purpose Lotta continued to level her pistol and eye him with much outward severity and not a few inward tremors, think, withal, that your housebreaker is not the bold desperado that he is painted. Still keeping watch over one is weary work, heigh ho! Tom rapidly determined to see the adventure through. Time enough to make his escape should she call for help, or should any fresh complication arise. He hoped she was not going to keep him standing all night. Presently he ventured to suggest that she could mount guard over him quite as well seated.

Lotta assented gladly. Her burglar was quite a model, she thought. And why should she encumber herself with that unnecessary pistol, of which, she acknowledged to herself, she was much more afraid than was her prisoner.

Accordingly she laid it carefully down within reach. Then, with what seemed to Tom a most amazing underrating of his strength, she announced her intention of holding him until assistance should arrive.

To him the situation was not without its charm. It does not often happen to any of us that a pretty girl will insist on sitting next us and holding our hands——and that she was pretty, exceedingly pretty, Anstruther managed to satisfy himself in spite of the stingy light.

Once or twice he addressed a remark to his fair captor, but she discouraged all attempt at conversation.

And so they sat in silence, while the candle burned low and finally went out, and the cold, gray light of dawn crept into the room. Even this did not cause Lotta to change her position. And, looking curiously at her, the young man discovered that his stern guardian was asleep.

How long and dark were the lashes resting on the fair cheek, he thought, gazing down at the sweet, peaceful face framed in its wealth of nut-brown hair. Surely none of the young lady's ball-dresses could set off her beauty as did that old blue wrapper.

Tom was strongly tempted in his character of robber to steal a kiss, but there was a certain odd chivalry in his composition that kept him from taking any advantage of the unconsciousness. He withdrew his hands from her without awakening her——such cold, soft hands! And no wonder. The chill breath of early morning made him shiver, although it was June.

He might as well make her comfortable before he went. He groped his way into the hall. On the hat-stand lay a heavy shawl. In it he wrapped his unconscious captor as well as he could, then left through the still open window.

* * * * *

If Miss Desmond was not the belle of the College ball, it was because, strictly speaking, there were no belles of balls. But, in the language of other young ladies, she "received a great deal of attention." And how she did enjoy herself!

About the eleventh hour cousin Jim begged to introduce his friend, Mr. Anstruther.

Lotta's large eyes grew larger with astonishment. Mr. Anstruther composedly requested the pleasure of a dance, and before she could collect herself sufficiently to refuse, his arm encircled her, and they were gliding over the polished floor in perfect time and measure.

"You have my step exactly," said Miss Desmond, when they stopped.

"Have I? Then it must be a direct inspiration, for I never was known to keep time with any one before."

Now did ever a man waltz to perfection without knowing it? Lotta looked at him a little contemptuously. Her thought did him injustice. Tom was not affecting modesty, only making talk to keep off the question he expected.

"May I take you into the library? There is an anxious-looking youth I should like to avoid. I suspect that I have stolen his dance."

"If you have, you are only pursuing your profession of a robber," laughed Miss Desmond. "What were you doing that night in uncle's dining-room?"

Then it all came out, and Tom explained and apologized, seated in an alcove of the great college library.

"And how frightened you were when I and the pistol appeared upon the scene!" said the lady, maliciously.

"I was not!" he said, indignantly.

"You turned pale."

"Then we must have been a well-matched pair for courage. The pistol shook so in your hand that I was afraid it would go off accidentally. That was the worst feature of the case, for I do not yet believe that you would have been blood-thirsty enough to shoot me."

"I am sure I would not. I was immensely relieved to wake up and find my captive fled."

"What did you do?"

"Counted the spoons and went to bed."

"The spoons were all right, There was but one thing stolen that night."

"Mercy! what was that?"

"Only the burglar's heart"——sentimentally.

Lotta looked at him and began to laugh. Then she said:

"You might advertise for it as people do for stolen articles. You might say, 'Of no value to any one but the owner.'"

"Thank you but I am not sure that I want it returned," said Anstruther, laughing, too, but letting his eyes rest upon her face until the warm color surged up beneath his gaze.

"'Thou hast a thief in either eye Would steal it back again.'" he quoted low.

Lotta was a little glad as well as a good deal sorry that her ill-used partner at this moment appeared at the doorway.

"Before that fellow comes, can't you promise me one more dance?" murmured Anstruther.

"I am engaged for all but the last. I can give you that one, if you are going to stay till the end."

How Miss Desmond contrived to pacify the rightful claimant, and how partner succeeded partner until the end of the evening, need not be told. It is certain that she enjoyed no dance as she did that last one with Tom. And then Tom's worst enemy could not criticise his dancing.

As he relinquished her to her cousin's care, Anstruther heaved a sigh of exaggerated but real regret.

Then Lotta put out an impulsive little hand, and said hastily:

"Mr. Burglar, if you can conquer your fancy for entering people's windows enough to call in a more orthodox way, I shall be pleased to see you."

"Thank you," murmured Anstruther, pressing the soft, warm hand with quick, unnecessary warmth.

"Happy's the wooing that's not long a-doing."

The acquaintance so oddly begun was prosecuted with ardor. Lotta's burglar laid hot siege to her affections, and before long induced her to set up house-keeping——I had almost written house-breaking——with him.

The Keenest Enemy of Women.

Quiz says: "A man's foes are those of his own household, and the keenest enemy of women are women themselves. No one can inflict such humiliation on a woman as a woman can when she chooses; for if the art of high handed snubbing belongs to men, that of subtle wounding is peculiarly feminine, and is practiced by the best bred of her sex. Women are always more or less antagonistic to each other. They are gregarious in fashions and emulative in follies, but they cannot combine; they never support their weak sisters; they shrink from those who are stronger than the average; and if they would speak the truth boldly they would confess a radical contempt for each other's intellect, which, perhaps, is the real reason why the sect of the 'emancipated' commands so small a following. Half a dozen ordinary men advocating 'emancipation' doctrines would do more toward leavening the whole bulk of womankind than any number of first-class women. Where they do stand by each other it is from instinctive or personal affection, rather than from class solidarity. And this is one of the most striking distinctions of sex, and one cause, among others, why men have the upper hand, and why they are able to keep it."

A box addressed to a person in Lyons, which has been unclaimed for three months, was opened on Wednesday by the police and found to contain dynamite.

Lightning Flashes From all Over.

General Sir Garnet Wolseley has arrived in Trieste, on his way to England.

The Corporation of Dublin has refused to vote General Wolseley the freedom of the city.

Congratulations to the King upon his escape from assassination are pouring in from all parts of Servia.

Placards recommending the assassination of leading politicians have been posted in Marseillies, St. Etienne and Creuzot.

Letters received in Cairo from Khartoum show that Egyptian rule in the Southern Provinces has received a disastrous if not crushing blow.

It is believed that the cost of the war in Egypt will amount to nearly £4,000,000, exclusive of the expense of the army of occupation and the Indian contingent.

The Government have clues to a vast revolutionary organization, in accordance with which France is divided into local federations, directed by the committee in Geneva.

The troops at Fort George, Scotland, have been ordered to hold themselves in readiness to proceed to the Island of Skye, to maintain order during the service of processes upon crofters.

It is stated that the flagship "Northampton will leave Halifax for Antigua on the 20th of next month. H. M. warship "Firebrand" is to sail in a day or two for Jamaica.

Mrs. Langtry received a despatch in New York from the Prince of Wales, saying:—"I am glad to hear of your safe arrival. The Princess and myself wish you a prosperous tour."

The French Minister of Justice has applied to the Court of Cassation to have the persons arrested in connection with the rioting at Montceau Les Mines brought before the Paris tribunal.

A deputation will arrive in Ottawa from Winnipeg shortly to petition the Government to commute the death sentence of Levesque, formerly of Ottawa, whose execution is fixed for the 24th proximo.

The cutter "Corwin," which has arrived at Sitka from an extended cruise in the Arctic, found at St. Lawrence Bay over 100 decomposed bodies of natives. The survivors said the mortality was caused by starvation.

New York insurance circles are excited over the report that the company in Ireland and another in Scotland are about to establish agencies in that city. Foreign competition has already driven several local companies out of the business.

Some trouble has arisen between the Christian Brothers and the Grey Nuns in connection with separate school teaching, the former having refused to teach in the same building, and the Board of Separate Trustees have the matter under consideration.

Mapoch, the native chief now at war, insulted agents of the Transvaal Government, and refuses to pay taxes or obey the laws. The Boer Government ordered out 2,000 men to capture Mampeer, the murderer of Secocoeni. They are not to interfere with Mapoch, unless he resists Mampeer's arrest. It is believed the campaign will be short.

The British Government has made a fresh proposal to Egypt in regard to the indemnity commission, according to which Egypt will have two representatives on the commission, and England and France one each. The United States and Greece will be invited to send representatives. Other minor states will have collective representation.

Among the correspondence of Arabi are an important letter from an aid-de-camp of the Sultan and several letters from the Sheikh Ul Islam. Mr Broadley, Arabi's counsel states that the latter's letters throw light upon numerous telegrams found at Tel-el-Kebir.

The list of witnessess to be examined by the commission at Constantinople is increasing. It is seriously stated that the Egyptian Government has no intention of doing anything to prevent the proceedings following their due course, whatever may be attempted by the Porte,

The "Corwin" reports that at Point Barrow Signal Station Lieut. Ray made a sledge journey of 100 miles eastward, and discovered an unknown river apparently as large as the Missouri. The Indians near the signal station are showing discontent, but the party are able to defend themselves.

There are incessant complaints in regard to the treatment of families of rebel prisoners by the Khedive's employees. Arabi's family shift their residence almost daily to avoid violence. Arabi has been again insulted by the Circassian guard. Two notables accused of aiding Arabi with money are chained together in an underground dungeon foul beyond description.

The Government intend to present a powerful binocular glass to Captain C. W. Lebuff, of the brigantine "F. H. Odiorne," of St. John's, Nfld., in acknowledgement of his humanity and kindness to the shipwrecked crew of the brigantine "Pride of Chaleur," of Chatham, N. B., which was abandoned on the 15th of May, 1882, on the voyage from Barbadoes to Montreal.

A letter dated "New York, October 22nd," received by Captain C. W. Allen from Dr. Bowen, of Winnipeg, contains the following in reference to Senator John Schultz, which will be read with interest by that gentleman's friends:—I am glad to inform you that the doctor is improving in health every day, although I fear it will take him a long time before we can call him well."

At the opening of the Commission Court in Dublin, Judge Barry, charging the grand jury, said, although the cases to come before the Court were few, they were most serious. He believed there was direct evidence against the ten men charged with murdering the Joyce family. He could not say whether the fewness of the cases under the Crimes Act was due to the improvement of the country.

Mr. Egan has been requested to send a telegram to Mr. Mooney, at Buffalo, President of the Irish National Land League of the United States, informing him that the only money paid to members of Parliament was given for this purpose, including the expenses of Messrs. Parnell and Dillon to America. Mr. Sexton received £300 salary yearly, not £700, as alleged.

Sir Charles Tupper who recently arrived home from the North-West was interviewed by a reporter. He went as far as the end of the track on the C. P. Railway, near Salt Town, 82 miles west of Moosejaw Creek, and about 480 miles west of Winnipeg. Rails are now being laid at the rate of three miles per day. He speaks very highly of the country and climate. He was at Salt Town, the end of the track, on Saturday last. He was greatly surprised at the rapid growth of Winnipeg.

The Swiss, Ninet, writes protesting that he only served Arabi in the ambulance. He gives a graphic account of the filthy condition of his prison in Cairo. He says the thumbscrews were put on him during the journey from Cairo to Alexandria. At the latter place he was thrust into a prison filthier than at Cairo and swarming with vermin, was robbed by the gaolers and then put on a vessel for deportation to Smyrna, but was smuggled ashore at Pirseus by the aid of an American officer of the ship. He went thence to Berne. Ninet believes there are 3,000 innocent men in Egyptian prisons such as he described.

Panama advices to the 15th inst. say:—Peruvian advices state that the Montenegros continue their raid on friend and foe. The Chilians continue to hang and shoot them in dozens. Calderon refuses to concede the Chilian demands, which have been wonderfully moderate. Chili's offer to assume the settlement of foreign claims has brought into the field a host of claimants. Iglesias, formerly Minister of War under Pierola, and lately commander in the north, has called a congress of the seven northern departments, to determine if peace should not be made. His proclamation strongly urges the necessity of peace.

They Didn't Sell Stoves.

Four or five weeks ago a woman with an undecided look on her face entered a Detroit hardware store, threaded her way for sixty feet among coal stoves of every pattern, and timidly inquired:

"Do you keep stoves here?"

"Yes'm."

"Coal stoves?"

"Yes'm."

She said she had been thinking of getting a coal stove for the winter, and the clerk took her in hand. He showed her how the doors worked and how the dampers were arranged, and the flues situated, and he talked of double draughts, great savings, increased cheerfulness, reduction in price, and all that, and she said she'd think it over and drop in again.

In about three days the woman reappeared and inquired of the very same clerk if they sold coal stoves. He replied that they did sell one now and then, and he cleared his voice and began his usual thirty minute lecture on the Michigan, the Detroit and the Peninsular base-burners. The beautiful nickle-plate, the place for the tea-kettle, the ornamented legs——the anti-clinker shaker——all points were touched upon and praised and explained, and the woman said she wouldn't take one along under her arm just then, but would call again. She called again that same week, heard the same lecture from the same clerk, and started for the bank to draw the money to pay for a base-burner. That was the last seen of her for a week. Then she walked softly in and innocently inquired:

"I suppose you keep coal stoves?"

"No ma'am."

"Not any kind?"

"Not a one. We used to, but went out of the business a year ago."

There were twenty coal stoves on the floor, but if she saw them she didn't let on. She heaved a sigh of disappointment, glanced around her, and went slowly out with the remark:

"Well, I don't know as I want to buy one, but I thought it wouldn't do any harm to look at some of the latest makes."

Speed in War Vessels.

The French have lately launched a new turreted ironclad, the Arethuse, carrying four steel guns in her turrets, besides a battery of twelve smaller guns. Her engines are intended to develop as high as 4,200 horse-power, giving her an average sea speed of 16 knots an hour. Her length is 296 feet 8 inches between perpendiculars, and her displacement about 3,380 tons.

It is but a few years since our Naval Advisory Board recommended the building of unarmored cruisers to have a speed of 15 knots. The inability of such cruisers to cope in speed with unarmored vessels like the Arizona and the Alaska, which would be promptly converted into cruisers in case of war with a commercial power, was pointed out the moment the recommendation of the Advisory Board was submitted.

In the Arethuse the proposed cruisers would meet an antagonist which they could as little fight as run away from with any hope of success and the naval constructors of other nations are not likely to rest until still higher speeds are attained by ironclads, as they have already been by lighter vessels.

It would be consistent with the general conduct of the naval affairs to go on with the building of 12 knot cruisers, admirably appointed to secure the comfort of officers on official picnics and practically useless in time of war; but it may be questioned whether the people, who have to foot the bills, will be at all pleased to have it done.

If the navy department cannot design or get designed a cruiser capable of making or approaching twenty knots, the reconstruction of our antiquated navy had better be postponed until the department itself has been reconstructed.

French Nihilists.

The French Cabinet has decided to prosecute the speaker at the anarchist meeting in Lyons who said he was quite ready to murder President Grevy. Since the explosion of bombs in Lyons, similar explosions have occurred at Montpeller and Lille. The trial of the rioters in Montceau Les Mines has been postponed, owing to the numerous attempts to intimidate the jury. It is reported that the police have discovered proofs of the existence of an international association, having for its object the destruction of property. Its headquarters are supposed to be in Geneva. The directing committee in Switzerland comprises several prominent Nihilists.

NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

Five Minutes' Select Reading.

Summary of Foreign, Domestic and War Items——Concise, Pithy, and Pointed.

DOMESTIC.

Mielline & Co.'s lumber mill at Montreal has been burned down.

There is some excitement in Kingston over differences in the Board of Education.

Mr. Shannon, the new secretary of the Quebec Y. M. C. A. has arrived in that city.

Premier Norquay has been compelled to rescind the liquor licenses granted at Rat Portage.

The amount which it is likely to cost Montreal on the Canada Pacific depot is about $700,000.

An arbitration is proceeding over a claim of $120,000 by the contractors for section 8 of the Lachine Canal.

A committee has been appointed at Montreal to arrange for the reception of the British Science Association in 1884.

Mr. Thomas Turner a night-watchman in the Thorold woollen mill, was recently caught in the shafting and instantly killed.

The Mohawk election for Tyendinaga took place on the reserve recently. Chief Anansothkah was re-elected head chief.

The vote in Fredricton, N. B., upon the petition to repeal the Canada Temperance Act resulted in the Act being sustained by forty majority.

The case against young May, of Gananoque, held on a charge of bank stealing, has evidently been settled, as the young man has been allowed to depart unmolested.

A horse standing near the Notre Dame Hospital, at Montreal, suddenly grasped its owner, James Rodgers, by the nose, and bit it off. The carter entered the hospital, and had the fragments sowed on again.

B. B. Conkey, pay-master of Langdon, Shepherd & Co., was accidently shot while driving in a buggy paying the graders on the Canadian Pacific Railway, two hundred miles west of Brandon. He is recovering.

GENERAL.

In the coming Italian elections the Government expects an overwhelming majority.

The members of the anarchist federations in Paris and suburbs alone number 1,229.

News have been received of the massacre by natives of three boats crews at Basket Island, off the coast of Costa Rica.

UNITED STATES.

Professor A. X. Willard died suddenly of neuralgia of the heart at Little Falls the other morning.

A thousand cases of fever and three hundred and twenty-five deaths are reported from Camasgo, Mexico.

Chicago is much exercised over the mysterious disappearance of a respectable young lady named Mary Winchester.

The boiler of the tug Desoto exploded at Memphis killing Dennis Bohler, watchman, and Joe Holman, a negro.

At Jazewell, Ga., Charles Hurd, aged 20, attempted to beat his sister, aged 24, when she shot and killed him.

John Heiser, aged 63, formerly a trunk manufacturer at Milwaukee, has disappeared with $25,000, leaving his family destitute.

On Jubilee Day at Memphis, thirty thousand people witnessed the procession of manufacturing and business interests.

Frank H. Fall, charged with offering Brown $2,500 for his vote as a juror of the Star Route trials, has surrendered.

At Charlotte, N. C, there is much excitement over the alleged discovery by Dr. Gregory of a lotion, which it is claimed, turns the skin of negros white. A man who it is alleged was bleached is now being examined by physicians.

Husband and Wife on the Comet.

So it isn't to be wondered at that when my wife got up the other morning at three o'clock and told me to turn out, for the comet was rising, I objected! I said that I didn't take any interest in comets at three o'clock in the morning; that I had seen comets of various kinds——long-tailed, short-tailed and bob-tailed in associated sizes, and I didn't want any comet on my plate! She said the tail of this one was 75,000,000 miles long, and I said that I didn't care if it was a million or more miles longer and had just come out of curl papers and had insects in it. She said that Prof. Barnard had noticed a split in its head and that it was 2,000 miles across the split, and I said if the head was as long as reported——34,000 miles——the tired thing was just gaping and that the split would close as soon as it had yawned enough. Finally I told her that if she would come back to bed I would buy her a small comet to wear on her winter hat.

"But I can't wear one with so long a tail," said she as she put her cold feet on the small of my back.

"Oh, yes," said I, "it won't be much longer than the height of style."——Owosso Press.

Railway Photography.

Instantaneous photography, in its more familiar aspect, supposes motion of the objects photographed; but another form of it is that in which it is the camera, more especially, that has motion of translation, as in photographing from balloons or trains. The practicability of photographing landscapes from the window of a train running at a rate of even forty miles an hour has been recently proved by Dr. Caudeze, who uses what he calls a gyrograph for the purpose. The apparatus comprises a copper tube similar to that which carries the lenses in ordinary cameras, but the lenses are placed on opposite sides parallel to the axis. Within is a shutter similar to the box of a stopcock; it presents two quadrangular apertures, which, according to the position of the shutter, do or do not let pass the light rays in making a quarter of a turn. This rotatory movement is obtained by means of a spring liberated from a catch. An exposure of only one one-hundredth of a second may be had. With a little practice wonderfully distinct views, it is said, can be obtained with the apparatus.

The Standard.

MARKDALE, NOV. 2ND, 1882.

PRESENTATION.

On Wednesday evening, the 25th Oct. on the occasion of the anniversary of the Methodist sabbath school during the inter mission a valuable easy chair was presented to Mr. Bowes, the superintendant, by the school with the following address:

DEAR SUPERINTENDENT.—We, the scholars of your sunday school, in grateful acknowledgment of the unremitting interest you have manifested in our behalf during the past seven years which you have been superintendent of the Methodist Sunday School in our village, for your endeavors to promote our religious and moral training and scriptural knowledge, and for the worthy example you have given us to emulate in your consistant and well regulated daily life. we ask you to accept this chair as a small token of our respect and esteem, hoping that it may ever remind you of the pleasant and grateful feeling existing between you and all the members of your school. We sincerely trust that you may long be spared to fill the honorable position for which the great architect has so eminently qualified you on behalf of the scholars of your Sunday school.

THE SHELBURNE TRAGEDY.

HOW DID OLD JOHN SMITH COME TO HIS DEATH? —HIS NEPHEW TRIED FOR THE CRIME.— STRONG CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE.

John Smith, a boy about 17 years old, is of a delicate age to be charged with the commission of the highest crime in the calendar, the victim, too, a near relative, his uncle. Yet he is the chief living actor in the dreadful tragedy known as the Shelburne or Amaranth horror.

THE CRIME.

The circumstances of the crime are as follows:—John Smith, the unfortunate victim of this mysterious tragedy, a quiet and highly respected bachelor farmer, aged 70, living alone with his nephew, aged 14, on the south east half of the west half of lot 27, 4th concession, township of Amaranth about 4 miles from Shelburne, was on Saturday night, the 21st of January last, sitting by his fireside after supper. when, according to the nephew's story, a shot was fired through the uncurtained window, and he fell to the floor. His nephew, who was in the house at the time reading a newspaper, saw, he said, that the shot had been fired by a man outside with a dark beard and moustache and dark clothes. He ran out, but before he reached the door a bullet was fired through his cap. He ran in and informed a neighbor, distant a mile and a half, of the deed. On looking back he saw the house on fire. The body of the old man was found near the door, with part of one leg burned off. He was reputed to be well off, and was known to have considerable money in the house. Upon examination of the body a scalp wound was found, two inches long. The parietal bone under the scalp and the bones on the right side of the head and face were fractured. No aperture was found in the brain by which it was possible for a bullet to enter or escape. Under a minute examination no indication of a bullet or other foreign body was discovered. The medical experts, therefore, came to the conclusion that death was caused by a heavy blow inflicted on the right side of the head and face. This evidence impeached the veracity of the boy strongly, and when a hardware merchant turned up who said that a boy who he was reasonably sure was Smith, purchased a revolver at his store before the murder, the current of suspicion turned against him. He was finally arrested and committed for trial.

A MYSTERIOUS CASE.

The trial of the case was fixed for April 1st, but postponed in order to give the Crown ample time to endeavor to clear up what is undoubtedly one of the most mysterious cases that has ever non-plussed Crown attorneys in this country. Opinion is divided as to whether the boy himself committed the crime of his own wickedness, or at the instigation, and under the direction of some one else. Few doubt that one of these theories is correct, and doubtless the circumstances preclude the exoneration of the prisoner until, at all events, a jury's verdict having the effect is given. The strongest point against him so far as is known is the fact that he is identified, so strongly it is true by Mr. Hannah, a hardware merchant in Shelburne, as having purchased a revolver from him a few days prior to the murder. Mr. Foster, an assistant in the store, appears to have taken more notice of the purchaser, and he is positive as to the identity of young Smith. Taken in connection with the facts that after the murder the case of the pistol was found near an old well, in the vicinity of the house, and also a number of cartridges fitting to the weapon, found on the ground in the track of the boy's flight from the burning homestead, the pistol incident is hard to explain away.

LATER.

The evidence pro and con has been given which failed to reveal anything new, and on Monday the Judge gave the Jury their charge, who, after an hour's consideration returned a verdict of "not guilty." Justice Osler, addressing the boy, said "I cannot but say that I agree with the verdict. I think the jury could not have come to no other conclusion. You are discharged."

THE DIVISION COURT SITTINGS,

The above Court opened at Flesherton, before his Honour Judge Macpherson, on the 25th inst.

A number of cases were speedily disposed of, when the case of Adair vs. Earles was called. The case arose out of the parties named, who live in the Tp. of Osprey, making a bet of $40 as to the drawing strength of their respective teams, upon evidence it appeared that Adair failed to "come to time" as arranged upon, and the stake holder paid over the stake to Earles according to agreement that the party failing to come to time, the stake should be paid to the party appearing on the ground. Adair claimed that his horse had became lame, and notified the stakeholder not to pay over the stakes. Case adjourned.

After hearing several important cases the batch of newspaper acc'ts brought before the court by George Jackson Blythe came upon the board. He obtained one verdict, and the remainder adjourned or non-suit.

The case of Sullivan vs. Tp. Artemesia came up for hearing. This case arose out of Mr. James Sullivan's property being assessed for the new S. S. Section No, 6, Artemesia, instead of union S. S. Section No. 6, Artemesia and 7 of Glenelg.—Judgment against both corporations of new S. S. Section and Tp. Artemesia.

Hannah vs. Brainiff.—Deft. sold four head of cattle to pltffs., agreeing to keep them a few days, receiving a sum of money at time of purchase; but afterwards re-sold to another party at an advance price upon first sale.—Judgment for Deft.

The case of Black vs. Coleman resulted in verdict for deft. This case arose out of pltff. bargaining for a number of sheep, paying a portion of money thereon, and failing to "come to time," as to the delivery.

We present these few cases, as a guide to our readers in similar cases.

TERRIBLE BUTCHERY IN MARKDALE.

To use our correspondent's own words he says, "at about 2:30 p. m. on Wednesday last as I was walking down the north side of Mill street I came opposite Reid's new block, now occupied by Trimble & Wright, I heard distinctly cries of butchering, followed by the low whispers of an anxious crowd, and on forcing open a store door I met a sight never to be forgotten. Trimble & Wright were doing their level best. ably assisted by Messrs. Anderson, Cunningham and others, to supply the wants of an excited multitude rushing madly forward for the goods that were being slaughtered right and left. Some were after boots and shoes, a large stock of which had arrived that day. A lady called loudly for mantle cloth which was supplied her in fifty different patterns. Many called for hats and caps, clothing and overcoats, which were supplied in an able manner at the usual bankrupt prices. One of the firm mounted the platform and informed their many customers that there would arrive to-day (Thursday) 220 chests of that now notorious thirty cent tea, and if any wanted samples they would be supplied free of charge. No arrests were made, but all seemed to come to the one conclusion that there was no place under the sun where goods could be got as cheap as at TRIMBLE & WRIGHT'S.

A $20.00 BIBLE REWARD.

The publishers of Rutledge's Monthly offer twelve valuable rewards in their Monthly for November, among which is the following:

We will give $20.00 in gold to the person telling us which verse in the New Testament Scriptures (not the New Revision) contains the greatest number of words by November 10th, 1882. Should two or more correct answers be received, the reward will be divided. The money will be forwarded to the winner November 15th, 1882. Persons trying for the reward must send 20 cents in silver (no postage stamps taken) with their answer for which they will receive the December Monthly, in which the name and address of the winner of the reward and the correct answer will be published. This may be worth $20.00 to you; Cut it out. Address RUTLEDGE PUBLISHING COMPANY, Easton, Penna.

Mr. Geo. Beatty is still in a critical condition.

Mr. James Carter has sold his farm in Glenelg and purchased one in Minnesota where he will remove.

Mr. John Welsh has sold his village property to Mr. W. F. Doll and will leave next week for Florida for the benefit of his health.

All the business places in Markdale will be closed on Thanksgiving Day, (Nov. 9th.) it being a public holiday, except the photograph gallery.

D. J. Shanahan has secured a first-class horse-shoer, and having his shop greatly enlarged, will in future pay special attention to shoeing and repairing. Interfering cured without fail.

A grand concert will be given under the auspices of the Christ Church Ladies Aid Society of Markdale, in Dufferin Hall, on Tuesday evening, Nov, 9th (Thanksgiving Day). Several ladies and gentleman are expected from Durham and other places to take part, and an enjoyable time may be expected. Tickets 25cts., children 15 cts.; concert to commence at 7.30 p. m. Look out for a rich programme, which will be printed in due time.

NEIGHBORHOOD NOTES.

H. Hooper, of Flesherton, is about starting a branch furniture factory in Dundalk.

John Campbell is fitting up a shingle factory at Flesherton.

James Allen, of Allenford, has completed his large storehouse and is buying grain.

A GENERAL STAMPEDE.

Never was such a rush made for any Drug Store as is now at A. Turner &Co's for a Trial Bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. All persons affected with Asthma, Bronchitis, Hoarseness, Severe Coughs or any affection of the Throat and Lungs, can get a Trial Bottle of this great remedy free, by calling at above Drug Store.

Having employed two of the most skilled carriage makers in the province to build my sleighs and cutters this season, intending purchasers will save money by reserving their orders until they have an opportunity of examining my stock.—D. J SHANAHAN.

BUCKLEN'S ARNICA SALVE.

The best salve in the world for Cuts, Bruises, Sores, Ulcers, Salt Rheum, Fever Sores, Tetter, Chapped Hands, Chilblains, Corns, and all Skin Eruptins, and Positively cures Piles. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by A. Turner & Co.

Dr. T. B. Brown, Dentist, will be at the Markdale House on Thursday, Nov. 2nd, 3rd and 4th.

The Customs authorities in Toronto have seized seventy-six sewing machines, the property of the Wheeler and Wilson Manufacturing Company, on the ground of undervaluation.

BIRTHS.

BURNETT.—On the 27th ult., the wife of Mr. A. H. Burnett, (blacksmith,) Hopeville, of a daughter.

REILY.—In Priceville, on the 22nd inst, the wife of Mr. M. Reily, (blacksmith,) of a son.

MARRIAGES.

JOHNSTON—HENDESON.—On the 18th inst., by the Rev. Thos. Grandy, at Eugenia, John Johnston, of Osprey Tp., to Fannie Levina Henderson, of Artemesia.

NOTICE.

NOTICE is hereby given to all parties indebted to the estate of the late N. B. Grier, of Priceville, either by note or book account, are requested to settle the same on or before the 20th November, 1882, or costs will be incurred.

E. J. GRIER.

Priceville, Oct. 24th, 1882. 112.td.

$500 Reward!

We will pay the above reward for any case of Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Indigestion. Constipation or Costiveness we cannot cure with West's Vegetable Liver Pills, when the directions are strictly complied with. They are purely Vegetable, and never fail to give satisfaction. Sugar Coated, Large Boxes, containing 30 Pills, 25 cts. For sale by all Druggists. Beware of counterfeits and immitations. The genuine manufactured only by JOHN C. WEST & CO., "The Pill Makers," 81 & 83 King St. East, Toronto, Ont. Free trial package sent by mail prepaid on receipt of a 3 cent stamp. For sale at Turner &Co. Drug Store.

PATENTS.

We continue to act as solicitors for patents, caveats, trade-marks, copyrights, etc., for the United States, and to obtain patents in Canada, England, France, Germany, and all other countries. Thirty-six years' practice.

No charge for examination of models or drawings. Advice by mail free.

Patents obtained through us are noticed in the Scientific American, which has the largest circulation, and is the most influential newspaper of its kind published in the world. The advantages of such a notice every patentee understands.

This large and splendidly illustrated paper is published weekly at $3.20 a year, and it is admitted to be the best paper devoted to science, mechanics, inventions, engineering works, and other departments of industrial progress, published in any country. Single copies by mail, 10 cents. Sold by all newsdealers.

Address, Munn & Co., publishers of Scientific American, 261 Broadway, New York.

Handbook about patents mailed free.

Health is Wealth!

Dr. E. C. WEST'S NERVE AND BRAIN TREATMENT, a guaranteed specific for Hysteria, Dizziness, Convulsions, Fits, Nervous Neuralgia, Headache, Nervous Prostration caused by the use of alcohol or tobacco, Wakefulness, Mental Depression, Softening of the Brain, resulting in Insanity and leading to misery, decay and death, Premature Old Age, Barrenness, Loss of Power in either sex, Involuntary losses and Spermatorrhœa, caused by over-exertion of the brain, self-abuse or over-indulgence. One box will cure recent cases. Each box contains one month's treatment. One dollar a box, or six boxes for five dollars; sent by mail prepaid on receipt of price. We guarantee six boxes to cure any case. With each order received by us for six boxes, accompanied with five dollars, we will send the purchaser a written guarantee to refund the money if the treatment does not effect a cure. Guarantees issued only by A. Turner &Co., sole authorized Agent for Markdale Ont. John C. West &Co. sole proprietor, Toronto, Ont.

T. C. & B. RAILWAY.

TIME TABLE.

GOING SOUTH.

	Exp.	Mxd.	Mail.
	a.m.	a.m.	p.m
Owen Sound, dep.	5.20	7.35	3.45
Markdale	6.29	9.45	5.02
Flesherton	6.43	10.12	5.19
Toronto	10.35		9.25

GOING NORTH.

Toronto....dep.	7.35		4.35
Flesherton	11.39	4.15	8.30
Markdale	11.57	5.02	8.45
Owen Sound	1.15	7.00	9.55

TEACHER WANTED.

MARRIED OR SINGLE—MARRIED man preferred—for School Section No, 4, Glenelg, holding second-class certificate. Duties to commence first of the new year. Apply stating salary, to

THOMAS TOWNSEND,
Glascott P. O.

Glascott, Nov. 1st 1882, 112-4t

Dr. T. F. BROWN,

Surgeon Dentist,

Of Woodstock, will be at the Markdale House, Markdale, on Thursday, Nov. 2nd, 1882, and the two following days. (3rd and 4th.)

Teeth filled with Gold and Amalgam. Artificial Teeth inserted on Rubber Base. Natural appearance; perfect fit. Teeth extracted without pain. 112.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from active practice having had placed in his hands by an East Indiana Missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma, and all Throat and Lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for General Debility and all nervous complaints, after having thoroughly tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, feels it is his duty to make it known to his fellows. The recipe, with full particulars, directions for preparation and use, and all necessary advice and instructions for successful treatment at your own home, will be received by you by return mail, free of charge, by addressing with stamp or stamped, self-addressed, envelope to

DR. J. C. RAYMOND,
164 Washington Street, Brooklyn, N.Y.
110-62

REMARKABLE CLUBBING OFFER

THE STANDARD

—AND—

The Farmer's Advocate

AND HOME MAGAZINE

from now until the end of 1883, for

ONLY $1.85!

By special agreement with The Farmer's Advocate, we are enabled to offer that well-known agricultural journal—a 36-page illustrated monthly, and really the best agricultural paper in America, for Canadians—to our readers, clubbed with THE STANDARD, for the sum of $1.85 in advance. The regular price of the two papers is $2.

At great expense, we have also secured for each subscriber who accepts this offer, one plant, 6 to 12 inches, of the introduced from Western Russia by the Mennonites, grows very rapid, is a handsome tree, and bears fine fruit, equal to our best Raspberry or Blackberry. This tree is hard and very suitable for streets and lawns.

Russian Mulberry,

Subscribe Now!

and obtain November and December numbers of The Farmer's Advocate FREE.

AUCTION SALE

—OF—

Valuable Farm Property

in the Township of Artemesia, in the County of Grey. There will be sold on Thursday, the 16th day of November, 1882,

at one o'clock in the afternoon, at Rutledge's Hotel, in the Village of Markdale,

By virtue of a power of sale contained in a certain mortgage, which will be produced at the sale, the following property, under mortgage from Robert Morrow, Lots Nos 129 and 130, in the 2nd Concession West of the Toronto and Sydenham Road of the Township of Artemesia, County of Grey, containing 100 acres, more or less.

The following improvements are said to be on the premises:—75 acres cleared, having erected thereon two dwelling houses, a cedar log barn, with a brick yard, situated 5 miles from Markdale.

TERMS.—One-tenth of the purchase money to be paid down on day of sale. For balance, terms will be made known at the sale. For further particulars apply to

JONES BROS, & MACKENZIE,
Solicitors, Masonic Hall, Toronto.

or to JOHN LYONS, Esq., Markdale,

Toronto, October 16th, 1882. 111

MARKDALE MARKETS.

Fall Wheat, $0.85 to $0.90; Spring [illegible] to $0.92; Barley, 60c; Peas, 60t; Oats, [illegible] Butter, 17c; Eggs, 21c; Potatoes, 30c; Hay $8.00.

FLESHERTON MARKETS.

Fall Wheat, $0.80 to $0.90; Spring, $0.85 to $0.92; Barley, 60c; Peas, 66c; Oats, 36c; Butter, 17c; Eggs, 21c; Potatoes, 80c; Hay, $8.00.

TORONTO MARKETS.

Fall Wheat, $0.90 to $0.96; Spring, $1.05 to $1.06; Barley, 56c to 81c; Oats, 40c to 42c; Peas, 74c to 76c; Hogs, $8.00 to $8.50; Potatoes, per bag, 75c to 80c; Butter, dairy, 19c to 20c; eggs, 23c to 24c.

GENERAL Blacksmithing

Flesherton Station.

The subscriber begs to announce to the inhabitants of Flesherton, Markdale and Priceville, and surrounding country, that he has commenced business at Flesherton Station, where he hopes by satisfactory work and moderate rates to secure a share of public patronage.

HORSE-SHOEING A SPECIALTY.

And guaranteed that in a case of interfering horses he will cure the defect in two shoeings or no charge will be made for the second shoeing.

A TRIAL SOLICITED.

HENRY WHITE.

Flesherton Station, Oct. 17, 1882. 1[illegible]

A. HILL,

TAILOR.

Over McFarland's Store,

MARKDALE.

☞ Special attention to Cutting.

If you want a Perfect Fit leave your Order with

A. HILL.

September 20th, 1882. 106.

Moffat Bros'

MARKDALE

Foundry!

—AND—

MACHINE WORKS,

MANUFACTURERS OF

MILL MACHINERY,

Steam Engines,

SHAFTING, HANGERS,

Pulleys, &c. Land Rollers,

PLOWS!

And Plow Points

MACHINERY REPAIRING

Done in a practical manner.

We also introduce our new

FAMILY MANGLE!

to the public. This new machine will mangle Linen, Cotton, and Woollen Goods, giving them a beautiful smooth and glossy appearance. It also improves the clothes, whereas hot irons injure them. We also manufacture of various designs for Buildings, Verandahs, &c. Ornamental Cast iron Chains, Pall Pillars, Fencing, Ventilators, Columns, Iron Beams, Gratings for Cellar Windows, &c.

ORNAMENTAL CRESTING

IRON & BRASS CASTINGS

Of Every Description Made to Order.

MOFFAT BROS.

V'RYBODY

SHOULD SEE

W. F. DOLL'S

BEAUTIFUL STOCK OF

tches, Clocks, Jewelry,

SILVERWARE,

CERTINAS, VIOLINS, &c.

eing must buy, as the same quality of cannot be sold at so low a figure by ny other jeweller. The reason is,

IMPORTS DIRECT!

BUYS FOR CASH!

ereby saving from 20 to 50 per cent.

—o—

er the 16th inst. Mr. Doll's business e carried on at Markdale only. he hav- sold out his Dundalk and Flesherton s to enable him to give the attention to Markdale business which it requires.

—o—tches and Clocks Cleaned and Repaired.

Goods always turn out as represented, ve from $10 to $20 and buy a good ING MACHINE from W. F. Doll, only it. Also two splendid ORGANS for t less than half the catalogue price.

arkdale, Oct. 10th, 1882. 109

anted Immediately!

—FOR—

ill Bros.' New Elevator,

0 bushels Wheat,
4,000 bushels Barley,
30,000 bushels Oats,
25,000 bushels Peas,

which the highest market prices will be in cash. 111-tf.

Local Items.

Yes, Hollingshead's is the best place in n to get millinery.

Have you tried it? If not do so at once— Farland's 30 cent Tea.

J. G. Irving, pump maker, is doing a good ness. His pumps are hard to beat.

Yes, Beer has riz, but not McFarland's ds, they are down, down, down.

McKenna & Mason are getting up a num- of fine winter vehicles.

A number of families are moving into n and the few vacant houses are being apid.

Murder will out. So will the fact that Farland sells the cheapest Hats, Dress ds, Shawls, Clothing, Blankets and nets.

Thos. McNeil has turned out a large quan- y of dressed lumber, sashes, doors, casings, ms, &c., this season and is giving satis- tion.

Mr. John White, Lot 22, con. 10, Glenelg, t in our office last week two potatoes which ighed four and a half lbs. They are of Early Rose variety. Beat this who can.

A lodge of the C. O. O. F. was organized Dundalk on the 24th October when the lowing officers were elected and installed. Bro. W. T. Rundle, L. M.; W. J. Hicks, G.; G. R. Middleton, V. G.; J. Symington, W. T. Southoff, W.; J. Black, C.; J. bson, I. T.; J. Clark, R. S. N. G.; J. C. ll, L. S. N. G.; F. T. Teeple, R. S. V. G.; Sanderson, L. S. V. G.

A NARROW ESCAPE.—On Friday last Thos. Kilkenny was ascending McFarland's elevator when he missed his hold and fell a dis- nce of about 24 feet. Mr. Alex Erskin, of upbrasie, and Mr. McFarland were on the ound and broke his fall somewhat, other- ise he might of been seriously injured. We glad to be able to state that our respect- deputy reeve is not much the worse.

Mr. G. S. Brown has been making marked improvements in the premises formerly oc- upied by A. E. Noble as a carriage shop and welling house. The dwelling house has een raised about four feet by a stone oundation being placed underneath it, and he end turned to the street; he also in- ends veneering it next season. The car- iage shop has been raised a story higher, an ddition built there to, and a stone foundation uilt under the whole with the intention of aving it veneered next summer. Our enter- rising townsman, Mr. D. J. Shanahan, who as occupied the latter the past year, has eased it from Mr. Brown for a term of years nd has now the finest carriage establishment erhaps, in the county, and has on hand the argest stock and best material ever brought nto Markdale for the manufacture of car- iages of every description. Mr. Shanahan as built up a fine business during the short ime he has been in Markdale, and judging rom the class of work turned out and the reparations he is now making, will then ouble his business during the coming year.

Quarterly meeting next Sunday in the Methodist Church.

Next Saturday, the 4th, is fair day, and don't you forget it.

A lot of Horse Blankets cheap at T. Mathews', also fine Robes.

Mr. G. J. Blyth, of Owen Sound, gave us a call last week while in town.

Opened this week at W. F. Doll's a stock of No. 1 violins and concertinas.

We had a call from Mr. Fawcett of the Flesherton Advance on Tuesday.

Who'll be the next one to purchase one of those cheap suits from McFarland?

Mr. Richard Douglas has purchased Mr. Henry Williams farm near Vandeleur.

Get your Horse Blankets and Robes at T. Mathews', the cheapest and best in town.

Next Thursday, the 9th, is Thanksgiving Day, and also the Prince of Wales' birthday.

Remember W. F. Doll has the only first-class stock of spectacles between Orangeville and Owen Sound.

If religion does not make a man heart- some and pleasant at home, it is of no par- ticular benefit to his family.

A good stock to select from. W. F. Doll's stock includes over 300 gold and silver rings, over 100 gold and silver watches.

Mr. Sparling, of the Eclipse Saw Mill, has purchased a 40 horse power engine and boiler and will sell the old one, it being too small to do the work of his increasing busi- ness.

At a meeting of the Trustees of Markdale Public Schools, on the 30th Oct., Miss Fanny Ford was engaged for the second department and Miss Theresa Lyons for the third for the ensuing year.

When you meet with an accident, get a sprained ankle, or are otherwise injured, don't go to the expense of sending for a doctor, but apply Kendall's Spavin Cure, and you will experience instant relief.

Have some style about you and get your business and address nicely printed on your envelopes and note paper. You can have it done at the STANDARD office, with material provided, as cheap as you can buy the bare paper retail.

When your only and beloved son comes home scarred up as the result of a Juvenile fight, apply Kendall's Spavin Cure, and the pain will cease and the intellect will be great- ly strengthened, and in all probability he will soon be in the White House. Read ad- vertisement.

Considerable cross-firing is indulged in between Collingwood, Thornbury, Owen Sound and Meaford papers lately in reference to the merits and demerits of their several hamlets.

"The Commercial," Winnipeg, is publish- ed in the interests of the Financial, Mercan- tile, and Manufacturing class of the North West, and is full of valuable information. It is published weekly by Steen & Boyce at $2 per year.

NEVER NEGLECT IT.

If you suffer from a cough, never neglect it, if it is no trifling matter, and might lead to a speedily fatal disease of the Lungs. Hag- yard's Pectoral Balsam will allay all irrita- tion of the mucous membrane by its soothing healing power; it cures Bronchitis, Asthma, and all throat and Lung complaints.

Wm. Lucas & Co, bankers, Markdale have $200,000 0 to loan on real estate. Straight loan system. No fines. Low interest. Moderate charges

Rheumatism. This painful disease that so often cripples for life, arises from poison circulating in the blood, and often from an excess of acid. Inflammation is developed in the Muscles, ligaments and joints, by colds, damp clothing, &c., Liniments are ser- viceable to relieve, among many, Hagyard's Yellow Oil is preferable. To eradicate the rheumatic poison from the system, nothing can surpass Burdock Blood Bitters.

The Mail or Globe to the end of 1883 for $1.00. Leave your subscrip- tion at the STANDARD office. Subscribe at once and get the balance of this year free.

A FACT.

If you suffer from Chronic Disease, and have little faith in advertised remedies and have sought vainly for a cure, consult your druggist, or address T. Milburn & Co. Toron- to, for proof positive regarding the Merits of Burdock Blood Bitters, the Great Regulating Blood purifying tonic, that acts on the liver, kidneys, stomach, bowels and skin.

Arabi Pasha is now reported as saying that the only salvation for Egypt is the virtual government of the country by the British.

Mrs. B. M. Gifford, of Port Browan, was for many years a sufferer of Liver Complaint, and a serious complication of diseases. In a recent letter she says that she has only taken two bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters and has nearly recovered her health, and authorizes us to use her name in advertis- ing to suffering humanity.

The eighteenth annual convention of the Sabbath Schools Asociation of Canada open- ed at Brampton yesterday.

TRUE TO HER TRUST.

Too much cannot be said of the ever faith- ful wife and mother, constantly watching and caring for her dear ones, never neglect- ing a single duty in their behalf. When they are assailed by disease, and the system should have a thorough cleaning, the stomach and bowels regulated, blood purified, a ma- larial poison exterminated, she must know that Electric Bitters are the only sure reme- dy. They are the best and purest medicine in the world and only cost fifty cents. Sold by A. Turner.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.

The advertiser, having been permanently cured of that dread disease, Consumption, by a simple remedy, is anxious to make known to his fellow sufferers the means of cure. To all who desire it, he will send a copy of the prescription used, (free of charge,) with the directions for preparing and using the same which they will find a SURE CURE for CON- SUMPTION, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, &c.

Parties wishing the Prescription, will please address, Rev. E. A. Wilson, 149 Penn st., Williamsburgh, N. Y. 75-127

AGENTS WANTED.—Big pay.—Light Work. Steady Employment. Samples free. Address, M. L. BYRN, 46 Nassau stree New York. 20

VALUABLE PROPERTY

FOR SALE

IN THE TOWN OF DURHAM, IN THE COUNTY OF GREY.

THE following valuable town properties will be sold on reasonable terms or will be rented for a term of years, or exchange for farm propeoty.

1st.

Lot No. 1 on the west side of Garafraxa street and south of Hunter street, opposite Mr. J. H. Hunter's store house, well fenced and first class frame buildings, good cellars, hard and soft water, a most conveniant resi- dence and would make a good business stand.

2nd,

That most desirable property being park lots nos. 2 and 3 on the north side of George st., 8 acres more or less, well fenced, front fenced with pickets, one and a half acres of a thriving young orchard and very conven- ient to the railway station.

The east half of the west half of lot 18 on the west side of countess street with a new frame house and kitchen, good stable and wood shed, well fenced, front fence paint- ed white, hard and soft water on the prem- ises.

4th,

Park Lot No. 8, Wm. Hunter's, Survey.

5th

Lots 1 and 2, Presbyterian Survey.

6th,

Lot No 15 on the North side of Mill street in the village of Markdale close to the rail- way station, with good frame house thereon. If the above properties are sold the very best title will be given free from all encum- brances.

—Also the—

Following Farming Properties.

will be sold on reasonable terms of payment.

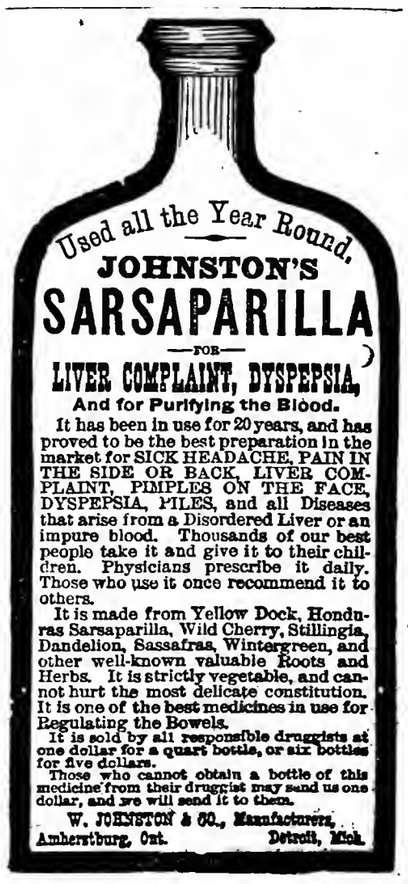
7th,

Lot No. 22, Con. 9 Glenelg, 100 acres more or less, 3½ miles from the T. G. & B. R. at Markdale, 75 acres cleared, a new frame house and two log barns.

8th,

Lot No. 93 in the 3rd Con. W. T. & S. R., Glenelg 50 acres, about 45 acres cleared and good log buildings, about 2½ miles from Markdale station T. G. & B. R.

9th,



The west half lot 17, Con. 4. N. D. R., Glenelg, 50 acres 40 acres cleared, good rough cast house and orchard on the pre- mises. The house and one acre will be re- served during the life of the occupants who are now between 80 and 85 years of age.

10th

East part lot No. 1. con 2 Normanby, 63 acres, about 50 acres cleared, situation about 2 miles from the town of Durham. For further particulars apply to

FINLEY MacRAE, Durham.

Dated 15th August. 1882. tf 104,

Mothers! Mothers! Mothers!

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the extruciating pain of cutting teeth! If so, go at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately— depend upon it; there is no mistake about it. There is not a mother upon earth who has ever used it, who will not tell you at once that it will regulate the bowels, and give rest to the mother, and relief and health to the child, operating like magic. It is perfectly safe to use in all cases, and pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the old- est and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Sold everywhere at 25 cents a bottle. 75-127

Dye Stuffs.

Indigo,
Madder,
Logwood,
Fustic,
Camwood,
Cochineal,
Bluestone,
Madder Compound,
Copperas,
Bichromate Potash,
Cream Tartar,
Alum, and
many other Articles used in Dyeing.
Also, a large variety of the best Aniline Dyes.

Medical Hall.

A. Turner & Co.

Re-Fresh-ing

In the cool assertion of some people that they can sell below cost, &c, it may not be amiss to let the public of Markdale and sur- rounding country know that

Wilson Benson,

of the "BELFAST HOUSE," MARKDALE, can sell "cheaper than the cheapest," and "better than the best," all kinds of

Groceries, Liquors, &c.

Consisting of

TEAS, TOBACCOS, SPICES, CANNED FISH, ETC.,

And for those wishing pure Wine for sac- ramental purposes, will find a brand that will equal anything on this side the Atlantic.
Other Liquors equally pure.
SPECIAL! Pure Holland Gin.
Cheese from the best manufactories.
Our Whiskies are from the firm of Good- erham & Worts, Toronto, and the public may rely on receiving them as they are sent.

FLOUR, POTATOES, and everything in the household line kept constantly on hand.

Henceforth my Store will be supplied with Fruits of all kinds, such as
APPLES. PEARS, PLUMS, &c.

FRUIT CAKES of all kinds always kept on hand.

Essences, Hair Oils, and Perfumery of the choicest nectars.

TOILET & FANCY SOAPS, better than the best.

CANADIAN & WESTERN PORK, of first quality.

Everything in the Grocery Line kept on a fuller and more complete scale than at any other place in Markdale.

WILSON BENSON.

PIMPLES.

I will mail (Free) the recipe for a simple VEGETABLE BALM that will remove TAN- FRECKLES, PIMPLES and BLOTCHES, leave ing the skin soft, clear and beautiful; also instructions for producing a luxuriant growth of hair on a bald head or smooth face. Ad- dress, enclosing a 3c. stamp, Ben. Vandelf & Co., 5 Beekman st., N. Y. 75-127

ERRORS OF YOUTH.

A GENTLEMAN who suffered for years from NERVOUS DEBILITY, PREMA- TURE DECAY, and all the effects of youth- ful indiscretion will, for the sake of suffering humanity, send free to all who need it, the recipe and directions for making the simple remedy by which he was cured. Sufferers wishing to profit by the advertiser's experi- ence can do so by addressing in perfect confi- dence, JOHN B. OGDEN.
75-127 42 Cedar St., New York.

Gold. Great chance to make money. Those who always take advantage of the good chances for making money that are offered, generally become wealthy, while those who do not improve such chances re- main in poverty. We want many men, wo men, boys and girls to work for us right in their own localities. Any one can do the work properly from the first start. The bus- iness will pay more than ten times ordinary wages. Expensive outfit furnished free. No one who engages fails to make money rapidly You can devote your whole time in the work, or only your spare moments. Full informa- tion and all that is needed sent free. Addres, STINSON & Co., Portland Maine. 71-126

MANHOOD

HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED

SEAL We have recently published a new edition of Dr. CULVERWELL'S CELE- BRATED ESSAY on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Ner- vous Debility, Mental and Physical incapaci- ty, Impediments to Marriage, &c., resulting from excesses.

Price, in sealed envelope, only 6 cents, or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming con- sequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Address

The Culverwell Medical Co.,
P.O. box 450 41 Ann St., New York.

MARKDALE

Meat Market.

A constant supply of

Fresh Meats!

on hand, at the Lowest Living Prices.

Orders solicited, and deliv- ered free to all parts of the Town.

Farmers having fat stock to dispose of, will please leave their addresses.

TERMS, STRICTLY CASH.

FRED. SARJEANT.

Markdale, March 23, 1882. 80-1y

SEEING IS BELIEVING.

GENTLEMEN,—
If you want a first-class

Buggie or Wagon

call at

MCKENNA & MASON'S

CARRIAGE WORKS

MARKDALE.

They can supply you with anything from a

Lumber Wagon

up to

Extension Top Phæton.

To buy from them is to

SAVE MONEY!

They are both practical workmen, and employ none but

PRACTICAL WORKMEN

They guarantee their work
Second to none for Lightness of Draught and Superiority of Finish.

They use nothing but First-class White Oak for Wagons, and thrice Extra Second Growth Hickory for light work.

The immense amount of work turned out of McKenna & Mason's shop is sufficien proof of the wide reputation they enjoy for doing good work.
THE BEST IS THE CHEAPEST IN THE END
Poor cheap work we positively will not take.

Special attention given to Re-Trimming and Repainting all classes of Carriage Work.

Satisfaction guaranteed (or No Pay) in

HORSESHOEING

SHOP—On Mill Street opposite to Sproule's Hotel.

McKENNA & MASON.

THOS. MATHEWS,

Harness Establishment!

MARKDALE.

EVERYTHING IN OUR LINE KEPT ON HAND OR MADE TO ORDER ON SHORT NOTICE.

LIVERY!

IN CONNECTION.

GEORGE WILSON,

Wholesale and Retail

BUTCHER!

BEEF, PORK OR MUTTON SUPPLIED. from a single pound to a whole carcass, at the lowest market prices.

FISH & FOWL IN THEIR SEASON

Farmers having Fat Cattle, Sheep, or Pigs to dispose of will do well to call at No. 3 Burns' Block, opposite the new Union Block.

Markdale, Oct. 25th, 1881

Nothing Like Leather.

M. M. M'LEOD,

MARKDALE.

NOT TO BE BEATEN!

All those who may have had the misfor- tune to have been born barefooted will bear in mind that we have just received the larg- est and best stock of leather ever before brought into Markdale, consisting of Spanish Sole, French Kip and Calf, and are now pre- pared to manufacture Ladies, Gents, Youths and Misses boots and shoes, from the stogs to the finest kid and prunella.

Sewed Work a Specialty.

All work warranted. Invisible patching also done here.

M. M. McLEOD.

Markdale, Sept. 19th, 1881.

AN ITALIAN EVANGELINE.

The Remarkable Romance that a Mohawk Reporter Related.

A gang of Italian laborers has for months past been employed on the West Shore Railroad a few miles beyond Amsterdam. They are very quiet, industrious, and well behaved, and seem to be above the average of Italian laborers. Among them was one whose form was slender and symmetrical, complexion fair with a slight olive tint, eyes dark and lustrous, and hair long, dark hued, and wavy. An Evening Recorder reporter who visited the spot a couple of days ago gleaned from persons well acquainted with the facts the following romantic story:

The fair personage was a woman. He name was Angello Lourino. Her lover, Franko Patricio, came to America, like many of his countryman, to better his fortune. The fair Angello pined in his absence, and finally determined to join him in the far off America. To carry out her plans she disguised herelf in men's attire, and having no money with which to pay her passage, she stowed herself away upon an ocean steamer bound for the United States. After the steamer sailed she was discovered and willingly did a sailor's hard duty to work her passage across the broad Atlantic. At length she arrived in New York city, only to learn, after patient investigation, that her lover had joined the army of Italian laborers upon the West Shore Railroad.

Nothing daunted, she, too, became a railroad worker, and labored for her daily bread at various points along the West Shore Railroad, ever keeping the object of her life—to find her long lost lover—in view. During her wanderings she came near meeting him. Once she caught sight of his form on the deck of a canal boat which passed near the spot where she was at work, but the overseer kept her at her task, and the boat went onward. At another time she caught a glimpse of him as he was rapidly whirled by the Amsterdam railroad station on an express train. In the course of her wanderings and changes she was finally located with a gang of Italian laborers a few miles below this village. Her constitution, naturally delicate, was unable to endure the exposure and hard work, and she fell a victim to typhoid fever. The fatal disease made rapid work, and the poor girl, who, until her sickness, had strictly kept to herself the secret of her sex, rapidly succumbed to its ravages. As the end approached, Angella awoke to consciousness from her feverish delirium and saw her lover bending over her. He had been detailed to work at this spot, and arrived only in time to see her die. She fixed her eyes on the face of her lover with a look of love, and faintly murmured, in the language of her native land:

"At last we meet, only to part forever. Farewell, my dearest." With these words she died.

The remains of Angella were laid upon a platform, covered with a cloth, and stones placed beneath her head. For four days and nights the body was kept in this position, while the lover kept a ceaseless vigil beside it. At the expiration of this time the body was wrapped in a winding sheet and buried in the "dump" of the read bed, the remains being covered with earth from the dumping carts.

Cotton Manufacturing in the South.

The development of cotton manufacturing in the South is one of the most notable and promising industrial occurrences of the day. Not merely because of the rapid growth of the business, but more because of its appropriateness and apparent profitableness. The conditions would seem to be altogether in favor of the Southern mills, so far as the supplying of their home market is concerned at least, and it remains to be determined whether they have not also marked advantages in the competition for control of the markets of the West. The larger part of the charges for freight, jobbers' commissions, storage, insurance, etc., which the Eastern mill owner has to pay, the Southern mill is exempt from; and the difference from $2 to $3 a bale in freight alone is clear saving. The Baltimore Journal of Commerce estimates the actual capital now invested in Southern cotton mills at $50,000,000, of which nearly one-third has been invested within two years. Touching the prosperity of these Southern mills the Journal says that ten per cent annual dividends are the lowest reported, and this after a large amount has been taken from the earnings for increasing the size and capacity of the mills. Under more favorable conditions the dividends have been much larger.

To commemorate the services of Oliver and Oakes Ames in connection with the building of the first railway across the United States, connecting the Atlantic with the Pacific, the Union Pacific Company are erecting a granite pyramid on the highest point near its track. The monument is now nearly finished. It is 60 feet square at the base and 60 feet high, laid up in undressed red granite, in a style calculated to last for centuries. On the west side is a medallion bust of Oakes Ames, 9 feet high, with the date of his birth and death. On the north is the inscription: "In memory of Oakes Ames and Oliver Ames." On the east side the bust of Oliver Ames has yet to be placed. The top is rounded off, and does not make an acute angle. The cost is said to be nearly $90,000.

A Curious Tree.

Lieutenent Houghton, who has recently visited New Guinea and several other groups of islands in the Pacific, reports the existence of a phehensile tree. It appears to be a species of ficus, allied to the well-known banyan-tree, which throws out from its branches air roots, that eventually reach the ground, and take root there, and in their turn become new stems, which perform the same function; so that a single tree will eventually extend so far as to form a complete forest, in which the stems are united by the branches to each other. The prehensile tree in question similarly throws out from its branches long, flexible tendrils which, touching the ground, do not take root there, but twine around any article that may lie within their reach. After a time these quasi branches contract, so that they fail to reach the ground; but the finger-like processes continue to closely gripe the article round which they have twined themselves, and which are consequently suspended in mid-air. In this way, articles of considerable weight may be literally picked up from the ground and held in suspension.

Enameled Cloth.

As a substitute for leather, enameled cloth is now largely used where lightness and pliableness are desirable. Having the appearance of leather, and nearly if not quite, its durability, it is used where strength is not so important as a good appearance. In the covering of carriage tops, the upholstering of furniture, the covering of trunks and travelling bags, a great quantity is used, and it is also employed in garments, coverings, etc., as a protection from water. Enameled cloth originated in America, and was first made at Newark, N. J., in 1849. The details of its manufacture are very simple, and can soon be told. The foundation of the article is cotton cloth of the best quality, and generally made expressly for this purpose. The cloth is taken from a bale and wound upon a large cylinder preparatory to receiving its first coat. It is then passed between heavy iron rollers, from the top one of which it receives its first coating of composition. In many places the covering is spread by a knife under which the web passes. The composition is made of linseed oil, lampblack, resin, and a few other ingredients, which are boiled together till they reach the consistency of melted tar. From between the cylinders it is carried to a drying frame made in the shape of a reel, and subjected to a high temperature in the drying-room which is heated generally by steam pipes. After the drying process it is given to workmen who make all the rough places smooth by rubbing with pumice-stone and water. The cloth is then passed though the same operation as before, rolling, drying, and rubbing, and this is repeated from three to five times, or until the required thickness has been laid on. After the last scrubbing down, the fabric is taken to another department, thoroughly varnished, and again passed through the heater. It now appears as a piece of cotton cloth, with one black side looking very much like patent leather. One step yet remains to be taken. The cloth is passed between heavy rollers, which cover its surface with regular indentations resembling the grain of leather. It is now ready for the market. We venture to say that as many frauds are perpetrated in this article as in any other article that can be mentioned. Manufacturers who desire to turn out a heavy material first fill the cloth with clay, and the result is an enamel that will crack during the cold weather of winter, or, in their endeavor to turn out a cloth that will stand a low temperature without cracking, they fill the merchant's shelves with material that will be sticky in summer. The poor quality is used in the cheap trunk and bag trade, but none but the best will do for the outside wear that comes upon carriage tops.—Manufacturers' Gazette.

A Terribly Wronged Woman.

Tardy reparation has at length been made to the memory of a mortally wronged German woman, whose name has been unjustly held up to public scorn and contumely in the place of her birth for more than two centuries and a half. In the year 1617 the city of Tangermuende was destroyed by fire, and two years later several persons were tried, condemned, and executed at Brandenburg for acts of incendiarism, alleged to have caused the calamity in question. Amongst those who suffered was Grete (Margaret) Minden, the daughter of a Tangermuende patrician. She was stripped and chained to tall post in the market place. The five fingers of her right hand were torn off with red-hot pincers. Her arms and breasts were deeply seared with glowing irons. Finally she was burnt to death slowly. From first to last her martyrdom lasted nearly an hour. Ever since that time a so called "Conflagration Sermon" has been preached on each successive fourteenth Sunday after Trinity in the principal Tangermuende Church. This discourse describes Grete Minden as an abominable monster, the refuse of mankind, who burned down her native town to revenge herself upon the municipality for, as she believed, withholding paternal inheritance. It was a story by the eminent novelist Theodore Fontane, in which Grete Minden figured as a heroine, that suggested an investigation of the documentary evidence connected with her case to Ludolf Parisius, a member of the Reichstag and this gentleman found out that the unfortunate woman had most undoubtedly been the victim of a judicial murder. He lost no time in communicating his discovery to the Tangermuende authorities, and on Sunday, the 10th September, when the clergyman on duty ascended his pulpit to preach the two hundred and sixty-fourth "Conflagration Sermon," he prefaced his discourse by announcing to the congregation that recent enquiry into the origin of the great Tangermuende Fire had completely exonerated Grete Minden from any complicity with the authors of that catastrophe. For many days before and after the fire she had been lying on a bed of sickness many miles fron Tangermuende. Subsequently she had been wrongfully accused, sentenced, tortured and done to death with the utmost barbarity, an absolutely innocent woman.

Experimenting With Mushrooms.

It was in the Crimea, when rations were at the very worst—salt pork and biscuit alone being the every-day fare of everybody. Well, one morning, the bat-man of a surgeon of artillery, being out foraging, came upon a treasure trove of agarics. He took them to his master. "Sorr," said he, "Oi've picked up these. Faith, an' they be mushrooms! Oi'll broil them in pork fat, and ye'll not be so badly off for the male (meal) this blissid noight." The doctor, who was no botanist, feared that the fungi were toadstools, and advised their been thrown away. "Arrah, not a stick of em, sorr, before evening!" said Pat. "Be japers, no! Oi'll tell you what we'll do. The Vet.'s servant he has a capeful as well as me. They are for that officer's dinner. Now, he dines at 1 o'clock; your honor don't dine till aiven. Let Mister Horseleech ate his first. You wait and see the iffict. If he be nayther sick nor sorry before your fading (feeding) toime, ye yourself can ate the things widout fear—they'll be mushrooms, and no mistake. But if the Vet, is complaining, or maybe dead—and Oi've asked a corporal farrier to lit me know—whoy, it will be pretty sartin that the vigitables aren't mushrooms, and ye nade not touch them at all at all." At 7 P. M., the horse-doctor being all right, the human one devoured the delicious "vigitables" con gusto, blessed his bat-man, and was all right too.—London Society.

Scientific.

The Scientific American endorses a correspondent that soda water is a solution, under pressure, in water of carbonic acid gas. The gas is generated under considerable pressure in a closed vessel by the action of diluted sulphuric acid upon marble dust or ground marble. It is passed over into the cold water which absorbs it. The names soda or soda water are misnomers, as the liquid contains no soda. It was so miscalled from an imagined resemblance between it and the older effervescent beverages prepared from bicarbonates of soda or potassa and vegetable acids or acid salts.

Sawdust is said by some one to be better than the hair in protecting rough cast from peeling and scaling under the influence of frost and weather. The sawdust should be first dried and then thoroughly sifted, in order to remove the coarser particles. A mixture is then made of two parts sawdust, five parts sharp sand, and one part cement, which should be thoroughly stirred together and then incoporated with two parts of lime. —Scientific American.

Mediterranean fishermen complain that their sea, formerly free from sharks, is now infested with them. The sharks come through the Suez Canal from the Red Sea and the Indian Ocean, and make sad havoc among good fish.

N. Jepson, an English vegetarian, not wishing to use poor and adulterated animal fats, has sought a substitute, and found it in a composition for which the following is the formula: Take four ounces of the finest Brazilian nuts, pounded very fine in a mortar; four ounces pure olive oil; rub them into a smooth jelly; add eight ounces of fine wheat flour and a quarter of an ounce of salt. Rub the whole into a smooth paste, and use as butter.

A Patent Medicine Paradise.

If the negroes of the south could read there would be such a demand for patent medicines, porous plasters, pills and stomach bitters as would force every manufacturer to double his help and capacity. The negro is always ailing. No matter how healthy he looks or how strong he seems, he believes himself afflicted. If he could read almanacs and circulars he would think so twice as strongly.

At Dalton, Ga., I saw a big fellow pick up a barrel of flour as easily as I could have lifted a twenty-five pound sack, and when I complimented him on his strength he replied:

"Yes, boss, I seems powerful strong, but you doan' know what a hard time I has of it. Ize got liber complaint, dyspepsia and consumpshun, an' I reckon I won't neber see snow fly again."

I asked him what remedies he had been using, and he replied that he had been taking the dust of burnt leather and mixing it with cold tea. Nothing whatever ailed him, but if he could have got hold of ten dollars he would have used eight of it in buying medicines.

I was in a livery stable at Marietta when a man came in with a bottle of prepared Jamaica Ginger. One of the colored men employed about the stable, who hadn't lost a day for years and who looked as ragged as a mountain, looked at the bottle three or four times and then asked:

"What ye got dar, Kurnel?"

"Something for apoplexy," was the reply.

"Would ye mind givin' me a sip of it, kase my apoplexy has been takin' on in de moas' dreffal manner fur de las' week?"

The cork was drawn and the negro lifted up the bottle and took three heavy swallows of the fiery stuff. The next three minutes were the longest and hottest ones he ever saw, but as soon as he could speak he remarked:

"Ah! but dat stuff seems to hit de right spot! I reckon it will cure up my apoplexy all right, an' like 'nuff I may light on sumthing good fur congestion of de lungs an' water on de brain!"—Detroit Free Press.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Two church missionaries, William F. John and John Williams, and their wives, are being tried at Sierra Leone, in Africa, for the wilful murder of a native girl by flogging and other ill treatment.

The extent to which Highland estates are now being cleared of sheep, with a view of "foresting," is likely to excite the attention of Parliament before long. Deer forests are very profitable possessions; but if the whole country is to be turned into a vast game reserve, rents are likely to fall considerably. Since the beginning of August nearly 50,000 sheep have passed through Inverness, by the Highland railway, on their way south.

The eiderdown duck feeds chiefly in Iceland on the refuse of fish thrown out from the houses. In spring the female duck plucks her breast to line her nest, and, instinctively knowing that summer is coming, lines it lavishly. When it is stolen she plucks her breast again, and on it being stolen a second time assesses the drake for some down from his breast, and the nest is built a third time. The quantity of genuine down obtained is but about 7,000 pounds a year.

Baron Wilhelm Rothschild of Frankfort is so strict a Jew that during his recent tour through Switzerland he was accompanied, not only by his ritual cook and butcher, but also by ten devout persons of his own religion, who went solely for the purpose of praying with him, as, according to Mosaic law, a congregation must consist of at least ten worshippers. The Baron returned his income for 1881 at $1,187,500, so that he can certainly afford himself these ritualistic luxuries.

Numbers in War.

Sir Garnet Wolseley had under his command at Kassasain about half an army corps—that is to say, not quite one-tenth of the number of soldiers captured by the Germans on the surrender of Metz. But, in estimating the importance of the decisive battles of history, mere numbers count for nothing. The three hundred of Thermopylæ, the three hundred and thirteen who fought the first battle of Islam at Bedr, the hundred and sixty-eight with whom Pizarro overthrew the Empire of the Incas, and the thousand Englishmen commanded by Clive at Plassy, have left a deeper impress on the history of man than most of the myriad armies of ancient or of modern times.—Pall Mall Gazette.

PEARLS OF TRUTH.

A slave has but one master. The ambitious man has as many masters as there are persons whose aid may contribute to the advancement of his fortune.—La Bruyere.

Though authority be a stubborn bear, yet he is oft led by the nose with gold.—Shakespeare.

The most trifling actions that affect a man's credit are to be regarded. The sound of your hammer at 5 in the morning, or 9 at night, heard by a creditor, makes him easy six months longer; but if he sees you at a billiard table, or hears your voice at the tavern, when you should be at work, he sends for his money the next day.—Franklin.

Flattery is often a traffic of mutual meanness, where, although both parties intend deception, neither are deceived.—Colton.

Foppery is never cured; it is the bad stamina of the mind, which like those of the body, are never rectified; once a coxcomb, and always a coxcomb.—Johnson.

Get not your friends by bare compliments, but by giving them sensible tokens of your love. It is well worth while to learn how to win the heart of a man the right way. Force is of no use to make or preserve a friend, who is an animal that is never caught nor tamed but by kindness and pleasure. Excite them by your civilities, and show them that you desire nothing more than their satisfaction. Oblige with all your soul that friend who has made you a present of his own.—Socrates.

He who receives a good turn should never forget it; he who does one should never remember it.—Chanon.

A word—a look, which at one time makes no impression, at another times wounds the heart; and like a shaft flying with the wind pierces deep, which, with its own natural force, would scarce have reached the object aimed at.—Sterne.

A more glorious victory cannot be gained over another man than this, that when the injury began on his part, the kindness should begin on ours.—Tillotson.

While we retain the dower of rendering service, and conferring favors, we seldom experience ingratitude.—La Rochefoucauld.

If we did but know how little some enjoy of the great things that they possess, there would not be much envy in the world. —Young.

What an argument in favor of social connection is the observation that by comunicating our grief we have less, and by communicating our pleasure we have more.—Greville.

Every one must see daily instances of people who complain from a mere habit of complaining.—Graves.

Saving The Train.

The usual crowd of autumn liars were gathered together in the store, occupying all the grocery seats—the only gross receipts that the proprietor took no pride in—when a little, blear-eyed, weazen-faced individual sneaked in by the back door, and slunk into a dark corner.

"That's him," said the ungrammatical bummer with a green patch over his left eye.

"Who is it?" asked several at once.

"Why, the chap who saved the train from being wrecked," was the reply.

"Come, tell us all about it," they demanded, as the small man crouched in the darkness, as if unwilling that his heroic deed should be brought out under the glare of the blazing kerosene lamp.

After much persuasion, reinforced by a stiff horn of applejack, he began:

"It was just such a night as this—bright and clear—and I was going home down the track, when, right before me, across the rails, lay a great beam. There it was. Pale and ghastly as a lifeless body, and light as it appeared, I had not the power to move it. A sudden rumble and roar told me that the night express was thundering down, and soon would reach the fatal spot. Nearer and nearer it approached till, just as the cow-catcher was about lifting me, I sprang aside, placed myself between the obstruction and the track, and the train flew on unharmed."

The silence was so dense for a moment that one could hear a dew drop. Presently somebody said:

"What did you do with the beam?"

"I didn't touch it," he replied: "but it touched me."

"Well," persisted the questioner, "but if you couldn't lift it, and didn't touch it, how in thunder did the train get over it?"

"Why, don't you see?" said the sad-faced man, as he rose from his seat and slided toward the door. "The obstruction was a moon-beam, and I jumped so that the shadow of my body took its place, and—"

Bang! flew a ham against the door; and if it had struck the body of the retreating hero, there would have been a much bigger greasespot frescoed on the panel.—Drake's Travelers' Magazine.

Not Gwendolen's Foot.

"You have stepped on my foot!"

The murmuring zephyrs of a June morning were kissing with dewy breath the rose bushes that were soon to burst forth in a wealth of bud and blossom; the twitter of the robin and the meadow lark rose cheerily upon the cool, fresh air that came from beyond the hilltops in the west, and athwart the eastern sky faint bands of crimson light, rosy harbingers of the golden flood that was to come, made a vivid contrast to the deep blue of the zenith, while over all was spread the solemn hush that comes before breakfast.

"You are mistaken, darling," said Gwendolen Mahaffy, looking up tenderly at Pericles Perkins; "it was the horse."

"Perhaps you are right," the man replied, stroking the neck of the horse—a beautiful Norman that weighed nearly a ton —"but it would have deceived even a more trusting heart than mine."

The Ambassadors from Madagascar.

The Ambassadors from Madagascar wear European costume, black frock coats, and silk hats; they are from forty to fifty years of age, and the hair of the chief of the mission is turning gray. They are all of dark complexion, and a journal of Marseilles, where they have landed, describe their manners as those of English gentlemen "cold and correct."

Modern Dress.

At the late Sanitary Congress at Newcastle, England, Dr. Alfred Carpenter invelghed against modern dress. [illegible] of a sanitary institute, it was held [illegible] Carpenter, should include not the [illegible] alone and its surroundings, but the [illegible] the men, women, and children who [illegible] it. What principally attracted the [illegible] the Doctor was the stiff silk hat [illegible] "chimney pot." This was declared [illegible] one of the most idiotic of all human [illegible] ments of torture. In England, a hard [illegible] hat is the prescribed head-dress for [illegible] lads. Young gentlemen of that artistic [illegible] character who may have walked in [illegible] procession from Dr. Blaider's school [illegible] wear such hats or lose all social position [illegible] boy sans a shiny hard hat would be a [illegible] a vulgarism. "The custom and law," [illegible] said Dr. Carpenter, "might be [illegible] but the votaries did not know it." [illegible] ruled that boys' brains should be [illegible] iron, and fashion ignored the teaching [illegible] common sense. But as to shoes, foot[illegible] ings were worse than those used for [illegible] head. One-half of the population [illegible] civilized world did not walk on [illegible] feet. As a child grew, its limbs, [illegible] bulk, fashion dictated that the feet [illegible] not increase in proportion to the rest [illegible] body. If we did not exactly imitate [illegible] fashions with women's feet, we did [illegible] thing equally stupid. We did our [illegible] waste the muscles and distort the [illegible] bones; we tried all we could to hamper [illegible] natural action of the ankle. A greater [illegible] nation than a high-heeled or a pointed [illegible] shoe Dr. Carpenter could not imagine [illegible] "queen of society" who could not [illegible] nor keep her balance this presuming [illegible] apostrophized as "a person of very [illegible] intellect." It was a source of dyspepsia [illegible] consumption. A woman who could [illegible] walk must be more subject to disease [illegible] one who could walk. We did, too, and [illegible] could to thwart nature by applying [illegible] to the wrong parts of the body, [illegible] good sense of the English nation," said [illegible] Carpenter, "was abolishing at least [illegible] from the list of articles which young [illegible] wore, but they were sadly too much [illegible] even now." Then the clothing of [illegible] was discussed. In summer fond mothers [illegible] dressed their babies too scantily, [illegible] winter too much. Fine lace looked pretty [illegible] when in contrast with infantile nudity [illegible] weather, whereas in winter sumptuous [illegible] could be produced upon a baby if it could [illegible] overloaded with velvet and plush. How [illegible] did this presumptuous doctor go? "Why," [illegible] he said, with mingled regret and disgust, [illegible] "if Parliament were to make a rule that [illegible] imprisonment should follow the man who [illegible] wore a chimney pot, the prisons in the [illegible] country would be sufficient to contain those [illegible] who would suffer martyrdom sooner than [illegible] give up its use."

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

A good story is told of Modjeska. She, in a fashionable London drawing-room, was asked to give a Polish recitation. After some hesitation she commenced. As she proceeded her eyes seemed to flash fire, and her audience were almost spellbound by her impassioned delivery. They presumed, of course that she was uttering the aspirations of her countrymen for freedom and denouncing the oppressors of Poland, and the most enthusiastic plaudits rewarded her. It was explained, however, that she had been only reciting the ordinal numbers from 1 to 100.

Barry Sullivan, who is about to visit Parliament as a supporter of Parnell, was born in Birmingham in 1824, and brought up in England. He made his first appearance in Cork in 1840, and after winning considerable fame in Liverpool, Manchester, Edinburgh and Dublin made a successful debut at the Haymarket, London, in "Hamlet" in February, 1852. In 1857 he appeared at Burton's Theatre, N. Y., and made a tour of the States. After six years in Australia he returned here in 1876, and played a series of unsuccessful engagements. His careful, correct, and perspicuous declamation never startles his audience. He will be the first actor who has held a seat in the House of Commons.

Carrie Swain, in "Call, the Tomboy," is having a genuine boom.

Handsome Harry Meredith, the actor-author is making a tremendous success throughout the country in his own drama, "Rob 10."

Williams' Manchester & Jennings Co., "specialty" company quite above the average has been drawing exceptionally large audiences. Its performances are quite out of the beaten track of variety entertainments.

Albumen in Cow's Milk.

Dr. Schmidt, Mulhemin, has been investigating the nitrogenous bodies in cow's milk, about which so much diversity of opinion has prevailed. He says that three albuminoid substances are regularly present in the milk, viz: caseine, albumen, and pepton. The average of seven analyses gave 2·43 per cent. of caseine, 0·38 per cent. of albumen, and 0·13 per cent. of pepton. Under certain circumstances the amount of albumen may increase until it equals that of the albumen. The pepton is formed from the caseine by a fermentative process; this ferment is destroyed by a boiling temperature, but its activity is not destroyed by salicylic or carbolic acid, so that in this respect it resembles the ferment that digests the albuminoids. Since milk, on long standing, may lose 10 per cent. or more of its caseine by its conversion into peptone, it should be made use of as fresh as possible when employed for making cheese.

Big Yield.

Some idea of the enormous quantity of grain raised in this country may be obtained from the following reliable information. This year four brothers—the Elliots—in the Elliot settlement have grown so much grain that to team it to this city it will require four teams drawing every day for a two month to clean out their granaries. Though these, probably, are the largest growers to the south, there are others whose crops are more extensive than is readily realized. The importance of immediate railway connection is very apparent, and the action of the City Council in dealing with the matter is not taking the step a moment too soon.—Brandon Sun.

A Soliloquy on Carving.

g about carving, there is a pros- that in our best circles, within a e, the old custom of making the lish the kiln-dried poultry at din- ecom: extinct, and that a servant ard, on a small salary will take a and a can of nitro-glycerine and e remains, thus giving the host a chat with his guests instead of them with dressing and casting gravy over the company.

a move for which I have long con- It places the manual labor of a here it belongs, and relisves a man ould give his whole attention tertainment of his friends at table. ld not expect your host to take off kill the fowl in your presence in show you that it was all on the and it is not customary to require rietor of the house to peel the pota- table for his guests to prove that o put-up job about it.

fore I claim that the lamented hen thoroughly shattered at a side table hlete at four dollars per week, and faith towards the guests be main- If any one be doubtful or suspici- uette will permit them to stand by of the hireling carver and witness est. Still it would be better fun for t at the table, and if the parts given not satisfactory, he can put them in shoes pro tem, and casually throw t the back door while the other re listening to the "Maiden's Pray- e parlor.

r the new deal the host will enjoy her much more than he used to with b cut off and a quart of dressing in No man feels perfectly at home if o wrap up his cut finger in a rag and op a handful of dre sing out of his ket and return it to the platter. en are cool enough to do this, heartily all the time and tell- e mirth-provoking anecdote mean- lso annoying to have twenty guests "the dark meat, please," when re only three animals cooked and one of them had a particle of dark out her person. Lately I have adopt- plan of segregating the fowl by main h, using the fingers when necessary, n wiping them off in an off-hand on the table-cloth. Then I ask the to bring in that dark hen we order- that we might have an abundance of eat. If the servant says there is I smile and tell the guests that the te chicken, by some oversight, has ten in the kitchen, and I shall have them such relics as may be at hand. mplifies the matter, and places me in re agreeable place relative to the y. My first success, however, in is mainly confined to the water- The watermelon does not confuse always know where to find the joint. se who do not like the inside of a elon can have the outside. Now, my trouble with fowls is, that one day I Nebraska chicken and the next day I to assassinate a Mormon Shanghai with high, expressive hip-bones and am pilotot. This makes me nervous, e they are so dissimilar and their are in different places. The Mormon round-shouldered and her collar-bone e on the bias than the Nebraska fowl. gives a totally different expression to atures in death, and, as I have said, ys the symmetry of the carve.

gan my education in this line by cary- tter in hot weather, and gradually led the quail on toast. In carving the quail, mortgage your home and get the quail. uail should be cooked before carving, ot before the chronometer balance and organs have been removed. Place quail on the toast in a sitting position, passing the dissecting knife down be- the shoulder blades, bisect the polon- other method is to take the quail by ind leg and eat it, asking the guests to e same. This breaks up the feeling of ess that is apt to prevail at a formal er party, and while each one has his or ose immersed in quail, good feeling can- ail to show itself.

An Athletic Empress.

e Empress of Austria has spent the mer at Ischl, upper Austria, in a regu- ourse of training for the hunting sea- which, according to the present ar- ements, will be spent in Hungary. has risen at 6, then exercised in the nasium for two hours, then taken a , and after its simple, hearty breakfast. this succeeded walking, riding, and y, indeed, she has been running for two s a day; but that was deemed tame k until some beagles arrived, which her esty hunted on foot. Much of her time been spent in training horses in her own ng school. Her usual walking costume, et or cold weather, is a loug waterproof market coat, brown straw hat, and y laced boots. Whether the tempera- be hot or cold, her throat is always e. But, although so fond of field sports, Empress is no stranger to domestic arts. is a capital cook, and has lately invent- one or two new dishes. Her outdoor has preserved her youth, and, although grandmother, she still looks a compara- ly young woman. Her figure is perfect.

Frozen Corpses.

Every corpse that is taken to the Paris rgue is now quickly converted into a block most as hard as stone. This result is ob- ned by Carrie's chemical refrigerator, ich is capable of reducing the tempera- e of the conservatory, where each body aid out on something closely resembling amp bedstead in stone, to 15° below zero tigrade. At the back of this room is a w of stove like compartments, in which corpses are boxed up and frozen hard ore being exposed to public view. As an stration of the intense cold thus artifi- lly secured, a Paris journalist, in describ- a recent visit to the Morgue, says that pening one of the compartments the at- dant took the precaution to wear a glove t "his hand should be burnt by contact th the cold iron." The corpse which was en out of its receptacle had been there e hours. The doctor who accompanied visitor struck the dead man on the breast h a stick, and the sound was just as if he d struck a stone.

The Overland Journey a Fraud.

"There ain't no settling up of things about me. This overland journey's a fraud, nothing but a fraud, Sir, and you ought to know it. Don't tell me. It's a fraud. This ring must be busted up. Where are your buffalers? Perhaps you'll tell me that them cows is buffalers. They ain't. Where are your prairie dogs? They ain't dogs to begin with; they're squirrels. Ain't you ashamed to call them mean little cusses dogs? But where are they? There ain't none. Where are your grizzlies? You might have imported a few grizzlies to keep up the name of your railroad. Where are your herds of antelopes scudding before the advancing train? Nary an antelope have you got fur to scud. Rocky Mountains, Sir! they ain't rocky at all. They're as flat as my hand. Where are your savage gorges? I can't see none. Where are your wild Injuns? Do you call them loafing tramps in dirty blankets I juns? My belief is that they're greasers looking out for an engagement as song and dance men. They're 'beats,' Sir, 'dead;' they're 'pudcocks,' and you oughter be told so." I didn't know it; nor could I discern why I ought to be told so. But there was no pacifying the implacable man. Sometimes he would confront me with an open guide-book, and, pointing sternly to a page, would say, "Where are your coyotes, Sir? I'll trouble you for a pack of wolves as makes night hideous with their howling. Did any howl last night, Sir, except the wind? Where are your pumas and your cougars? Show 'em to me. There's nothing in it. Its as easy as going from Jersey City to Philadelphia, and the whole thing's a fraud."—America Revisited—Sala.

Get out of Doors.—The close confinement of all factory work gives the operatives pallid faces, poor appetite, languid miserable feelings, poor blood, inactive liver, kidney and urinary troubles, and all the physicians and medicine in the world cannot help them unless they get out of doors or use Briggs' Botanic Bitters.

"What station is this?" asked a lady passenger of an English tourist near by. Looking out of a window and reading a sign on the fence, he replied, "Rough on Rats, I guess, mum."

Go out in the damp air, or sit unprotected in a draught, and your throat will feel sore and your head uncomfortable. You have taken a cold, which you can remove as promptly as you received it by using Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

Adam's fall occurred before Eve was created; so it is useless to twit woman with being the cause of all our sorrow. It was when he fell into a deep sleep prior to losing a rib.

IT STIRS—The dormant energies by aiding digestion and giving the Liver new life. ZOPESA (from Brazil) cleanses the system of all impurities. Try a 10c. sample.

Astronomers continue to assert that there is something the matter with the comet's head. Men who are up all night, as the comet is, will know what it means.

We can insure any person having a bald head or troubled with dandruff, that Carboline, a deodorized extract of petroleum, will do all that is claimed for it. It will not stain the most delicate fabric and is delightfully perfumed.

When a man says he is satisfied with his lot, you may be sure of one of two things, either he is a very unenterprising specimen of humanity or he is lying.

Robert A. Wilson, Dispensing Chemist, Brockville, says, under date of June 5th, '82, "I have not the slighest hesitation in saying that Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry has given my customers more satisfaction than any medicine in my store for the cure of Summer Complaints, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Pain in the Stomach Sea Sickness, Piles, etc. You can use my name, etc."

Philadelphia boasts a man who tried to poison seven people. In a man who isn't a doctor this seems extraordinary."

A Reward

of $10 is offered in good faith for a hard case of corns that has stubbornly refused to be relieved by the use of Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor, the great corn extractor. Thousands in England, Canada, and the States testify to the efficiency of this celebrated corn cure, and the proprietors are anxious to hear if there is a single case of failure. Address N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston. Use Putnam's Corn Extractor, sure, safe and painless.

When a man gives up a house, what rank would he hold in the army? That of a lieutenant, of course.

Mrs. B. M. Gifford, of Port Rowan, was for many years a sufferer with Liver Complaint, and a serious complication of diseases. In a recent letter she says that she has only taken two bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters, and has nearly recovered her health, and authorizes us to use her name in advertising to suffering humanity. 3.

"Will the coming man use both arms?" is asked. He doubtless will if the coming woman is able to drive the horse.

Never Neglect It.

If you suffer from a cough, never neglect it, it is no trifling matter, and might lead to a speedily fatal disease of the lungs. Hagyards Pectoral Balsam will allay all irritation of the mucous membrance by its soothing healing power; it cures Bronchitis, Asthma and all throat and lung complaints. 6.

The shell always has the bulge on the oyster, and would win if some one with a knife didn't help the oyster out.

Rheumatism. This painful disease that so often cripples for life, arises from poison circulating in the blood, and often from an excess of acid. Inflammation is developed in the muscles, ligaments and joints, by colds, damp clothing, &c. Liniments are servicable to relieve, among many, Hagyard's Yellow Oil is preferable. To eradicate the rheumatic poison from the system, nothing can surpass Burdock Blood Bitters. 5.

"A bird in hand is worth two in the bush," and one on a bonnet is worth generally about a hundred times as many.

Best of All.

Our rigorous and changeable climate, and our mode of life induces frequent colds, that often lead to severe Coughs, Bronchitis and other lung troubles that are liable to end in Consumption. The best and most pleasant remedy known for these difficulties is Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam, to be obtained of any druggist. 2.

A Total Eclipse of all other medicines by Dr. R. V. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" is approaching. Unrivalled in bilious disorders, impure blood, and consumption, which is scrofulous disease of the lungs.

The Dublin Express publishes a letter from Lady Florence Dixie, demanding that a statement of the Land League funds should be made by some eminent firm of public accountants. The Express says it is estimated that altogether £200,000 have been raised, and it asks: "Where is this enormous sum? Scarcely the smallest fraction of it has been accounted for."

Get the Original.

Dr. Pierce's "Pellets"—the original "Little Liver Pills" (sugar-coated)—cure sick and bilious headache, sour stomach, and bilious attacks. By druggists.

Twelve hundred head of sheep sold in England lately for $16,850, the highest price paid on record at a large sale.

Young men or middle aged ones, suffering from nervous debility and kindred weaknesses should send three stamps for Part VII of World's Dispensary Dime Series of books. Address WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Buffalo, N. Y.

"Where do the hats go?" an exchange asks. Some of them go to the theatre and obstruct the view of the audience.

A Word of Caution.

Beware of Opiates and powerful astringent drugs in the treatment of Bowel Complaints, they may lull the pain and check Diarrhœa, etc., but are liable to produce inflammation. Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry is guaranteed safe and reliable, even for Infants, and is a specifice for Cholera Morbus, Dysentery, Colic, Acute or Chronic Diarhœa and Summer Complaints generally.

An enterprising foundry-man has named an economical stove he has invented the "Semi-coal-'un."

Better than Gold.

A good name, good health, a good companion and a bottle of Hagyard's Yellow Oil are among the first requisites for human happiness. Yellow Oil cures Rheumatism, Sprains, Lameness, Bruises, Burns, Frost Bites, Croup, Sore Throat, and all pain and Inflammation. 4.

When the plasterer is at work upon a ceiling, it may be said that he under-stands his business.

A Fact.

If you suffer from Chronic Disease, and have little faith in advertised remedies and have sought vainly for a cure. Consult your druggist, or address T. Milburn & Co., Toronto, for proof of positive regarding the merits of Burdock Blood Bitters, the Great Regulating Blood purifying Tonic, that acts on the liver, kidneys, stomach, bowels and skin. 1.

Friend—"Madder, what is the matter with your nose?" Madder—"The only chance for an artist now is to paint quickly and cheap. I work with both hands and blend with my nose."

A.P. 97

Vegetine

Pleurisy, Liver Complaint.

YARMOUTH, N. S., June 14, 1880.

H. R. STEVENS, ESQ.:

Dear Sir,—Last summer I was troubled with Pleurisy and Liver Complaint, was unable to work for seven weeks. I had the advice of two able physicians and took their medicine without getting any relief. One day your agent happened to pass my door and handed me a circular, which I read, and at once concluded to try your Vegetine. In three days I was like a different man and was able to resume my work in a short time. Have since enjoyed the best of health. I have recommended Vegetine to several of my neighbours and know it to have accomplished wonderful cures.

Yours truly, P. A. VANHORN,
Foreman of A. F. Stoneman & Co.'s wharf.

P.S.—I consider I owe a great deal to Vegetine. I sincerely believe if it had not been for it, I would have been laid up for months and perhaps years. P. A. VANHORN.

I Have Never Known Such A Useful Remedy Placed Before the Public.

MONTREAL, Jan. 29, 1880.

MR. H. R. STEVENS:

Dear Sir,—I do not like to write testimonials for advertised medicines, but the great benefits that so many of my customers have obtained from the use of Vegetine, compels me to say that with an experience of over twenty-five years, both in Great Britain and this country, I have never known such a useful remedy placed before the public.

J. D. L. AMBROSSE,
Assistant of the Apothecaries' Company, of London, Member of the Pharmaceutical Society, of Great Britain, Licentiate in Pharmacy of the College of Physicians and Surgeons.
Cor. Notre Dame and McGill streets.

PAIN AND DISEASE.—Can we expect to enjoy good health when bad and corrupt humors circulate with the blood, causing pain and disease, and these humors, being deposited through the entire body, produce pimples, eruptions, ulcers, indigestion, costiveness, headache, neuralgia, rheumatism, and numerous other complaints? Remove the cause by taking Vegetine, the most reliable remedy for cleansing and purifying the blood.

Vegetine is Sold by All Druggists.

$5 PER DAY can be made by agents, male or female. C. W. DENNIS, Toronto.

TORONTO.—Mr. J. H. Mayne Campbell Barrister, Solicitor, Etc., 9 Victoria-st

WATCHES. Send for free illustrated catalogue to RYRIE, the Jeweler, 113 Yonge Street, Toronto.

CARDS Christmas, New Year, Birthday, and other Cards, at H. J. MATTHEWS & BROS. art depot, Toronto.

GUNS Rifles, Ammunition, Fishing Tackle, and all kinds of Sporting Goods. W. McDOWALL, cor. King & George sts., Toronto

DAY'S BUSINESS COLLEGE—OPPOSITE Royal Opera House. Advantages: limited number, individual instruction by an experienced accountant; rapid progress, entrance at any time. Mr. DAY, 95 King-st. W. Toronto.

J. MURRAY McNEIL, LONDON, ONT., gives written guarantee that his moustache recipe will produce heavy moustache inside of 10 weeks or money refunded; price $1. Box 264, London.

OWNERS OF FARM LANDS, CITY AND Town Properties, desiring to realize, will find purchasers by sending me full descriptions, lowest prices, and terms of payment. J. W. G. WHITNEY, Estate Agent, 25 Toronto street, Toronto.

CANADIAN MUTUAL AID ASSOCIATION. Co-operation Life Assurance. Great inducement to provide for families in case of death, at small cost. W. PEMBERTON PAGE, Sec., 87 King St. West, Toronto. Agents wanted.

ONTARIO VETERINARY COLLEGE, TORONTO. Students can enter from October until January. PROF. SMITH, S.V. Edin., Principal. Fees, fifty dollars.

FOR SALE—TWO IMPROVED FARMS of 640 acres, or four of 320 acres, in Manitoba. Half of each farm is broken, backset and ready for use. Apply STRANGE & MOWAT, Portage la Prairie.

CORALINE!

CORSETS unequalledfor health, comfort and drability. Manufactured by the CROMPTON CORSETCO., Toronto.

E. E. KNOTT'S Speculators' Mart 4 Adelaide St. East, Toronto. All kinds of real estate sold or exchanged on commission. Money loaned on all kinds of real estate at lowest rates of interest. Applications for money from farmers a specialty. Rents collected and estates managed in town or country. N.B.—Best of references on application.

WM. ASHALL, WATCHMAKER AND Jeweler, 262 Yonge St., Toronto, has enlarged his premises, and greatly increased his stock of gold and silver jewelry, plated ware, cutlery, clocks, watches, etc. Fine stock of jet and garnet jewelry. Goods imported direct. Every kind of jewelry repaired promptly neatly, and cheaply.

British American Business College,
112 and 114 King St. West, Toronto.

Students may enter at any time.

For information respecting the College address
THE SECRETARY.

ARTIFICIAL LIMBS

AUTHORS & COX, 91 CHURCH STREET Toronto, Manufacturers of our celebrated Raw Hide, Willow and Leather Legs. The best and cheapest made in Canada. First prize 15 years in succession. Send for reduced price ist.

WOODSTOCK COLLEGE,
WOODSTOCK, ONTARIO.

Instruction most complete in all branches. A most thorough and complete

BUSINESS EDUCATION

In the Commercial Department at very low rates. For circulars address
N. WOLVERTON, B.A.,
Principal.

FARMS FOR SALE

Near the following places:

St. Thomas, Collingwood, Barrie, Fergus, Blyth, Parkhill, Rockwood Station, Dundalk Station, Shelburne Station, Southampton. Also, a large number of excellent farms in Manitoba and the North-West. Settlement not required. Saw Mill, Lath and Shingle Machines for sale at Henfrya Station, Co. Grey, Ont. Engine, 35 horse: 2 boilers, 60 horse. All in splendid order. For particulars address
G. A. SCHRAM,
4 King St. East, Toronto, Ont.

SHIRTS WHITE DRESS, FRENCH CAMBRICS, REGATTA, FLANNEL, MANITOBA ORDERED AT
Cooper's, 10½ YONGE ST TORONTO.

N B.—Patterns sent, orders by post promptly filled. A FAULTLESS FIT.

The Toronto General Trusts Co.,
27 and 29 Wellington St., Toronto.

HON. ED. BLAKE, Q.C., M.P., - President.
E. A. MEREDITH, ESQ., LL.D., Vice President.
J. W. LANGMUIR, - - - Manager.

This Company, which has been approved of by the High Court of Justice and the Lieutenant Governor in Council, accepts trusts of every description, and acts as executor, administrator, &c., and also as agent of existing trustees, executors, &c. $300,000 of Trust Funds to loan upon real estate and mortgages. For further information apply to
J. W. LANGMUIR, Manager.

THE BANK OF TORONTO.

DIVIDEND NO. 53.

Notice is hereby given that a dividend of four per cent, for the current half year, being at the rate of eight per cent, per annum, upon the paid-up capital of the bank has this day been declared, and that the same will be payable at the Bank and its branches on and after Friday, the First Day of December Next.

The transfer books will be closed from the 16th to the 30th days of November, both days inclusive.

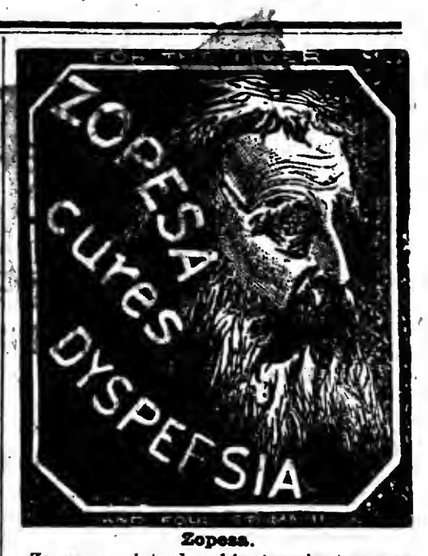
By order of the board.
D. COULSON, Cashier.

Toronto, 25th October, 1882.

OUR BIG OFFER.

Splendid Value. An English Breech-Loading

DOUBLE GUN FOR $19.00!



Regular price, $25. Sent C.O.D. on approbation. Send 6c. for our new illustrated catalogue, which is the finest ever published in Canada; just out. The Rawbone Gun and Manufacturing Co. (Limited). 81 Yonge St., Toronto.

WHAT IS CATARRH?

Catarrh is a muco-purulent discharge caused by the presence and development of the vegetable parasite amœba in the internal lining membrane of the nose. This parasite is only developed under favorable circumstances, and these are: morbid state of the blood, as the blighted corpuscle of tubercle, the germ poison of syphilis, mercury, toxœmea, from retention of the effeted matter of the skin, suppressed perspiration, badly ventilated sleeping apartments, and other poisons that are germinated in the blood. These poisons keep the internal lining membrane of the nose in a constant state of irritation, ever ready for the deposit of the seeds of these germs, which spread up the nostrils and down the fauces or back part of the mouth causing ulceration of the throat; up the eustachian tubes, causing deafness; burrowing in the vocal cords, causing hoarseness, usurping the proper structure of the bronchial tubes ending in pulmonary consumption and death.

To effect a cure the parasite must be removed or destroyed, hence inhalants and snuffs are worthless.

Some time since a well known physician of 40 years standing, after much experimenting, succeeded in discovering the necessary combination of ingredients, which never fails in absolutely and permanently eradicating this horrible disease whether standing for one year or forty years. Sufferers should, without delay, communicate with the business manager, Mr. A. H. Dixon, 307 King St. West, Toronto, and get treatise free by enclosing stamp. Ask your druggist for it

Zopesa.

Zopesa was introduced in America two years ago. Large quantities have been used for Dyspepsia, and as a panacea for the Liver, and the manufacturers have yet to hear of a single case of Dyspepsia or Billousness, when Zopesa was used as directed, in which it was not more than satisfactory. Many write that it is a wonderful remedy. We can show where as high as 40 pounds were gained by its use in breaking up chronic Billousness and Dyspepsia. Its friends increase very fast, and all who use as directed are surprised and gratified.

BUSINESS CHANCES.

ONE OF THE BEST FARMS IN THE county of Bruce; containing 260 acres; 230 cleared; good house and out buildings; also good orchard; a never failing stream within thirty yards of the house; three miles from Teeswater, the terminus of the T. G. & B. Ry.: price moderate. Apply to C. STEIL, proprietor, or to J. MARSHALL, Teeswater, Ont.

TWO RUN STEAM GRIST MILL FOR Sale—Oxford County—heavy frame building, stone foundation; capital machinery; built 5 years; fuel costs about $400 per annum running steadily; price $3,600; no cash needed if approved collateral is offered. MACKINTOSH & PETERS, 20 Toronto-street.

MILLINERY AND FANCY GOODS STORE and business for sale—in town of 2,500 population; Kent County; doing very nice cash trade; stock complete with fall goods about $1,300, MACKINTOSH & PETERS, 20 Toronto street.

$5,000,000 WORTH OF FARMING and other property in Ontario for sale by the CANADA WEST LAND AGENCY COMPANY, 14 Adelaide-st. East, Toronto. Send for list.

CHEAPEST MUSIC IN THE WORLD.

Full size sheet, best print and good paper. Send 5 cents for sample copy and catalogue of 600 pieces of latest instrumental and vocal music.
S. C. BIGFORD,
23 King Street West, Toronto.
Dealer in picture frames and fancy goods.

Mack's Magnetic Medicine,

Is a sure, prompt and effectual Remedy for Nervousness in ALL its stages, Weak Memory, Loss of Brain Power, Prostration, Night Sweats, Weakness and General Loss of Power. It repairs Nervous Waste, Rejuvenates the Jaded intellect, Strengthens the Enfeebled Brain, and Restores Surprising Tone and Vigor to the Exhausted Organs.

☞ With each order for TWELVE packages, accompanied with five dollars, we will send our GUARANTEE to refund the money if the treatment does not effect a cure. It is the Cheapest and Best Medicine in the market. Full particulars in pamphlet, which we mail free to any address. Sold by all druggists, one package 50c.; 6 for $2.50, or sent by mail on receipt of price, by addressing MACK'S MAGNETIC MEDICINE CO.,
Windsor, Ont., Canada
SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS

Burdock Blood Bitters

WILL CURE OR RELIEVE

BILIOUSNESS,	DIZZINESS,
DYSPEPSIA,	DROPSY,
INDIGESTION,	FLUTTERING
JAUNDICE.	OF THE HEART,
ERYSIPELAS,	ACIDITY OF
SALT RHEUM,	THE STOMACH,
HEARTBURN,	DRYNESS
HEADACHE,	OF THE SKIN.

And every species of disease arising from disordered LIVER, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS OR BLOOD,

T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, TORONTO.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

For Purifying the Blood.

This compound of the vegetable alteratives, Sarsaparilla Dock, Stillingia, and Mandrake, with the Iodides of Potash and Iron, makes a most effectual cure of a series of complaints which are very prevalent and afflicting. It purifies the blood, purges out the lurking humors in the system, that undermine health and settle into troublesome disorders. Eruptions of the skin are the appearance on the surface of humors that should be expelled from the blood. Internal derangements are the determination of these same humors to some internal organ, or organs, whose action they derange, and whose substance they disease and destroy. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA expels these humors from the blood. When they are gone, the disorders they produce disappear, such as Ulcerations of the Liver, Stomach, Kidneys, Lungs, Eruptions and Eruptive Diseases of the skin, St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Ulcers and Sores, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Pain in the Bones, Side and Head, Female Weakness, Sterility, Leucorrhœa arising from internal ulceration and uterine diseases, Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Emaciation and General Debility. With their departure health returns

PREPARED BY 2

DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.,
Practical and Analytical Chemists.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS AND DEALERS IN MEDICINE.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

The most successful Remedy ever discovered, as it is certain in its effects and does not blister. READ PROOF BELOW.

Kendall's Spavin Cure.

HAMILTON, Mo., June 14, 1881.

B. J. KENDALL & Co.,—Gents:—This is to certify that I have used Kendall's Spavin Cure, and have found it to be all that it is recommended to be and in fact more too; I have removed by using the above: Callous Bone Spavins, Ring-bone, Splints, and can cheerfully testify and recommend it to be the best thing for any bony substance I have ever used, and have tried many as I have made that my study for years.

Respectfully yours,
P. V. CRIST.

FROM

Col. T. L. Foster,

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, May 10, 1880.

DR B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents:—I had a very valuable Hambletonian colt that I prized very highly, he had a large bone spavin on one joint and a small one on the other which made him very lame; I had him under the charge of two veterinary surgeons which failed to cure him. I was one day reading the advertisement of Kendall's Spavin Cure in the Chicago Express. I determined at once to try it, and got our druggist here to send for it, they ordered three bottles; I took them all and thought I would give it a thorough trial, I used it according to directions and the fourth day the colt ceased to be lame and the lumps have disappeared. I used but one bottle and the colt's limbs are as free from lumps and as smooth as any horse in the state. He is entirely cured. The cure was so remarkable that I let two of my neighbors have the remaining two bottles who are now using it.

Very respectfully,
L. T. FOSTER.

Kendall's Spavin Cure.

WINGHAM, Ont., Jan. 17, 1882.

DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents:—This is to certify that I have used Kendall's Spavin Cure, bought from C. E. Williams, druggist, Wingham, Ont., and do without hesitation pronounce it to be an invaluable remedy for the cure of Spavins, Ringbones, or Curbs. I used it on a bone spavin of several years growth which it completely removed, and I can safely say it will remove any Spavin, Curb or Ringbone it properly used. I have also recommended friends to use it, who have done so with perfect success. I gladly make this public, and will answer any questions or letters sent me.

Yours &c.
GEORGE BRYCE.

Kendall's Spavin Cure
ON HUMAN FLESH.

WEST ENOSBURGH, Vt., Feb. 15, 1881.

DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents:—Several months ago I injured my knee joint which caused an enlargement to grow the size of a walnut and caused me very severe pain all the time for four or five weeks, when I began to use Kendall's Spavin Cure with the most satisfactory results. It has entirely removed the enlargement and stopped the lameness and pain. I have long known it to be excellent for horses but now I know it to be the best liniment for human flesh that I am acquainted with.

Yours truly,
T. P. LAWRENCE.

ST. JOHN, P Q Oct. 27, 1881.

DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents:—I have used your Spavin Cure with great success on spavins, curbs and splints. I know it to be a good remedy for ringbones, bone spavins' cuts, galls and all kinds of lameness and other difficulties about the horse. One of my men sprained his ankle very badly. I applied Kendall's Spavin Cure and I never saw anything work like it, he was well in a few days. I know it to be good for man as well as beast. I procured one of your Treatise on the Horse, by mail for 25cts. and I think it was the means of saving me $100 on one horse that I treated according to the directions given in your book for displaced stifle.

Yours truly,
WM. J. PEARSON.

Send address for Illustrated Circular, which we think gives positive proof of its virtues. No remedy has ever met with such unqualified success to our knowledge, for beast as well as man.

Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. All druggists have it or can get it for you, or it will be sent to any address on recept of price by the proprietors. DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

Sold by all Druggists.

LYMAN, SONS & CO., Montreal, P. Q. Wholesale Agents

GEORGE NOBLE,
INSURANCE AND LAND AGENT,
LICENSED AUCTIONEER

For the County of Grey.

AGENT for the following reliable Companies:
CITIZENS', of Montreal,
AGRICULTURAL, of Watertown, and
TRADE & COMMERCE, (Mutual) of Toronto.

A number of Choice Farms for sale. also Village Lots

Auction Sales conducted in Town or Country on Shortest Notice. Charges moderate, Bills, Blank Notes, and Stamps provided.

GEO. NOBLE.

MARKDALE, May 20th, 1881. 36-1y

Robt. S. Rae.

TAILOR,

SYDENHAM STREET,

MARKDALE.

J. W. FORD

HAS RE-OPENED HIS

Flour and Grist Mill

IN MARKDALE.

AN IMMENSE STOCK OF
BOOTS & SHOES

JUST ARRIVED AT THE

TORONTO HOUSE

BEST QUALITY AND LOWEST PRICE.

STOCK COMPLETE IN

Dry Goods and Groceries!

PRICES ALWAYS RIGHT.

OUR THIRTY CENT TEA

Is the wonder of the day. A trial solicited.

WM. BROWN.

Markdale, Oct. 11th, 1882.

GROCERIES

A. M'INTYRE

TEA! TEA! TEA!

A. M'INTYRE

Flour, Flour, Flour.

McINTYRE'S
LIQUORS! LIQUORS

McINTYRE'S
Cigars, Cigars.

McINTYRE'S
Coffee, Coffee.

McINTYRE'S
MEAL! MEAL! MEAL!

McINTYRE'S
Pork, Pork, Pork.

McINTYRE'S
Teas, Teas.

GROCERIES

And everything kept in a first-class Grocery and Liquor Store. always on hand, CHEAP FOR CASH.

MARKDALE

Sash and Door Factory

SASH, DOORS,
BLINDS
MOULDINGS,
HOLLOW BATTONS,
FRAMES

Lumber, Lath and Shingles,

Always on Hand. Orders Promptly Filled.

The Subscriber wishes to return thanks to the people of Markdale and vicinity, for the very liberal patronage they have given him in the past, and hopes by close attention to business to merit a continuance of the same.

I have now extended my business, and will in future keep a full Stock of

PINE LUMBER.

Direct from the North Shore.

ALL SIZES, DRESSED AND UNDRESSED,

All Kinds of Plain and Fancy Turning

Done in a first-class manner.

THOS. McNEA.

Markdale May 27th, 1881. 37-tf

TORONTO HOU
FLESHERTON.

Stock Fully Complete. Unusually

VERY ATTRACTIVE, AND

CHEAPER THAN THE CHEA

EVERY DEPARTMENT SPECIALLY ATTR

Variety and Value Unsurpass

DRY GOODS DEPARM

Is this season very complete with a very large stock of Dress G prising in part Cashmeres in all colors. Worsted Wool G endless variety.

Boot and Shoe Departme

Would call special attention of close buyers as my stock is unu from the best manufacturers and at rock bottom price

ORDERED CLOTHING

Has been exceedingly brisk this season, on account of which I the largest and best stock of Tweeds, Coatings, Trowserings, an ings in this section of country. As I have always led the trade partment buyers will find it to their advantage to call before elsewhere.

Millinery Department.

Under the able management of a first-class milliner, with plenty ance, will be found unusually attractive with the prettiest and m able, and cheapest stock to be found in the county. Ladies, it you good to call and look at the stock.

Hardware and Grocery Departme

Is always fully assorted and complete with the best goods, at the sible price.

I am the only constant and reliable buyer of Grain and P duce in Flesherton, and for which I will pay the highest price any quantity of good dry, sound grain, which I would specially as to clean well. A call solicited.

R. J. SPROU

Flesherton, Oct. 3rd, 1882.

OH, HEAR. OH, HEAR. OH, H

Squander your money if you want to, if not, get your Photogra

W. BULMER,

The People's Photographer,
Fleshe

Who is again prepared to take Pictures, and do Copying and Enlarging as b

FRAMES AND FRAME FIXI

We are receiving a large stock of MOTTOES and Motto and other Frames Fixings, which we can, and mean to sell at Remarkably Low Prices, secure bargains.

Bring along your pictures and have them copied and enlarged by your old

BUL

Flesherton, March 10, 1881.

ARTEMESIA WAREHOU
FLESHERTON STATION.

Dry Goods, Hardware, Crockery, Boots and Sho ceries, Provisions, &c. Stock kept full and assorted with new goods received every week.

My BRANCH STORE at EUGENIA replenis New Goods every week.

For Sale Cheap for Cash or Pr

My Saw Mill and Shingle Fa

At LITTLE FALLS are in operation.

Lumber, Lath, Broom Handles fo

Wm. HOG

Markdale PUMP Fact

J. G. IRVING

MAKER OF ALL KINDS OF PUMPS,

DROP VALVE PUMPS, CYLINDER PUMPS, CISTERN FORCE PUMPS,

Also, ALL KINDS OF IRON PUMPS SUPPLIED

Satisfaction guaranteed on all my work; the proof of it is fact that I am doing a larger business now than ever was done in the Pump business. Remember the stand, 1 door north of Rutle ber is $30 to $40 ... and stoves about 100 per cent. higher than in Ontario. We are 30 miles from Owen Sound, the nearest railway station, which was only a farm house and post office 18 months ago, and is now as large as Owen Sound, doing four times the amount of business.

Sydenham Street, Markda

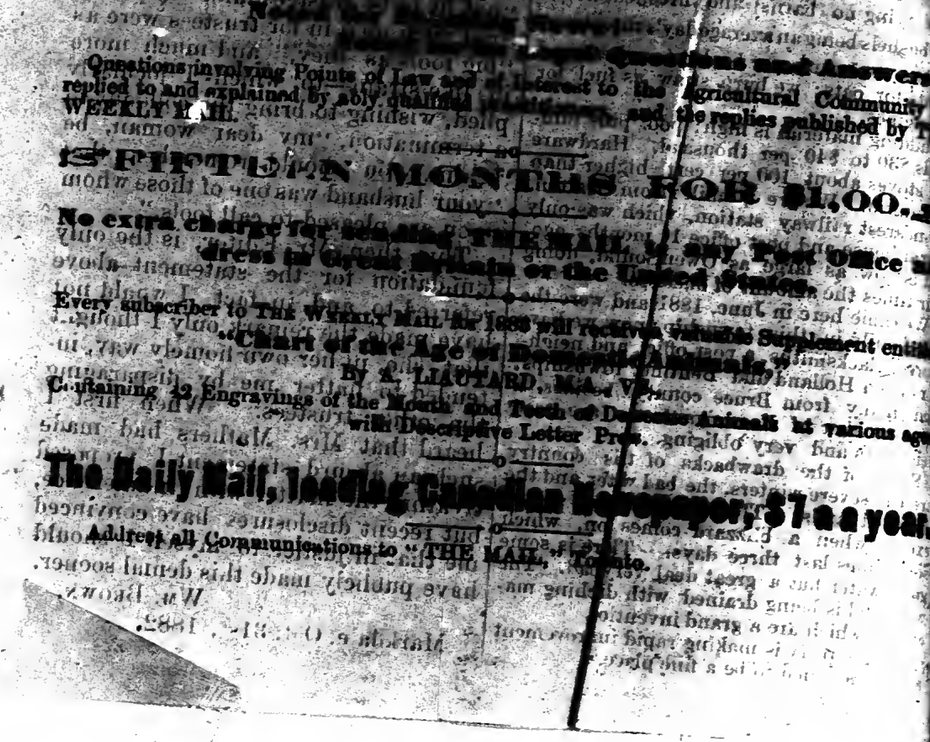
We came here in June, 1881, and were the first family in this township, now we have stores, blacksmiths, a post office, and neighbors from Holland and Bentinck townships, and many from Bruce county, besides a large number of Norwegians. We are good neighbors and very obliging.

Some of the drawbacks of this country are the severe winters, the bad water and the drowned lands. The winter is fine except when a blizzard comes on, which sometimes last three days. There is some good water but a great deal very bad. The wet land is being drained with ditching machines which are a grand invention.



The country is making rapid improvement and is destined to be a fine place.

"your husband was one of those whom [illegible] are pleased to call fools."

This, then, Mr. Editor, is the only foundation for the statement above referred to, and, in fact, I would not have made the remark only I thought that she, in her own homely way, intended to flatter me by disparaging the other trustees. When first I heard that Mrs. Mathers had made such an absurd statement, I proposed treating the matter with indifference, but recent disclosures have convinced me that in justice to myself I should have publicly made this denial sooner.

WM. BROWN.

Markdale, Oct. 31st, 1882.

Toronto.
Noted for Noted
Questions involving Points of Law replied to and explained by WEEKLY MAIL
FIFTEEN MONTHS FOR $1.00.
No extra charge for dress in Great Britain or the Every subscriber to THE WEEKLY MAIL for "Chart of the Age
By A. LIAUTARD, Containing 32 Engravings of the Mouth and Teeth of with Descriptive Letter Press.
The Daily Mail, leading Canadian Newspaper, $7 a year.
Address all Communications to "THE MAIL," Toronto.

Markdale Standard

VOL. 3.--No. 9. MARKDALE, ONT., NOV. 9, 1882. No. 113.

The Markdale Standard

IS PUBLISHED

EVERY THURSDAY EVENING,

At Markdale Ontario.

$1 Per Anumn

IN ADVANCE.

$1.25 in three months. $2 if not paid till the end of the year. No paper discontinued until all arears are paid up, except at the option of the publisher, and parties refusing papers without paying up will be held responsible for the years subscriptions until they comply with the rules.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING:

One column one year		$50 00
Half do.	do.	27 50
Quarter do.	do.	15 00
Eighth do.	do.	8 00
Card	do.	4 00
Over ten lines, first insertion per line		8
Each subsequent insertion		3

The number of lines to be reckoned by the space occupied measured by a scale of solid brevier. Advertisements without specific directions will be published till forbid and charged accordingly. All transitory advertisements must be in the office of publication by 11o'clock on the wednesday proceeding their publication.

JOB PRINTING

Of every description executed with neatness and despatch at the Office of the STANDARD, Markdale.

C. W. RUTLEDGE.

EDITOR & PROPRIETOR.

PROFESSIONAL AND BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

Drs. Sproule & Armstrong,

Physicians, Surgeons, Accoucheur &c.

OFFICE Medical Hall; residence at Markdale House.

B. Ghent, M.D., M.R.C.P. & S., O. Physician and Surgeon, Priceville, Graduate of University. Viet. College. New York, and Hon. Graduate, of the same, Avleth Medical Institute. Opthalmic Hospital, N.Y. Member Coll. Physicians & Surgeons, O. 104

Dental Card.

Cameron & Knight,

DENTAL SURGEONS,

Office over D. A. Cameron and Co's Drug Store, Poulett St., OWEN SOUND. Every attention given to the preservation of the natural teeth. Artificial Dentures mounted on Gold, Celluloid, and Rubber bases.

Will be at Markdale the last Tuesday in each month,

A. Cameron, M.D., & L.F.P. & S. Glasgow, L.D.S., Ont. C. F. Knight, L.D.S. Medalist Royal College Den. Sur., Ont

Legal.

Frost & Frost,

BARRISTERS, AND ATTORNEYS-AT Law, Solicitors in Chancery, Conveyancers, &c., Owen Sound, have resumed at Flesherton, Office open every Thursday, as heretofore.

ALFRED FROST, J. W. FROST, LL. B. County Crown Attorney. 1

J. MASSON,

BARRISTER, MASTER AND DEP. REG in Chancery, Notary Public, Conveyancer, &c.

MONEY TO LEND AT SIX PER CENT.

Offices—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block Poulett St.; and in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week. 57.ly

Creasor & Morrison.

BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS. CONVEYANCERS, &c. &c.

OFFICES in Owen Sound, Dufferin Block, over W. F. Wolf's Store and in MARKDALE; Over W. J. McFarland's Store on Thursday and Friday of each week.

Funds to lend on reasonable terms.

JOHN CREASOR, Q.C. DUNCAN MORISON

Markdale, March 15, 1882. 79-1v

Alexander Brown.

ISSUER of Marriage Licenses, Fire and Life Insurance Agent. Commissioner in B. R. &c. Conveyancer and Licensed Auctioneer for the County of Grey. Farmers, Merchants, and Land Sales, Punctually attended to and charges made very moderate.

Priceville, Sept. 17. 1880. 1-y

A CARD.

To all who are suffering from the errors and indiscretions of youth, nervous weakness, early decay, loss of manhood, &c., I will send a receipe that will cure you, FREE OF CHARGE. This great Remedy was discovered by a missionary in South America. Send a self-addressed envelope to REV. JOSEPH T. INMAN, Station D, New York City.

Subscribe for the STANDARD and get that splendid horse book free. Commence any time.

Hotels.

REVERE HOTEL,

MARKDALE.

T. SPROULE, - Proprietor.

THIS popular Hotel has had a large addition added to it, thoroughly refitted, and is now second to none in the county. Good stabling and attentive ostler. First-class accommodation for commercial travelers. $1 per day. Barber's shop in connection. 17-ly

Markdale Hotel.

Good Accommodation for Travellers. 'Bus to and from all trains. Charges moderate.

Markdale. A. RUTLEDGE, PROP.

COMMERCIAL HOTEL.

PRICEVILLE, Ont.

Large and commodious Sample Rooms Good Bed Rooms, &c. The Bar and lard e well supplied with the best the market affords; good Stabling and attentive Hostler's

THOS. ATKINSON, Proprietor

Miscellaneous.

John McDonald,

CHATSWORTH,

DIVISION Court Clerk, Issuer of Marriage Licenses, Commissioner in B.R., Conveyancer, &c. Deeds, Mortgages, Wills, &c., attended to promptly, accurately, neatly, and cheaply. Private funds to lend in small sums on easy terms. Notes discounted

R. M. Galbraith,

AUCTIONEER AND GENERAL LAND Agent, Williamsford Station. Auction Sales attended in all parts of the County. Goods sold on commission. Rates moderate. Pianos, Organs, and Sewing Machines; also Fruit and Ornamental Trees. Vines, Agricultural Implemennts, and Machinery of all kinds on sale.

Williamsford, Jan. 27, 1881.

T. E. DAVIS,

BUILDER & CONTRACTOR, (Stone and Brick). After completing 13 buildings his season is still on the track and is still prepared to do all kinds of stone and brick work, plastering and tuck pointing. Those who contemplate building will find it to their advantage to give him a call.

Residence corner of Brown and Sproule Stetes. MARKDALE. 16-v

Wm. Brown,

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.

Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.

N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate security.

Joseph Gibson,

PLAIN & ORNAMENTAL

PLASTERER.

WHITEWASHING—CALSOMINING in Shades and Colors.

All work guaranteed. Charges moderate.

Markdale P.O.

LOYA MARKDALE LODGE,

Of C. O. O. F. No. 78, will meet in their hall on Monday evening, Nov. 14th, at eight o'clock p. m.

108 W. L. YOUNG, Sec'y.

EUCENIA

Grist, Saw and Lath Mills

Having made extensive improvements in my Grist Mill I feel confident I can give good satisfaction.

GOOD FLOUR ALWAYS ON HAND.

Chopping Done Every Day.

Custom Sawing and Bills Filled on the shortest notice.

LUMBER AND LATH ALWAYS ON HAND.

Cherry, Butternut, White Ash, Black Ash, Basswood, Pine and Hemlock Logs wanted.

69ly. M. AKITT, Engenia.

JOHN NOBLE,

MARKDALE.

GENER'L BLACKSMITH

HORSE SHOEING

A SPECIALTY.

ROBT. ASKIN,

MARKDALE,

Has opened out a First-Class

Furniture!

—AND—

UNDERTKING ESTABLISHMENT,

And therefore has supplied a want long felt, especially in the Undertaking Line.

COFFINS,

CASKETS,

SHROUDS,

and all

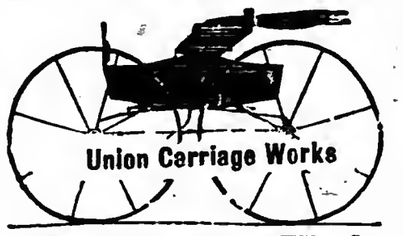
FUNERAL FURNISHINGS,

supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse

for hire at moderate rates.

FURNITURE!



From the Common to the

Best and Latest Styles,

in everything in the line.

Call and see for yourselves.

ROBT. ASKIN.

Union Carriage Works

Union Carriage Works.

All work manufactured from

FIRST CLASS MATERIAL

In the Lateat and Best Improved Style, and finished with English Varnish.

Painting & Trimming Rigs

will receive prompt attention.

All Repairs executed in the shortest possible time consistent with good workmanship.

GOOD WORK A SPECIALITY.

Remember the Shop, opposite the Cheapside

D. J. SHANAHAN,

Proprietor.

Markdale, Dec. 2nd, 1881. 64.

HAIR CUTTING AND SHAVING

By T. D. Smith.

Razors, Straps, and Shaving Brushes for sale. Razors sharpened.

Orders filled for Tomb Stones.

STARTLING DISCOVERY!

LOST MANHOOD RESTORED.

A victim of youthful imprudence causing Premature Decay, Nervous Debility, Lost Manhood, etc., having tried in vain every known remedy, has discovered a simple self cure, which he will send FREE to his fellow-sufferers, address J. H. REEVES, 42 Chatham st., N. Y.

$66 a week in your own town. $5 outfit free. No risk. Everything new. Capital not required. We will furnish you everything. Many are making fortunes. Ladies make as much as men, and boys and girls make great pay. Reader, if you want a business at which you can make great pay all the time you work, write for particulars to H. HALLETT & Co., Portland, Maine. 71-126

TEACHER WANTED.

MARRIED OR SINGLE—MARRIED man preferred—for School Section No, 4, Glenelg, holding second-class certificate. Duties to commence first of the new year. Apply stating salary, to

THOMAS TOWNSEND,

Glascott P. O.

Glascott, Nov. 1st 1882, 112-4t

WARNING!

There is great danger of taking cold from wet feet. If you want to Guard Against Sickness!

Keep your feet dry and warm by procuring your

BOOTS!

—FROM—

KAY & THOMAS.

Satisfaction Guaranteed. Medicated Cork Soles, all sizes, kept on hand. Remember the place opposite the new STANDARD Office. 49

Best business now before the public. You can make money faster at work for us than at anything else. Capital not needed. We will start you. $12 a day and upwards made at home by the industrious. Men, women, boys and girls wanted everywhere to work for us. Now is the time. You can work in spare time only or give your whole time to the business. You can live at home and do the work. No other business will pay you nearly as well. No one can fail to make enormous pay by engaging at once. Costly outfit and terms free. Money made fast, easily and honorably. Address TRUE & Co., Augusta, Maine. 71-126

REST AND COMFORT TO THE SUFFERING

Brown's Household Panacea

has no equal for relieving pain, both internal and external. It cures pain in the Side, Back or Bowels, Sore Throat, Rheumatism, Toothache, Lumbago and any kind of a Pain or Ache. "It will most surely quicken the Blood and heal, as its acting power is wonderful." "Brown's Household Panacea," being acknowledged as the great Pain Reliever, and of double the strength of any other Elixer or Liniment in the world, should be in every family handy for use when wanted "as it really is the best remedy in the world for Cramps in the Stomach, and Pains and Aches of all kinds," and is for sale by all Druggists at 25 cents a bottle. 75-127

EARS FOR THE MILLION

HOO CHOO'S BALSAM OF SHARK'S OIL positively Restores the Hearing, and is the Only Absolute Cure for Deafness known. This Oil is abstracted from peculiar species of small White Shark, caught in the Yellow Sea, known as CARCHARODON RONDELETII. Every Chinese fisherman knows it. Its virtues as a restorative of hearing were discovered by a Buddhist Priest were discovered about the year 1410. Its cures were so numerous, and many so seemingly miraculous, that the remedy was officially proclaimed over the entire Empire. Its use became so universal, that for over 300 years no Deafness has existed among the Chinese people. Sent, charges prepaid, to any address at $1.00 per bottle.

Hear what the Deaf say:

It has performed a miracle in my case.

I have no unearthly noises in my head, and hear much better.

I have been greatly benefited.

My deafness helped a great deal—think another bottle will cure me.

Its virtues are unquestionable and its curative character absolute, as the writer can personally testify, both from experience and observation. Write at once to Haylock and Jenney, 7 Dey Street, New York, enclosing $1 and you will receive by return a remedy that will enable you to hear like anybody else, and whose curative effects will be permanent. You will never regret doing so."—EDITOR OF MERCANTILE REVIEW.

To avoid loss in the mails, please send money by Registered Letter.

Only imported by HAYLOCK & JENNEY, late Haylock & Co.,

Sole Agents for America. 7 DEY ST NEW YORK 93-145.

$2 Waterbury watch warranted $2.98. White metal Hunting Case $4. Imitation gold $6. Solid gold $12. Cheapest and best for your own use or sample where purchased. Value the catalogue free. THOMPSON & Co. 258 Broadway, New York.

Wm. Lucas & Co.,

BANKERS,

Money Loaned

IN large or small amounts, at all times, on good endorsed notes, or on collateral security.

INTEREST AT 6 PER CENT.

Allowed on Savings Deposits.

Drafts issued and Collections made on points, at lowest rates.

W.M. LUCAS, Manager.

September 23, 1880. 2-ly

ESTRAY CATTLE.

CAME INTO THE PREMISES OF THE undersigned, Lots 37 and 38, 1st concession W. T. & S. Road, on or about the 12th of October, three head of cattle—two steers and one cow. Steers are about three years old. The owner is requested to prove property, pay expenses and take them away.

JOHN SARGEANT.

October 24th 1882, 111-4w.

NEIGHBOURHOOD NEWS.

An additional siding is being laid down at Dundalk Station.

Mrs. Wm. Richardson, of Flesherton, has returned from England.

The Toronto, Grey & Bruce Railway station at Luther village, is nearly completed, and is a very nice building.

The voting on the By-law to raise $2,500 to complete the Town Hall in Shelburne was carried. It met with but little opposition.

Mr. W. F. B. Howlett, C. E., has completed the work of running a line for railway purposes between Flesherton Station and Flesherton.

J. H. Hunter, Esq., M. P. P., returned to town on Monday last from a three weeks' trip to Dakota. The crops in the part of the State he visited were excellent this year.—Review.

Mr. Jenkins, of Ayton, has purchased the plant and good will of the Durham Chronicle, and has taken possession. Mr. Jenkins is a good writer and public speaker. He has already increased the subscription list handsomely, and is making improvements in the Chronicle. Mr. Johnston retires from the business owing to poor health.

SETTLED.—The case of Mr. Robert Smith, of Bentinck, against the Corporation of Durham, arising out of the accident at Lambton street bridge last fall, and which was to have been tried last week at Walkerton, has been settled, the town paying Mr. S. $300, each party to pay their own costs. The accident referred to has cost the town between seven and eight hundred dollars.—D. Chronicle.

EUPHRASIA PLOUGHING MATCH.

The ploughing match of the Agricultural Society of Euphrasia took place on the farm of R. Clark, Esq., lot 30, con. 6, but we have to report it a failure as far as numbers went, but no failure as far as quality of ploughing was concerned.

It seems to me that the large shows of Canada are going to devour the smaller ones, for they have all been more or less a failure this year. Do you never have any ploughing matches in the south end of Grey? I never see them reported. The following is the prize list:—

FIRST CLASS—1st, R. Clark.

SECOND CLASS—1st H. Thompson; 2nd R. S. Clark.

THIRD CLASS.—Boys, 15 to 18 years of age—1st S. J. McKnight; 2nd T. R. McConnell.

FOURTH CLASS.—Boys under 15—1st J. C. Job.

Special for best finish in third and fourth classes, S. J. McKnight and J. C. Job.—COM.

HOLLAND PLOUGHING MATCH.

The Holland ploughing match on the farm of the Reeve, W. Howey, Esq., on Tuesday of last week, was a decided success, notwithstanding that the number of entries was not as great as last year. The day was remarkably fine and the attendance very large, but the ground was rather too dry owing to the long continued drought. The judges were Messrs. Thos. Mitchell, of Sullivan, Neil McDonald, of Sydenham, and W. Foster, of Holland, and their decision gave general satisfaction. The judges, directors, ploughmen and a large number of visitors sat down to a splendid supper at Mr. Howey's after which the company retired to the parlor where a number of speeches were made and the various styles of ploughing discussed. Mr. John Marquis then took the chair, and Mr. John McDonald, of Chatsworth, on behalf of the managing committee of the ploughing match, presented Mr. Howey with a handsome driving whip as a slight token of their respect for him and in recognition of his services in making the match a success. Mr. Howey replied in feeling terms, and when referring to his contemplated removal to the North West in the spring and the severance of so many ties of friendship as that step would necessitate, was quite overcome by his emotions. After a vote of thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Howey and the judges and directors, the company broke up. The following is the names of the successful ploughmen:—

FIRST CLASS.—1st, Jas. McComb; 2nd, D. Sinclair; 3rd, Thos. Green.

SECOND CLASS.—1st, W. McComb; 2nd C. Atkinson; 3rd, R. Lee; 4th, G. Howey.

BOYS.—1st, W. Ferguson. Neatest ends of ridge, D. Sinclair. Best groomed horses, C. Atkinson.

James Ritchie returned home from Winnipeg last week.

The Song of the School Girl.

With heavy and aching head,
With weary but sleepless brain,
A school girl sat in her room at night,
And thus gave voice to her pain:

It's study by day and by night,
And it's study by night and by day,
Till a blur comes over my sight,
And my brain seems oozing away.

The studies are piled so high
That the weight is breaking me down;
I wish I had wings, and could fly
Away from the school and the town.

Its study and study at school,
And it's study and study up here.
And I shudder beneath the rule
That awaits the failure I fear.

All day and all night is my head
With figures and facts oppressed,
And at last when I crawl into bed
They haunt me and rob me of rest.

It's oh, for a romp and a run,
A game with a hoop or a ball!
And it's oh, to be out in the sun,
Away from percentage and all!

Perhaps I may marry some day,
If I ever get through with my life,
And what will my husband say
To a nervous and fidgety wife?

It's study by day and by night,
And it's study by night and by day.
Oh, surely it cannot be right
To study and never to play.

MY COUSIN ALICK.

There were three little girls living in the big old house at Clipstone, of whom I was the oldest and plainest. Our parents were well-to-do people, and owned the pretty old place in which we had all been born and brought up. When cousin Alick came down to spend a month with us before going to India, I was just twelve years old, a slim, dark, quiet girl, old beyond my age in manner and feeling, and very proud was I of his friendship for me and preference for my society. It was in Summer time, and in the evenings I would often be sitting in the garden with my lesson-books while my elders were at dinner; and after mother had gone to the drawing-room, or to the nursery, and father fallen asleep over his cigar, Alick would step out of the window and come over the lawn to me, and the cloud on his brow—for he nearly always looked moody at that time, perhaps even what might be called sullen—lifted a little at the sight of my pleasure at seeing him, for I was dearly fond of this big cousin of mine.

He was very kind to me in spite of the evident weight on his spirits; he would sit by my side and help me with my lessons, explaining the hard words that I could not understand, and telling me many little things which I was not required to know, but which all helped to fix the subject in my mind. I think our governess must have been surprised at my rapid progress about this time; this I certainly know, that not one word of cousin Alick's was ever forgotten by me—each one lives freshly in my memory to this day.

He was, as I have said, very gloomy and often absent-minded, and from inadvertent remarks dropped now and then by my parents in my hearing I dimly understood that he was in trouble with his own family, and that was why he had come to stay at his uncle's till his ship sailed. He had just returned from Oxford I knew, and there were whispers of debts and of being "plucked"—whatever that might be—and I gathered that he was in disgrace with his father, our uncle, Alexander Blair, who was considered a stern and rigorous man. We children, Valerie and I—Nina was little more than a baby—stood in great awe of him, and I loved and pitied Alick only the more when I heard of these things. Our father had got him this post in India to which he was going out, but I don't think he had any great hopes of his nephew, for I heard him say to my mother one day "Alick was a clever fellow enough, but there was not a bit of industry or application about him."

I remember him well as he was then, even though I have seen so much of him since, and he is so altered. He was twenty-one years old, a tall, dark, lean youth, with a bare sallow face and resentful-looking black eyes. I suppose he was what would be called very "fresh" or "raw," but I was only a child, and I loved him dearly, and thought him handsome, perfect, heroic. I know he was sulky and bad-tempered, the fault of his father, who snubbed and bullied the naturally high-spirited lad until all his good qualities were hidden under the bad passions which his severity brought uppermost.

During that time of his stay at our house I saw a great deal of my cousin. There was no other visitor, and he did not care for the society of children such as Valerie and Nina—they were too babyish, too full of noisy play, though Valerie was a beautiful child, just nine years old, fair and golden-haired, laughing and witching, admired by every one except, perhaps, Alick, who was not one of an age to care for children, and who liked me because I was grave and old beyond my years, and could sympathize, in some degree, with his vague regrets and hopes. I loved my cousin in those days—words are powerless to tell how dearly! Even now, when I see him in the nobility of his perfect manhood, the hopes of his boyhood realized, the height of his aspirations attained, I still look back with yearning tenderness to the raw lad who taught me, unconsciously the meaning of the word "love."

The day of his departured came at last. The dog-cart waited at the door, and father and he were all ready to start. Father was going to see him on board his ship—Uncle Alexander would not have anything to do with him, not even so much as to wish him good-bye.

Valerie had run away laughing and hiding her face when her mother told her to go and kiss Cousin Alick, for she would not see him again for a very long while, but he did not care for that—he was not thinking of her, little spoiled child.

He was very pale, I remember that, and when mother drew him aside in the hall and whispered in his ear he flushed red and then went paler than before. But he kissed mother again and muttered something that sounded like "I will try."

He came to me then and kissed me several times very tenderly.

"Good-bye, dear little Ruth," he said; "don't forget Cousin Alick—he will not forget you."

That was all he said, but it was treasured up in my childish heart until those parting words of his were more dear to me than the others which were spoken to me around me every day of my life. I think he was sorry to leave us, I think his lip was quivering a little as he ran down the steps and got into the dog-cart. Father drove, and, as they turned out of the house into the road, Alick looked back at the house, and, seeing me still standing on the steps, kissed his hand to me, not lightly, smilingly, but with a very grave and even sorrowful face. He was gone then, and I could not help shedding a few tears—I was only a child, after all. Valerie, who ran out of her hiding place when she had made sure he was gone, finding me crying, laughed and pulled my hair and persecuted me in her pretty, teasing, charming way, but I could not bear it then. I went away from her up stairs, and cried until I had no more tears to shed.

The time passed on very quietly and evenly after Cousin Alick was gone. I was fully occupied with school-room duties, and Valerie ought to have been also, but no one could make her do more than she chose. She was—of her own accord—a little dunce, but such a beautiful, bewitching dunce, no one knew how to find fault with her. We all loved her so dearly we could not bear to scold her. My mother was very well satisfied with my attainments. I had good abilities, and had made use of them, but nothing could make me pretty like our Valerie. I don't think I was plain in these days. I was tall and slender, with dark hair and a pale face, and large, grave, dark eyes, but there was no brilliancy, no charm about me, such as my beautiful second sister possessed.

We heard a little of Alick. He did not write very often, and when he did I did not see his letters, or know much of what they contained. There was great hardships and privations to be endured in his rough life out there, but father said they would do him good, and teach him what work was. I do not think he ever complained of them—dear Alick!

At seventeen I went to my first ball. Oh, how Valerie envied me! She staid in my room all the while Simmons was dressing me, turning over my things and admiring them, and wishing she were in my place. I joined heartily in her wish, for I did not care to go. Mother said it was time I began to go into society, but I felt I should never care for it. Valerie could not understand me, she thought me so odd, and told me so, laughing, and showing her little pearly teeth, while she stood by the toilet table and tried on my bracelets, and fluttered my fan, and made believe she was being asked to dance, and pleased herself with many a pretty pretense. Already, at fourteen, she was as tall as I, and very womanly-looking, Mother began to despair of keeping her in the school-room for three years longer, and yet it seemed necessary, she knew scarcely anything, and frankly admitted her ignorance. But she smiled so enchantingly over her confession, and spoke so sweetly, that the people only laughed, and thought her the more charming.

I enjoyed that first ball of mine very well—better, indeed, than I had expected. I received a fair amount of attention, and had no lack of partners. Valerie was fast asleep in bed, of course, when we got home, but the next morning she waylaid Simmons as she was carrying a cup of tea to my room, and brought it in herself. I had met no handsome lover, no hero of romance, no one—though I did not say this aloud—to compare with the hero of my childhood, poor dear Cousin Alick. Valerie was rather disappointed at my commonplace experiences, but her lovely face flushed and glowed with interest as I described the glittering ball-room, the entrancing music, the lights, the brilliant crowds, the excitement of it all, which I knew she could appreciate so much better than I.

"How shall I wait three whole years?" she cried, clasping her hands together, and I smiled as I answered:

"Time enough yet, Valerie; and, who knows?—you are so tall and womanly for your years, you might not have to wait so long, perhaps, if only you would try to study a little more, dear."

She said she would really be more industrious, and promised to practice two hours every day—a promise broken almost as soon as uttered—if I would plead with mother for her, which I was very willing to do, for I knew her appearance would cause a sensation in our circle, and I thought that when mother had such a beautiful daughter to take about with her she would think less of me, and perhaps let me go back to the quiet home-life which I always preferred. Our mother was most affectionate and devoted—a sweet woman, but ambitious too, for her children, and I could see she wished me to marry well, though no such words were ever uttered in my presence. But I knew, too, that all my heart was taken up with my childhood's love, and I dreaded her natural surprise at my indifference to the gayeties which are generally so fascinating to a young girl just out. She put it all down, however, to my natural quietness and reserve, and when I refused my first offer of marriage she was not angry, nor even vexed, though it was what the world would call a good one. She talked to me very kindly, sympathizing with me, and telling me never to marry a man whom I could not love and honor. Dear mother! She could not tell that my heart was already occupied, and it was not for me to speak, but I hoped that at some time in the future she might know the truth through other lips. For he did care for me. We had been very fond of each other during that month of constant intercourse, and I think he was more grieved at the parting with me than any one else. Of course, there was a wide difference between us. He was a man even then, if only a very young one, while I was a mere child. He might marry out there—it was as likely as not—but he had not done so as yet, and until that came to pass I would allow myself to love him with all the passion of my reserved nature.

Father had not much opinion of his doings. His letters were but few and short, and contained little news of himself, and father seemed to think his silence a bad sign and that if he had anything good to tell of himself he would tell it. But when I was nineteen, Uncle Alexander died, leaving all his property to Alick, with a loving message of farewell and forgiveness, for he relented at the last. Cousin Alick wrote a long letter then to father and mother—the first of his that I ever saw—such a manly, noble letter. I knew when I read it that I had not been mistaken in him—that he was well worth a woman's best love. It held such good news, too, of himself. He had been working so hard all these years, never stopping to take pleasure, working to repay a debt and make himself quite independent of any of his relations, only he would not say a word until he had achieved his task and now just when Uncle Alexander's property seemed to him, he could stand alone by himself, an independent man. But he did not sign his father's wealth—far from it. He was only glad to see how fully Uncle Alexander had forgiven him, and was comforted inexpressibly by his dying message. He spoke so kindly and regretfully of his father, as if he had never been harsh to him—as if he had been as tender a father to him as my own was to me. I loved him a thousand times more dearly after reading his kind, sorrowful, manly words. Mother cried over them, and father coughed and got behind his newspaper, while I crept out in the garden to think. I had nothing to regret, as they had. I had never misjudged him, never believed him anything but good, and true, and honest. My heart was full of joy that summer morning.

After that we all began to expect him home. Now there was a home and a place for him in his own country, we did not see why he should stay out in India, spending his best years among strangers. He did not come; however, and when I attained my majority he was still absent.

Valerie was eighteen then—the loveliest girl in the country, every one said, and a terrible coquette, though she never really meant to hurt any one. I think mother expected great things for her, but if she had found me difficult to please, she now discovered that Valerie was a thousand times more so, for she had so many lovers to choose between and I had but a few. High and low, rich and poor, eligible and ineligible, all flocked to my sister's feet and laid their hearts down before her, not to but spurned in haughty disdain—that was not our Valerie's way—but to be smiled at and coquetted with and gently put aside with a few winning words that sent them away more madly in love with her than ever, and ready to forgive her anything.

But at last, when mother was trying to count up the number of lovers she had rejected, and was getting really vexed at her caprice, there came one who seemed to find favor even in her critical eyes. He was a young clergyman named Carus Wyckham, well connected, and in every way desirable, but we thought it a strange choice for our laughing, bright-spirited Valerie to make. He was a young, grave man, with a serious, fair face, and pale golden hair brushed away from his forehead in smooth, shining waves. He was not handsome—not even good-looking—but there was something saintly, even angelic, in his face. He had a splendid voice, full and sonorous, like the richest deepest notes of an organ, and when he preached I used to think the beauty of his tones would have lent power and grandeur to the most commonplace sermon. But his sermons were not commonplace, for he was not a commonplace man. They were like himself—deep, and grave, and tender, striking far into the hearts of the people.

I could not tell whether Valerie really loved him; she certainly liked and respected him—every one did that—and his patience with her changing moods and his self denying love for her were wonderful to behold. I think she tried him very much at times with her wilfulness and frivolity, but he soon began to gain an influence over her; she seemed to like to be with him; "it rested her," she would say, smilingly, as they walked off to the garden to sit under the trees and read or talk. For they talked together a great deal, and he was beginning to teach her that there are higher and better things to live for than balls and garden-parties, dressing, and coquetting. They were not to be married for two years, for she was only eighteen, and father and mother thought her too young to marry.

And all this time I had remained true to the secret love of bygone days, while my mother wondered and sometimes worried about me, and talked me over with my father. This I know, because on one occasion I heard him answer:

"Let her alone my dear; there's time enough yet. Ruth will find her heart some day."

We had one beautiful photograph of Cousin Alick, which he had sent to us soon after the death of his father. I could scarcely believe my eyes when I saw the change that the years had made to him. He left us a long, lean, moody-looking youth—here was a fine, broad-chested, handsome man, with a bold, bronzed face, smiling brilliant eyes, and an air of dash and daring about him which fairly took my mother's heart by storm.

I could not take the photograph away, because it was not mine, and it would have been missed, for mother was always showing "her nephew, Alick Blair," to some one or other, but when they were all out of the way, and I thought myself safe, I used to steal into the drawing-room and turn over the pages of the album in which his picture was until I came to the beloved face, and there would my eyes dwell long and tenderly. But still he did not come home, and when I was 22 years old, mother sent me on a long visit to a widowed sister of hers in Ireland. It had been arranged that one of us should go and stay with her at some time, and so, at last, the lot fell upon me. Long afterward I found out that mother had been writing to her about me, telling her that she did not know what to make of me, and my aunt had answered, asking to be allowed to have the charge of me for a time—she might be able to remove my apparent objection to marriage.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Care of Canaries.

Canaries should never be exposed to draughts of air in-doors or out, nor should they hang in the sun as a rule. If out of doors they require a warm, dry, sheltered, shady place. The only food made of flour, grits, or meal should be crackers or dried bread. New or warm bread or biscuits are not good for either a bird or a person to eat. If the birds are infested with mites cover the top of the cage with a piece of white flannel at night, and early in the morning take it off and shake over a hot stove. The mites, instead of hiding about the cold wires of the cage, will seek the cloth, and may be captured.

Growth of the World's Wealth.

In the meantime, while the amount of first-class securities has been steadily increasing, the wealth which has been steadily increasing in the United Kingdom, the United States, and to a less extent in the principal countries of Europe, wealth has been growing during the present generation at an unprecedentedly rapid rate. It is estimated by high authorities that between 1865 and 1875 the growth of wealth in the United Kingdom was at the rate of 200,000,000 a year, and probably the rate in the United States was not much less. Even if we assume that the rate of growth since 1875 has slackened, there can be no doubt at all that the accumulation of wealth has continued at a very rapid rate, not only here at home, but in all the more advanced countries of the world. And some portion of this annually saved wealth must have been invested in Stock Exchange securities. The larger part, no doubt, went to extend business; to improve land; to build houses; to construct public works, and so on; but some portion of it was invested in Stock Exchange securities. And the steady investment of new wealth year after year has had a great effect upon the prices of securities. While, as we have seen above, there has been a great diminution in the debt of the United States and of the United Kingdom, there has been in another way a diminution in the securities held in the richer countries; owing to the accumulation of wealth in the power ones. For example, until lately the bonds representing the debt of Italy were held chiefly abroad, and more particularly in France. It is said, however, that the growth of wealth in Italy of late years has been such that the Italian people have been able to buy from foreigners a large portion of the Italian bonds held abroad. This has had the necessary effect of diminishing the supply of securities in England, France, and Holland, where the Italian bonds were chiefly held. And, in a less degree the growth of wealth in other backward countries has been acting in the same way. Each country invests by preference in its own securities and as the wealth of each country increases, the supply of foreign bonds in the more advanced countries diminishes. Thus the permanent tendency is toward a rise in the prices of Stock Exchange securities. This tendency must naturally continue to gain force, though it may be checked every now and then, until, from some cause or other, there is a large creation of new first-class securities. A war, for example, involving several great European countries, would lead to large loans—that is, to the creation of new Stock Exchange securities of the first-class—and would thus tend to lower prices; while the destruction of wealth by the war would lessen the growth of wealth, and would also have a tendency to lower prices.—Saturday Review.

What a Spider Did.

Things are constantly occurring that cause the public to look with wonder and amazement, and it is supposed by many that no such thing ever occurred before, but very frequently such impressions are erroneous. Some weeks ago a spider was found under the settee in Esquire Robinson's office, with a snake entwined in its web. Many thought it a most remarkable feat for the spider to accomplish. Well, it was, but spiders in years past have shown just as much ingenuity. We find in the Eastern Gazette of 1823 the following statement, which was copied from the Connecticut Mirror, a statement very similar to that of Esquire Robinson's snake:

One day last week the workmen in Mr. Peck's machine factory, in Southington, discovered under one of the work benches a black snake, of the white throat species and about six inches long, suspended by the web of a spider. The spider was of the common house sort and not uncommonly large. When first discovered the little insect had raised his victim about half a foot from the floor and had him hung by a single thread. The ingenuity and power of the spider was truly wonderful. Passing rapidly down the line he would fasten his cordage around the neck of the snake, pass back to his own nest on the under surface of the bench, then going again down "cast a hitch" around the tail and returning to his nest would avail himself of the contortions of the snake, alternately hanging up his lines so as to bring his game nearer home. In this manner he continued his labor until evening, leaving the snake alive, but so completely exhausted and secured to be safe for the night. In the morning he was dead.—Easton Gazette.

Protect the Trees.

The High Comissioner of Cyprus attributes its chief curses, drought and locusts, to the reckless destruction of the forests. As the woods disappeared, so did the soil that covered the hills; that soil was washed down to the plains, choked the rivers, and formed malarious swamps, the hills became bare rocks, incapable of growing a blade of vegetation, and the locust at once took possession of the barren ground, while the absence of trees deprived the earth of its annually fertilizing agent—leaf mould. The same process is going on upon the higher hills, and Sir R. Biddulph believes it is no exaggeration to say that Cyprus is in a critical state on this account, from which, however, there is reason to hope that it may yet be recovered. There are districts of this country, too, where these remarks may be pondered over with advantage.

Russia Preparing for Future Conquest.

A telegram of Russian origin received in Tiflis from Van states that a brother of the brigand chief Mahmed Ali was recently arrested for attempting the life of the Governor of Bitlis. Mahmed Ali with his followers attacked the prison Mousb, where his brother was confined. During the conflict the prisoner was killed. Mahmed was repulsed, but afterwards reinforced and renewed the attack with success. He secured his brother's body, cut off the gaolers' noses, pillaged three Armenian villages, violating the women, killing the males and carrying off a large number of cattle. It is believed in Erzeroum that the Russians are preparing to march to Erzeroum and Van. The Turkish troops are concentrated at Van, Bitliss, sixty miles west of Van, has been burned.

Lord Charles Beresford

Lord Charles Beresford, "The Navy," at a dinner of Company said:—"The bo Alexandria was a very large much bigger matter than an raged he thought it would also a considerably larger than the Egyptians expected, thus fought most gallantly, a been more practised in the u and had also fired their smo doctors' list would have been ened. Their round shot ricocheted over the wat ed the British in some way, stuck to their heavy guns a flew over the ships. The ton guns of the "Inflexible" ble havoc in the forts, mak chalk pits. Wherever ther like a magazine for the Briti sight on the effect of their ordinary. The conduct of was astonishing, and they guns for seven hours, or until abled; and to give an idea they were he would explain was to disable a gun. Wher well built as Fort Ada or F shot went into the earth b lo effect was nil, while if a shot the gun it hurt nobody, and a gun became almost like pla the gun from a distance of it was necessary to hit the it."

Lord Charles also referred rendered by the landing part 12th to the 16th of July 370 miles of lines against an army thousand men, with a mob hind in the city. He could sixty blue jackets and seven ing as police there was not on his clothes during those fou describing Captain Fisher's and the good service it ha Charles Beresford gave an nightly trips the blue ja front, as they said, "to gi per." "On Aug. 5, during anco, a blue jacket, who wa rail firing at the enemy, was officer to come down and no self. He remarked that much better up there. Just went through his hat. close," was all he said, and another struck him. He wounded, but his only ob messmate was, "Well, Jack, the range." They had capit where his comrades got up paid the Bedouins to come them. Speaking of the less from the war, his lordship sa in his opinion, that where were at all nearly equal fo ships. The great value of had also been shown. Wi the landing parties had cleare Alexandria and prevented A and if they had been allow mediately after the bom might have dispersed the cro loot, have captured Arabi, and other leaders and saved the Government had promis should land, and they were promise.

Small-Pox in the Last

The Sanitary Journal, o July, contains a valuable pap Vail upon the prevalence Kilmarnock from 1723 to 176 what appears to be a very a of the deaths in that place. appears that small-pox was Kilmarnock every 4½ years death rate nearly 20 times death rate under five years o greater than it now produc age at a death from small-po years—it is now nearly 20 yea population of Kilmarnock du was about 4,200. Of these al no fear of small pox, for th had it, and many of them sh in disfigurement, deafness, The epidemics of small-pox c a band of little children, hundred in number. Each face this terrible danger bef years old. One epidemic left tims for its successors.

"One can barely imagine w been the feelings of a mother fearful visitations. Even w was free of the pestilence, t the constant foreboding of its coming, and when at last occurred—when the doctor and pronounced the disease t ed pox—his words would be tence of death to some men every family containing litt the news spread from house what a despairing clutch wou press her darling to her b Almighty God to command t angel to pass by her door! of a hundred and fifty years little conception of the rea small-pox epidemic.

"But the old parish registers us to apprehend something and I venture to say that if cinationists had their will, many years be again experien of the awful visitations which iar in old Kilmarnock."

A Woman Rescues a Boy f

A short time ago, Mrs. G thur Campbell, formerly a res amble, distinguished herself admirable bravery. Mrs. C passenger in a steamer from one of the northern ports of C ons day a little boy about fou to whom the lady was much overboard, the accident occu sudden luroh of the vessel. ception of Mrs. Campbell and wheel all the passengers and dinner.

Without waiting for a life ing herself of any clothing, an iug to the man at the wheel, child's mother," Mrs. Campbe to the water, swam to the boy up till both were rescued, the ing been promptly stopped and ed. Neither the lady nor the the worse for the immersion Sydney Morning Herald.

TELEGRAPHIC FLASHES.

FACTS IN A NUTSHELL.

Short Summary of News from all over the World.

A telegram received in Alexandria from Cairo reports a severe outbreak of cholera there.

Two hundred sailors were drowned during a recent storm in Manilla.

The case of the Cubans surrendered by the Gibraltar authorities to Spain will be quietly discussed, and decided with the desire to show the friendly feeling of the Ministry toward England.

Anti-Jewish riots occurred on Tuesday in Mistelbach and Weiselberg, Austria. A woman was shot and several houses plundered.

Mr. George Critchett, the celebrated Engsurgeon, is dead.

It has been decided that the force of troops to be left in Egypt for garrison purposes shall number 11,000 men of all four branches of the services—infantry, cavalry, artillery and engineers.

Much said evidence will be adduced to show that Arabi saved the life of the midshipman Sinclair against the wishes of Toulba Bey, and stopped that massacre at Alexandria by telegraphic orders. The prosecution will urge that it is impossible to believe that Arabi, who held this power, would not have prevented the massacre and mutilation had he so wished.

Richard Pigott denies Egan's charge that Miss Florence Dixie's allegations of discrepancies in the accounts of the Land League were instigated by him.

It is understood that one of the men charged with the murder of the Joyce family has turned Queen's evidence.

While addressing a large number of farmers at Newbridge, County Kildare, on Wednesday, Matthew Harris, a member of the late Land League, and others, were arrested under the Crimes Act. Great excitement ensued. Groans were given for the Coercion Act, the police, and a collision between the people and police occurred.

The Salvation Army was treated with every respect as they paraded in Paris on Sunday.

A Berlin despatch announces that the Bundesrath has prohibited the importation of American swine and pork.

The operatives at the Merchants' Cotton Mills, Montreal, are on strike. They claim an advance of wages to $1 per day.

Another person injured by the explosion at Rideau Hall has succombed to his injuries. This makes the fifth victim.

Great excitement has been caused at Milwaukee by the defaulting of Peter McGeoch, a great grain dealer, upon half a million bushels of wheat.

The Spanish Government, it is reported, will not feel called on to release the three Cuban refugees delivered up by an English officer at Gibraltar.

Complaints are made that the fishery regulations are grossly violated at Rideau Lake, where large quantities of fish are being captured during spawning season.

A story comes from Joliette, Qu., concerning the mysterious disappearance of Thomas Daphis, a wealthy resident of St. Jerome, who, it is feared, has been robbed and murdered.

At a meeting of the London Board of Trade it was stated that freight rates between that point and Toronto and Hamilton had been increased 30 per cent. recently.

Nihilism has not made great advances in Paris. Louise Michel attempted to lecture at Ghent on Wednesday night, but was hissed from the hall by indignant Belgians.

Great alarm is felt in South-Eastern Europe consequent upon the fresh outbreak on the Bulgarian and Herzegovinian frontiers and the repeated concentration of 100,000 Russian troops in Bessarabia.

The Russian insurance companies, acting upon the suggestion of English delegates, have decided to raise their premiums forty per cent. by reason of the great increase in the number of large fires in the country.

Hong Kong advices represent that the Chinese has applied to the United States Government to use its good offices towards a settlement of the Loo Choo dispute China is massing troops upon Russian frontier, intending encroachments by that Power

In France a secret dynamite factory has been discovered. Hnnri Rochefort, who resigned the permanent garrison at Montceaux-les-Mines as provocative of a fresh outbreak, has gone thither to relieve the prisoners during trial.

Heavy floods have caused great loss of life and property in the central provinces in France, and in the south-west cattle plague is killing the cattle. The financial position of the island is exceedingly bad; specie is at 60 per cent. discount, and all national banks have failed, and the collapse of the whole banking system is regarded with suspicion.

In the Imperial Parliament Mr. Gladstone stated that Egypt would be asked to bear the expense of the British occupation. Lord Dufferin left Constantinople for Cairo, having mutually satisfactery interviews with the French Ministry has decided to ask the abolition of the joint control in Egypt.

Mr. E. B. Eady's extensive mills in the city of Hull were destroyed by fire. The fire, which is supposed to have originated from the electric light, spread with amazing rapidity and in an incredibly short space of time. buildings, which covered ten acres of ground, were reduced to ashes. The loss is variously estimated from half a million to a million dollars.

The mania for carrying out great engineering enterprises in England, according to a London correspondent's letter, appears to be fast developing. Nothing daunted by the suspension, if not utter defeat, of the Channel Tunnel project, public attention is now being turned to several other big undertakings whose influence, if not international, are none the less likely to prove of lasting national benefit. The promoters of the scheme for connecting Manchester with the sea by a ship canal are vigorously pushing on their preliminary surveys and estimates, while a counter enterprise which contemplates doing the same for Northwich, Cheshire, by means of the estuary of the Dee is also talked of. It is likewise proposed to [illegible] have it covered and long talked-of "ebelow-bridge communication across the Thames," by means of a bridge near Tower Hill, supplemented, it may be, by two funnels farther eastward.

A Fortune

may be made by hard work, but can neither be made or enjoyed without health. To those leading sedentary lives Dr. R. V. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" is a real friend. It stimulates the liver, purifies the blood, and is the best remedy for consumption, which is scrofulous disease of the lungs. By all druggists.

Victor Hugo lately gave a banquet to eighty children of fishermen at Venules, the Norman watering-place where he has been staying, followed by a lottery where every one drew a prize.

Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" always becomes the favorite remedy of those who try it. It is a specific for all female "weaknesses" and derangements, bringing strength to the limbs and back, and color to the face. Of all druggists.

Under the patronage of a Berlin merchant, Wilhelm Schoulenck, Baron Nordenskjoll is getting ready for another arctic expedition from Stockholm next summer.

Being entirely vegetable, no particular care is required while using Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets." They operate without disturbance to the constitution, diet, or occupation. For sick headache, constipation, impure blood, dizziness, sour eructations from the stomach, bad taste in mouth, bilious attacks, pain in region of kidney, internal fever, bloated feeling about the stomach, rush of blood to head, take Dr. Pierce's "pellets." By druggists.

It is a curious fact that the only descendants of Daniel Webster should be also the descendants of the father of Napoleon Bonaparte.

Sing a song of hair oil,
Pocket minus chink.
Four and twenty editors
Spilling Printers' ink;
Now the pen goes faster,
Wonder what they mean,
Guess they must be writing ads,
For the Improved Carboline.

Rosa Bonheur lives the year round at By, an old hunting lodge of Marie de Medicis, near Fontainebleau, and drives herself out daily in her pony-carriage.

The Royal beauties of Europe owe much of their personal attractiveness to the influence of Ayer's Hair Vigor, which keeps the hair fresh and bright.

Mr. Tennyson is about to sell his place on the Downs, and make Ferrington his permanent residence, the air of the Isle of Wight suiting him better.

VEGETINE.—It extends its influence into every part of the human organism, commencing with its foundation; correcting diseased action, and storing vital powers, creating a healthy formation and purification of the blood, driving out disease, and leaving Nature to perform its allotted task.

A piece of land at Niagara Falls, between Table Rock and the Prospect House, is owned by the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone, Premier of Great Britain.

NOTICE.—Each bottle of Briggs' Electric Oil will hereafter be accompanied by a corkscrew, as it is important that the cork should be preserved and the bottle well corked when not in use, to retain the strength of the goods. It cures rheumatism, neuralgia, liver and kidney complaints, or of the urinary organs; cures complaints arising from colds, such as sore throat, bronchitis, diphtheria, cough and difficult breathing.

At Tel-el-Kebir one of Arabi's tents was embroidered with forget-me-nots, pomegranates, and other flowers and fruits, in exquisite needle-work, while another was lined with crimson demask silk.

Who Should Suffer.

The many who daily suffer agony from corns, bunions, callous lumps, when the means of remedy can be so easily procured. Putnam's great remedy for corns is the new article, but it commands the confidence of every druggist in Canada, as all can testify that Putnam's Corn Extractor is a sure thing. The man who neglects this suggestion to try Putnam's Extractor ought to suffer. Use not "the article just as good." Flesh-destroying and dangerous substitutes are offered as a substitute for Putnam's. Of such beware.

In conformity with the traditional custom of the hereditary Princes of Prussia, Prince William, the Emperor's eldest grandson, is about to enter the civil service, in order to obtain a practical knowledge of the working of the various branches of the executive and administrative organization of the country.

Mr. J. R. Seymour, Druggist, St. Catharines, writes that he finds an ever-increasing sale for Burdock Blood Bitters, and adds that he can, without hesitancy, recommend it. Burdock Blood Bitters is the grand specific for all diseases of the Blood, Liver and Kidneys. 9.

In the new volume of her letters, George Sands, speaking incidentally of the English character, sums it up thus: "Every true Englishman believes himself to be the finest man of the finest country in the world."

Mrs. Wm. Allan, of Acton, says she has never been without a bottle of Hagyard's Yellow Oil in the house for the last twenty years, and would not be for ten times the cost; adding that she has never known it to fail for Colds and Croup, Sore Throat, Stiff Neck, Burns, Scalds, etc. She concludes by saying, "if any one doubts its efficacy, refer them to me." 10.

Since 1851 gold to the amount of $1,460,000,000 has been produced by the Australian colonies.

A Good Investment.—Twenty-five cents expended to your druggist for a bottle of Hagyard's Yellow Oil will allay more pain and cure more diseases than many dollars spent for ordinary medicines would do. Yellow Oil cures Rheumatism, Burns, Scalds, Frost Bites, Sore Throat, Croup, Stiff Joints, Contracted Cords, and all Lameness and Inflammation. 8.

A man over sixty years of age is reported by the British Medical Journal to have made 156 miles in 24 hours on a tricyle. A younger rival did 188 miles in the same time.

Deafness that is caused by colds, inflammation of the membrane of the ear, and Earache, is often cured by Hagyard's Yellow Oil, the great external and internal remedy for all Pain, Soreness, and Inflammation, Rheumatism, Burns, Scalds, Frost Bites, Sore Throat, Croup, Contracted Muscles, etc. Never be without it. 12

The bank of France is hay ng printed 60,000,000 of 100 franc bank notes at the printing office attached to the bank building.

"A. P." 98

Vegetine

I Have Never Known Such a Useful Remedy Placed Before the Public

Montreal, Jan. 20, 1880

H. R. Stevens, Esq.—Dear Sir: I do not like to write testimonials for advertised medicines, but the great benefit that so many of my customers have obtained from the use of Vegetine compels me to say that with an experience of over 25 years, both in Great Britain and this country, I have never known such a useful remedy placed before the public.

J. D. L. AMBROSE.

Assistant of the Apothecaries' Company of London. Member of the Pharmaceutial Society of Great Britain. Licentiate in Pharmacy of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Corner Notre Dame and McGill streets.

Vegetine.

Pleurisy, Liver Complaint.

Yarmouth, N. S., Aug. 5, 1880.

H. R. Stevens, Esq.—Dear Sir: Last summer I was troubled with Pleurisy and Liver Complaint, was unable to work for seven weeks. I had the advice of two able physicians and took their medicine without getting any relief. One day your agent happened to pass my door and handed me a circular, which I read and at once concluded to try your Vegetine. In three days I was like a different man, and was able to resume my work in a short time. Have since enjoyed the best of health. I have recommended Vegetine to several of my neighbors, and know it to have accomplished wonderful cures.

Yours truly, P. A. VANHORN.

Foreman of A. F. Stoneman & Co.'s wharf.

P.S.—I consider I owe a great deal to Vegetine. I sincerely believe if it had not been for it I would have been laid up for months, and perhaps years. P. A. VANHORN.

Thousands speak. Vegetine is acknowledged and recommended by physicians and Apothecaries to be the best purifier and cleanser of the blood yet discovered, and thousands speak in its praise who have been restored to health.

Vegetine is Sold by All Druggists.

$5 PER DAY can be made by agents, male or female. C. W. DENNIS, Toronto.

TORONTO.—Mr. J. H. Mayne Campbell, Barrister, Solicitor, Etc., 9 Victoria-st

WATCHES. Send for free illustrated catalogue to RYRIE, the Jeweler, 13 Yonge Street, Toronto.

GUNS Rifles and Ammunition. Fall price list ready: sent free on application. W. McDOWALL, cor. King and George sts. Toronto

CARDS Christmas, New Year, Birthday, and other Cards, at H. J. MATTHEWS & BROS. art depot, Toronto.

ONTARIO VETERINARY COLLEGE, TORONTO. Students can enter from October until January. PROF. SMITH, V. S., Edin. Principal. Fees, fifty dollars.

J. MURRAY McNEIL, LONDON, ONT., gives written guarantee that his moustache recipe will produce heavy moustache in side of 10 weeks or money refunded: price $1 Box 264, London.

BUSINESS CHANCES.

$5,000,000 WORTH OF FARMING and other property in Ontario for sale by the CANADA WEST LAND AGENCY COMPANY, 14 Adelaide-st East, Toronto. Send for list

FOR SALE—TWO IMPROVED FARMS of 640 acres or four of 320 acres, in Manitoba. Half of each farm is broken, backset and ready for seed. Apply STRANGE & MOWAT, Portage la Prairie.

FARM FOR SALE—BEING LOT 106 Gwillimbury, adjoining town of Holland Landing 212 acres, Northern R. R. Station situated on corner of this Lot, the land is high rolling clay loam Brick house frame Bank Barn. J. W. G WHITNEY, Estate Agent 25 Toronto-st. Toronto.

COTSWOLD RAMS FOR SALE—25 COTSWOLD rams, one year old; pure bred; bred from imported stock; for sale cheap. Also, a few pure-bred Durham yearling bulls. GEORGE MILLER, Riggfoot Farm, Markham, Ont.

ONE OF THE BEST FARMS IN THE county of Bruce; containing 260 acres; 230 cleared; good house and out-buildings; also good orchard; a never failing stream within thirty yards of the house; three miles from Teeswater, the terminus of the T. G. & B. Ry.; price moderate. Apply to C. STEUL proprietor, or to J. MARSHALL, Teeswater, Ont.

LADIES! BEWARE of fraudulent corsets. "Coraline" corsets will not break, or lose their shape. Wear corsets made by Crompton Corset Co. Toronto.

FARMS FOR SALE

Near the following places:

St. Thomas, Collingwood, Barrie, Fergus, Blyth, Parkhill, Rockwood Station, Dundalk Station, Shelburne Station, Southampton. Also, a large number of excellent farms in Manitoba and the North-West. Settlement not required. Saw Mill, Lath and Shingle Machines for sale at Henfryn Station, Co. Grey, Ont. Engine, 35 horse, 2 boilers, 60 horse, all in splendid order. For particulars address

C. A. SCHRAM,
4 King St. East, Toronto. On

E. E. KNOTT'S Speculators' Mart, 19 Adelaide Str East, Toronto. All kinds of real estate sold or exchanged on commission. Money loaned on all kinds of real estate at lowest rates of interest. Applications for money from farmers a specialty. Rents collected and estates managed in town or country. N.B.—Best of references on application.

CHEAPEST MUSIC IN THE WORLD.

Full size sheet, best print, and good paper. Send 5 cents for sample copy and catalogue of 400 pieces of latest instrumental and vocal music.

S. C. BIGFORD,
23 King Street West, Toronto.
Dealer in picture frames and fancy goods

WOODSTOCK COLLEGE,

WOODSTOCK, ONTARIO

Instruction most complete in all branches. A most thorough and complete

BUSINESS EDUCATION

In the Commercial Department at very low rates. For circulars address

N. WOLVERTON, B.A., Principal.

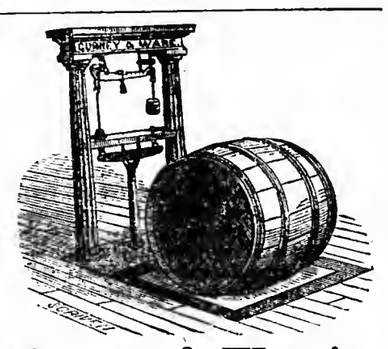
OUR BIG OFFER.

Splendid Value. An English Breech-Loading



DOUBLE GUN FOR $19.00!

Regular price, $25. Sent C.O.D. on approbation if Send 6c. for our new illustrated catalogue which is the finest ever published in Canada; just out. The Rawbone Gun and Manufacturing Co. (Limited), 81 Yonge-st., Toronto.

HAGYARD'S YELLOW OIL CURES RHEUMATISM

FREEMAN'S WORM POWDERS.

Are pleasant to take. Contain their own Purgative. Is a safe, sure, and effectual destroyer of worms in Children or Adults.

Gurney & Ware's STANDARD SCALES

For Railroads, Rolling Mills, Grist Mills and Elevators.

Scales for everything—Hay, Coal and Stock. All sizes of Warehouse Scales. Counter Scales of all kinds.

DAIRY & FARMERS' SCALES.

Fish, Pork and Wool Scales, Butchers' Scales, Scales and Beams for Pedlars' Waggons, All sizes of Railroad and Warehouse Trucks, Alarm Money Drawers.

Every Scale warranted. All makes promptly repaired.

Send for illustrated catalogue to

GURNEY & WARE, HAMILTON.

Burdock BLOOD BITTERS

WILL CURE OR RELIEVE

BILIOUSNESS, DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, JAUNDICE, ERYSIPELAS, SALT RHEUM, HEARTBURN, HEADACHE, DIZZINESS, DROPSY, FLUTTERING OF THE HEART, ACIDITY OF THE STOMACH, DRYNESS OF THE SKIN,

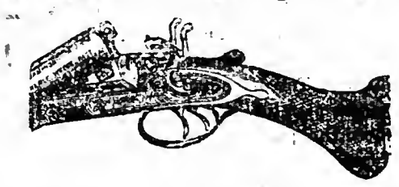
And every species of disease arising from disordered LIVER, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS OR BLOOD.

T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, TORONTO

Zopesa.

Zopesa was introduced in America two years ago. Large quantities have been used for Dyspepsia, and as a panacea for the Liver, and the manufacturers have yet to hear of a single case of Dyspepsia or Biliousness, when Zopesa was used as directed, in which it was not more than satisfactory. Many write that it is a wonderful remedy. We can show where as high as 40 pounds were gained by its use in breaking up chronic Biliousness and Dyspepsia. Its friends increase very fast, and all who use as directed are surprised and gratified.

Xmas & New Year CARDS.



Largest and Choicest Selection In the Dominion.

Assorted lots sent free by mail on receipt of $1 or upwards.

Lyon & Alexander,

110, 112, and 114 Bay Street,

TORONTO, ONT

Great Reduction in Price of Firearms

We will sell for the next 30 days at the following reduced prices:—

Our $25 English genuine twist double barrel breech-loading shot gun for	$ 18 00
Our $30 English genuine twist double barrel breech-loading shot gun for	25 00
Our $40 English genuine twist double barrel breech-loading shot gun for	30 00
Our $15 double muzzle gun, genuine twist barrels, for	10 00
Our $20 double muzzle gun, genuine twist barrels, fine front action locks, beautifully finished, for	15 00
Joslyn carbine rifle reduced to	7 00
Evans' 26-shot repeating rifle reduced to	18 00
Zulu single barrel breech-loading shot gun reduced to	3 50
Climax single barrel breech-loading shot gun reduced to	5 00
Pioneer single barrel breech-loading shot gun reduced to	6 00
Spencer repeating rifle, long barrel, 7-shot, reduced to	15 00
Winchester repeating rifle, 13-shot, reduced to	18 00

Parties desiring to inspect these goods before purchasing can do so by sending us $1. We will express the Gun C.O.D. If not satisfactory you have the privilege of returning it. If the $1 more than covers express charges, we will remit you the difference; and this rule applies to all goods in our catalogue. Send 6 cents for our 96 page catalogue, containing over 600 illustrations of Firearms, Watches, Jewellery, Silverware, etc.

Chas. Stark, 52 Church street, Toronto.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR,

For Restoring Gray Hair

To its Natural Vitality and Color.

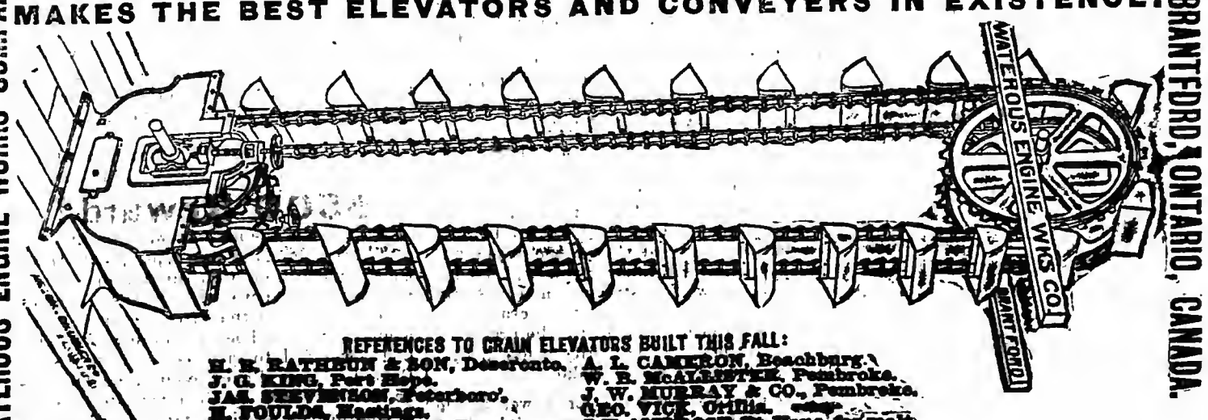
Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and either of them incline it to shed permaturely.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately; often renews the growth; and always surely restores its color, when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thus brashy, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; lost hair regrows with lively expression, falling hair is checked and stablished; thin hair thickens; and faded or gray hairs resume their original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—under which conditions, diseases of the scalp are impossible.

As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is praised for its grateful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

PREPARED BY 3

DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.,



Practical and Analytical Chemists.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS AND DEALERS IN MEDICINE.

DETACHABLE LINK BELTING.

MAKES THE BEST ELEVATORS AND CONVEYERS IN EXISTENCE.

WATEROUS ENGINE WORKS COMPANY, BRANTFORD, ONTARIO, CANADA.

REFERENCES TO GRAIN ELEVATORS BUILT THIS FALL:

H. H. RATHBUN & SON, Deseronto. A. L. CAMERON, Beachburg.
J. G. KING, Port Hope. W. B. McALLISTER, Pembroke.
JAS. STEVENSON, Peterboro'. J. W. MURRAY & CO., Pembroke.
E. FOULDS, Hastings. GEO. VICE, Orillia.
MARTIN & SON, Mount Forest. J. H. AMBROSE, Pt. Hope, for malt.
R. CAMPBELL & SON, Pictou, N.S., for tanbark, and others.

SEND FOR NEW ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE.

The Standard.

MARKDALE, NOV. 9TH, 1882.

GREY ASSIZES.

The Assizes for the County of Grey opened on Tuesday, the 31st of October, before Hon. Mr. Justice Cameron. The docket was heavy both in quality and number. There are twenty-two civil records and nine criminal cases. Two civil cases have been settled. True bills were found by the Grand Jury against Samuel Carleton for the larceny of a saw from one Kennedy, in the township of Derby, and against Adam Minard for stealing a cow from James Millman, in the same township. Wm. J. Montgomery, et al v. John Hall, action of ejectment to recover possession of lot 9, on the south west side of Garafraxa street, in Owen Sound. Defendant claims by length of possession. John Creasor, Q.C., for plaintiffs; James Masson for defendant. The jury found against defendant. Hamilton vs. McNabb, a boundary fight from Derby township, was not finished when the court adjourned.

WEDNESDAY.

At the Grey Assizes to-day the following cases were disposed of:—Mrs. Ellen Hamilton v. George MacNabb. The plaintiff occupies the north half and the defendant the south half of part of lot four in concession one of Derby township, and the dospute is about the boundary line. Verdict for the plaintiff establishing the boundary she claims and giving her $5 nominal damages. Mr. Masson for the plaintiff, Mr. D. A. Cressor for the defendant. Wm. H. Fawcett v. Mrs. Kerr,—This is an action for libel, the facts disclosed in which are somewhat extraordinary. The defendant is the mother-in-law of the plaintiff, and before the trial commenced the plaintiff's counsel, Mr. Pollard, offered to settle the suit if the defendant would apologize, withdraw the libel, and pay costs, as he was unwilling to drag family disputes before the public. This the defendant refused through her counsel, Mr. Moberley. The libel complained of is written on a post-card addressed to Mr. Richard Marsh, Meaford P. O., and is in the following words:—"February 8, 1882. I write these words to you that if you do not punish W. H. Fawcett for stealing grain out of your granery on October 26 I will punish you, for his wife can prove it, for this is what has made her without a house to-day. She never was brought up in that way nor was not going to live out her life in that unlawful way, and W. H. is the biggest bloat in the township." It bore the name of the defendant, Mrs. Kerr, but it was written by the plaintiff's wife with the authority of Mrs. Kerr. the plaintiff's wife had, at that time, been living apart from her husband since the previous October or November. Mrs. Fawcett is a young woman, and has been married only four or five years. She and her husband had two children. She suddenly left him and the children one morning without a word. Her explanation of this extraordinary conduct is as follows:—Her husband and Richard Marsh had been changing work backward and forward, and Fawcett was of opinion that Marsh owed him $7 or $8, but did not want to claim. Marsh was removing from that neighbourhood, and Fawcett said he would repay himself by taking grain from Marsh's barn. Mrs. Fawcett protested in vain against this, and shortly afterwards she saw Fawcett twice take an empty sack from his own barn in the direction of Marsh's and return with it full of something. Subsequently Fawcett told his wife that he had done as he said he would about Marsh's grain. Mrs. Fawcett gives this as the reason she left him, but in cross-examination it turned out that there was a further reason, namely, that Fawcett disapproved of a hat or bonnet that she had bought, thinking it too expensive, and told her to take it back and change it. This was three or four days after the alleged grain stealing, and Mrs. Fawcett admitted that if the bonnet matter had not occurred she would have overlooked the grain matter, and not have left her husband with two helpless little babies on his hands. The plaintiff when in the witness-box to-day denied the grain stealing story in toto, and called as a witness Richard Marsh, who said that he had not missed any grain from his barn, and did not think any could have been stolen without his knowledge. The exasperation of the two women against the plaintiff appears to have been caused by Fawcett advertising after his wife left him that he would not be responsible for any debts contracted by her, as he found she had been buying property on his credit after she had left him. Another post-card of a still more injurious character was written to Marsh, but was not produced. An altercation took place between the parties outside the Court House this morning, in the course of which Mrs. Fawcett slapped her husband's face—with her gloves, as she explains. The jury found a verdict for the plaintiff, damages $1.50. In the ejectment case of Cameron v. Cameron, a verdict by consent was taken for the plaintiff with costs.

THURSDAY.

The Assizes to-day opened with an action for slander, J. J. Middleton v. Joseph McArdle The plaintiff resides in Dundalk, and has been reeve for Proton for several years, also a magistrate, and a director of the Toronto, Grey & Bruce Railway. The defendant is the post master of the village of Hopeville, in Proton Township. The two are on the opposite sides of polotics, and have generally been opposed in municipal affairs, and a bitter feeling appears to have existed between them for some time. This feeling broke out in an altercation between them in Gordon's Hotel, Dundalk. The plaintiff swears that during this altercation the defendant accused him of a most abominable and detestable crime, alleging that he could prove it. T. Hannen J. Hannen, and another man were present, and all three positively confirm Mr. Middleton's statement. For the defence Mr. McArdle admitted that he made a charge of the nature stated, but swore positively that he alleged it against some persons whom he understood were friends or relations of Middleton's. The thing appears to be based on some twenty years old story about some man in the neighbourhood of Rice lake. Verdict for the plaintiff; damages $500. T Hodgins, Q. C., for the plaintiff; Mr. Joseph MacDougall for the defendant. Thompson Ellis was indicted for rape upon Elizabeth Ann Smith in Bentinck on August 3rd. The girl Smith is of somewat weak intellect, and the case was brought to a premature close by her answering "no" to the question if the prisoner was the man who committed the offence, Verdict, "Not guilty." True bills were found against John N. Snake and Charlotte Beatty in each case for perjury. The Grand Jury brought in their presentment. They expressed an opinion strongly in favour of the continuance of the grand jury system, in which view His Lordship concurred. Wm. Totten v. Jas. Sutherland —Action to recover the price of a number of ties made by the plaintiff for the defendant in Keppel township. Unfinished The court then adjourned until next Tuesday morning at ten o'clock.

Correspondence

NOTICE.—We wish it distinctly understood that we do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions expressed by our correspondents

A WARNING.

To the Editor of the STANDARD.

SIR,—It is asserted that the Rev. James Ward of Christ's church, Markdale, during his sermon on Sunday afternoon, the 29th ult., warned the congregation that they were not to attend any other church or Sunday school unless they saw him doing so, and in "no case" were they to contribute to any church but their own.

Now, Mr. Editor, this don't seem very like a Christian spirit, for the Bible teaches us that it is more blessed to give than to receive, and it must be very unpleasant for the parties of other denominations who contributed so liberally towards the building fund of Christ's church. Had he refrained from mentioning anything about contributions this never would have appeared. Why does Mr. Ward lower himself by accepting subscriptions from outsiders? (But I suppose he would not if he could get along without.) If he would take the trouble to look around at the garden parties and concerts got up by his congregation he would see that his own flock were few and far between. There is one thing certain, Mr. Ward has never been seen at any entertainment belonging to other churches. In this enlightened age such a feeling of selfishness and bigotry you would suppose did not exist.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for the above space,

I am, yours truly,

G.

Hill Bros. have have purchased a fire engine for their elevator.

BUCKLEN'S ARNICA SALVE.

The best salve in the world for Cuts, Bruises, Sores, Ulcers, Salt Rheum, Fever Sores, Tetter, Chapped Hands, Chilblains, Corns, and all Skin Eruptins, and Positively cures Piles. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by A. Turner & Co.

OWEN SOUND, Nov. 5.—The propeller Josephine Kidd running between Owen Sound and Lion's Head was burned off Cape Commodore last night. She left here about eight o'clock in the evening with a full cargo of merchandise, including a large quantity of mill supplies for Lion's Head. After calling at Presqu'isle, where she took on board fifteen tons of hay, she proceeded on her way to Wiarton, thence bound for Lion's Head. When a few miles from Cape Commodore fire was discovered in the after cabin. Captain Thorburn first made an effort to extinguish it, but finding it gaining too much headway headed the vessel for shore, where they succeeded in beaching her. The crew attempted to use the pumps, but were driven from their posts The ladies' maid had a narrow escape. The vessel and cargo are a total loss. The crew were all picked up safely by the steamer Myrtle, that happened to be en route from Wiarton to this place, and taken to Wiarton early this morning. The cargo is valued at upwards of $4,000, and not insured. The Josephine Kidd is a small propeller of 108 tons burden, built at Port Stanley in 1879. She was owned by Kidd & Co., of Goderich, valued at $6,000, classed A 2. She was insured, but at present the amount cannot be ascertained, nor the company.

NEVER GIVE UP.

If you are suffering with low and depressed spirits, loss of appetite, general debility, disordered blood, weak constitution, headache, or any disease of a bilious nature, by all means procure a bottle of Electric Bitters. You will be surprised to see the rapid improvement that will follow; you will be inspired with new life; strength and activity will return; pain and misery wil cease, and henceforth you will rejoice in the praise of Electric Bitters. Sold at fifty cents a bottle by A. Turner & Co., Markdale.

If you have a weakness for a well-fitting suit of clothes or overcoat see MaFarland about it.

The siding at the railway station has been repaired which was destroyed by fire at the burning of the elevators.

Eddy's match factory, in Hull, P. Q., was destroyed by fire last week. Loss $400,000.

MILLIONS GIVEN AWAY.

Millions of bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, have been given away as Trial Bottles of the large size. This enormous outlay would be disastrous to the proprietors, were it not for the rare merits possessed by the wonderful medicine. Call at A. Turner & Co's Drug Store and get a Trial Bottle free, and try for yourself. It never fails to cure.

Connundrum—Suppose you had a bear by the tail whether would it behest to let go or hold on?

My wife has got samples of Tea from all the stores and finds McFarland's the best and cheapest.

McFarland will operate his monster elevator by steam power.

In a few days 8552 pounds of Tea to arrive via steamship Yorkshire direct from Japan for W. J. McFarland.

Kelley's Island, Ohio, March 28th, 1880.—I have used Kendall's Spavin Cure on a bone spavin, and am pleased to report that it has taken the enlargement completely off. It took only one bottle to perform the cure. I am confident if properly used it will do all you claim for it. Yours truly, C. M. LINCOLN.

BIRTHS.

STODDART—In Glenelg, on the 3rd inst., the wife of Mr. George Stoddart, of a son.

ELLIOIT—In Euphrasia, on the 31st October, the wife of Mr. James Elliott, of a son.

BARCLAY—In Glenelg on the 3rd inst., the wife of Mr. Robert Barclay, of a daughter.

BLACK—In Dundalk, on the 31st of October, the wife of Mr. John Black, of a daughter.

GALBRAITH—In Williamsford, on the 19th ult., the wife of R. M. Galbraith, of a son.

MARRIAGES.

EDGE—ECTOR.—At Durham, October 18th, by Rev. William Park, Mr. Robert Edge to Miss Lizzie Ector, both of Glenelg.

ARMSTRONG—LOCKHEART.—By the Rev. T. Snowden, at the Methodist parsonage, Dundalk, on the 18th of October, Mr. R. Armstrong, to Miss Jane J. Lockheart, both of Proton.

ATKINS—GOODFELLOW.—By the Rev. T. J. Snowden, at the Methodist parsonage, Dundalk, on the 18th of October, Mr. Charles Atkins, to Miss Eliza A. Goodfellow, both of Proton.

LONSWAY—BROUGHTON.—By the Rev T. J. Snowden, at the residence of the bride's mother, on the 30th of October, Mr. John Henry Lonsway, to Miss Mary Ann Broughton, both of Melancthon.

DIED.

MARTIN—In Artemesia, on the 2nd inst., Mr. Terrance Martin, aged 47 years, 10 months.

JONES—In Markdale, on the 5th inst., Eddie James, only son of Mr. Andrew Jones, (Blacksmith,) aged 5 years, 8 months.

Akron, Ohio, May 7th, 1880.—Some three years ago I had a horse become very lame from a spavin. I treated it with Kendall's Spavin Cure with marked success. Since then I have sold a great many Bottles, and have heard of cures resulting from its use. I am frank to say I can cheerfully recommend it as an honest remedy. Yours truly, A. M. ARMSTRONG.

J. L. BROWNE

—IS—

Better than Ever!

—IN—

PHOTOS!

Cabinet, Card or Tablet.

A LARGE STOCK OF

FRAMES

NEWEST DESIGNS, CHEAP.

NOTICE TO FARMERS.

BUSINESS STILL INCREASING WITH

W. J. ROWE

—AT THE—

Barrhead Mill

UNDER THE OLD PROCESS.

Gristing and Chopping done every working day. Farmers from a distance can have their stuff home with them the same day.

All orders for Flour and Feed promptly filled.

W. J. ROWE, "Barrhead Mills."
October 28th, 1882. 113-126

$500 Reward!

We will pay the above reward for any case of Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Indigestion, Constipation or Costiveness we cannot cure with West's Vegetable Liver Pills, when the directions are strictly complied with. They are purely Vegetable, and never fail to give satisfaction. Sugar Coated. Large Boxes, containing 30 Pills, 25 cts. For sale by all Druggists. Beware of counterfeits and imitations. The genuine manufactured only by JOHN C. WEST & CO., "The Pill Makers," 81 & 83 King St. East, Toronto, Ont. Free trial package sent by mail prepaid on receipt of a 3 cent stamp. For sale at Turner & Co. Drug Store.

T. G. & B. RAILWAY.

TIME TABLE.

GOING SOUTH.

	Exp.	Mxd.	Mail.
	a.m.	a.m.	p.m
Owen Sound, dep.	5.20	7.35	3.45
Markdale	6.29	9.45	5.02
Flesherton	6.43	10.12	5.19
Toronto	10.35		9.25

GOING NORTH.

Toronto....dep.	7.35		4.35
Flesherton	11.39	4.15	8.30
Markdale	11.57	5.02	8.45
Owen Sound	1.15	7.00	9.55

MISS WELSH

Dress and Mantle Maker

Charges moderate. Satisfaction guaranteed.

HILL'S BLOCK, SYDENHAM ST.

Markdale, Nov. 6th, 1882. 113-126.

NOTICE.

NOTICE is hereby given to all parties indebted to the estate of the late N. B. Grier, of Priceville, either by note or book account, are requested to settle the same on or before the 20th November, 1882, or costs will be incurred.

E. J. GRIER.
Priceville, Oct. 24th, 1882. 112.td.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from active practice having had placed in his hands by an East Indiana Missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma, and all Throat and Lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for General Debility and all nervous complaints, after having thoroughly tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, feels it is his duty to make it known to his fellows. The recipe, with full particulars, directions for preparation and use, and all necessary advice and instructions for successful treatment at your own home, will be received by you by return mail, free of charge, by addressing with stamp or stamped, self-addressed, envelope to

DR. J. C RAYMOND.
164 Washington Street, Brooklyn, N.Y.
110-62

AUCTION SALE

—OF—

Valuable Farm Property

in the Township of Artemesia, in the County of Grey. There will be sold on Thursday, the 16th day of November, 1882,

at one o'clock in the afternoon, at Rutledge's Hotel, in the Village of Markdale,

By virtue of a power of sale contained in a certain mortgage, which will be produced at the sale, the following property, under mortgage from Robert Morrow, Lots Nos 129 and 130, in the 2nd Concession West of the Toronto and Sydenham Road of the Township of Artemesia, County of Grey, containing 100 acres, more or less.

The following improvements are said to be on the premises:—75 acres cleared, having erected thereon two dwelling houses, a cedar log barn, with a brick yard, situated 5 miles from Markdale.

TERMS.—One-tenth of the purchase money to be paid down on day of sale. For balance, terms will be made known at the sale. For further particulars apply to

JONES BROS. & MACKENZIE,
Solicitors, Masonic Hall, Toronto.

or to JOHN LYONS, Esq., Markdale.

Toronto, October 16th. 1882. 111

Health is Wealth!

DR. E. C. WEST'S NERVE AND BRAIN TREATMENT, a guaranteed specific for Hysteria, Dizziness, Convulsions, Fits, Nervous Neuralgia, Headache, Nervous Prostration caused by the use of alcohol or tobacco, Wakefulness, Mental Depression, Softening of the Brain, resulting in Insanity and leading to misery, decay and death. Premature Old Age, Barrenness, Loss of Power in either sex, Involuntary losses and Spermatorrhœa, caused by over-exertion of the brain, self-abuse or over-indulgence. One box will cure recent cases. Each box contains one month's treatment. One dollar a box, or six boxes for five dollars; sent by mail prepaid on receipt of price. We guarantee six boxes to cure any case. With each order received by us for six boxes, accompanied with five dollars, we will send the purchaser a written guarantee to refund the money if the treatment does not effect a cure. Guarantees issued only by A. Turner & Co., sole authorized Agent for Markdale Ont. John C. West & Co. sole proprietor, Toronto, Ont.

Advertise in the STANDARD the best advertising medium in the county.

MARKDALE MARKETS.

Fall Wheat, $0.85 to $0.90; Spring $0 to $0.92; Barley, 60c; Peas, 60t; Oats, Butter, 17c; Eggs, 21c; Potatoes, 30c; H $8.00.

FLESHERTON MARKETS.

Fall Wheat, $0.80 to $0.90; Spring, $0 to $0.92; Barley, 60c; Peas, 66c; Oats, Butter, 17c; Eggs, 21c; Potatoes, 80c; H $8.00.

TORONTO MARKETS.

Fall Wheat, $0.90 to $0.96; Spring, $1 to $1.06; Barley, 56c to 81c; Oats, 40c to Peas, 74c to 76c; Hogs, $8.00 to ...0; Potatoes, per bag, 75c to 80c; Butter, dairy, to 20c; eggs, 23c to 24c.

GENERAL

Blacksmithing

Flesherton Station.

The subscriber begs to announce to inhabitants of Flesherton, Markdale Priceville, and surrounding country, that has commenced business at Flesherton Station, where he hopes by satisfactory work and moderate rates to secure a share of public patronage.

HORSE-SHOEING A SPECIALTY

And guaranteed that in a case of interfering horses he will cure the defect in two shoeings or no charge will be made for the second shoeing.

A TRIAL SOLICITED.

HENRY WHITE

Flesherton Station, Oct. 17, 1882.

A. HILL

TAILOR.

Over McFarland's Store

MARKDALE.

Special attention to Cutting.

If you want a Perfect Fit leave your Order with

A. HILL.
September 20th, 1882. 106.

Moffat Bros'

MARKDALE

Foundry

—AND—

MACHINE WORKS,

MANUFACTURERS OF

MILL MACHINERY

Steam Engines,

SHAFTING, HANGERS,

Pulleys, &c. Land Rollers,

PLOWS!

And Plow Points

MACHINERY REPAIRING

Done in a practical manner.

We also introduce our new

FAMILY MANGLE!

to the public. This new machine will mangle Linen, Cotton, and Woollen Goods, giving them a beautiful smooth and glossy appearance. It also improves the clothes, whereas hot irons injure them. We also manufacture of various designs for Buildings, Verandahs &c. Ornamental Cast iron Chains, Pall Pillars, Fencing, Ventilators, Columns, Iron Beams, Gratings for Cellar Windows, &c.

ORNAMENTAL CRESTING

IRON & BRASS CASTINGS

Of Every Description Made to Order.

MOFFAT BROS.

RYBODY

HOULD SEE

F. DOLL'S

UTIFUL STOCK OF

s, Clocks, Jewelry,

LVERWARE,

TINAS, VIOLINS, &c.

ust buy, as the same quality of be sold at so low a figure by r jeweller. The reason is,

RTS DIRECT!

BUYS FOR CASH!

ving from 20 to 50 per cent.

—o—

16th inst. Mr. Doll's business l on at Markdale only. he hav- t his Dundalk and Flesherton ble him to give the attention to e business which it requires.

—o—

and Clocks Cleaned nd Repaired.

lways turn out as represented.

n $10 to $20 and buy a good ACHINE from W. F. Doll, only Also two splendid ORGANS for han half the catalogue price.

Oct. 10th, 1882. 109

d Immediately!

—FOR—

ros.' New Elevator,

ls Wheat,
000 bushels Barley,
30,000 bushels Oats,
25,000 bushels Peas,

the highest market prices will be 111-tf.

ocal Items.

Thursday being a public holiday n is published a day earlier this gozin who has been editing the Sun for some time, has complete- ight without any hope of re cas & Co, bankers, Markdale, 00,000.00 to loan on . Straight loan system. No interest; moderate charges.

e with your figure," the young ghed, r me then," the young lady re-both our fortunes and then divide." hey were married and multiplied. n McNally, lot 34, con. 3, Glenelg, of four acres of fall wheat this shocks, which yielded a total for es of 215 bushels of first-class lk about Manitoba after this, when poorest township in the county of show such a splendid yield.—

he returns of the Toronto, Grey Railway for the week ending Oct. as as follows:—Passengers, $3-, rresponding week last year, $1,- crease, $1,974.74. Freight, $5,- rresponding week last year, $4,- crease, $1,456.76. Mails and sun- 5.81: corresponding week last year, crease, $56.25. Total, $9,804.50; ing week last year, $6,315,75; in- 487.75.

ANK NOTES.—The Dominion four- es will be issued by the Assistant- eneral next Monday. The dis- tures are a portrait of the Marquis in the centre, and a representation at Seal of Canada at the left-hand The notes are also printed on water- r. The reason of the issue is a ssed some time ago, depriving e power to issue any notes under that time the bank $4 notes have nally called in, until it was fe.. vernment issue was necessary.

TO WINNIPEG.—It is probable that xt meeting of the Great North- Telegraph Company, a scheme will ted for a direct connection between nd the North-West. At present unication is by Detroit, Chicago, aul to Winnipeg, and the expense are well known to business and r men. It is proposed not to wait nstruction of the Canada Pacific ut to lay a large cable from some he shore of Thunder Bay to Sault thence by land lines through the n islands and small cable links to ey bay, and thence by another point on the peninsula north-west n Sound. Between Winnipeg and Bay communication will be secured nection with the Thunder Bay legraph line via Rat Portgage and Should this plan be carried out, it ubt not only ensure better service er cost, but tend to promote still he object of making Canada a self- country.

Grain is coming in rapidly.

Miss Welsh is giving satisfaction in dress and mantle making

Remember the concert in Dufferin Hall this (Thursday) evening.

Read the change of advertisement of Mr. Hogg, Flesherton Station, on eighth page.

Thanksgiving services at the Methodist church on Thursday, the 9th, at two p. m.

John Welsh left for Florida on Monday. We expect to have "notes by the way" for publication.

For A No. 1 Apples, Bread, Buns, Biscuit, Cakes, Confectionery, &c., go to Clark's bakery, Dunlop's block, Markdale.

W. R. Rambough, P.L.S., Durham, gave us a call on Tuesday. He purposes visiting this section occasionally to do surveying.

Mr Trimble, of the firm of Trimble & Wright, is in the city picking up some cheap lines of goods. Look out for greater bargains than ever.

Mr. John Davis, 7th line of Euphrasia, finished haying on Friday, the 3rd inst. It was a crop of Hungarian grass and was saved in good order.

Trimble & Wright's stock of Boots and Shoes are selling very fast, and so they should, they are good and fully 20 per cent. less than elsewhere.

Do your shopping this (Wednesday) evening. The shops will be closed to-morrow sure. It's a public holiday and all loyal villages observe it as such.

Moffat Bros.' new engine (their own manufacture) is giving entire satisfaction. Their powerful turning lathe is also a valuable addition to their foundry.

The Mail or Globe to the end of 1883 for $1.00. Leave your subscription at the STANDARD office. Subscribe at once and get the balance of this year free.

Apropos Trimble & Wright. "Did you see that suit I got, Tom?" "Yes. You got that at the cheap store, I suppose." "Yes, I should smile so. I couldn't get it anywhere else for $4,75. Chalk me if I could."

W. Hogg, of Flesherton Station, has commenced the burning of lime close to his saw mill at Little Falls, having fired his first kiln last Monday. In a few days lime may be had there in any quantity.

A very neat and comprehensive monthly school report, made to suit any section, kept on hand at the STANDARD office. Every schooll should have them as they only cost a trifle.

Have you a friend in a distant part who would like to hear from home often? If so send them the STANDARD. We will forward it direct to any part of the world, free of postage, for one dollar per year.

"Mrs. Haley, where did ye's get that foine tay yees have?" "Och, shure did ye's not hear uv the foine lot uv fresh tays Trimble & Wright's got in, at twinty-eight cints by the hist? That's some of it."

The Canada Farmer is a weekly agricultural paper, only $1 per annum. Every new subscriber will receive a beautiful chromo of "Niagara Falls," size 22x28 inches. Send in your subscription at once to this office; balance of year free.

The large elevator owned by C. Stephens & Co., at Collingwood, was entirely consumed by fire with all its contents on the 5th inst. The loss is estimated at from $8,000 to $10,000. The building is valued at $5,000, which, with the grain, is partially insured.

PERSONAL.—Dr. Sproule, M.P., is expected home this week.....Mr. Thos. Hanbury, of Dundalk, gave us a call on Monday; also Mr. S. Fleming, of Proton, who has lately returned from Manitoba to make arrangements for removing his family to the Prairie Province.

On Tuesday while Mr. C. W. Speers was loading a car of live stock at the station the car door burst open on the opposite side from where they were being loaded and a fat cow fell out into a cattle-guard. The animal was hauled out of the hole, and being too much shook up for the journey was bled and dressed for home consumption.

This Fall has been remarkable for beautiful dry weather. The month of October was the finest ever seen by the oldest inhabitant, and November has come in lovely. Water is very scarce, many of the wells being dry. The farmers complain that they cannot plough sod—on the other hand their stubble lands are being cultivated equal to summer fallowing. The root crop is saved in splendid condition; the straw stacks, (which are numerous through the country,) are safe so far from the fall rains, and are so settled now that a shower, or even a a prolonged rain, will have but little effect upon them, which will go a great way in making fodder plentiful this winter.

The following is the result of the October examination of junior third in second department of Markdale school. Marks obtainable, 485. Minnie Wilson, 304; Harry Large, 286; Benj. Coleman, 284; Willie Leslie, 270; Herbert Hull, 249; Mary Nesbitt, 169; Peter Thibaudeau, 153; Violet Ford, 155; Alfy Whitby, 149; Willie Wilson, 144; Ada Reynolds, 118; Frank Bryden, 113; Minnie Lucas, 105; Henry Smyth, 101; Tom Mercer, 100; Herbert Hall, 91; Edgar Rutledge, 80; Willie Mathers, 79; Lizzie Pollock, 66; Ella Wilson, 65; Bessie Moffat, 56; Maud Mabee, 54; Bella Benson, 52; Egerton Irving, 43; Jennie Rae, 30; Minnie McNea, 26.—MINNIE THIBAUDEAU, Teacher.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.

The advertiser, having been permanently cured of that dread disease, Consumption, by a simple remedy, is anxious to make known to his fellow sufferers the means of cure. To all who desire it, he will send a copy of the prescription used, (free of charge,) with the directions for prepairing and using the same which they will find a SURE CURE for CONSUMPTION, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, &c.

Parties wishing the Prescription, will please address, Rev. E. A. Wilson, 149 Penn st., Williamsburgh, N. Y. 75-127

AGENTS WANTED.—Big pay.—Light Work. Steady Employment. Samples free. Address, M. L. BYRN, 46 Nassau stree New York. 20

VALUABLE PROPERTY
FOR SALE
IN THE TOWN OF DURHAM, IN THE COUNTY OF GREY.

THE following valuable town properties will be sold on reasonable terms or will be rented for a term of years, or exchange, for farm propeoty.

1st,

Lot No. 1 on the west side of Gaiafraxa street and south of Hunter street, opposite Mr. J. H. Hunter's store house, well fenced and first class frame buildings, good cellars, hard and soft water, a most convenient residence and would make a good business stand.

2nd,

That most desirable property being park lots nos. 2 and 3 on the north side of George st., 8 acres more or less, well fenced, front fenced with pickets, one and a half acres of a thriving young orchard and very convenient to the railway station.

The east half of the west half on lot 18 on the west side of countess street with a new frame house and kitchen, good stable and wood shed, well fenced, front fence painted white, hard and soft water on the premises.

4th,

Park Lot No. 8, Wm. Hunter's, Survey.

5th

Lots 1 and 2, Presbyterian Survey.

6th,

Lot No 15 on the North side of Mill street in the village of Markdale close to the railway station, with good frame house thereon. If the above properties are sold the very best title will be given free from all encumbrances.

—Also the—

Foliowing Farming Properties.

will be sold on reasonable terms of payment.

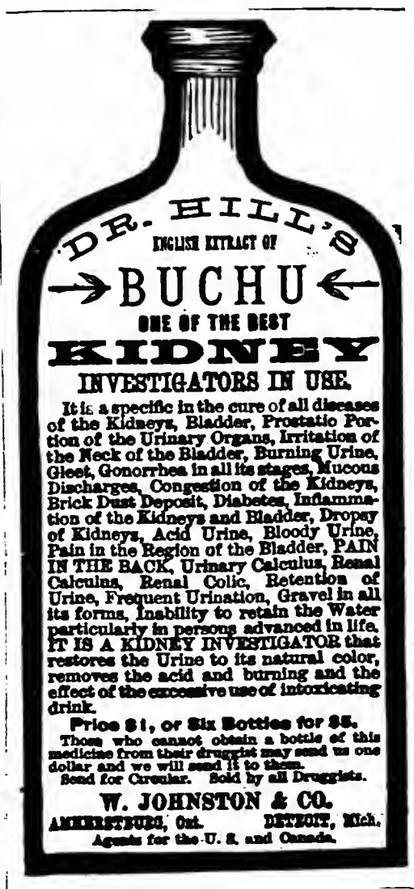
7th,

Lot No. 22, Con. 9 Glenelg, 100 acres more or less, 3½ miles from the T. G. & B. R. at Markdale, 75 acres cleared, a new frame house and two log barns.

8th,

Lot No. 93 in the 3rd Con. W. T. & S. R., Glenelg. 50 acres, about 45 acres cleared and good log buildings, about 2½ miles from Markdale station T. G. & B. R.

9th,



The west half lot 17, Con. 4. N. D. R., Glenelg, 50 acres 40 acres cleared, good rough cast house and orchard on the premises. The house and one acre will be reserved during the life of the occupants who are now between 80 and 85 years of age.

10th

East part lot No. 1. con 2 Normanby, 63 acres, about 50 acres cleared, situation about 2 miles from the town of Durham. For further particulars apply to

FINLEY MacRAE, Durham.

Dated 15th August. 1882. tf 104,

Mothers! Mothers! Mothers!

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the excruciating pain of cutting teeth! If so, go at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately—depend upon it; there is no mistake about it. There is not a mother upon earth who has ever used it, who will not tell you at once that it will regulate the bowels, and give rest to the mother, and relief and health to the child, operating like magic. It is perfectly safe to use in all cases, and pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Sold everywhere at 25 cents a bottle. 75-127

Dye Stuffs.

Indigo,
Madder,
Logwood,
Fustic,
Camwood,
Cochineal,
Bluestone,
Madder Compound,
Copperas,
Bichromate Potash,
Cream Tartar,
Alum, and
many other Articles used in Dyeing.
Also, a large variety of the best Aniline Dyes.

Medical Hall.

A. Turner & Co.

Re-Fresh-ing

In the cool assertion of some people that they can sell below cost, &c., it may not be amiss to let the public of Markdale and surrounding country know that

Wilson Benson,

of the "BELFAST HOUSE." MARKDALE, can sell "cheaper than the cheapest," and "better than the best," all kinds of

Groceries, Liquors, &c.

Consisting of

TEAS, TOBACCOS, SPICES, CANNED FISH, ETC.,

And for those wishing pure Wine for sacramental purposes, will find a brand that will equal anything on this side the Atlantic.
Other Liquors equally pure.
SPECIAL! Pure Holland Gin.
Cheese from the best manufactories.
Our Whiskies are from the firm of Gooderham & Worts, Toronto, and the public may rely on receiving them as they are sent.

FLOUR, POTATOES, and everything in the household line kept constantly on hand.

Henceforth my Store will be supplied with Fruits of all kinds, such as
APPLES, PEARS, PLUMS, &c.

FRUIT CAKES of all kinds always kept on hand.

Essences, Hair Oils, and Perfumery of the choicest nectars.

TOILET & FANCY SOAPS, better than the best.

CANADIAN & WESTERN PORK, of first quality.

Everything in the Grocery Line kept on a fuller and more complete scale than at any other place in Markdale.

WILSON BENSON.

PIMPLES.

I will mail (Free) the recipe for a simple VEGETABLE BALM that will remove TAN-FRECKLES, PIMPLES and BLOTCHES, leaving the skin soft, clear and beautiful; also instructions for producing a luxuriant growth of hair on a bald head or smooth face. Address, enclosing a 3c. stamp, Ben. Vandelf & Co., 5 Beekman st., N. Y. 75-127

ERRORS OF YOUTH.

A GENTLEMAN who suffered for years from NERVOUS DEBILITY, PREMATURE DECAY, and all the effects of youthful indiscretion will, for the sake of suffering humanity, send free to all who need it, the recipe and directions for making the simple remedy by which he was cured. Sufferers wishing to profit by the advertiser's experience can do so by addressing in perfect confidence, JOHN B. OGDEN.
75-127 42 Cedar St., New York.

Gold Great chance to make money. Those who always take advantage of the good chances for making money that are offered, generally become wealthy, while those who do not improve such chances remain in poverty. We want many men, women, boys and girls to work for us right in their own localities. Any one can do the work properly from the first start. The business will pay more than ten times ordinary wages. Expensive outfit furnished free. No one who engages fails to make money rapidly. You can devote your whole time in the work, or only your spare moments. Full information and all that is needed sent free. Address, STINSON & Co., Portland Maine. 71-126

MANHOOD
HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED

SEAL We have recently published a new edition of Dr. CULVERWELL'S CELEBRATED ESSAY on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, &c., resulting from excesses.

☞ Price, in sealed envelope, only 6 cents, or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

☞ This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Address
The Culverwell Medical Co.,
P.O. box 450 41 Ann St., New York

MARKDALE
Meat Market.

A constant supply of
Fresh Meats!
on hand, at the Lowest Living Prices.

Orders solicited, and delivered free to all parts of the Town.

Farmers having fat stock to dispose of, will please leave their addresses.

TERMS, STRICTLY CASH.

FRED. SARJEANT.

Markdale, March 23, 1882. 80-ly

SEEING IS BELIEVING.

GENTLEMEN,—
If you want a first-class
Buggie or Wagon
call at
MCKENNA & MASON'S
CARRIAGE WORKS
MARKDALE.
They can supply you with anything from a Lumber Wagon
up to Extension Top Phæton.

To buy from them is to
SAVE MONEY!

They are both practical workmen, and employ none but
PRACTICAL WORKMEN

They guarantee their work
Second to none for Lightness of Draught and Superiority of Finish.

They use nothing but First-class White Oak for Wagons, and thrice Extra Second Growth Hickory for light work.

The immense amount of work turned out of McKenna & Mason's shop is sufficien proof of the wide reputation they enjoy for doing good work.
THE BEST IS THE CHEAPEST IN THE END
Poor cheap work we positively will not take.

Special attention given to Re-Trimming and Repainting all classes of Carriage Work.

Satisfaction guaranteed (or No Pay) in
HORSESHOEING

SHOP—On Mill Street opposite to Sproule's Hotel.

McKENNA & MASON.

THOS. MATHEWS,
HarnesS EstaBlishmenT!
MARKDALE.

EVERYTHING IN OUR LINE KEPT ON HAND OR MADE TO ORDER ON SHORT NOTICE.

LIVERY!
IN CONNECTION.

GEORGE WILSON,
Wholesale and Retail

{BUTCHER!}

BEEF, PORK OR MUTTON SUPPLIED. from a single pound to a whole carcass, at the lowest market prices.

FISH & FOWL IN THEIR SEASON

Farmers having Fat Cattle, Sheep, or Pigs to dispose of will do well to call at No. 9 Burns' Block, opposite the new Union Block.

Markdale, Oct. 25th, 1881

Nothing Like Leather.

M. M. M'LEOD,
MARKDALE,

NOT TO BE BEATEN!

All those who may have had the misfortune to have been born barefooted will bear in mind that we have just received the largest and best stock of leather ever before brought into Markdale, consisting of Spanish Sole, French Kip and Calf, and are now prepared to manufacture Ladies, Gents, Youths and Misses boots and shoes, from the stoga to the finest kid and prunella.

Sewed Work a Specialty.

All work warranted. Invisible patching also done here.

M. M. McLEOD.

Markdale, Sept. 19th, 1881.

The Child-Face.

At morn or eve, where'er I go,
In crowded streets or breezy hill,
In Summer rains or Winter snow,
A wistful child face haunts me still.

When all my life is out of tune,
And sorrow spreads her cheerless night,
It breaks forth like a gracious moon,
And gilds my gloomy clouds with light.

On the dull labors of the day
A glory-beam it seems to pour;
Forbids all wild thoughts when I pray,
And makes them purer than before.

I know not when I saw the face;
I wist not how or whence it came;
What'er the time, what'er the place,
It haunts and follows me the same.

Was it a vision gave it birth,
Or some chance memory that I keep?
Is it a habitant of earth,
Or but a dream-child born of sleep?

I cannot paint its form in words;
Its wondrous grace I cannot sing.
No more than can the April birds
Lay bare the mystery of Spring.

I feel that Face will never go
As long as I draw living breath;
'Twill be my guiding star below,
And then 'twill beacon me in death.

Perchance when I have crossed the stream,
And stand upon the holy hill,
I'll find 'twas truer than a dream,
That dear Child-face which haunts me still.

PLAYING COMET.

The Roman Candle Racket the Bad Boy Worked on his Pa.

"But, look-a-here," said the grocery man, as he gave the boy a little dried up lemon, about as big as a prune, and told him he was a terror, "what is the matter with your eye winkers and your hair? They seem to be burned off.

"O, thunder, didn't pa tell you about the comet exploding and burning us all? That was the worst thing since the flood, when Noar run the excursion boat from Kalamazoo to Mount Ararat. You see we had been reading about the comet which is visible at four o'clock in the morning, and I heard pa tell the hired girl to wake him an ma up when she got up to set the pancakes and go to early mass, so they could see the critter. The hired girl is a cathlick, and she don't make no fuss about it, but she has got more good square relidgin than a dozen like pa. It makes a good deal of difference how relidgin affects different people, don't it. Now pa's relidgin makes him wild, and he wants to kick my pants, and pull my hair, but the hired girl's relidgin makes her want to hug me, if I am abused, and she puts anarchy on my bruises and gives me pie. Pa wouldn't get up at four o'clock in the morning to go to early mass, unless he could take a fish pole along, and some angle worms. The hired girl prays when no one sees her but God, but pa wants to get a church full of sisterin', and pray loud, as though he was an auctioneer selling tin razors.

Well, when I heard pa tell the hired girl to wake him and ma up, I told her to wake me up about half an hour before she waked pa up, and then I got my chum to stay with me, and we made a comet to play on pa. You see my room is right over pa's room, and I got two lengths of stove pipe and covered them all over with phosphorus, so they looked just as bright as a comet. Then we got two Roman candles and a big sky rocket, and we were going to touch off the Roman candles and the sky rocket just as pa and ma got to looking at the comet. I didn't know that a sky rocket would kick back, did you? Well, you'd a died to see that comet. We tied a piece of white rubber garden hose to the stove pipe for a tail and went to bed, and when the girl woke us up we laid for pa and ma.

Pretty soon we heard pa's window open, and I looked out, and pa and ma had their heads and half their bodies out of the window. They had their night shirts on, and looked just like the picture of Millerites waiting for the world to come to an end. Pa looked up and seed the stovepipe, and he said, 'Hanner, for God's sake, look up there. That is the damdest comet I ever see. It is as bright as day. See the tail of it. Now that is worth getting up to see."

"Just then my chum lit the two Roman candles, and I touched off the rocket, and that's why my eyewinkers went. The rocket busted the joints of the stovepipe, and they fell down on pa, but ma got her head inside before the comet struck, and wasn't hurt; but the length of stovepipe struck pa endways on the neck and almost cut biscuit out of him, and the fire and sparks just poured down in his hair, and burned his nightshirt. Pa was scart. He thought the world was coming to an end, and the window came down on his back, and he began to sing, 'Earth's but a desert drear, Heaven is my home.'

"I see he was caught in the window, and I went down stairs to put out the fire on his night shirt, and put up the window to let him in, and he said: "My boy, your ma and I are going to heaven, but I fear you will go to the bad place," and I told him I would take my chances, and he better put on his pants if he was going anywhere that there would be liable to be ladies present, and when he got his head in ma told him the world was not coming to an end, but somebody had been setting off fireworks, and said she guessed it was their dear little boy, and when I saw pa feeling under the bed for a bedslat I got up stairs pretty previous. Now, and don't you forget it, and ma put cold cream on where the sparks burnt pa's shirt, and pa said another day wouldn't pass over his head before he had me in the reform school.

"Well, if I go to the reform school, somebody's got to pay attention, you can bet your liver. A boy can't have any fun these days without everybody thinks he is a heathen. What harm did it do to play comet? It's a mean father that won't stand a little schorchin' in the interests of science."

The boy went out, scratching the place where his eye-winkers were, and then the groceryman knew what it was that caused the fire engines to be out around at four o'clock in the morning, looking for a fire.—Milwaukee Sun.

Lord Coleridge, in his speech at the laying of the corner-stone of the extension of Albert Memorial Museum, Exeter, England, confessed himself in literature far behind those who have found Cowper commonplace Walter Scott dull, Milton pompous, and Wordsworth puerile.

SOME SMALL THINGS.

The shortest verse in the Bible is the thirty-fifth verse of the eleventh chapter of St. John.

The mule has the reputation of having the smallest and daintiest foot for its size of all hoofed animals.

The fact that the comet has already gone to pieces is a startling warning against the habit of early rising.

Diamond is the smallest moveable type in the world. It often gets under the fingernails of compositors.

Watches made as early as 1700 were so delicately constructed by hand, and so small as to easily fit on the top of a lead pencil.

Bismarck is easily offended. A Berlin butcher named one of his products "The Bismarck sausage," and for so small a thing was arrested.

It is worthy of remark that a mosquito has concealed in its bill six complete surgical instruments, each so minute as to be indiscernible to the naked eye.

The sting of a honey bee, when compared with the point of a fine needle under a powerful magnifying glass, is scarcely discernible. The point of the needle seemed to be about an inch in breadth.

Prof. Edward C. Pickering of Harvard College, says that in undertaking to measure the intensity of the light of the satellite of Mars a hole about the twenty-five hundredth part of an inch in diameter is required.

A very curious little toy is the microscope containing the Lord's Prayer. The whole is on a piece of glass not larger than the head of a pin, yet it is magnified to such an extent that it can be read easily by looking through the microscope.

The smallest hogs in the world are quartered in the Zoological Gardens in London. They came from Australia, and are known as the "pigmy hogs." They are well formed, are frisky, good natured, and make excellent pets. They are about the size of a wild hare.

The smallest baby was born in Chandelaria, Nev., a few weeks ago. The father and mother are strong and healthy, weighing 190 and 160 pounds. The child is a male, perfectly formed. When it first saw light it weighed eight ounces. Its face is about the size of an horse chestnut. The mother's wedding ring was pulled over its foot up to the knee. Three such babies could play hide and seek in a cigar box. It is in good health.

An ingenious mechanic of Jamestown, N. Y., has constructed a perfect locomotive, said to be the smallest in the world. The engine is only eight and a half inches long, with a tender twelve inches long. The pumps throw a drop of water per stroke. As many as 585 screws were required to put the parts together. The engine itself weighs a pound and a half, and the tender two pounds and a half ounces. The mechanic was at work upon the locomotive at intervals for eight years.

The city of Texarkana, though small in comparison to some of the other cities of the Union, is the most phenomenal. It lies in two States—Texas and Arkansas; hence its name. The State line runs through the centre of its chief street. Its population is 6,000. It is considered the gate way of the Southwest. It is only eight years old, but has the airs of a city of twenty-five years. Four railroads centre there, the climate is like that of Italy, and tramps are not tolerated. Money is plenty, and the people are prosperous.

The smallest steam engine in the world was made by D. A. A. Buck of Waterbury, Conn. The engine, boiler, governor, and pumps stand in a space seven-sixteenths of an inch square or an area of a gold dollar, and five eights of an inch high. The engine has 148 distinct pieces of machinery, held together by fifty-two screws. Three drops of water fill the boiler to overflowing. The diameter of its cylinder is a sixteenth of an inch. The length of stroke three thirty-seconds of an inch. The whole engine weighs three grains.

A Teetotal Family.

That even so stern an institution as total abstinence has its humorous side is demonstrated by the recent family experiences of a young Palatinate German who emigrated in order to join his uncle, aunt, and cousins, prosperous settlers near Lancaster, in the State of Pennsylvania. During his first meal at his kinsman's table, he observed that wine and beer were conspicuous by their absence, while teeming water bottles were, so to speak, plainly visible to the naked eye. An attempt on his part to comment upon this unconvivial circumstance was cut short by the remark, "We are all temperance folk here; no spirituous liquors enter the house!" After dinner the "old man" went up stairs to take a snooze, the girls started off to Sunday school, and the boys lounged away to smoke in the stable. As soon as "aunt," found herself alone in the kitchen, she summoned her youthful nephew thither, extracted a bottle of cherry bounce from a dark nook in one of the cupboards, and held it out to him, saying, "Here, sonny, take a drink, my old man is such a strict teetotler that I don't dare to let him know I keep a drop of the right sort to use medicinally." A few minutes later the head of the family called his nephew up to his bed-room, where he promptly produced a gallon jar of whiskey from a portmanteau under the bed, and pouring out a handsome dram, observed, "Teetotalism don't prevent me from keeping some decent stuff in case of illness; but mind you don't let on to the old woman!" Strolling into the stables, shortly after this second surprise, his cousins beckoned the ingenuous immigrant into a barn, where after fumbling about in the straw for a few seconds, they handed him a black bottle, with the encouraging words, "Take a pull at that, cousin; right Bourbon it is; but not a word to the old folks, for two more infatuated teetotlers don't live!"

The betrothal of the Duke of Genoa with the Princess Isabel of Bavaria and of the Empress of Austria, is officially announced.

Biliousness, Indigestion, Constipation—all forms of Dyspepsia yield at once to a few doses of Zopesa, the new compound from Brazil. A 10 cent sample proves it.

HOW THEY DRESS IN PARIS.

"CRINOLINE IS COMING!"

Only the most energetic action can avert the catastrophe. Is it vain to call upon the leaders of the mode to bestir themselves and issue an ediet to the effect that those who wear an exaggerated crinolette shall not be considered to be among the elect of society? In the rush after novelties, good taste is forgotten and comfort ignored. Winter mantles are prepared in the richest of materials. Among these is plush, plain, striped, brocaded and in another variety in which the pile appears to be cut away in such a manner as to produce a regular design. The majority of mantles are long, but ladies who are not in training as weight-carriers may wear them three-quarter length this winter without being hopelessly unfashionable. Velvet is much used, and the soft twilled satin known as Rhadames.

OTTOMAN SILKS ARE IN IMMENSE FAVOR.

partly for their incomparable softness and partly for their richness of aspect. These silks are ribbed across from selvage to selvage, and so great is their popularity that woollen materials are produced in the same style. Mantles made of these silks are elaborately trimmed with richly beaded passementerie and chenile fringe or marabout, or the small feathers of the homely rooster, dyed to an intense black. The plumage of this barndoor-gentleman is much in demand, whole birds being made of his smaller feathers, and used for trimming hats or muffs. He can be thus utilized without causing a pang to the most tender-hearted, except, perhaps a vegetarian, who might object to the slaughter of poultry for the table as humanitarians object to the killing of birds for the toilet. These small feathers, slight and glossy, laid closely over each other, form a graceful trimming round the outlines of a warmly-lined mantle, and are as becoming as fur itself to the wearer.

CHENILLE FRINGES ARE SOFTER AND RICHER than ever before. They harmonize admirably with plush, and assort well with velvet, though in both cases the beauty of the union is enhanced by the addition of well-cut jet. Both jet and chenille fringes are occasionally made in round balls of graduated sizes, as large as a billiard ball at the edge, and about the size of a marble at the top. The effect of these is extremely rich, whether in jet or in chenille. Plain silks have reappeared as candidates for public favor. Black silk of this order has been in disgrace for some years, and has but bided its time to come forward and put satin and moire in their right placce as its inferiors.

NOTHING EQUALS A GOOD BLACK SILK.

It is more becoming than any of the varieties of satin that have endeavored vainly to fill its place. Where a moire would be too elaborate for this occasion a plain silk is exactly suitable. In fact, it so completely out-shone other fabrics that it met the usual fate of superior excellence, and fell into the hands of calumniators. Somebody bought a black silk which "wore shiny," and rushed into print with her woes. Somebody else followed suit, with a long story about the manufacturers weighting the silks to make them stiff and rich. A third somebody foolishly tried to answer arguments that were unanswerable for the simple reason that they rested upon false premises and the feminine public, with many a sigh, took up the parable and bought satins and moires, finding them quite as "shiny" as silks. What will not grow shiny if friction be applied? The poor clerk knows to his cost that even cloth is not exempt. Cashmere wears in the same way. How should silk be expected to be exempt, especially when foolish bargain-hunters insisted upon buying those whose superior appearance belied their low price?

The Telephone in Egypt.

The mercantile and banking community were prompt to see and seize on the advantages it would afford them, and I recorded 50 annual subscribers to the exchange in Alexandria alone, before I had commenced to stretch a wire. The earlier exhibitions presented many comic features, as may be imagined, taking into account the composition of the audience, native and exotic. Suspicions of fraud, on the part of the electrician, were at first universal, and found expression on one occasion in a very amusing way. At an exhibition at the house of the Italian Consul-General, the Chevalier de Martino, (who kindly allowed an instrument to be put up in connection with a friend's,) an Egyptian official who had been educated in Europe, and who had loudly declared he would unveil the imposture, while conversation through the telephone was going on, stooped down, and with a cunning leer on his face, lifted the cloth of the table on which the instrument stood, to exhibit the accomplice he supposed was concealed beneath. His change of countenance, when he found no one there, and was greeted with a roar of laughter at his discomfiture, was as comical as any theatrical exhibition. Needless to say that Pasha did not appear at subsequent seances. The Chief of Police at Alexandria also at first declined to test the matter for himself, on the ground that we might be able to talk the Frank languages through our "box," but "how could it speak Arabic?" His incredulity on that point gave way to wild astonishment on his part and that of his officers, when four of them, stationed at different parts of the city, conversed with each other in their native tongue.—Edwin de Leon, in Fraser's Magazine.

A Heartless Woman.

A few months ago a young woman in Baltimore, named Miss Mary Judge, was assaulted by two men. Her screams brought a young man to her assistance, who was shot and killed for his interference. His murderer was arrested, and the young woman held as witness. His trial beginning this week, a clergyman was hastily sent for on Saturday to marry the witness to the accused prisoner. On learning the circumstances, however, the clergyman refused, and the court on Monday ordered the Sheriff to prevent the marriage. The object of the marriage was to disqualify the young woman as a witness against him, by making her his wife. Her ingratitude toward the memory of the man who rescued her at the cost of his own life is, it is to be hoped, an uncommon, as it is an unnatural, exhibition of human, or woman, weakness.

OFFICIAL FRENCH IN CANADA.

An American View of What is Due to the French.

The official use of the French language in the Dominion is declared by some Canadians to be little more than a sentimental affair; but a French journal of Montreal soberly discusses the circumstances that a letter from the Department of Customs came to that newspaper office printed in English instead of in French. The French citizens are guaranteed the use of their native language in official communications, but the practical English argue that while this is true, the invariable enforcement of the law would entail unnecessary expense. For example, the document which the Montreal journal makes the basis of its criticism was a circular addressed to collectors at the several ports of entry. The predominant language is French at only a few of these ports, and the extra printing and translation, it is urged, would have been a superfluity. The example is quoted of the United States, with its large foreign population, where the English is the official language, though at certain points the English-using population is in a minoority. The main objection however, made by the opponents of the official use of French is that it emphasizes the distinction in nationality which the Canadian union seeks to make altogether subordinate. The fusion of English and French is hoped for by the use of a common tongue, as the varied nationalities represented in the United States are brought nearer by speaking and writing in English. Apart from these matter-of-fact and not unreasonable arguments, it may be confessed that much sympathy, even if it be a "sentimental affair," goes to the race descendants of the men who so early possessed Canada. The history of that country entitles the French people to feel that in a special sense the soil is theirs, and that their language, which long ago was the recognized vehicle of communication in that region, ought not to be wholly replaced by the language of their conquerors. Contributing to the population of all the provinces, the citizens of French origin in the province of Quebec number not far from 900,000, out of a population of between 1,100,000 and 1,200,000. On the score of the proportion of inhabitants, the French may well ask to have the law securing the use of their language kept from being a dead letter. Since that spring, nearly three hundred and fifty years ago, when Jacques Cartier took possession of the lands in the name of his sovereign, the New France has perpetuated the traditions and echoed the speech of the Mother Country. English supremacy is complete, the French citizens may cheerfully confess; but naturally enough, they ask whether almost the last official custom which testifies to the period when France was mistress of the country must be put aside. The romance of Canada may be a trifle in some English eyes, but our own historian has reproduced the pathos and heroism of those far-off days too clearly to allow us to turn lightly away from any usage which serves to remind us of the men and women who illustrated so variously and joyously the fervour of the martyr and the courage of the soldier on the soil of new France.—Boston Advertiser.

A Society Swell.

A correspondent of the Washington Star gives the following extraordinary description of what he calls a New York society swell. The young man (he is about thirty) did not walk easily. He had on a pair of dead black shoes, with untanned leather tops. They were decorated by fancy stripes along the side of the foot and over the toe, and were so absurdly narrow that they looked like deformed feet, and rendered the movements of the young man far from graceful, though he struggled hard to preserve appearances. His legs were covered by a pair of trousers that were simply amazing, so tight were they cut. It would almost be impossible to sit down without slitting them across the knee, as far as can be judged from appearances.

They were as tight as eel-skin all the way down, fitting round the ankle as snug as a stocking. This remarkable expose of a man's development is not advisable when his legs are not up to the standard. The trousers in question were a very light green with dark stripes. Above them was a vest that stretched from the chin to a line just even with the hip bones, and was cut straight across. The vest was of light material and looked odd, it was so extremely short. The cut-away coat was bottle green, and fitted like a jersey. It was, indeed a trial of the tailor's art, in one sense, but it was far too tight to be becoming. The sleeves were nearly as tight as the trousers, and the coat tails were very long, hanging as far down beoind as the knee. He wore a collar that lapped over in front, and was certainly higher than any other collar I ever saw in America.

It forced his chin up in the air, and caused the sunlight to scintillate on his single glass. Around the neck was a green scarf with a hound's head in diamonds for a pin. Above it all was one of the huge English Derby hats with a great curling brim and heavy crown. He wore yellow gloves and carried a stick with a twisted handle by its lower end, so that the handle dropped nearly to his feet. The vacant stare completed the effect, and he limped along while the others envied him. This is no ideal sketch, but a faithful picture of a leading society man in New York in the year of our Lord 1882.

Terrible Falls.

A few weeks ago two men engaged in erecting an iron railway bridge over a river in Missouri got into a quarrel about a hammer. In the course of it one seized the other, both clinched, and in the effort of one to throw the other over the bridge, both went down, striking the rocks one hundred feet below and were killed by the fall. Last week at Auburn, Maine, two hod-carriers renewed an old quarrel on the third floor of a new building, and "closed in" with one another as they stood on the top of the lofty wall. Both men lost their balance, and clasped in each other's embrace, both pitched over the wall striking the ground with a fearful thud, in an instant becoming mangled corpses. These high and unstable places are hazardous spots for the indulgence of this sort of thing. Those who let their angry passions rise had better stand on the ground while doing so. At this rate the "falling off" of the population will become very marked.

SOME OLD THINGS.

The yew in Tortworth churchyard, Gloucestershire, is said to date back to the time of Julius Cæsar.

At Sea Cliff, L. I., Levi Thompson, a veteran of the war of 1812, celebrated his 100th birthday about two weaks ago.

A Milwaukee woman has kept a kettle of boiling water on the stove for the past twenty-two years in order to scald pigs.

Henry Stevens, proprietor of the Bellstone Foundry at Reading Pa., has a wrought iron ploughshare that bears the date 1742.

J. H. Bemmer of Brattleboro, Vt., has a rose bush 90 years old, from which more than two bushels of buds have been plucked this season.

As early as 1733 the sale and consumption of whiskey was prohibited in Georgia, then a colony under British rule. The act, however, was repealed in 1742.

Richard Coughlin of Paterson, aged 80 years, was the first conductor on the Paterson and Hudson River Railroad, and is said to be the oldest conductor in the world.

The oldest printer actively engaged in his profession is Grandpa Prescott, of Utica, who at the age of 90 years sets type and works working day in the composing room of the Corning Gazette.

Consul Stevens writes from China that the chain pumps, which were sold largely in this country not many years ago, have been in use in China over two thousand years. Double-headed tacks, too, have been known there for many centuries.

Mr. Seivert of Reading, Pa., has a copper plate that was cast in 1742. It has a scene representing the Pharisee and the Publican praying in the Temple, with an appropriate inscription underneath. Another plate was cast in 1763, and also has a peculiar scriptural scene.

Mr. Samuel Lehman, near Strasburg, Pa., has a clock which he has owned over a century. On the woodwork of the case are the figures 1766 and on the works the date indicating that the machinery has been in motion for 150 years. The clock is a perfect timekeeper.

In Admiral Frederick de Luthe's fleet he losses one of her oldest sailors and scientists. Born in 1797 he made the voyage around the world with Capt. Julownin in 1821, and soon after began that service of remarkable Arctic explorations which won him the applause of the scientific world.

While Thomas case, Jr., of Birdsboro, Pa., was walking through a field on his father's farm, he found two coins. Upon rubbing the dirt one was found to be of silver, of the size of a quarter dollar, bearing the date 1722. The second was of copper and was as large as a halfpenny, and dated 1694.

Austrian Rules for Theatres.

As a result of costly experience, the government of Austria has adopted some excellent rules regarding theatres. Hence the buildings must be detached. Between the auditorium and the stage there must be a wall at least 20 feet high and 2 inches thick placed above the roof for the use in isolating the stage from the rest of the house in case of fire. The stage must be of sufficient height for the curtain to be lowered without being rolled. No one is to be allowed to live in the theatre, and the carpenter's shops, the stage appliances, and the refreshment bars are to be outside the building. The latter rule must be complied with by the managers and owners of the theatres now in existence. All the scenes worn by the actors and actresses are to be dipped in a preparation which makes them more or less fire-proof, and no explosive matter is under any pretence to be kept in the theatre. Very strict provisions are made with regard to the seating of the audience, abundant room must be left for egress, and the Prefect of Police is to have the power of deciding how many firemen shall be allotted to each theatre. Every manager will be held personally responsible for the carrying out of all these regulations down to the smallest detail, and will be severely punished if upon the very first alarm of fire he fails to give the public timely notice for their departure without disorder or panic.

A Noteworthy Anniversary.

The 15th of last month was a noteworthy date, being 300th anniversary of the introduction of the Gregorian calendar. It was the work of Pope Gregory XIII., who in the year 1582, being struck by the fact that the vernal equinox, which at the time of the Council of Nice, A. D. 325, had occurred on March 21, then happened on the 11th, caused ren days to be thrown out of the current year—the day after Thursday, October 4, being declared Oct. 15. This alteration in the style was immediately adopted by the Roman Catholic countries of Europe, and even in England an attempt, of which little notice has been taken, was made to introduce it two years later. On the 3d of March, 1584-5, a bill was read for the first time in the House of Lords entitled "An act given her Majesty authority to alter and new make a calender according to the calender used in other countries." It was read a second time on the 18th of the same month, and then the project was shelved for nearly two centuries. It was not till the year 1752, in the reign of George II., that the Gregorian calendar was adopted in England, and by that time it had become necessary to drop eleven days. The 3rd of September was declared the 14th, so that the month contained nineteen days.

Selling Babies.

An English newspaper published in China takes a writer in Temple Bar to task for the assertion that it is no rare thing to see basketsful of female Chinese babies shipped down from Canton to Hong Kong for sale at prices varying from two to five dollars apiece. He says: "It would be interesting to know whether the author of this romance was ever in China. There is a time honored legend that carts go the rounds of Pekin every morning at daybreak to collect the babies that have been exposed during the night. We never met with a foreigner who had actually witnessed this edifying sight; but that may be accounted for by the fact that foreign residents at the capital are not in the habit of getting up at daybreak."

OUR YOUNG FOLKS.

We must all Scratch.

Said the first little chicken,
With a queer little squirm,
"I wish I could find
A fat little worm."

Said the next little chicken,
With an odd little shrug,
"I wish I could find
A fat little bug."

Said the third little chicken,
With a sharp little squeal,
"I wish I could find
Some nice yellow meal."

Said the fourth little chicken,
With a small sigh of grief,
"I wish I could find
A green little leaf."

Said the fifth little chicken,
With a faint little moan,
"I wish I could find
A wee gravel stone."

"Now, see here," said the mother,
From the green garden patch,
"If you want any breakfast,
Just come here and scratch."

Callie to the Rescue.

It was such a lovely day! Callie had been out since six o'clock in the sweet

First he had a splendid swim. Then played ball, fed a pet horse, and was all out.

He sat down on the piazza railing to rest, and watch the beautiful river which flowed at the house. Little Rose came to him with her hands full of flowers, begging him to play with her. Callie was none too tired to amuse his little sister Rosy Posy, and began to tell her a story about the fairy who lived in the clover blossom.

Just then they heard a cry from some boys who were under a tree near by. They watched for a moment before they could tell what had happened. Then Callie took Rosy in his arms and ran to the spot. What do you think they saw?

A dear pussy cat, the pet of the children, and a family of five kittens. They were the delight of the house. Pussy had climbed into a high tree. I am afraid that she was out to steal a bird. She had fallen right into a kite-string which had caught there, and it had twisted around her neck till it nearly strangled her.

The boys were much excited, but the tree was too high for them to climb. Poor Rosy dropped upon the ground sobbing and crying, while Pussy kicked and kicked but could not escape. Callie at once saw that something must be done, and ran for the gardener. The man brought a ladder and cut the string, lifting the cat so that she could not fall. He gave her to Rose, who hugged and kissed her till she almost choked her again. She took her back to her kittens; but they did not know what a narrow escape their dear mamma had had.

You may be sure there was nothing too nice for Pussy to eat after this. Rose went without a peach, to give it to her; but she could not eat a bit of it. Her saucer was always full of rich milk, and if she was not made sick by candy, it was because she had been given one not to eat it.

KITTIE BROWN.

A Fanny Little Mother.

Peep! Peep! Peep! Ten little orphan babies all crying at once, and each one trying to cry louder than the other.

What should be done with them? Poor mother Hen Blacky had been killed, and who was to take care of her ten baby-chickens? Hen Speckle had twelve children of her own,—as many as she could cover. No room for the orphans there. Hen Whitey's eight children were so large and so ill-natured they would not let the downy little new-comers so much as look in their coop.

Hen Topknot, who had but four in her brood, would not hear of adopting any more, and taking care of the little strangers. She pecked at them so sharply that the poor little things ran off, and stood in a groupe by themselves in a corner of the chicken-yard, crying as loud as they could cry.

Susie felt like crying too. She was so sorry for the motherless ones. She took up the chickens in her apron, where they cuddled down, glad to get warm, and glad to hide away from cross Hen Topknot.

"I'll be your mother, myself," said Susie.

And a good mother she was, too. She soon taught the ten little black and white and speckled chickens to scratch for worms. She put them to bed every night in an old basket, and covered them up warm. In the morning how glad they were to see their new little mother! They ran to her wherever she was when they were tired. And such a funny sight it was to see those ten chickens fly into Susie's lap, creep under her apron, and cuddle against her neck with little cooing sounds!

They never knew any other mother, and they never wanted a better one. Susie never forgot to feed her babies, and they grew as fast and were as fine-looking as the other chickens, who had hen-mothers to take care of them. And Susie learned how to be thoughtful and kind to helpless things. But one does not often find a little girl who is mother to ten little chickens.

LUCY RANDOLPH FLEMING.

The Man Who Opens the Car Window.

"I had a funny experience to-day," remarked Fenderson. "I had taken my seat in the car and opened the window, when all of a sudden a fellow back of me leaned forward and said: 'I beg your pardon, sir, but did you ask me if the dust annoyed me?' I didn't know what to make of him, but I shook my head and took up my paper. Five minutes later, blamed if that chap didn't touch me on the back again and say: 'Did you ask me if the wind was too much for me?' And I hadn't said a blessed word to him. Guess the fellow was drunk or crazy."

The boys said they guessed he must have been, and then began to laugh. But Fenderson couldn't see what in time they found to laugh at.

Three hundred dollars a year gives a spacious and elegant residence in Azores. Servant wages are $2 to $5 a month; one cent a pound buys the finest grapes; meat and chickens cost about 50 per cent. less than here; fish is excellent and abundant, and vegetables are plenty and cheap.

A gentleman leaning against one of the iron pillars in Dooner's cafe on Saturday evening, was observed to pitch suddenly forward, and nearly fall on the marble floor. He turned very pale, and looked about him to see whether his involuntary action had been noticed. It did not appear to have been, and he walked back to the pillar and examined it critically. Then he walked around it and looked up to the ceiling. He looked at the floor, and then, to satisfy himself whether the post had moved from its place and kicked him, he pressed hard against it with the palm of his hand.

In another instant the gentleman was sprawling on the floor. He got up, and finding that he was beginning to attract attention, he walked back and sought Mr. Dooner, "Is this place haunted," he asked, "or have you a familiar spirit which knocks people down?" Then he explained what had taken place. "Nonsense," said Mr. Dooner, "show me the post and I'll hug it if you say so." Mr. Dooner was shown the post, and he put his arms around it. But it was not for long. In less than two seconds Mr. Dooner was where his guest had been a few minutes before. At the same time a howl of rage was heard in the bar-room. Mr. Dooner ran back. A man was standing there with a half emptied glass of wine in in his hand. "What does this mean?" he demanded." I attempted to take a drink and a shock went through me like a galvanic battery. Do you—" He was interrupted by another man, who entered suddenly, with a yell and muttered imprecation, "What's the matter here?" he asked rather angrily, "I put my hand on an iron post out there," pointing to the cafe, "and I believe I'm paralyzed."

By this time a group of excited men had gathered around. "The place is bewitched," said one, "or has been magnetized," suggested another. "No, gentlemen," ventured a little man, who was smiling broadly, "it is nothing of the kind. These gentlemen have all received an electric shock. Make an investigation and see if I am not right."

The hotel proprietor sent for the manager of the Electric Power Company on Arch street above Tenth. He came, and in less than twenty minutes had solved the mystery. It was found that a steel screw, from which depended an electric light, had been pushed too far through the lath and plaster and came in contact with an iron girder. The girder rests on a pillar, and the base of the pillar rested on another girder beneath the floor. The gentleman who were knocked down had completed the circuit by touching the post, and the man who thought he was drinking molten lead did the same by placing his foot on the metal rail in front of the bar, after he had lifted the glass to his lips. The screw was given a half turn back, the circuit was broken and everybody was relieved.—Philadelphia Press.

Amusing Incident of the War.

An American paper says:—When Mrs. Butler, or somebody else, comes to paint the history of the Egyptian campaign, it is safe to bet that one of its most striking episodes will go unnoticed—the charge of Lieutenant Lang at Chalouf. He had a band of blue-jackets from the Mosquito and a small party of Highlanders, and was endeavouring to turn the Egyptian flank, when he found his advance barred by the Freshwater Canal. There was a boat on the further side, and stripping off his clothes and accoutrements, the young officer plunged in, swam over and secured it, and sculling it back, crossed his men and deployed them just as the Egyptians perceived their danger. Appreciating the value of the initiative, and "not deeming it consistent with the traditions of her Majesty's service" to wait to dress himself, Lieutenant Lang caught up his sword, and, clothed in his boots and a cholera-belt of red flannel, headed a successful charge on the enemy. From one point of view this exploit was up to the Berserker standard, from another it quite outstripped. The colored population of the West Indies upon one memorable occasion were terrified by the advent of the terrible Highlanders, who were "in such a hurry to kill the poor black men that they hadn't waited to put on their trousers," but here was a foeman still more eager for the fray. It was, as we have already said, a gallant exploit.

Hindu Hospitality.

A correspondent of the Missionary Herald says hospitality, as we understand the word, is a thing practically unknown in India. This is due to two causes; the selfishness of the Hindus is so marked as to be called a national peculiarity. The social atmosphere, as one writer says, stands at freezing temperature. The people have a strictly selfish aim in every act of charity, and even in their offerings to the gods. Their motto seems to be, "Look out for yourself, but never do anything for which you are not likely to be repaid." I have many times seen a whole family sick, and perhaps, almost starving, and a neighbour in the next yard would never for a moment consider it his duty to help, if he was not a relative, or of the same caste, even though it was to save life.

A little while ago a young girl, the only child of a widowed mother, was burned to death and the family who lived in that compound, of whom we inquired the next day, said they had heard of such a thing, but it seems that they had not troubled themselves to step across the yard to inquire or to offer any assistance to the lonely mother. "Why should we?" they asked. "She is not our relative." Again, the caste system has encouraged and fostered exclusiveness in every circle; for not only are there different castes, but every caste is divided into innumerable divisions and subdivisions, none of which are on a social equality.

REFLECTING A RAY OF SUNSHINE A HUNDRED MILES.—An interesting experiment in telegraphy, or signalling by sunshine, has been made in Egypt. Col. Keyser ascended one of the pyramids near Cairo, setting up a heliographic mirror, reflecting a ray of sunshine all the way to Alexandria, a distance of some 120 miles. The signals, appearing like pin points of brightness, were distinctly readable on the coast.—Photographic News.

In the high school of Dedham, Mass., that experiment is being made of using daily newspapers instead of text books in the reading class. The principal thinks that the plan is successful.

STANLEY.

Return of the African Explorer to Europe—His Recent Explorations in Central Africa.

Discovery of a New and Important Lake—Battling Against Difficulties, etc.

Mr. Stanley is once more in Europe, and at the present time is in Brussels, the guest of his Majesty King Leopold II., under whose auspices he has for the two years past been carrying on his labors on the Congo. He was received at the railroad depot by the secretary of the African International Society, and since then (that was a week ago) has had many audiences with his august patrons, to whom he has made a detailed report of his African experiences and the work carried out in the interests of Le Comite d'Etude du Haut-Congo, of which society his Majesty is, as of the International African society, president. Mr. Stanley has besides been kept very busy by the visits of interviewers for French papers, which, since his arrival in Europe, have been filled with the doings of a certain M. de Brazza, an explorer in the service of the French section of the African International Society, who says that he has in a way forestalled Mr. Stanley, and has annexed a large territory on the right or north bank of the Congo, on Stanley Pool, and now awaits the sanction of his Government to what he has done. A reporter of the Herald has had a long talk with Stanley. We make the following extracts:

ON THE CONGO AGAIN.

"Arriving on the Congo," Mr. Stanley said, "there were four hostile lines to be met and passed before I could commence work. There were the white traders, who naturally regarded all new comers as competitors and rivals. They would not, indeed, proceed to violence or acts of open hostility, but they would be quite ready to do any harm in a roundabout or indirect manner, driving you away, if possible, by fear, not relishing the idea of new rivals on ground they had hitherto considered as sacred to themselves. Then there were the natives who live in the neighborhood of the white traders. These are the trade-feeders to the white men, and they have very naturally no desire to welcome you to the interior to carry on barter and trade where before you came they had been accustomed to buy and sell and make profits for themselves out of the natives more distant from the coast than themselves. After these native traders there are the Babwendes and Bacongos, who go up as far as Stanley Pool, and buy the ivory there as it is brought by the native traders who come down the river from the far interior, disposing of it in their turn to the natives dwelling nearer the white traders. And then there are the people at Stanley Pool itself, the Bateks and Bankunas, who have been accustomed to keep small stores of beads and brassware and cloth, and to buy ivory brought down to Stanley Pool. So, you see, you have four lines of opposition to contend with. And these lines, or obstacles, have been the cause, in fact, why Africa on the west coast has been so long prevented from enjoying the blessings of honourable trade with white men; just in the same way the slave traders on the west coast prevented the early travellers from proceeding inland to discover the grand lakes of Central Africa. Added to all this it may be said that a foreign expedition like ours had to meet the hostility of other European nations, notably the French on the Gaboon, and the Portuguese at Angola, who, though they have not proceeded to any overt acts seizing without saying By your leave! or anything of that kind, doubtless have entertained and still entertain hopes in the future of being able to extend their territory, provided it is not taken up in the interests of white men.

A NEW LAKE DISCOVERED.

"After this work was done, I proceeded up river and began to explore the Kwango, the last great affluent of the Congo on the south or left bank. I proceeded up this river for about a hundred and fifty miles, and having seen that it was navigable still further, I went a few miles and lo! a fine, noble lake opened to my view. This I circumnavigated and found it to be about seventy miles long and from six to thirty miles in its extreme breadth. The natives dwelling on the banks were wild, but as we had a steamer there was no necessity to indulge in any act that would be likely to cause us on our side or them on theirs to feel embittered by our visit. To this lake I gave the name of King Leopold II., in honour of his Majesty the King of the Belgians and the main promoter of this great and unique enterprise for the introduction of civilization into Africa. The privations we endured during the circumnavigation of the lake were very great, our provisions having fallen short, since we had been induced to prolong our exploration beyond our means and beyond what prudence would have suggested. Had we known that such a lake was there we should have made better preparation; but we were so led away by the discovery that for three days we had absolutely nothing to eat. This and an attack of bilious fever gave me another severe illness, and as it was accompanied by complications of other diseases, such as swelling of the lower limbs, rheumatism, etc., and skilful nursing was not to be had, I unwillingly abandoned the prosecution of the enterprise and returned to the coast. My promise had simply been that I would launch a steamer on the Upper Congo, and would come to the establishment of the first station there, which promise, of course, have been seen, was faithfully carried out. What I had done since then—namely, the establishment of a fifth station and the exploration of the Kwango—was only due to the great and excessive interest I took in the work. On my return westward I found all the stations in flourishing order, natives all satisfied, Europeans agreeable, coloured men all in good health, the stations filled to repletion with good and everything in a prosperous state. From the Kwango down to Manyanga I met the chiefs of the Dutch mission, who were following our steps slowly into the interior of Africa. Only when the parties who had been driven out from Stanley Pool by M. de Brazza's sergeant. They now took advantage of my presence at Manyanga to appeal to me for assistance, which I readily accorded, as is in evidence at the Baptist Union lately held in London, when the chief described how much he was indebted to me for assistance."

A Clipper Ship's Performance.

Captain Rodney Baxter, of Boston, writes: "About the time of the close of the Crimea war I commanded the clipper ship Flying Scud. One day at 3 p. m., we took our departure from the Highlands of Never Sink, New York harbor, for Marseilles. The wind was blowing a good breeze from south southeast, so that we could carry our topgallant sails fore and aft. After passing Georges Bank, east of Nantucket, the wind canted to the southeast and headed us off our course, the ship making from twelve to fifteen miles an hour. The fourth day out we ran into a calm and got soundings on the Grand Banks. The southeast winds had forced us from our course farther north than we had wished to go. We lay becalmed from 8 o'clock a. m. till 3 p. m., the wind then breezed up from the southwest so that all our canvas would draw. The seventh day from New York we passed Corvo, the most northwest island of the Azores. The day before we sighted this island we had a fine chance to learn our position. We got good observations from two good chronometers and clear horizon for meridian altitudes, so that we knew our position exactly. We were 225 miles from Corvo, where the observations were taken at noon; we made and passed the island at 3 p. m., running the distance in 15 hours, averaging a mile in four minutes, or fifteen miles an hour. From here to the Straits of Gibraltar we had baffling winds and calms, but passed the rock the fourteenth day from New York. From Gibraltar to Marseilles we had head winds and calms, but arrived there the nineteenth day out. The papers reported this to be the quickest passage from the United States. They also said that the bark Race Horse made the passage from Boston in twenty-two days. The Scud registered 1,800 tons, and was a full rigged clipper ship. I think her main yard was ninety feet, carried sky sails fore and aft. Her model was excellent, and showed that perfect symmetry which a sailor admires. I commanded her for several years, and no ship ever passed her bound the same way, either by or before the wind. At the time I have reference to, we were loaded deep with corn in the lower hold, and 6,000 barrels of flour between deck, and we drew twenty-two feet. Our crew consisted of forty men before the mast, three mates, cook and steward.—Boston Traveller.

A Tale of a Ship.

In the good city of Liverpool there were and are two young men, who, like several other young men in the world, felt that their abilities were not properly appreciated. They received a trifle of about one hundred a year in a "blue nose" office, one of those mysterious places where brokers and agents do all kinds of original little operations in the hope of making some money. Perhaps it was the genius of the firm which they served, or still more probably their own unaided talents which led these two young men—Orestes and Pylades as we may call them for convenience sake—to conclude that, as no sphere of distinction could be found in the ordinary channels of commerce, they would invent one. And they did. They heard of a ship—call her the Mary Jane—which had once been a schooner and which was then nothing in particular. She belonged to a gentleman who for a variety of reasons, more or less personal, desired to get some money in a hurry. He was willing to sell the vessel for £250—positively only £250. Unfortunately, Orestes and Pylades could not raise 250 shillings between them. In old-fashioned times this would have been an awkward position of affairs, but of what use is high finance unless it teaches young fellows earning less than two pounds a week how to buy ships for nothing? They signed a memorandum of contract to buy the vessel. Then they advertised for a captain, who was obliged to invest £200 in the venture. They found a man without the least difficulty. He paid his money, and Orestes and Pylades thereupon went to work to find a cargo. This, too, was promptly obtained, and £650 was advanced by way of freight. The Mary Jane went to the bottom of the deep blue sea soon afterwards. It was an accident, of course. These little mishaps befall men of the highest respectability. The Board of Trade allowed the ship to leave the port. There was an end of the matter, so far as Orestes and Pylades were concerned. Not quite though. The cargo proved to be insured for £2,000, and the ship for £1,500. This excellent couple are now the reputed owners of two steamers, and if they live long enough they may both fill the mayoral chair in their native city. Lancashire loves self-made men.—British Trade Journal.

The Postal Union.

During the year 1881 the International Postal Union was reinforced by the accession of Chili, Columbia, the Little Antilles, Grenade, St. Lucia, Tobago, the Turks Islands, Barbados, St. Vincent, Guatemala, and Paraguay, while since the commencement of the present year, Hawaii and Nicaragua have also joined. In round numbers, the amount of business carried on during 1881 included the transmission of 3,865,000,000 letters, 649,000,000 postal cards, 3,000,000 cards with paid answers, 1,953,000,000 newspapers, 1,023,000,000 printed packets, 64,000,000 patterns 98,000,000 small parcels. The post-office orders granted were 95,600,000, representing a value of 8,045,000,000f. Daily throughout the globe, the Postal Union expedites upwards of 13,000,000 letters and post-cards, without counting printed matter, which the distribution of which [illegible] 3,446,000,000 letters in Europe, 2,000,000,000 in America, 76,000,000 in Asia, 86,000,000 in Australia and 11,000,000 in Africa.

The Journalists and authors of Germany are united by a stronger band of good fellowship than those of any other country. Every year they meet in convention, coming together from all parts of the country, and have banquets, excursions, and other enjoyments. The local authorities in the places where they assemble usually help to entertain them and show them honor. Their latest convention met in Brunswick. A notable feature of these assemblies is as it to be the large proportion of delegates who belong to the fair sex. The number of women writers is said to be growing every year, and it is thought that if they keep on increasing in the same ratio future conventions may find them in the majority.

MURDER OF AN AUSTRIAN EXPLORER.

Killed by the Head Hunters of North Borneo.

From Singapore we learn that Mr. Witti (formerly Lieutenant of the Austrian army), an explorer in the service of the British North Borneo Company, has been treacherously murdered by "head hunters," who also killed several of his native attendants. Mr. Witti had been making his way to the head of the Sibuco River. This region is quite beyond the active administration of the British North Borneo Company. The Governor was not aware that Mr. Witti intended to make so hazardous a journey.

Mr. Witti being an experienced traveller, a brave man, and on good terms with the natives generally, there was no reason to fear that he might not go through the very heart of the country without molestation. Near the head of the Sibuco River he would be on the frontier of Dutch Borneo, and in a region where Mr. Carl Bock found the natives unusually savage and unfriendly. Witti had a party of seventeen men. He divided them. Some nine or ten were told off to attend to the boats. They were navigating a river, and Witti had bought boats from the natives. The other men remained to push on ahead in company with the explorer.

The natives had shown no disposition to hostility. The local chiefs had hospitably entertained Witti, which is generally a guarantee of friendship. While his little party were preparing to move forward Witti sat down to make some notes in his diary. Suddenly, from an ambush in the river, some 300 natives, armed with poisoned arrows and spears, rushed upon Witti and his men. Three of the latter fell almost immediately.

Witti defended himself with his revolver, and killed two of his assailants. The rest crowded upon him, however, and speared him to death. The others of the party had already run away, one of them, who was carrying Witti's Winchester rifle, taking it off in his flight. From a hiding place they saw one of the attacking party decapitate Witti, while others cut off the lower limbs of his dead attendants, fling them, with the explorer's head, into a boat, and make off with the bleeding trophies down stream. They also carried off Witti's papers and despatch box.

Mr. Witti must have had the dangers of his expedition in his mind at the outset. It is quite likely, from what is known of his adventurous spirit, that he had resolved to accomplish a great achievement even at the risk of his life, for, prior to setting out, he made a will, and left behind him full instructions as to the disposition of his property. He was known to the Geographical Society of London, whose "Journal of Transactions" contains several of his contributions to the geographical history of Borneo.

Exchanging Wives.

It occasionally happens that matrimonial alliances are broken in mining districts by the husband "selling" his wife, but it is very rarely that a couple of husbands and wives agree to exchange partners with so little ceremony as has just occurred at the village of Greasborough, in south Yorkshire. Two miners who work together at the Car House Colliery, having been enamoured of one another's wives, met, in company with the ladies, at the dwelling of one of them a few nights ago, when the question of a transference of affections was introduced. Without the least hesitation the women, who are about 30 years of age, and have each several children, consented to change husbands, the bargain being struck there and then. After having been with her fresh "husband" two days, however, one of them discovered that her felicity was not so great as she had anticipated, and returned to her lawful husband: but he gave her to understand that he was satisfied with the change, and ordered her out of his house. She went and has not since been heard of.

The Dangers of Buggy Riding.

An editor who probably knows what he is talking about says that buggy riding is conducive to the tender feelings. We don't, for our part, see how it could very well help being so. When a young man in a soapdish hat and polka-dot ed socks drives up in his side-bar buggy in front of the house where she lives, and she comes to the door all rigged out in things which we haven't time to enumerate, and trips down the front step, and the young man just tosses her into the narrow seat and gets in beside her and taps the horse with the whip, while the buggy quivers like a thing of life and a joy forever, and the young man beside her doesn't know but every minute will be the next one, why, we don't see why buggy riding should not be the most conducive to the tenderest feelings of anything extant. Horseback riding is cold and distant, buggy riding is the thing, and the longer the ride and the more lonely the road, the better.

A Brave Deed.

Mrs. Dwyer Gray, the wife of the High Sheriff of Dublin, whose name is now so prominently before the public in connection with his committal for contempt, is a very handsome and interesting woman. She is the daughter of Mrs. Chisholm, better known as "the emigrant's friend," whose name for years was honorably connected with the promotion of female emigration to Australia. Mrs. Gray's acquaintance with her husband was made in a romantic manner. She was on a visit with a friend at Ballybrack, on the seacoast, near Dublin, where the late Sir John Gray, Mr. Gray's father, had a summer residence. During a storm, a schooner, the Blue Vein, from Portmadoc, was driven on the rocks opposite Mr. Gray's house. To the presence of his wife, Mr. Gray swam with a rope to the rescue of the crew. For this heroic deed he obtained the medal of the Life Boat Institution and a wife. As Lady Mayoress of Dublin in 1880 her receptions were unsurpassed for brilliancy and hospitality.

A TROUBLESOME KING.—The Calcutta tradesmen have an awkward customer to deal with in his Majesty the ex-King of Oudh, who is disqualified by legislative enactment from contracting liabilities in his own name, and so obtains goods through his servants, and, when convenient, dishonors the bills.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

The most successful Remedy ever discovered, as it is certain in its effects and does not blister. READ PROOF BELOW.

Kendall's Spavin Cure.

HAMILTON, Mo., June 14, 1881.

B. J. KENDALL & Co.,—Gents:—This is to certify that I have used Kendall's Spavin Cure, and have found it to be all that it is recommended to be and in fact more too; I have removed by using the above: Callous Bone Spavins, Ring-bone, Spliuts, and can cheerfully testify and recommend it to be the best thing for any bony substance I have ever used, and have tried many as I have made that my study for years.

Respectfully yours,
P. V. CRIST.

FROM

Col. T. L. Foster,

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, May 10, 1880.

DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents:—I had a very valuable Hambletonian colt that I prized very highly, he had a large bone spavin on one joint and a small one on the other which made him very lame; I had him under the charge of two veterinary surgeons which failed to cure him. I was one day reading the advertisement of Kendall's Spavin Cure in the Chicago Express. I determined at once to try it, and got our druggist here to send for it, they ordered three bottles; I took them all and thought I would give it a thorough trial, I used it according to directions and the fourth day the colt ceased to be lame and the lumps have disappeared. I used but one bottle and the colt's limbs are as free from lumps and as smooth as any horse in the state. He is entirely cured. The cure was so remarkable that I let two of my neighbors have the remaining two bottles who are now using it.

Very respectfully,
L. T. FOSTER.

Kendall's Spavin Cure.

WINGHAM, Ont., Jan. 17, 1882.

DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents:—This is to certify that I have used Kendall's Spavin Cure, bought from C. E. Williams, druggist, Wingham, Ont., and do without hesitation pronounce it to be an invaluable remedy for the cure of Spavins, Ringbones, or Curbs. I used it on a bone spavin of several years growth which it completely removed, and I can safely say it will remove any Spavin, Curb or Ringbone it properly used. I have also recommended friends to use it, who have done so with perfect success. I gladly make this public, and will answer any questions or letters sent me.

Yours &c.
GEORGE BRYCE.

Kendall's Spavin Cure
ON HUMAN FLESH.

WEST ENOSBURGH, Vt., Feb. 15, 1881.

DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents:—Several months ago I injured my knee joint which caused an enlargement to grow the size of a walnut and caused me very severe pain all the time for four or five weeks, when I began to use Kendall's Spavin Cure with the most satisfactory results. It has entirely removed the enlargement and stopped the lameness and pain. I have long known it to be excellent for horses but now I know it to be the best liniment for human flesh that I am acquainted with.

Yours truly,
T. P. LAWRENCE.

ST. JOHN, P Q Oct. 27, 1881.

DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents:—I have used your Spavin Cure with great success on spavins, curbs and splints. I know it to be a good remedy for ringbones, bone spavins' cuts, galls and all kinds of lameness and other difficulties about the horse. One of my men sprained his ankle very badly. I applied Kendall's Spavin Cure and I never saw anything work like it, he was well in a few days. I know it to be good for man as well as beast. I procured one of your Treatise on the Horse, by mail for 25cts. and I think it was the means of saving me $100 on one horse that I treated according to the directions given in your book for displaced stifle.

Yours truly,
WM. J. PEARSON.

Send address for Illustrated Circular, which we think gives positive proof of its virtues. No remedy has ever met with such unqualified success to our knowledge, for beast as well as man.

Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. All druggists have it or can get it for you, or it will be sent to any address on recept of price by the proprietors. DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

Sold by all Druggists.

LYMAN, SONS & CO., Montreal, P. Q. Wholesale Agents

GEORGE NOBLE,
INSURANCE AND LAND AGENT,
LICENSED AUCTIONEER

For the County of Grey.

AGENT for the following reliable Companies:
CITIZENS', of Montreal,
AGRICULTURAL, of Watertown, and
TRADE & COMMERCE, (Mutual) of Toronto.

A number of Choice Farms for sale. also Village Lots

Auction Sales conducted in Town or Country on Shortest Notice. Charges moderate, Bills, Blank Notes, and Stamps provided.

GEO. NOBLE.

MARKDALE, May 20th, 1881. 36-1y

Robt S Rae.

TAILOR,

SYDENHAM STREET,

MARKDALE.

J. W. FORD

HAS RE-OPENED HIS

Flour and Grist Mill

IN MARKDALE.

AN IMMENSE STOCK OF
BOOTS & SHOES

JUST ARRIVED AT THE

TORONTO HOUSE

BEST QUALITY AND LOWEST PRICE.

STOCK COMPLETE IN

Dry Goods and Groceries!

PRICES ALWAYS RIGHT.

OUR THIRTY CENT TEA

Is the wonder of the day A trial solicited.

WM. BROWN.

Markdale, Oct. 11th, 1882.

GROCERIES.

A. M'INTYRE

TEA! TEA! TEA!

A. M'INTYRE

Flour, Flour, Flour.

McINTYRE'S
LIQUORS! LIQUORS

McINTYRE'S
Cigars, Cigars.

McINTYRE'S
Coffee, Coffee.

McINTYRE'S
MEAL! MEAL! MEAL!

McINTYRE'S
Pork, Pork, Pork.

McINTYRE'S
Teas, Teas.

And everything kept in a first-class Grocery and Liquor Store. always on hand, CHEAP FOR CASH.

GROCERIES.

MARKDALE

Sash and Door Factory

SASH, DOORS,
BLINDS
MOULDINGS,
HOLLOW BATTONS,
FRAMES

Lumber, Lath and Shingles,

Always on Hand. Orders Promptly Filled.

The Subscriber wishes to return thanks to the people of Markdale and vicinity, for the very liberal patronage they have given him in the past, and hopes by close attention to business to merit a continuance of the same.

I have now extended my business and will in future keep a full Stock of

PINE LUMBER.

Direct from the North Shore.

ALL SIZES, DRESSED AND UNDRESSED,

All Kinds of Plain and Fancy Turning

Done in a first-class manner.

THOS. McNEA.

Markdale May 27th, 1881. 37-tf

ARTEMESIA WAREHO
FLESHERTON STATION

Dry Goods, Hardware, Crockery, Boots an

Groceries, Provisions, &c. Stock kept full and well assorted goods received every week.

Cash paid for all kinds of Grain at the St

MY BRANCH STORE AT EUGENIA

replenished with new goods every week. For sale cheap for cash

My Saw Mill, Shingle Factoty, and Lim
AT LITTLE FALLS, ARE IN OPERATION.

All kinds Saw Logs bought at the Mill or sawn on

Lumber, Lath, Broom Handles, Shingles and Lime

WM. HO

November 7th, 1882.

TORONTO HOU
FLESHERTON.

Stock Fully Complete. Unusually

VERY ATTRACTIVE, AND

CHEAPER THAN THE CHEAP

EVERY DEPARTMENT SPECIALLY ATTRA

Variety and Value Unsurpasse

DRY GOODS DEPARME

Is this season very complete with a very large stock of Dress G prising in part Cashmeres in all colors. Worsted Wool Goo endless variety.

Boot and Shoe Department

Would call special attention of close buyers as my stock is unsu from the best manufacturers and at rock bottom prices.

ORDERED CLOTHING

Has been exceedingly brisk this season, on account of which I hav the largest and best stock of Tweeds, Coatings, Trowserings, and ings in this section of country. As I have always led the trade in partment buyers will find it to their advantage to call before p elsewhere.

Millinery Department.

Under the able management of a first-class milliner, with plenty ance, will be found unusually attractive with the prettiest and mos able, and cheapest stock to be found in the county. Ladies, it you good to call and look at the stock.

Hardware and Grocery Department

Is always fully assorted and complete with the best goods, at the lo sible price.

☞ I am the only constant and reliable buyer of Grain and Pr duce in Flesherton, and for which I will pay the highest price in any quantity of good dry, sound grain, which I would specially as to clean well. A call solicited.

R. J. SPROUL

Flesherton, Oct. 3rd, 1882.

OH, HEAR. OH, HEAR. OH, HE

Squander your money if you want to, if not, get your Photograph

W. BULMER,

The People's Photographer,
Flesher

Who is again prepared to take Pictures, and do Copying and Enlarging as he

FRAMES AND FRAME FIXIN

We are receiving a large stock of MOTTOES and Motto and other Frames, Fixings, which we can, and mean to sell at Remarkably Low Prices, secure bargains.

Bring along your pictures and have them copied and enlarged by your old

BULM

Flesherton, March 10, 1881.

Markdale PUMP Facto

J. G. IRVING,

MAKER OF ALL KINDS OF PUMPS,

DROP VALVE PUMPS, CYLINDER PUMPS, CISTERN PU FORCE PUMPS,

Also, ALL KINDS OF IRON PUMPS SUPPLIED.

Satisfaction guaranteed on all my work; the proof of it is fou fact that I am doing a larger business now than ever was done in Ma the Pump business. Remember the stand, 1 door north of Rutledg

Sydenham Street, Markdale

Standard Club R

We will [illegible] from now to the end of Mail, weekly,	[illegible]

Globe, "	[illegible]
World, daily,	[illegible]
Canada Farmer, weekly,	[illegible]
Scientific American, "	[illegible]
Montreal Witness "	4.00
Family Herald and Star, weekly	2.00
Farmer's Advocate, monthly,	2.00
American Agriculturist, monthly,	1 85
	2.00

BALANCE OF YEAR FREE.

THE WEEKLY MAIL will be sent to new subscribers free for the balance of [illegible] Subscribe now and get the best weekly newspaper in America for 15 months' [illegible] DOLLAR.

The Weekly Mail

Toronto. ONE DOLLAR A YEAR.

Contains more Cable and Telegraphic News than any other Weekly in the Dominion.

Contains during the year 200 Columns of New and Interesting Stories.

Contains over 200 Columns of Agricultural matter by the best writers on Dairying, Cheese-making, the care of Horses and Cattle, Fruit Raising, General Agriculture, etc.

Noted for Reliable Market Reports!
Noted for Cable News!
Noted for Sporting News!
Noted for its Legal Questions and Answers.

Questions involving Points of Law and of Interest to the Agricultural Community replied to and explained by ably qualified practitioners, and the replies published by the WEEKLY MAIL.

FIFTEEN MONTHS FOR $1,00.

No extra charge for sending THE MAIL to any Post Office address in Great Britain or the United States.

Every subscriber to THE WEEKLY MAIL for 1883 will receive a valuable Supplement entitled "Chart of the Age of Domestic Animals,"
By A. LIAUTARD, M.A., V.S.,
Containing 42 Engravings of the Mouth and Teeth of Domestic Animals at various ages, with Descriptive Letter Press.

The Daily Mail, leading Canadian Newspaper, $7 a y

Address all Communications to "THE MAIL," Toronto.

[illegible] section of country. As I have always led the trade in [illegible] to call before p[urchasing] [illegible]ings, and [illegible]

Standard Club Rate

We will club the STANDARD with the following papers from now to the end of 1883, as follows:

Mail, weekly,	$2.00.
Globe, "	2.00
World, daily,	4.00.
Canada Farmer, weekly,	2.00.
Scientific American, "	4.00.
Montreal Witness "	2.00.
Family Herald and Star, weekly	2.00.
Farmer's Advocate, monthly,	1 85.
American Agriculturist, monthly,	2.00

ONE DOLLAR

1883 THE 1883

WEEKLY GLOBE

THE GREAT DOLLAR PAPER

THE LARGEST - THE CHEAPEST
AND
The Best General Newspaper IN THE DOMINION.

THE MONARCH OF THE WEEKLIES

Contains Seventy-two Columns of Reading Matter, and is admitted to be the best authority upon Agricultural and Commercial matters in the Dominion.

Subscribe for 1883 now, and GET BALANCE OF 1882 FREE.

Orders and remittances to be addressed
THE GLOBE PRINTING COMPANY,
TORONTO.

ONE DOLLAR

[illegible]L. 3.--N

[illegible] Markdale

IS PUBLISHE
Y THURSDAY
At Markdale Ont
1 Per An
IN ADVANCE. in three months, $2
of the year. No pap arrears are paid up of the publisher, and without paying up wil
the years subscript with the rules.
TERMS OF ADVER
lumn one year.....
do. do. .....
do. do. .....
do. do. .....
do. ..... n lines, first insertion
ubsequent insertion.. number of lines to be occupied measured by Advertisements ons will be published d accordingly. All tr
nts must be in the o 11o'clock on the wed ir publication.
JOB PRINTI
very description e ess and despatch a TANDARD, Markdale
C. W. RUTL
EDITOR

FESSIONAL AND DIRECTOR
rs. Sproule & A icians, Surgeons,
&c.
FICE - Medical Hall
ale House.
hent, M.D., M.R.
Physician and Surgeon ate of University. Vic
New
Graduate, of the same
Ayleth W
Opthalmic
Coll. Physicians & S

Dental C meron & DENTAL SURG
ver D. A. Cameron
Poulett St., OWEN
ttention given to th ral teeth. Artificial old, Celluloid, and be at Markdale the nth,
eron, M.D., & C.
. & S. Glasgow, M
.S., Ont. le

Legal.
Frost & Fr
RISTERS, AND A w, Solicitors in C &c., Owen Sound, on, Office open ev
re.
FROST, J.
nty Crown Attorne
J. MASSO
ISTER, MASTER
Chancery, Notary
Y TO LEND AT S
Owen Sound, i
St.; and in Markd ore, on Friday an Creasor & Mo
ISTERS, SOLICI
, &c. &c.
in Owen Sound.
F. Wolf's Store s
MARKDA
J. McFarland's S
y of each week.
nds to lend on rea
ason, Q.C. le, March 15, 188
Alexander of Marriage L
Insurance Agen
&c. Conveyan for the County
, and Land Sal and charges ma
, Sept. 17, 1880
A CAR who are sufferin ptions of you decay, loss of receipe that wil
GE. This grea a missionary fr addressed e INMAN, Statio
cribe for th that sp
ce. Con

Markdale Standard

VOL. 3.--No. 10. MARKDALE, ONT., NOV. 16, 1882. No. 114.

The Markdale Standard

IS PUBLISHED

EVERY THURSDAY EVENING,

At Markdale Ontario.

$1 Per Anumn

IN ADVANCE.

$1.25 in three months. $2 if not paid till the end of the year. No paper discontinued until all arears are paid up, except at the option of the publisher, and parties refusing papers without paying up will be held responsible for the years subscriptions until they comply with the rules.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING:

One column one year		$50 00
Half do.	do.	27 50
Quarter do.	do.	15 00
Eighth do.	do.	8 00
Card	do.	4 00
Over ten lines, first insertion per line		8
Each subsequent insertion		3

The number of lines to be reckoned by the space occupied measured by a scale of solid brevier. Advertisements without specific directions will be published till forbid and charged accordingly. All transitory advertisements must be in the office of publication by 11o'clock on the wednesday proceeding their publication.

JOB PRINTING

Of every description executed with neatness and despatch at the Office of the STANDARD, Markdale.

C. W. RUTLEDGE.

EDITOR & PROPRIETOR.

PROFESSIONAL AND BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

Drs. Sproule & Armstrong,

Physicians, Surgeons, Accoucheur &c.

OFFICE Medical Hall; residence at Markdale House.

B. Ghent, M.D., M.R.C.P. & S., O. Physician and Surgeon, Priceville, Graduate of University. Vict. College. " " New York, and Hon. Graduate, of the same, " " Ayleth Medical Institute. " " Opthalmic Hospital, N.Y. Member Coll. Physicians & Surgeons, O. 104

Dental Card.

Cameron & Knight,

DENTAL SURGEONS,

Office over D. A. Cameron and Co's Drug Store, Poulett St., OWEN SOUND.

Every attention given to the preservation of the natural teeth. Artificial Dentures mounted on Gold, Celluloid, and Rubber bases.

Will be at Markdale the last Tuesday in each month,

A. Cameron, M.D., & L.F.P. & S. Glasgow, L.D.S., Ont. C. F. Knight, L.D.S. Medalist Royal College Den. Sur., Ont

Legal.

Frost & Frost,

BARRISTERS, AND ATTORNEYS-AT Law, Solicitors in Chancery, Conveyancers, &c., Owen Sound, have resumed at Flesherton, Office open every Thursday, as heretofore.

ALFRED FROST, J. W. FROST, LL. B. County Crown Attorney. 1

J. MASSON,

BARRISTER, MASTER AND DEP. REG in Chancery, Notary Public, Conveyancer, &c.

MONEY TO LEND AT SIX PER CENT.

Offices—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block Poulett St.; and in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week. 57.ly

Creasor & Morrison,

BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, CONVEYANCES, &c. &c.

OFFICES in Owen Sound, Dufferin Block, over W. F. Wolf's Store and in

MARKDALE;

over W. J. McFarland's Store on Thursday and Friday of each week.

☞Funds to lend on reasonable terms.

JOHN CREASOR, Q.C. DUNCAN MORISON

Markdale, March 15, 1882. 79-ly

Alexander Brown.

ISSUER of Marriage Licenses, Fire and Life Insurance Agent. Commissioner B. R. &c. Conveyancer and Licensed Auctioneer for the County of Grey. Farmers, Merchants, and Land Sales, Punctually attended to and charges made very moderate.

Priceville, Sept. 17, 1880. 1-y

A CARD.

To all who are suffering from the errors and indiscretions of youth, nervous weakness, early decay, loss of manhood, &c., I will send a receipe that will cure you, FREE OF CHARGE. This great Remedy was discovered by a missionary in South America. Send a self-addressed envelope to REV. JOSEPH T. INMAN, Station D, New York City.

Subscribe for the STANDARD and get that splendid horse book free. Commence any time.

Hotels.

REVERE HOTEL,

MARKDALE.

T. SPROULE, - Proprietor.

THIS popular Hotel has had a large addition added to it, thoroughly refitted, and is now second to none in the county. Good stabling and attentive ostler. First-class accommodation for commercial travelers. $1 per day. Barber's shop in connection. 17-ly

Markdale Hotel.

Good Accommodation for Travellers. 'Bus to and from all trains. Charges moderate.

Markdale. A. BUTLEDGE, PROP.

COMMERCIAL HOTEL.

PRICEVILLE, Ont.

Large and commodious Sample Rooms Good Bed Rooms, &c. The Bar and larder well supplied with the best the market affords; good Stabling and attentive Hostler's

THOS. ATKINSON, Proprietor

Miscellaneous.

John McDonald,

CHATSWORTH,

DIVISION Court Clerk, Issuer of Marriage Licenses, Commissioner in B.R., Conveyancer, &c. Deeds, Mortgages, Wills, &c., attended to promptly, accurately, neatly, and cheaply. Private funds to lend in small sums on easy terms. Notes discounted

R. M. Galbraith,

AUCTIONEER AND GENERAL LAND Agent, Williamsford Station. Auction Sales attended in all parts of the County. Goods sold on commission. Rates moderate. Pianos, Organs, and Sewing Machines; also Fruit and Ornamental Trees. Vines, Agricultural Implemennts, and Machinery of all kinds on sale.

Williamsford, Jan. 27, 1881.

T. E. DAVIS,

BUILDER & CONTRACTOR, (Stone and Brick). After completing 13 buildings his season is still on the track and is still prepared to do all kinds of stone and brick work, plastering and tuck pointing. Those who contemplate building will find it to their advantage to give him a call.

Residence corner of Brown and Sproule Stetes. MARKDALE. 16-y

Wm. Brown,

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.

Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.

N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate security.

Joseph Gibson,

PLAIN & ORNAMENTAL

PLASTERER.

WHITEWASHING—CALSOMINING in Shades and Colors.

All work guaranteed. Charges moderate.

Markdale P.O.

LOYAT MARKDALE LODGE,

Of C. O. O. F. No. 78, will meet in their hall on Monday evening, Nov. 14th, at eight o'clock p. m.

108 W. L. YOUNG, Sec'y.

EUGENIA

Grist, Saw and Lath Mills

Having made eqtensive improvements in my Grist Mill I feel confident I can give good satisfaction.

GOOD FLOUR ALWAYS ON HAND.

Chopping Done Every Day.

Custom Sawing and Bills Filled on the shortest notice.

LUMBER AND LATH ALWAYS ON HAND.

Cherry, Butternut, White Ash, Black Ash, Basswood, Pine and Hemlock Logs wanted.

69ly. M. AKITT, Eugenia.

JOHN NOBLE,

MARKDALE.

GENER'L BLACKSMITH

HORSE SHOEING

A SPECIALTY.

ROBT. ASKIN,

MARKDALE,

Has opened out a First-Class

Furniture!

—AND—

UNDERTKING ESTABLISHMENT,

And therefore has supplied a want long felt, especially in the Undertaking Line.

COFFINS,

CASKETS,

SHROUDS,

and all

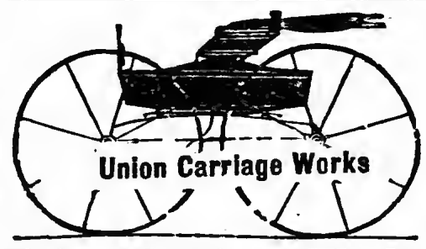
FUNERAL FURNISHINGS,

supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse

for hire at moderate rates.

FURNITURE!



From the Common to the

Best and Latest Styles,

in everything in the line.

Call and see for yourselves.

ROBT. ASKIN.

Union Carriage Works.

All work manufactured from

FIRST CLASS MATERIAL

In the Lateat and Best Improved Style, and finished with English Varnish.

Painting & Trimming Rigs

will receive prompt attention.

All Repairs executed in the shortest possible time consistent with good workmanship.

GOOD WORK A SPECIALITY.

Remember the Shop, opposite the Cheapside

D. J. SHANAHAN,

Proprietor.

Markdale, Dec. 2nd, 1881. 64.

HAIR CUTTING AND SHAVING

By T. D. Smith,

Razors, Straps, and Shaving Brushes for sale. Razors sharpened.

☞ Orders filled for Tomb Stones.

STARTLING DISCOVERY!

LOST MANHOOD RESTORED.

A victim of youthful imprudence causing Premature Decay, Nervous Debility, Lost Manhood, etc., having tried in vain every known remedy, has discovered a simple self cure, which he will send FREE to his fellow-sufferers, address J. H. REEVES, 43 Chatham St., N. Y.

$66 a week in your own town: $5 outfit free. No risk. Everything new. Capital not required. We will furnish you everything. Many are making fortunes. Ladies make as much as men, and boys and girls make great pay. Reader, if you want a business at which you can make great pay all the time you work, write for particulars to H. HALLETT & Co., Portland, Maine. 71-126

TEACHER WANTED.

MARRIED OR SINGLE—MARRIED man preferred—for School Section No, 4, Glenelg, holding second-class certificate. Duties to commence first of the new year. Apply stating salary, to

THOMAS TOWNSEND,

Glascott P. O.

Glascott, Nov. 1st 1882, 112-4t

WARNING!

There is great danger of taking cold from wet feet. If you want to Guard Against Sickness!

Keep your feet dry and warm by procuring your

BOOTS!

—FROM—

KAY & THOMAS.

Satisfaction Guaranteed. Medicated Cork Soles, all sizes, kept on hand. Remember the place opposite the new STANDARD Office. 49

Best business now before the public. You can make money faster at work for us than at anything else. Capital not needed. We will start you. $12 a day and upwards made at home by the industrious. Men, women, boys and girls wanted everywhere to work for us. Now is the time. You can work in spare time only or give your whole time to the business. You can live at home and do the work. No other business will pay you nearly as well. No one can fail to make enormous pay by engaging at once. Costly outfit and terms free. Money made fast, easily and honorably. Address TRUE & Co., Augusta, Maine. 71-126

REST AND COMFORT TO THE SUFFERING

Brown's Household Panacea

has no equal for relieving pain, both internal and external. It cures pain in the Side, Back or Bowels, Sore Throat, Rheumatism, Toothache, Lumbago and any kind of a Pain or Ache. "It will most surely quicken the Blood and heal, as its acting power is wonderful." "Brown's Household Panacea," being acknowledged as the great Pain Reliever, and of double the strength of any other Elixer or Liniment in the world, should be in every family handy for use when wanted "as it really is the best remedy in the world for Cramps in the Stomach, and Pains and Aches of all kinds," and is for sale by all Druggists at 25 cents a bottle. 75-127

EARS FOR THE MILLION

FOO CHOO'S BALSAM OF SHARK'S OIL positively Restores the Hearing, and is the Only Absolute Cure for Deafness known. This Oil is abstracted from peculiar species of small White Shark, caught in the Yellow Sea, known as CARCHARODON RONDELETII. Every Chinese fisherman knows it. Its virtues as a restorative of hearing were discovered by a Buddhist Priest were discovered about the year 1410. Its cures were so numerous, and many so seemingly miraculous, that the remedy was officially proclaimed over the entire Empire. Its use became so universal, that for over 300 years no Deafness has existed among the Chinese people. Sent, charges prepaid, to any address at $1.00 per bottle.

Hear what the Deaf say:

It bas performed a miracle in my case.

I have no unearthly noises in my head, and hear much better.

I have been greatly benefited.

My deafness helped a great deal—think another bottle will cure me.

Its virtues are unquestionable and its curative character absolute, as the writer can personally testify, both from experience and observation. Write at once to Haylock and Jenney, 7 Dey Street, New York, enclosing $1 and you will receive by return a remedy that will enable you to hear like anybody else, and whose curative effects will be permanent. You will never regret doing so."—EDITOR OF MERCANTILE REVIEW.

☞To avoid loss in the mails, please send money by Registered Letter.

Only imported by HAYLOCK & JENNEY, late Haylock & Co.,

Sole Agents for America. 7 DEY ST NEW YORK 93-145.

$2 Watches. Stem winders $3.50. White metal Hunting Case $5. Imitation gold $6. Solid gold $12. Cheapest and best for your own use or speculative purposes. Valuable catalogue free. THOMPSON & Co. 208 Nassau St. New York.

Wm. Lucas & Co.,

BANKERS,

Money Loaned

IN large or small amounts, at all times, on good endorsed notes, or on collateral security.

INTEREST AT 6 PER CENT.

Allowed on Savings Deposits.

☞Drafts issued and Collections made on points, at lowest rates.

W.M. LUCAS, Manager.

September 23, 1880. 2-ly

ESTRAY CATTLE.

CAME INTO THE PREMISES OF THE undersigned, Lots 37 and 38, 1st concession W. T. & S. Road, on or about the 12th of October, three head of cattle—two steers and one cow. Steers are about three years old. The owner is requested to prove property, pay expenses and take them away.

JOHN SARGEANT.

October 24th 1882, 111-4w,*

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

Dressmaking—Miss Lamb.
Estray Sheep—D. McMillan.
Change of Time—T. G. & B. R.
Teacher Wanted—John Hazard.
Chatsworth Hotel—C. H. Matthews.
Watch Found—Rev. N. A. McDiarmid.
Farm to Sell or Rent—M. S. Kellow, Tara.
Just Arrived—John Doupe, Flesherton Station.

DUNDALK ITEMS.

Grain is coming in now.

The band will soon be prepared to turn out.

G. R. Middleton has removed to his new store.

Mr. George Nixon's new dwelling is almost completed.

A new grocery store has been opened in Louise Block by W. J. Denny.

Messrs. Hewetson and Smith are giving up business here and going to Milton.

Mr. Wm. Marshall has removed to the brick dwelling lately occupied by Mr. Nelson.

Mr. Geo. Dales' large mud turtle has returned after an absence of two weeks from home.

Messrs. Hewetson and Smith will have a very extensive sale of furniture, etc., on Saturday next

Dr. McWilliams has removed to the building occupied by G. R. Middleton and will shortly open out a stock of drugs, etc.

A large part of the platform at the station has been lowered almost to the level of the track and a side walk laid to the road from the station and a crossing to Mr. Reid's Hotel.

The following romantic story is told by a writer in the Winnipeg Times. We fancy it will puzzle Orillia readers to discover the identity of the hero and heroine of the tale:—About five years ago their lived in the town of Orillia, Ont., a widow 40 years of age. She became greatly attached to a young man, or rather a boy, 18 years of age. She invited the young fellow to her house, made him many handsome presents, and in fact did every thing in her power to win his affections. Several months passed by, and although she had several times resolved to tell him of her love, her courage had always failed her. But love, like murder, will out sooner or later, and one evening she almost took the boys breath away by telling him that she loved him tenderly and truly. She almost fainted when she had spoken the words and clasped him to her brest, and lay sobbing upon his bosom for several minutes. When she recovered she entwined her arms around his neck and whispered "My darling Charlie, will you be mine, or do you wish to break my heart?" Charlie was a boy of goood common sense, and knowing her to be worth several thousand dollars, he swore to be true to her till death. Her joy may be much better imagined than told. He proposed that she give him money to go to college for a year, to which she assented. They were married a week or so before he left for the college in Toronto. In that city he had a "high old time" and spent nearly half of the old lady's money. He returned when the year was up, but a few months afterwards proposed that they should remove to Manitoba. He said he would go first and get a house ready for her. She agreed and gave him nearly all the money she had. He came and for two years she had heard nothing of him, although she sent several letters to him and made every inquiry. At last in her despair she resolved to go to Winnipeg and search for him herself. She arrived in the city a couple of weeks ago, and after being in the city a couple of days she met him on the street. Instead of calling him false and heartless, she hung upon his neck and wept tears of joy. But the young husband, who is no longer "My Darling Charlie," was very angry at her for coming after him, and commanded her to return home, and never to trouble him again. He said he did not love her, but had only fooled her from the first. The shock was too much for the poor old lady, and she had to be taken to her hotel in a cab, and she now lies in a very precarious condition, suffering it is said, from brain fever. Her heartless husband has refused to see her, but expresses he hope that she will die. It appears that when he arrived here he commenced to speculate, and is now worth over $100,000. He is engaged to a young lady in this city, and for that reason is anxious to get rid of his first "love." He has offered to give her $10,000 if she will go home and not trouble him, but the old lady has treated his offer with righteous contempt.

ANIMAL INTELLIGENCE.

Some Wonderful Stories about Dogs.—The Wisdom of the Blue Jay.—Habits of Spiders.

A correspondent writes to the Louisville Courier-Journal: "During the late war my regiment, the 83rd Illinois, was stationed at Fort Donelson, on the Cumberland river, or rather half a mile above the old rebel fort. There we remained for nearly three years, because of a brilliant battle we fought and won, but we had frequent excursions of a portion of the force into the surrounding country to rid it of its guerrillas. On returning from one of these raids the command was accompanied by a large brown-brindle dog, which, on arriving at camp, proceeded to headquarters with the officer in command of the expedition, and from that day on made himself comfortable at headquarters, and by his even temper and uniform good nature, soon became a great pet with everyone. On the first morning after the dog's arrival he went out to witness guard-mounting, and as soon as that was finished he immediately attached himself to the "officer of the day," and went with him wherever he went, the first trip being to relieve the pickets. At midnight, when the "grand-rounds" was made, the dog preceded the officer by about thirty steps, and by his viligance more than once prevented that officer from being shot by some lurking would-be assassin. Of course there was a different officer every day, but this made no difference to Bob, as he always changed from the retiring officer to the one just going on duty. This round of duty he kept up till the regiment was mustered out of service in July, 1865, at which time, Lieu. Col. E. C. Brott was the commandant of the post. Col. Brott was very anxious to take Bob home with him, and managed to get him on board of the steamer when leaving, but at Hillman's furnace, where the boat landed for a short time, Bob went ashore, and that was the last seen of him by us, notwithstanding Col. Brott left a standing reward of $100 to any one who would secure and send the dog to his home in Illinois. From Capt. Flood, who remained at the post, I afterward learned that Bob returned to the post three days after leaving the boat, having travelled a distance of some forty miles.

"Now, the question is how should a strange dog be able to distinguish, without previous experience or education, the officer of the day, there being some twenty changes in as many days, and all strangers to him?"

Dogs at Church.

Says the Macon (Ga.) Telegraph; Our neighbor of the Albany News and Advertiser has begun a campaign against the habit some people have of carrying dogs with them to church. As usual, he is clearly in the right. He enforces his observations with these two incidents, going to show that people who can't keep their dogs from church on Sunday in any other way should stay at home with them: "At the Methodist church last Sunday night a pointer dog came in and curled him self up for a nap near the pulpit. The minister began to warm up in his sermon, and came down with a loud gesture upon the Bible before him. Up jumped the dog and struck a gallop to make his escape. In fact, no dog with a box to his tail ever made better time. At the Presbyterian church on Monday night a ferocious bull specimen of the canine species attended, and when an attempt was made to run him out he curled himself up at his mistress' feet and refused to be run out. After awhile, when the preacher began to warm up in his discourse, and when his voice ran to an unusually high pitch, the dog "made for" the minister, making the church resound with his deep-mouthed barks. Until his mistress had coaxed him out he was master of the situation. All this is very annoying to church attendants, and if the owners of these dogs can not be induced to keep them at home the city council should take some action in the matter."

A Bluejay's Tactics.

The bluejay is the boldest and most mischievous of wild birds. Near Knoxville, Tenn., recently one was seen to fly a number of times to a high picket fence, to attract a pair of kittens playing on the lawn. The kittens finally mounted the fence, and began a cautious approach from picket to picket. The jay let the first get to within eighteen inches, then hopped over between the two. The second kitten approached; the bird hopped over it. It turned, the jay hopped back and between. The first kitten approached, and the jay hopped back over it, and so kept it up till one kitten got disgusted and left, and the other followed soon after. Once or twice after the jay tried to inveigle the kittens to another frolic, but failed

A Cruel Deception.

The last dog story is told by a Georgia paper, the Americus Republican. It is to the effect that a family in that town, having a false grate in one of the rooms of the house, placed some red paper behind it to give it the effect of a fire. One cold day last winter the house-dog came in from out of doors, and seeing the paper in the grate, lay down before it to receive the heat as it came from the fire. Feeling no warmth, he raised his head, looking over his shoulder at the grate; feeling no heat, he applied his nose to the grate and smelt of it. It was cold as ice. With his tail curled between his legs, the dog trotted out of the room, not even casting a look at the party in the room, evincing supreme disgust.

A Dog Drowns a Squirrel.

The son of J. G Maxwell, of Butterfly Valley, Plumas county, Cal, shot at a large gray squirrel that was up a tree. The squirrel was not hurt, but jumped to the ground and was at once pounced upon by a dog. The squirrel seized the dog by the lip and held it so fast that he was unable to shake it off. After struggling with it for a brief time the dog ran to a stream near by, plunged the squirrel into the water and held it there until it was drowned.

A Friend in Need.

Capt. William Niles, of Covington, N.Y., owns a dog named Dick. A little puppy fell from the ferry-boat, but instead of swimming for shore paddled around in a circle, evidently bewildered, Dick was told to go in and rescue the pup, and at once obeyed, swimming at first in a circle round the puppy, and then toward shore, occasionally looking round to see if the pup was following. The latter "caught on," and soon reached land.

Worse than Sewer-Gas.

The distasteful odor of assafetid that a Virginia lady had placed under the eaves of the porch as a disinfectant drove away a wren that had just gone to housekeeping. For some days the bird and her mate were observed to be very busy, and it was soon discovered that they had moved their nest, twig by twig, to the opposite side of the portico.

AN EXPERT IN CHIROGRAPHY.

Remarkable Gifts of the Late Mr. Chabot, of England.

There is a stock phrase, current when any person of consequence dies, that he "leaves a gap which cannot be filled," but in real truth there is, from presidents to prime ministers down to grooms and gardeners, a very small percentage of persons for whom efficient substitutes cannot speedily be found. The other day, however, the cable recorded the demise of one in the person of Mr. Chabot. It is now some twenty-five years since Mr. Chabot became famous. He owed his first leap into celebrity to a will case. The judge, Sir Cresswell Cresswell, one of the most acute men who ever graced the British bench, was in general little disposed to heed the evidence of so-called "experts," and when Mr. Chabot, hitherto unknown to him, entered the witness box, the judge leaned back in his chair and assumed a somnolent aspect. But he soon aroused himself to take notes, and in charging the jury dwelt with emphasis on the remarkable character of the expert's evidence. The great point made by him was that in examining a large number of documents admittedly written by the testator he had in no single case found the letter "o" connected with other letters, whereas in the disputed will it was sometimes so connected and sometimes not. The will was broken. In another remarkable case Chief Justice Cockburn pointed emphatically to the cogent reasoning by which Mr. Chabot (largely employed in the Tichborne case) supported his opinions. The observations which fell from the luminaries of the bench suggested to Mr. Twistleton the expediency of bringing Mr. Chabot's powers to bear on that vexedest of vexed questions, the authorship of "Junius." It had come to Mr. Twistleton's knowledge that in 1770-71 Sir Philip Francis sent to a young lady at Bath an anonymous note, containing some flattering verses, as to which the note said: "The inclosed were found this morning by accident. The person who found them, not knowing to whom they belonged, is obliged to trust to his own judgment, and takes it for granted they could only be meant for Miss Giles. The humor of the compliment obviously demanded that the handwriting of the note and the handwriting of the verses should differ, but while they did in some respects differ, the possessor had always supposed that they were of the same hand, only in one case feigned. Mr. Twistleton submitted them to Mr. Chabot with a great mass of Sir Philip's writing. Mr. Chabot soon said that the verses and note were written by different people, and it was found that while the note was beyond all question written by the same hand as "Junius," the verses were in that of Francis' American cousin, Tilghman, who had been on a visit to him at the time at Bath. "I find, generally," says Mr. Chabot, "in the writing of letters of Sir P. Francis so much variety in the formation of all letters which admit of variety to render his handwriting difficult to disguise in any ordinary manner, and, consequently, easy to identify. I discover, also, in the manuscript of 'Junius' variations of frequent occurrence which closely correspond with those observed in the writings of Sir Philip Francis. They are, however chiefly confined to the small letters in both hand writings, the habitual formation of capital letters being seldom departed from in any essential particular in either. * * * I further find in the writings of Sir Philip Francis a repetition of all, or nearly all, the leading features and peculiar habits of writing, independent of the formation of letters, which so distinguish the 'Junius' writing. * * * It is scarcely within the limits of possibility that they can be found in the handwriting of any two persons."

A Precious Manuscript Recovered.

A manuscript, which for many years was thought to have been lost, has just been found at the Castle of Chantereine in Sarthe, France, amongst some waste paper. There are a great number of marginal notes which are supposed to have been written by the young Dauphin during his captivity at the Temple. This document is only a resume of the life of some kings, of whom the latter is Louis XV. The name of the author of the work is not known, but it is supposed to be one of the professors of the Dauphin. The history of this manuscript is very curious. It was first given to the Chantereine family by the Duchess of Angouleme. Some years later a robbery took place at the Castle of Chantereine, and the papers disappeared. In 1856 they were given back to the owner by a priest to whom the thief had made confession on his death-bed. M. Bocquet, of Chantereine, no doubt wishing to avoid another subtraction, hid them so carefully that, though his death happened so many years ago, they have only just been discovered. The manuscript has now been deposited in the Mans Museum.

A Curious Will.

An eccentric Spaniard, who lived in Keokuk, Ill., six years ago, died last August in Spain, leaving a 12-year old daughter, whom he wants to be reared as a Protestant. In his eccentricity he named George Hand, a colored blacksmith, as guardian, and also made a contract with a priest in Spain to carry out the conditions of his will, for which the priest was to receive $68,000, but in case of failure receives nothing. Hand, the colored guardian, is to have the same amount and the custody of the child, who gets $160,000 and a large amount of jewelery and diamonds.

ENGLISH GIRLS.

The Effects of Early Association with the Opposite Sex.

A London letter says, speaking of English women: People do say it is this constant companionship with men, and mixing with them in their field sports, that gives the fashionable English girl of the day all her love for "mannish" ways and make her the slangy, horsy, rapid creature we so often find her. Perhaps people are right. Yet what real harm, after all, if girls do wear stand-up collars and scarf-pins, and hunt, fish, shoot, play billiards and smoke? None, certainly, if their hearts are all right. Besides, look at the models they have. The Empress of Austria seems only happy in the saddle, and no less personages than the Princess Louise and Beatrice smoke cigarettes. Such actions are, of course, likely to shock the sensibilities, not alone of our grandmothers, but of a certain type of young lady whose conversational powers are limited to undertoned replies of "yes," and "no," and whose bringing up is exhibited in a painfully studious avoidance of either showing her feet or separating her knees while sitting down. But a woman nowadays does not care to please her own sex as much as the other, and it is only too clear which sort of young lady is the most attractive to men and which kind of girls gets the dances at the balls and the most attention everywhere. Men are pretty good judges of women, and if they don't object and are willing to make their wives out of girls who know more of horse-flesh than they do of botany, and prefer a whiff of tobacco smoke to ylang ylang of Atkinson's white rose, it is their own look-out and no one's else business.

I know a young lady who lives down in one of the southern counties. She is one of the prettiest girls in England, has £5,000 a year in her own right, is just 23, and the daughter of a peer whose pedigree goes back to the conquest, and whose country house is the show place of the county. To look at her you would think her the quietest of the quiet and that she hadn't an idea beyond crochet and weak tea. But she hunts, has her own stable, keeps four hunters, now and then rides a steeple-chase, buys and sells her own horses without help from anyone; has her own wine merchant, wine cellar and tobacconist: fences, boxes, skates, and rows; has her boudoir decorated with foils, gloves, whips, horseshoes and hunting trophies; smokes cigarettes during the day and cigars after dinner; is a capital judge of claret and and port, and can tell Amontillado from Marsala with her eyes shut; is a first-rate shot with shot-gun or rook-rifle; draws her own charges and pays her own bills; and last, though not least, has a delightful way of letting you see her foot and ankle when she puts one leg over the other on sitting down, and would make a prime old dowager, faint and get her set upon directly by the sly ones. Yet she has never been known to flirt, has refused more offers than the quiet ones ever dreamed of receiving, and once, it is related, taught the Prince of Wales a lesson by stopping in the middle of a valse with him at a state ball at Buckingham palace, and refusing to go on because he held her tighter than she considered proper. You can't call a girl like that fast. But she knows enough to take care of herself, and if her companionship with the young swells of the day and her imitation of their talk and ways has taught her to prefer their friendship to their love it is not unlikely she is nearer right in her estimate of her fellow-beings than are the dragonesses of propriety, who regard her with abhorrence but are willing to sell their bashful maidens to the first libertine or titled scapegrace whose establishment and rent-roll make him in their eyes a desirable party.

Satanic Opposition.

A Moscow journal gives an account of a collision between two passenger steamers on the Volga under most extraordinary circumstances. It appears that the captain of one of the vessels, the "Kachine," annoyed that his competitor, the "Pokœnig," obtained larger freights, resolved to run her down. He chose the dark night of October 3rd for his fiendish project, and when near Makareef overtook the "Pokœnig," and, despite the signals made by her captain, ran into her in full speed. The "Pokœnig" sank, amid the shrieks of her passengers; or while the "Kachine," without lowering a boat or making the slightest effort to save the drowning wretches, steamed off. Some boats, however, put off from the shore, and the passengers and crew, with the exception of five, were rescued.

"Small by Degrees and Beautifully Less.

The San Francisco Chronicle relates that an immensely stout young lady of that city, who was exceedingly desirous of reducing her avoirdupois, was furnished by a friend with an anti-fat remedy, which acted marvellously. Every day she grew thinner. As the days went on, however, her bulk waned so rapidly that her parents became alarmed and called in medical aid. But it was too late. She glided about like a ghost. She dwindled and ebbed until, the other morning, the mother stole into her room, uttered a loud shriek, and fell senseless to the floor. Her husband rushed in just in time to see intangible something that lay in bed shiver, grow indistinct, and disappear. His poor child was gone, and what adds the greatest poignancy to the grief of her parents is that they cannot give their child a funeral, for there are no remains.

The World's Largest Landowner.

Daniel Murphy's funeral took place recently. He was a pioneer, having come to California in 1844. His business ever since he came to California has been stock raising. He first had large tracts in the south end of this country, and as his herds grew he went into the San Joaquin valley. The "no fence" law forced him to take his cattle to Nevada. He owned also about 200,000 acres of land in that State when he died, and 6,000,000 in the State of Durango, Mexico, and large tracts in Arizona, and was, at the time of his death, the largest landowner in the world.—Arizona Citizen.

Most any man can grab a gun by the muzzle and pull it over a fence or out of a boat, but the second or third time will leave the gun without an owner.

EMINENT PEOPLE.

Oscar Wilde advises Mrs. Langtry not to visit Monte Carlo. Oscar doesn't admire the fair Lily, and it is therefore unfortunate that we can't get rid of them.

The illness of Mr. Anthony Trollope is now regarded as very serious, possibly fatal. His friends fear that even if he recovers his mind will be permanently affected.

Prince Gortchakoff, blooming as a rose and fresh as a daisy, says the London World, is again at Nice for the season, and by his side walks again the golden-haired gouvernante who superintended his menage last year.

The Duke of Connaught will unveil a monumental statue which has been erected to the memory of the late Prince Louis Napoleon at Woolwich by a public subscription throughout the army. The monument stands in a conspicuous position in front of the Royal Military Academy, at which institution the Duke of Connaught and the late Prince were both cadets!

The Prince of Wales, in a letter accepting the chairmanship of the Longfellow Memorial Committee, expresses much satisfaction in acceding to the request, and adds that he is very glad an opportunity has been afforded him to show the high respect he entertains for the memory of one of the greatest American poets, and his appreciation of the value and excellence of Longfellow's works.

Lord Beaumont, a Roman Catholic peer, returned home to Yorkshire last month, and enthusiastic men drew him to Carlton Towers, where his family have lived for seven centuries. He received the heartiest welcome from persons of all creeds. Anxiety to get home had conquered prudence. A relapse came, and within a few days he was promptly ordered south. He spent most of last year in this country.

The Belvoir hounds have been kept uninterruptedly by the Duke of Rutland since 1750. There is a list extant of the hunters and horses hunting with these hounds in 1758. The horses numbered 299. The original sport with hounds in England was not with foxes. A journal kept by the second Duke of Beaufort, in 1729, shows that his hounds were first harriers and then deer hounds. About 1750 certain packs began to be used exclusively for fox hunting.

The difference of character between the Prince of Wales's two sons, says the London World, was very remarkably evidenced at a dinner given in their honor in Queensland by the Governor, Sir Arthur Kennedy. Prince Albert Victor was silent and thoughtful, Prince George all vivacity. The waiters were all Chinamen, and whenever the Governor was not looking Prince George gave hard tugs at their pigtails. The Chinamen, with true Oriental politeness, maintained an imperturbable gravity.

When the Knight of Kerry (Sir Maurice Fitzgerald) married Miss Bischoffsheim lately, they were married first at the registry, she being a Jewess, and then at the church. When a few years ago the Hon. E. Yorke married Miss Rothschild, at his brother's seat in Cambridgeshire, a caveat was lodged against the marriage taking place in a Christian church, on the score of her Judaism, but by a telegram from the Chancellor of the diocese the ceremony was allowed. Mr. Yorke was Aide-de-Camp to the Duke of Edinburgh, and Sir M. Fitzgerald is the same to the Duke of Connaught.

Lady Brassey has formed a magnificent collection of various kinds of Irish lace, but Irish ladies generally, both in Ireland and here, do not appreciate sufficiently the native product. It is worth remembering that Colbert founded the famous manufactory at Alencon for the purpose of preserving for France the enormous sums that French ladies expended annually in the purchase of Venetian point. He succeeded, by adopting the Venetian system and improving it with the beautiful point lace of Alencon and of Argentine. Since then the industrious people of Belgium have succeeded in winning the approval of fashion for the modern Brussels lace. It was more generally admired than was the older pillow lace of that city. Irish talent and dexterity would rapidly acheive perfection in lace-making. It would yield remunerative work to thousands of Irish women, and the demand for it almost exists already.

Grape Growers' Maxims.

1. Prepare the ground in fall; plant in spring.
2. Give the vine plenty of manure, old and well decomposed; for fresh manure excites the growth, but does not mature it.
3. Luxuriant growth does not insure fruit.
4. Dig deep but plant shallow.
5. Young vines produce beautiful fruit, but old vines produce the richest.
6. Prune in autumn to insure growth, but in spring to promote fruitfulness.
7. Plant your vines before you put up trellises.
8. Vines, like old soldiers, should have good arms.
9. Prune spurs to one developed bud; for the nearer the old wood the higher flavored the fruit.
10. Those who prune long must soon climb.
11. Vine leaves love the sun; the fruit the shade.
12. Every leaf has a bud at the base, and either a bunch of fruit or a tendril opposite it.
13. A tendril is an abortive fruit bunch—a bunch of fruit a productive tendril.
14. A bunch of grapes without a healthy leaf opposite it is like a ship at sea without a rudder—it can't come to port.
15. Laterals are like politicians; if not checked, they are the worst of thieves.—The Vine Dresser.

Perhaps the casual reader has never sat down on a buzzsaw and felt himself gradually fading away. If so, he doesn't know what it is to form the acquaintance of a somnambulistic bull-dog in the prime of life.

A Director of a railroad, who is a great hater of tobacco, hearing it remarked in a meeting of the board that the life of a locomotive is only thirty years, wanted to know if, in the opinion of the board, the longevity of the locomotive would not be increased if it smoked less."

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE

The most successful Remedy ever discovered, as it is certain in its effects and does not blister. READ PROOF BELOW.

Kendall's Spavin Cure

HAMILTON, Mo., June 14, [illegible]

B. J. KENDALL & Co.—Gents:—I write to certify that I have used Kendall's Spavin Cure, and have found it to be all that is recommended to be and in fact more than I have removed by using the above: Curb, Bone Spavins, Ring-bone, Splints, and cheerfully testify and recommend it as the best thing for any bony substance I ever used, and have tried many as I have made that my study for years.

Respectfully yours,
P. V. CRIM

FROM

Col. T. L. Foster

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, May 10, [illegible]

DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents:—I had a very valuable Hambletonian colt that I valued very highly, he had a large bone spavin on one joint and a small one on the other, which made him very lame; I had him under the charge of two veterinary surgeons who attempted to cure him. I was one day reading an advertisement of Kendall's Spavin Cure in the Chicago Express. I determined to give it a trial, to try it, and got our druggist here to send for it, they ordered three bottles; I took the first all and thought I would give it a thorough trial, I used it according to directions, and by the fourth day the colt ceased to be lame, and the lumps have disappeared. I used only one bottle and the colt's limbs are as free from lumps and as smooth as any horse's in the state. He is entirely cured. The cure was so remarkable that I let two of my neighbors have the remaining two bottles who are now using it.

Very respectfully,
L. T. FOSTER

Kendall's Spavin Cure

WINGHAM, Ont., Jan. 17, [illegible]

DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents:—I write to certify that I have used Kendall's Spavin Cure, bought from C. E. Williams, druggist, Wingham, Ont., and do without hesitation pronounce it to be an invaluable remedy for the cure of Spavins, Ringbones, or Curbs. I have used it on a bone spavin of several years growth which it completely removed, and can safely say it will remove any Spavin, Curb or Ringbone it properly used. I have also recommended friends to use it, which I have done so with perfect success. I gladly recommend this public, and will answer any questions by letters sent me.

Yours &c.
GEORGE BELL

Kendall's Spavin Cure

ON HUMAN FLESH.

WEST ENOSBURGH, Vt., Feb. 15, [illegible]

DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents:—Some months ago I injured my knee joint, which caused an enlargement to grow the size of a walnut and caused me very severe pain. At the time for four or five weeks, when I commenced to use Kendall's Spavin Cure with the most satisfactory results. It has entirely removed the enlargement and stopped the pain and pain. I have long known it to be excellent for horses but now I know it to be the best liniment for human flesh that I am acquainted with.

Yours truly,
T. P. LAWHEAD

ST. JOHN, P Q Oct. 27, [illegible]

DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents:—I have used your Spavin Cure with great success on spavins, curbs and splints. I know it to be a good remedy for ringbones, bone spavins, cuts, galls and all kinds of lameness or difficulties about the horse. One of my horses sprained his ankle very badly. I used Kendall's Spavin Cure and I never saw anything work like it, he was well in a few days. I know it to be good for man as well as beast. I procured one of your Treatise on the horse by mail for 25cts. and I think it is worth means of saving me $100 on one horse. I treated according to the directions in your book for displaced stifle.

Yours truly,
WM. J. PEARCE

Send address for Illustrated Circular, which we think gives positive proof of its merits. No remedy has ever met with such unbounded success to our knowledge, for beast as well as man.

Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. All druggists have it or can get it for you, or it will be sent to any address on receipt of price by the proprietors. DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

Sold by all Druggists

LYMAN, SONS & CO., Montreal, Wholesale Agents

GEORGE NOBLE,

INSURANCE AND LAND AGENT

LICENSED AUCTIONEER

For the County of Grey.

AGENT for the following reliable Companies:
CITIZENS', of Montreal,
AGRICULTURAL, of Waterloo,
TRADE & COMMERCE, of Toronto.

A number of Choice Farms for sale. Village Lots.

Auction Sales conducted in Town or Country on Shortest Notice. Charges moderate. Bills, Blank Notes, and Stamps promptly

GEO. NOBLE

A Dream.

eard a dog howl in the moonlight night,
d I went to the window to see the sight;
the dead that I ever knew ing one by one, and two by two.

they passed, and on they passed;
wnsfellows all from first to last;
rn in the moonlight or the lane.
d quenched in the heavy shadow again.

hoolmates, marching as when we played soldiers once—but now more staid;
ose were the strangest sight to me
ho were drowned, I knew, in the awful sea.

right and handsome folk; bent and weak, too.
nd some that I loved, and gasped to speak to;
me but a day in their churchyard bed;
nd some that I had not known were dead.

long, long crowd, where each seemed lonely, nd yet of them all there was one, one only,
hat raised her head, or looked my way;
nd she seemed to linger, but might not stay.

, on, a moving bridge they made cross the moon-stream from shade to shade oung and old, women and men;
any long-forgot, but remembered then.

d first there came a bitter laughter,
d a sound of tears a moment after;
d then a music so lofty and gay hat every morning, day by day, rive to recall it if I may.
—William Allingham.

MY COUSIN ALICK.

CONCLUDED.

I stayed two months in Ireland. It was a very happy time, though we saw a reat deal of company, and went out every vening when we were not ourselves entertaining. She was a very wasteful woman, ith none of my mother's sweetness and nning ways to soften her character, and e set all her wits to work to force me into marriage with a wealthy Irish gentleman ho made me an offer during my stay. But could not yield either to persuasions or mmands, for I did not even like him, much ss love him, and she was displeased with e, and I, of course, was unhappy. I think other could have not thoroughly understood unt Celia's disposition or she would not ve sent me to stay with her, I feel sure. st as I had made up my mind to write to r and tell her about it, and beg her to nd for me to come home, I received one om her instead, telling me that Cousin lick had arrived quite unexpectedly and as staying at our house.

"You will like to see," she wrote, "for, I remember, you and he were great friends ars ago. He is so altered, so much improved, we are all so pleased with him. If u can make up your mind to leave your nt's gay circle I should like you to return me at once. Alick is eager to see you, I think he will be surprised at the alteration in you."

"Who is this Cousin Alick?" inquired my nt, with a sharp look at me from under her ows when I showed her my mother's tter.

"He is father's nephew, Aunt Celia, and s been out in India since he was twenty-e."

"H'm!" How long ago was that?"

"Just ten years—yes, he must be thirty-now."

"Is he well off?"

"I believe so."

"H'm!" again, with another sharp glance my changing face. "Well, perhaps you d better go, child."

I knew what was in her mind, and it ade me ashamed, and yet my heart leaped gh with joy at the thought of meeting him gain. I wrote to my mother, telling her ow glad I should be to come home, but as y deliverance was near I reserved the tory of my troubles until I should see her. said, of course, that I should be very leased to meet Cousin Alick again, but no ord of the heart-gladness which I really lt passed my lips, or rather my pen.

My letter was answered in a few days by y father in person, who came to pay a ort visit to Aunt Celia as well as to fetch e home.

Oh, how intolerably long the time seemed o me—how that week dragged by—spent pleasantly by my father in shooting exoliti ns and other excursions of pleasure ith Aunt Celia's Irish friends. He knew I d wanted to come, but he had no idea of ever of nearest which possessed me—he did ot think that a week more or less could ake any difference to me, while the preious time of Alick's stay was being wasted, nd he might be returning to India soon for all I knew. And when he had smoked and hot and chatted one week away, he actually roposed staying another, and would certainly have carried out his intention had he not hanced to catch my eye at that moment, nd seeing, I am afraid, some regretful exression therein, altered his mind.

"No, we'll go on Tuesday after all," he aid kindly. "I forgot that my little Ruth ere had not seen her mother for two months, nd there's her cousin home from India, too. es, we'll go on Tuesday.'

"What sort of a young man is this nephew of yours?" inquired my aunt, just sharply as she had questioned me.

"As fine a fellow as ever breathed," returned my father, and I knew that from him s high praise.

I am afraid my cheeks flushed with pleasure as I heard his warm comendation.

"Rich?" pursued my aunt. My father quite understood her ideas, and if he had not she would not have cared.

"Oh, yes," he answered carelessly; quite a nabob. He made a nice little ortune of his own out there, and has the whole of my brother's property as well."

"Ah!" ejaculated my aunt, looking satisfied.

And after that she did not press father to ay as much as a day longer.

Tuesday night we spent on the boat. I could not sleep, though I was very comfortable; I lay awake, thinking that the morrow would bring me face to face with my ero once more after ten long years of anticipation. How would he look? What would he say? What would he think of me? Would he consider me improved as my mother's letter had certainly implied; Would he have quite forgotten those days we spent together in the garden long ago, or would he remember—a little? These were the thoughts which chased one another through my brain all the night long; but when morning came I was not weary. I was too happy and excited for that.

It was a good distance to Clipstone, and my father took the journey in his usual leisurely way, so that it was quite four o'clock in the afternoon before we reached our house.

Mother was in the drawing-room with Nina. They said Valerie had been out in the garden ever since luncheon, and that Alick had gone a little while ago to find her. Mother was very pleased to have me back again, even though I still proved obdurate, and she thought the change had done me good. No wonder, when my cheeks were so red—I could feel how they burned—and my eyes were so bright with eager looking forward. But she did not know that. Some one else had improved, too, during my absence. Nina was growing a most beautiful girl. She was seventeen now, and received a great deal of attention. She was not at all in Valerie's style, though quite as fair, with a clear skin and rich golden hair. But she was queenly, haughty—almost scornful to her many admirers, who served her as much in fear as in admiration. There were people who said that in another year or two she would quite eclipse her sister; but to me there was nobody in the world to compare with our laughing, witching, loving Valerie.

Mother had good reason to be proud of her two younger daughters, yet she never for one moment forgot me or slighted me, though I had certainly disappointed her in opposing her wishes so decidedly all these years. Oh, it was so good to meet her kindly smile, instead of Aunt Celia's sharp glances from beneath her brows—to hear her soft words of gentle guidance, instead of Aunt Celia's stern command!

Carus Wyckham came in while we were still in the first bustle of greeting. He said he had just half an hour to spare, so thought he would call in passing. And very glad was I to see him, even though my mind was full of other things. Carus and I were always good friends. We talked a few minutes longer, and when I had drunk a cup of tea, as I was not in the least tired, my dear mother, knowing that he call to see Valerie, and would be disappointed if he had to leave before she came in from the garden, proposed that he and I should go together, and take her and Alick by surprise.

"Very likely Alick won't know Ruth," she said smilingly, "and will wonder what strange lady Carus has brought with him."

So, after stealing a look into the glass to see if my hair was smooth, and—well—how I was looking altogether,—I stepped out into the lawn with Carus. That glance had satisfied me very well; I was looking my best, what with the unwonted color in my cheeks and the sparkle in my eyes. Of course, I could not compare with Valerie, but then no one expected that.

We crossed the lawn, Carus talking to me in his quiet, brotherly fashion, with the sunlight falling on his uncovered head and irradiating his calm, grave face. There were times—generally when he was preaching or praying in church—when I had seen that quiet face lit up with an almost heavenly radiance, and though I sometimes speculated as to how he and Valerie would get on together in married life, with their different tastes and inclinations, I yet could wonder at his power over her. There was something irresistible about this young, grave man.

We went to the arbor, but they were not there, nor in the rose garden or the hothouse. Then Carus thought of the kitchen garden. Valeria was fond of fruit, and he had sometimes found her there, eating strawberries or any fruit that happened to be in season, when he had searched all other places in vain. Of course, Alick would willingly join her in such a raid, so thither we bent our steps.

To reach the kitchen garden we had to pass a small but dense shrubbery, on the other side of which was a narrow path leading to the stables. As we went by we heard voices, and though we could not distinguish what was said, we recognized the owners directly—Valerie's soft accents only just audible, and a deep full voice, the sound of which made my heart beat fast and loud, for, though so much richer and more manly than when I heard it last, it was still the same voice which I had learned to love ten years ago.

"There they are!" said Carus; "they must have been to the stables, then."

And turning aside, we entered upon the narrow path behind the shrubbery, and half a dozen steps brought us in full view of Valerie and—her lover! Yes, lover—for his arms were folded about her, her head lay on his broad breast, and there they stood, all unconscious of observation, wholly wrapped up in their love!

Ah, what a face the sun shone upon—as dark as a Spaniard's, as noble as a king's—full of fire, and passion, and tenderness. My wildest dreams of my cousin Alick were more than realized when my eyes fell once more upon his splendid face, glowing with love for another than me.

"I ought not to have spoken," he was saying; "but I love you so, Valerie—I loved you directly I saw you— My dearest, I ought to be the last in the world to teach you to be faithful, yet, if what you tell me is true, it would be a sin to marry him."

"Oh, yes, yes," she answered and I never heard my sister's voice so moved before; "it is true, indeed. I never knew know what it was to love until you came. It was reverence, respect, liking, that I felt for him—anything but love."

"My sweet! But there, I won't call you that—I will not touch your lips again—while you belong to another!"

I had heard enough—too much. This was how they met, then, who had parted without so much as a farewell! I turned to Carus with a face that—but I cannot tell how I looked, I only know how I felt in that moment.

He took me by the hand and drew me gently away. We walked back in silence down the path we had come, and presently I raised my eyes to his face, scarcely conscious of my own pain in this first overwhelming of blankness.

He looked stricken; there is no other word to describe what I read in his face in that one glance. He walked on mechanically, until we reached the little creeper-covered arbor where we had first sought them, and there we went in and sat down, still in silence. Carus leaned his arms upon the table, and after a little while his golden head stooped down upon them until his face was hidden.

"Carus, Carus!" I cried at last, but he did not answer me.

"Carus," I wailed, "you are not alone, I am suffering, too. For, if you loved her, I loved him! All these years I have loved him and this is the end!"

I could not have spoken so to any other person on earth, but Carus was not an ordinary man. He seemed so far above men's weaknesses and foibles, and yet was so tender with all of them. He lifted his head at my sorrowful cry, and smiled on me with infinite compassion.

"Poor child!" he said. "And I was thinking how could I? Poor child!"

He laid his hand pityingly upon my head as I knelt beside the table, speaking gentle words of comfort and strength, putting aside all though of his own grief to minister to my need.

"What shall we do?" I asked presently.

"There is nothing for you to do," he returned. "You must endure; it is I who must act, and yours is often the harder task; but that will be mine also, a terward."

"Then you mean to—"

"I shall not see her again," he said quietly. "I shall write to her, and give her that which she craves—her freedom. My best beloved," he continued, speaking as if momentarily unconscious of my presence, "did you think I would for one moment withhold aught that might conduce to your happiness, your welfare? Heaven forbid it!"

His face was rapt, a light as if from another world beaming upon it. He looked down at me again, and returned to my sorrows.

"Poor child!" he said once more. "It is hard now, both for you and for me; but we know to whom to go in our sorrow."

"Were they—were they much together?" I asked after a pause.

"I do not know. If they were I did not notice it. I never thought—"

He broke off, and I took up his words with some bitterness.

"No, you never thought she could be false to you, that he would steal your best treasure."

"Don't, Ruth," he interposed with gentle firmness; "don't blame her, or him. They loved each other. they were made for each other; what wonder he spoke when he saw that his love was returned? Mine was the mistake, to think I might ever—I would not have it otherwise; it would have been, as he said, a sin for her to marry me, loving him."

He spoke so calmly, so firmly, but looking at his face as he raised his grave, blue eyes to the Summer sky for one moment, I felt that he had received his death-blow. I broke down into bitter weeping, until he laid his hand upon my head again. That tender touch, as of benediction, stopped my violent sobs, laid my passion to sleep with its soothing power. He paused a moment, standing by my side, and then stooped down to speak in my ear:

"Say unto happiness, 'I can do without thee;' with self-renunciation life begins."

I did not speak; I could not. The solemn words opened up to me such a noble life of self-forgetfulness. Was such a one as I able to walk in it? Could I take up my cross and go on my way with a smiling face, living for others alone, trampling bravely upon this poor wounded shrinking self? But he would, I knew, and I could but try. It did seem strange, though, and just at first a little cruel, that my beautiful sister, with her many conquests, must needs fix upon the one man whom I loved. Still, he might never have loved me; I had no real reason to think he would have done so even if he had never seen Valerie; it was only my foolish imagination after all.

And all Carus's devotion, all his patience and tenderness, were as nothing compared to Alick's love. Well, I could not blame her, seeing that I loved him myself.

"Ruth," he continued, "we must separate now, perhaps never to meet again in this world. But we shall never forget this hour. We have been linked together in sorrow; let us look forward to a joyful meeting in the glorious future that awaits us, where grief and trial are unknown. Good-bye, dear Ruth; may God bless and comfort you."

He pressed my hand and left me.

Alick and Valerie have been married ten years now. I kept my secret well, and no one has ever guessed the reason of my determination to remain single. It was hard at first; my life seemed very bare and desolate, stripped of its love, but time brought comfort, and every day brings me nearer to my rest. I never saw any one else for whom I could care, and I could not marry without true love; so here I am, an old maid, and my best affection is lavished on their oldest boy, Alick, such a fine bright lad, and really fond of his auntie, too.

Valerie is a sweet woman, her husband has just the qualities which she needs to supplement her own, and their union is indeed blessed. I think she grows every day more like her mother—our dear mother, who has slept beneath the turf these six years. I live near them, and see them and their children constantly, sometimes two or three times in a day. Alick often comes in to give advice about my plants and grapes; such a fine, noble-looking man he is. I wish his father could see him now, with his half-dozen children tumbling and laughing around him, and scrambling to walk next to "faver." We are capital friends, he and I, and when he sometimes teases me about my determined old maidenism, he never guesses that the faded woman who smiles so calmly at his sallies gave up all other love for the love of him. That is all put aside now, cast out of my life long ago, and the love which I might not feel for him is given to his children.

Six months after Carus Wyckham bade me farewell in the little arbor at Clipstone I heard of his death from fever caught during his ministrations to the fever-stricken in a poor London district. I knew he was glad to go; death would come to him as a welcome visitor. I did not sorrow for him, for I saw his heart was broken on the day he found my sister Valerie in Alick's arms. But I went to my desk and took out the letter he wrote to her, which she showed to me, and which I kept. Such a noble letter it was. She never guessed what he suffered; he let her think him cold, pre-occupied, anything, rather than give her pain for his sake. And in accordance with his implied wish I did not tell her the truth, I did not tell her his heart was broken, and I even kept the news of his death from her, lest she should think her inconstancy in any degree hastened it. For I knew he would wish it so.

[illegible] for [illegible] him now, forgotten all [illegible] in the love of her husband and children; [illegible] thick of him, and in the firelight I sometimes see his face as I saw it on that day in the garden when we parted for the last time.

THE END.

The Singhalese.

The greater number of children playing in the streets were boys. Girls are early accustomed to remain inside the house and employ themselves in the household work. Besides this, they develope very young, being often married at 10 or 12 years old, and old women at 29 or 30. Grandmothers of 25 to 30 are very frequent. A further significant fact is the permanent disproportion of male and female births among the Singhalese. The average is 10 boys to 8.9 girls. This fact is connected, to some extent at least, with the curious institution of polyandry. In spite of the efforts made by the English Government to suppress this custom, it maintains its ground, especially in the more remote districts of the island. It is not unusual to find two or three brothers with one wife in common, and ladies may be found the happy possessors of 10 or 12 husbands. These complicated family arrangements form the theme of many extraordinary stories; but it is very difficult to distinguish fact from fable on the subject. The Singhalese have a passion for music and dancing, and practice both arts according to a standard of taste very different from our own. Their principal instruments are the drum and the tom-tom, vigorously belabored with wooden drumsticks; besides these, they have reed-pipes, and a very primitive stringed instrument of one string. My evening calm was often broken in by the din of these earsplitting instruments, and if I followed the sound to its source I was sure to find, in front of a fire under a palm-tree, a group of 10 or a dozen naked brown fellows, gayly painted with white, yellow or red stripes, and indulging in the most extraordinary antics. A circle of spectactors stood round and followed the grotesque performance with devout attention.—Prof. Haeckel, in Nature.

The Crops and the Nile Level.

The crop depends so much on the Nile that one foot difference in flood-level is worth £2,000,000. The rise begins in June, reaching its highest in September, and then beginning to decline. From the records of a hundred years we find the proportion of floods was as follows: Forty-five good, from 24 to 27 feet; 15 excessive, over 27 feet; 40 feeble, from 10 to 20 feet. The variation of flood-level may, therefore, cause a serious disturbance in the Budget, as in years of drought the peasants will be unable to pay all the present land tax, although it is admitted to be moderate. Great efforts are, nevertheless, made to supply artificial means for irrigation in dry or deficient seasons. There are 476 steam-pumps—some belonging to Zawats, others to jobbers, who charge £3 per acre in watering the crops of the Fellaheen. There are also 107,200 Persian water-wheels, which employ 60,000 animals and 150,000 men during 180 days in the year. On the whole, the cost of irrigation is said to average 4s. an acre, but this is in years of good a Nile. If the Arabs could be got to abandon their prejudice against windmills, great good would accrue from 10,000 or 20,000 mills, such as the Americans use for watering gardens. This would enable a larger area to be reclaimed from the desert, for the surveys show that 1,100,000 acres of cultivable land are still unused, and it is a remarkable fact that as soon as the canal is opened anywhere the arid sands become at once converted into green fields. The advice of the first Caliph to his son, a thousand years ago, still holds good: "Beware of moneylenders, and devote one-third of the revenue to making canals."—M. G. Mulhall, in the Contemporary Review.

Life in Iceland.

Dr. Vigfusson, a teacher of Icelandic at the University of Oxford, has recently published some very interesting notes on the simplicity of life in his native land. "We are a spare folk," he says, "I myself was always thin and pale, in my youth. And, after all, food is not everything; the English perhaps think too much of their dinner. Dinners are good, but there is better in health of body and a contented mind." He goes on to say that in his young days his people lived sparingly and healthy. He never tasted wine till he was 22, or beer before he was grown up. Milk and whey or water were always to be had, and we did not wish for more." he says. Dr. Vigfusson says that on his father's farm, in his youth, were two Omagi or poor people, ; who had been allotted to the farm in accordance with the Icelandic custom of treating the poor. One of them was an old woman, the other a young girl of his own age, who became a kind of foster sister to him. "We drank of the same cup," he writes, "and ate of the same dish, were clad in the same stuff, were made to do all manner of errand-work—now to fetch in a pony, now a sheep, or a pitcher of water from the brook, or to carry food to the farm folk out on the land; in short, we went to and fro like a weaver's shuttle; in winter we would gather Iceland moss together or sit at home capping verses and ditties, a few of which are just about to appear for the first time in a volume of Icelandic poems, now being printed in The Clarendon Press. Not one member of the household ever let the child feel, by word or deed, that she was a pauper."

Changes in London.

London alters by leaps and bounds. An enormous reconstruction is now projected. The new law courts, which are asserted to be the architectural glory of the city, to have elbow room to display their beauties in. For that purpose Clement's Inn, Dane's Inn, and the block of buildings including Wych street and old Holywell street are to be swept away, and with the St. Clement's, Dane's church, which always figures in drawings of the neighboring Temple bar. The spot is full of social and historical intrest. Mr. Justice Shallow lived as a student in Clement's inn, and used to sally out thence with that other scapegrace, young Jack Falstaff. Defoe lived on Wych street, Dick Steele lodged there. Mistress Nell Gwynne stands where the witty and pretty Irish actress used to sit with the merry monarch and chaff the boys below.

ARABI IN PRISON.

How the Egyptian Leader Spends Most of His Time in the Spectator.

A Cairo correspondent sends the following:

"What is to be done with Arabi?" is the question in every one's mouth. Whether he is to be hanged or set free is the basis upon which many betting books are made up—even betting that he will be hanged, two to one that he will be set free. Whatever is done should be done at once. Curiously enough it was the Egyptian Ministers who first suggested that Arabi should have the benefit of an English barrister for his defence. When it became known, however, that Mr. Wilfrid Blunt had sent out a barrister and a solicitor for that purpose the Egyptian Ministers changed their minds and took the ground that "in view of the present disturbed state of public feeling it was imperative that Arabi's fate should be decided without delay, and objections which would be involved by the presence of English barristers, and which would be incomprehensible to the great body of the people."

In the meantime Arabi is shut up with his colleagues and satellites in a large public building in the European quarter of the town. He is watched by Circassian guards, who occupy the interior of the house, while a company of Grenadier Guards stand sentry at every possible exit from the extemporized prison. Arabi says that the Circassians treat him cruelly, and eat his bread and onions and steal his tobacco. He seems afraid of their assasinating him, and has asked several times that British soldiers be placed in the room with him. This demand has been refused, but an officer now sees that the Circassians do not abuse Arabi in any way.

Arabi now presents a striking contrast to the tall, erect horseman who on the 9th September, 1881, rode, sword in hand, up to the Khedive, who stood at the foot of the palace steps at Abdin. Surrounded by four batteries of Krupp guns and 9,000 troops the Khedive was a prisoner in his palace. I was an eye-witness of the scene that then took place. As Arabi rode up the Khedive, regaining for a moment the imperial demeanor of Mehemet Ali, extended himself to his full height, and drawing back his well formed head commanded Arabi, "Put up that sword!"

Arabi, taken completely by surprise, hesitated, and his sword hand trembled palpably. I then felt convinced that Arabi lacked physical courage. The Khedive, profiting by the hesitation, made a commanding gesture with his right hand. Arabi then swung up the hilt of his sabre and then replaced it in its scabbard. The Khedive then commanded, "Get off that horse!" This order Arabi also obeyed. It was then that Sir Auckland (then Mr.) Colvin bent toward the Khedive and said, "Order him shot!" Instead of this the Khedive said to Arabi, "What do you want?" Arabi seemed now to have completely recovered his presence of mind, and with six of his officers by his side replied:—I have three demands to make of you, and if they be not granted I have your successor ready. I first insist that the present Ministry (the Riaz Ministry) be dismissed; second, he pay of the army must be increased, as proposed by the Military Commission, and, third, an Egyptian Parliament must be established." The Khedive, after a short and rapid discussion with the Ministers, replied "I grant the first demand. I dismiss the Ministry. The other two demands I cannot decide upon without first referring them to the Sultan."

As soon as the decree of dismissing the Riaz Ministry was signed and handed to Arabi the troops, with music at their head, marched triumphantly from the Palace square, and thus began the drama which ended in the cast-iron picnic of a British army and a "march past" of Highlanders, Beloochees, Guardsmen and Bengal cavalry in the same Palace square just one year later. The Arabi victorious and triumphant was a large, very dark, powerfully built man, with elastic step, commanding presence—a man who resembled Dawison, the famous German tragedian, and who could make a fortune if he had chosen to act Othello instead of playing the role of a military pretender, or, of a tenth rate Cromwell. Such was the Arabi of a few months ago. The Arabi of to-day is a pale cafe au lait, bloated and haggard fellah. His eyes have lost their brilliancy and extraordinary power. His hair instead of being raven black, is streaked with gray. His once black but now gray moustache is reinforced by a stubby, streaked beard. He now stoops and walks with a shuffling, and uncertain step. He passes his time in praying and washing—two inseperable rituals of Islam. He also suffers from a severe attack of diarrhœa. He has in his room a large silver basin, and a pitcher with a long nose like a teapot. He constantly pours water, which is scented, over his hands. The poor man although now treated with the greatest kindness, is evidently suffering most severely, both mentally and physically. The sooner the trial begins the better for everybody.

Relics of Cœur De Lion.

There still exhists in Paris considerable remains of the great wall with turrets which Philip Augustus began before he joined Richard of England in his crusade. The positions of some of these relics are pointed out by Galignani as follows: "In the Cour de Rouen, near the Passage du Commerce, is the lower portion of a turret still intact, with a piece of wall covered with ivy. It forms part of the playground of a school, and children may be seen climbing over this relic of the past. In the Rue Clovis is another fragment bordering on the Rue des Fosses Saint-Victor. At the bottom of the court-yard of the house No. 31 Rue Dauphine is a turret almost entire, which serves as a warehouse and residence. In the Rue Guenegaud, No. 31 are also the remains of a tower which was joined to that in the Rue Dauphine by a wall which ran in one direction to the Tour de Neale, and in the other to the Porte Dauphine. It was recently used as a forge. On the right bank of the Seine the enceinte had a wider circumference. Several houses still contain fragments increased on their walls or inclosed in their gardens."

Try Trimble & Wright's TEA at 10 cts. per lb. Samples free.

The Standard.

MARKDALE, NOV. 16TH, 1882.

COUNTY ASSIZES.

It will be remembered by our readers that the Assize Court was adjourned from Thursday, Nov. 2nd, till Tuesday, 7th.

Unimportant cases occupied time of Tuesday.

Wednesday opened with the case of Pierson versus "Busy Times," a newspaper published in Port Elgin. The learned Counsel for the defence, Mr. D. A. Creasor, set forth the charge in a lucid and logical manner. It appears that Mr. Pierson was Chairman of the Town Council of Owen Sound Board of Water Works; and in that capacity he detected malgiversation on the part of those who ought to know better. The subject in question was brought before the Town Council of Owen Sound, and action was taken. Resulting from this the parties accused of the accusation were arrested and an attempt made to criminate Pierson having subpœned witness to swear a false oath. —verdict, $3.00 for plaintiff.

The Queen vs. Scott.—This case arose out of a Division Court case. McLean was tenant, and arrears of taxes became payable which McLean resisted, nence Distress by the Collector, Patrick Scott sued Council of Artemesia last January; defeated. Angus McLean, the Tenant sued Patrick and Hugh Scott (the deft. in this cause) for the amount of damage he (McLean) had sustained by seizure of Township Collector.—Nominal damages by judge Macpherson, only the amount of Taxes. They caught Scott on cross-examination, not through false testimony, but by those quiks that small pettifoggers usually resort tc.

(But who pays the piper?)

THE RAILWAY SITUATION.

There seems to be an impression prevailing in Toronto and elsewhere that the Northern and North-Western, and also the Toronto, Grey and Bruce will all shortly become the property of the Grand Trunk. We are aware that it is the intention of the Grand Trunk to build a line from Gravenhurst to Sault Ste Marie. This would certainly indicate that the Northern was to become a part of the Grand Trunk system, and will likely carry with it the North-Western. This will then leave only the Toronto, Grey and Bruce available for the Syndicate on the Georgian Bay and as a feeder to the Ontario and Quebec from this section. We opine that the Syndicate will recognize the necessity of having a line tap the Georgian Bay trade and that they will make a strong fight for the control of the Toronto, Grey and Bruce. In the hands of either the Grand Trunk or Syndicate we believe the success of the T. G. & B. R. is assured, and for the reason that it is the most direct route and will be very large patronized by the travelling public, and when the grain elevator at Owen Sound now under way is finished they will have better facilities at the port of Owen Sound than are furnished at other ports, Anent this subject the Toronto World of Saturday last says:—

The fusion of the Grand Trunk and Great Western has created a very favorable impression in England among the stockholders of both companies. The joint property under the fusion is considered worth some fourteen millions more than were the two roads as rivals. Consequently the English share and bondholders of the Northern and Hamilton and North-Western and the Toronto, Grey and Bruce are all ready to be gobbled up by the Grand Trunk. Some opposition is being shown in Canada, but a gentleman who is thoroughly informed on the situation says these three roads are bound to fall into the hands of the Grand Trunk within a few weeks. Men like Mr. Hendrie who have considerable stake in these lines are only holding out for the biggest price possible. He is going to show fight, but he will have to succumb or get the Canada Pacific to come to his assistance. He can't depend on the English proprietors sticking to him now that the success of the fusion of the trunk lines has proved successful.

ON OUR TABLE.

THE FARMER'S ADVOCATE FOR NOVEMBER.—This valuable farm journal is constantly improving and should be in every family.

THE COMMERCIAL is published in Winnipeg every week by Steen & Boyce. It is full of interesting matter for the financial, mercantile and manufacturing classes. Price $2 per annum.

OUR LITTLE ONES.—A monthly magaine for little folks; beautifully illustrated and just the thing for children. Price $1.50 per annum. Address Russell Pub. Co., Boston, Mass.

WELFORD'S MICROCOSM.—A religio-scientific monthly devoted to discoveries, theories, and investigations of modern science in their bearing on the religious thought of the age. Hall & Co., 23 Park Row, N. Y.

Mr. Thos. Davis, senr., has built a fine brick house this season on his farm about 3 miles from this village.

Correspondence.

NOTICE.—We wish it distinctly understood that we do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions expressed by our correspondents

To the Editor of the STANDARD.

DEAR SIR,—A correspondent of yours in last week's issue expresses himself as very much exercised in mind on account of something reported as having been said in an address in church on the previous Sunday afternoon. Had your correspondent been present to hear what was said I think he would not have been quite so much disturbed as he makes appear. Above all things, Mr. Editor, the Church of England prides herself in being scriptural, and every unprejudiced student of the New Testament knows well that divisions among professing Christians is as contrary to the spirit of Christianity as either dishonesty or untruthfulness. (See St. John xvii, 11. 20, 21; Romans xvi, 17; I Cor. i, 10.) How can it be said that professing Christians in these days are following the teachings of the New Testament, when so many of them are cut off from the old faith and Church of the Apostles and organized in distinct and separate communities? The evils of neglecting the principles of unity so clearly taught in the Bible is felt and acknowledged by several of the denominations in their attempt to amalgamate, which is a step in the right direction if only they would seek to build on the Divine base instead of a human one, and to return to the old church from which they went out. Among the many books in the world only one is of Divine origin (the Bible,) and among the many institutions for the benefit of mankind only one is of Divine authority (the Church,) and no one has any more right to set up a new church than he has to publish a new Bible; consequently as we teach our children to take the Bible as the guide of their life in all things, so likewise we teach them to submit to the observance of the Church (as established by Christ and His Apostles) for the discipline of their life, and always to be strictly consistent.

Your correspondent thinks that I lowered myself by accepting contributions to the church building fund from non-members of the church. I have always taken it for granted that all were sufficiently well informed in church history as to be aware how it was the Church of England fought for and obtained civil and religious liberty for us all. How it was her noble sons who died at the stake rather than live as traitors to scriptural truth. How she has been (under the Divine Head) the great instrument for spreading broadcast among the people the precious word of God in the language understood by them, and how, even now, the Protestant world is indebted to the clergy of the Church of England for books on Divinity whereby the ministers of all denominations gain the knowledge of Divine things, and that considering all these things I was assured that most of those separated from the old church had some feeling of gratitude toward her, and chose to show their gratitude by contributing in some small measure to her support, and it was not for me to break the bruised reed. Would to God we all could be united in the one dear old church as in ages gone by, and I pray God it may be so in His own good time. But, in the meantime, there need beno animosity; on my part there is not one particle, though some would fain make it appear that there is. How can we lightly regard any one for whom Christ died? But if your correspondent begrudges his contribution to the church building fund let him send in his name and his money shall be reiurned with pleasure.

Your correspondent talks about "This enlightened age." Well, truly it must be a very enlightened age when we can make religions and churches for themselves. In the dark ages of the past men used to have to search into the Bibles for the principles of their religion, but now a-days men are so clever that they can devise theories and opinions of their own in the same way as they discover new appliances for the lessening of manual labor, and so self-satisfied are they with their new religion that if they condescend to look into the Bible at all it is only to see if it agrees with them. Oh, for the child-like and teachable spirit of the good old times. So improved is the religion of the masses of this enlightened age that it allows them to become all things to all men, if by any means they may add to their temporal prosperity, and, moreover, so brave are the advocates of the present India-rubber system of religion that when they wish to say anything bearing on the subject the last of them takes shelter behind the letter "G."

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for liberty to say so much,

Believe me, yours truly,

JAMES WARD.

Mr. Dunbar, of Owen Sound, has been engaged as head teacher in Markdale school, for 1883.

Mr. Geo. Beatty, who was stabbed, is yet confined to his bed, but good hopes of his recovery are now entertained, BIG BUTTER SALE.—W. J McFarland has just sold and shipped about seven thousand dollars worth of butter for through shipment to Cardiff, Wales, Eng.

BIRTHS.

BRYAN—In Shelburne, on Sunday, the 5th Nov., the wife of Mr. James Bryan, of twins—boys.

SANDERS—In Glenelg, on Nov. 14th, 1882, the wife of John Sanders, of a daughter

MARRIAGES.

LEPPARD—MEGITT.—In Markdale, on Wednesday, Nov. 8th, by the Rev. A. Wilson, Mr. James Leppard to Miss Mary Ann Megitt, both of Glenelg.

CAMPAIGN—BROWN.—In Markdale, on Wednesday, Nov. 15th, by the Rev. A. Wilson, Mr. John Hilliard Campaigne, (blacksmith), to Miss Mary Ann Brown, both of Artemesia.

DIED.

CORCORAN.—In Markdale, on the 13th, Charles W., youngest son of Rev. J. S. Corcoran, aged 1 year, 3 weeks, 3 days.

T. C. & B. RAILWAY.

TIME TABLE.

Change of Time.

On and after Monday, Nov. 30th, 1882, trains will run as follows:

GOING N'TH. Read Down. A.M.	P.M.		GOING SOUTH Read Up. A.M.	P.M.
7 30	4 25	TORONTO	10 45	9 10
9 05	6 00	CARDWELL JUNC.	9 05	7 31
9 55	6 45	ORANGEVILLE...	8 27	6 50
12 20	8 44	MOUNT FOREST..	6 30	4 30
12 55	9 12	HARRISTON.....	6 05	4 00
2 25	10 15	TEESWATER	5 00	2 45
11 50	8 30	FLESHERTON	6 43	4 47
1 30	9 55	OWEN SOUND....	5 15	3 10
P.M.	P.M.		A.M.	P.M.

A Mixed Train will also run between Toronto and Owen Sound. See Time Table.

D. McNICOLL, Gen. Pass. Agt. EDMUND WRAGGE, General Manager.

Just Arrived!

A LARGE STOCK OF

NEW AND FASHIONABLE

DRY GOODS,

Boots and Shoes,

NEW GROCERIES,

At prices which will astonish you. Call and see.

Highest price paid for Butter and Eggs or any kind of Fowl at the CHEAP STORE.

JOHN DOUPE, Flesherton Station.

Nov. 15th, 1882. 114-3m.

CHATSWORTH HOUSE

(LATE MORROW HOUSE,)

CHATSWORTH, Ont.

THE undersigned having purchased the above property has had it thoroughly renovated and refurnished throughout beside making other new improvements, which will greatly add to the comfort and convenience of his guests, would respectfully solicit the patronage of the public generally. The best brands of liquors and cigars always in stock. Good meals and comfortable rooms guaranteed. Good stabling and attentive hostler. —C. H. MATHEWS, Prop. 114.

TO SELL OR RENT.

LOT 14, CON. 12, HOLLAND, 122 acres, 100 cleared, good buildings thereon. Terms easy. Apply to James Logan, Postmaster, near the premises, or to

M. S. KELLOW, Tara P. O.

November 14th, 1882. 114-tf.

ESTRAY.

CAME INTO THE PREMISES OF D. McMillan, Lot 10, Concession 3, S. D. Road, Artemesia, about the 1st of August, a Shearling Ram. The owner is requested to prove property, pay expenses and take him away.

DONALD McMILLAN.

Artemesia, Nov. 10th, 1882. 114 117

Teacher Wanted.

FOR SCHOOL SECTION No. 2, ARTEMESIA, holding Second or Third Class Certificate. Duties to commence on the second day of January, 1883. Apply, stating salary, to

JOHN HAZARD, Sec. & Treas. to Trustees, Flesherton P. O.

114–117

FOUND.

ON MONDAY LAST, ON THE TORONTO Line, a Watch. Owner can have it by proving property and paying for this advertisement.

N. A. McDIARMID.

Markdale, Nov. 13th, 1882. 114,

MISS LAMB,

DRESS-MAKER. UP-STAIRS IN Douglas' Block. Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges moderate.

Markdale, Nov. 15th, 1882. 114-3m.

MISS WELSH,

Dress & Mantlemaker. Charges moderate. Satisfaction guaranteed. Hill's Block, Sydenham street.

Markdale, Nov. 6th, 1882. 113-126

J. L. BROWNE

—IS—

Better than Ever!

—IN—

PHOTOS!

Cabinet, Card or Tablet.

A LARGE STOCK OF

FRAMES

NEWEST DESIGNS, CHEAP.

NOTICE TO FARMERS.

BUSINESS STILL INCREASING WITH

W. J. ROWE

—AT THE—

Barrhead Mill

UNDER THE OLD PROCESS.

Gristing and Chopping done every working day. Farmers from a distance can have their stuff home with them the same day. orders for Flo and Feed promptly

W. J ROWE, "Barrhead Mills."

October 2 n, 1882. 113-126

$500 Reward!

We will pay the above reward for any case of Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Indigestion, Constipation or Costiveness we cannot cure with West's Vegetable Liver Pills, when the directions are strictly complied with. They are purely Vegetable, and never fail to give satisfaction. Sugar Coated, Large Boxes, containing 30 Pills, 25 cts. For sale by all Druggists. Beware of counterfeits and immitations. The genuine manufactured only by JOHN C. WEST & CO., "The Pill Makers," 81 & 83 King St. East, Toronto, Ont. Free trial package sent by mail prepaid on receipt of a 3 cent stamp. For sale at Turner & Co. Drug Store.

NOTICE.

NOTICE is hereby given to all parties indebted to the estate of the late N. B. Grier, of Priceville, either by note or book account, are requested to settle the same on or before the 20th November, 1882, or costs will be incurred.

E. J. GRIER.

Priceville, Oct. 24th, 1882. 112.td.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from active practice having had placed in his hands by an East Indiana Missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma, and all Throat and Lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for General Debility and all nervous complaints, after having thoroughly tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, feels it is his duty to make it known to his fellows. The recipe, with full particulars, directions for preparation and use, and all necessary advice and instructions for successful treatment at your own home, will be received by you by return mail, free of charge, by addressing with stamp or stamped, self-addressed, envelope to

DR. J. C. RAYMOND, 164 Washington Street, Brooklyn, N.Y. 110-62

AUCTION SALE

—OF—

Valuable Farm Property

in the Township of Artemesia, in the County of Grey. There will be sold on Thursday, the 16th day of November, 1882,

at one o'clock in the afternoon, at Rutledge's Hotel, in the Village of Markdale,

By virtue of a power of sale contained in a certain mortgage, which will be produced at the sale, the following property, under mortgage from Robert Morrow, Lots Nos. 129 and 130, in the 2nd Concession West of the Toronto and Sydenham Road of the Township of Artemesia, County of Grey, containing 100 acres, more or less.

The following improvements are said to be on the premises:—75 acres cleared, having erected thereon two dwelling houses, a cedar log barn, with a brick yard, situated 5 miles from Markdale.

TERMS.—One-tenth of the purchase money to be paid down on day of sale. For balance, terms will be made known at the sale. For further particulars apply to

JONES BROS. & MACKENZIE, Solicitors, Masonic Hall, Toronto.

or to JOHN LYONS, Esq., Markdale.

Toronto, October 16th, 1882. 111

Health is Wealth!

Dr. E. C. WEST'S NERVE AND BRAIN TREATMENT, a guaranteed specific for Hysteria, Dizziness, Convulsions, Fits, Nervous Neuralgia, Headache, Nervous Prostration caused by the use of alcohol or tobacco, Wakefulness, Mental Depression, Softening of the Brain, resulting in Insanity and leading to misery, decay and death, Premature Old Age, Barrenness, Loss of Power in either sex, Involuntary losses and Spermatorrhœa, caused by over-exertion of the brain, self-abuse or over-indulgence. One box will on a recent cases. Each box contains one month's treatment. One dollar a box, or six boxes for five dollars; sent by mail prepaid on receipt of price. We guarantee six boxes to cure any case. With each order received by us for six boxes, accompanied with five dollars, we will send the purchaser a written guarantee to refund the money if the treatment does not effect a cure. Guarantees issued only by A. Turner & Co., sole authorized Agent for Markdale Ont. John C. West & Co. sole proprietor, Toronto, Ont.

MARKDALE MARKETS.

Fall Wheat, $0.80 to $0.85; Spring to $0.90; Barley, 60c; Peas, 65t; Oats Butter, 18c; Eggs, 22c; Potatoes, 30c; $9.00.

FLESHERTON MARKETS.

Fall Wheat, $0.80 to $0.84; Spring, to $0.90; Barley, 60c; Peas, 64c; Oats, Butter, 18c; Eggs, 22c; Potatoes, 30c; $9.00.

TORONTO MARKETS.

Fall Wheat, $0.90 to $0.93; Spring, to $1.02; Barley, 56c to 78c; Oats, 38c to Peas, 70c to 73c; Hogs, $8.00 to $8.50; toes, per bag, 75c to 80c; Butter, dairy, to 20c; eggs, 23c to 24c.

GENERAL

Blacksmithing

Flesherton Station.

The subscriber begs to announce to the inhabitants of Flesherton, Markdale and Priceville, and surrounding country, that he has commenced business at Flesherton Station, where he hopes by satisfactory work and moderate rates to secure a share of public patronage.

HORSE-SHOEING A SPECIALTY.

And guaranteed that in a case of interfering horses he will cure the defect in two shoeings or no charge will be made for the second shoeing.

A TRIAL SOLICITED.

HENRY WHITE.

Flesherton Station, Oct. 17, 1882. 110

A. HILL,

TAILOR.

Over McFarland's Store,

MARKDALE.

☞ Special attention to Cutting. ☜

If you want a Perfect Fit leave your Order with

A. HILL.

September 20th, 1882. 106.

Moffat Bros',

MARKDALE

Foundry!

—AND—

MACHINE WORKS,

MANUFACTURERS OF

MILL MACHINERY,

Steam Engines,

SHAFTING, HANGERS,

Pulleys, &c. Land Rollers,

PLOWS!

And Plow Points

MACHINERY REPAIRING

Done in a practical manner.

We also introduce our new

FAMILY MANGLE!

to the public. This new machine will mangle Linen, Cotton, and Woollen Goods, giving them a beautiful smooth and glossy appearance. It also improves the clothes, whereas hot irons injure them. We also manufacture of various designs for Buildings, Verandahs, &c. Ornamental Cast iron Chains, Pall Pillars, Fencing, Ventilators, Columns, Iron Beams, Gratings for Cellar Windows, &c.

ORNAMENTAL CRESTING

IRON & BRASS CASTINGS

Of Every Description Made to Order.

MOFFAT BROS.

ee Trimble & Wright's new SEWING MACHINES at $10 each.

RYBODY

HOULD SEE

F. DOLL'S

UTIFUL STOCK OF

s, Clocks, Jewelry,

LVERWARE,

TICAS, VIOTINS, &c.

ust buy, as the same quality of be sold at so low a figure by r jeweller. The reason is,

RTS DIRECT!

BUYS FOR CASH!

ving from 20 to 50 per cent.

—o—

16th inst. Mr. Doll's business d on at Markdale only. he hav- his Dundalk and Flesherton le him to give the attention to business which it requires.

—o—

and Clocks Cleaned nd Repaired.

ways turn out as represented,

$10 to $20 and buy a good ACHINE from W. F. Doll, only Also two splendid ORGANS for an half the catalogue price.

Oct. 10th, 1882. 109

d Immediately!

—FOR—

os.' New Elevator,

ls Wheat,
00 bushels Barley,
30,000 bushels Oats,
25,000 bushels Peas,
he highest market prices will be 111-tf.

cal Items.

ilies have moved into Markdale re advertised for sale at $7.50 he Meaford Monitor.

Freeborn has purchased a fine ar for service at his farm this . Wilkes left Owen Sound last nnipeg, where he will reside per-Pilkey has some fine specimens geese that carried off prizes at al Exhibition.

art Masson, brother of Messrs. m. Masson, of Owen Sound, has o partnership with Mr. E. B. ount Forest.

's name is mentioned as a can- eeve of Euphrasia for the coming essrs. D. R. Ellis, Wm. Fawcett, ne for Deputy Reeve.

e velveteens, black velvet- black velveteens, black grog- black silk velvet, very cheap and's.

collectors are on the war path. has visited the ratepayers in this nesia, and Mr. Cook put in an last week, and will be at the e, Markdale, on the 20th inst.

—Dr. Sproule, M. P., returned ba on Thursday. Mrs. Rutledge, d home on Tuesday after spend- ur months visiting friends down Richardson left for Manitoba on st.

e sometimes queer doings at aars, but at one in Lucan last pped the climax of extraordin- ings. It appears that the ladies n autograph quilt, which it was dispose of by the usual device of young ladies, and voting as to hem it would be presented to. each of the churchwardens nam- e young ladies, and when $90 had ed, the poll was about to be closed the ladies declared the winner, urchwarden who had nominated shed forward and deposited his and chain for "his girl." The hwarden then shouted out that nt in a thousand dollar house and as responded to by the first lay- $200 roll of bills and saying he more to back it. From the pub- unt it would appear that in the which ensued the proceedings without either being declared the the clergyman very properly re- ceive the watch and chain, the or the house and lot, and it is th the churchwardens have since CIDENT.—John, second son of Mr. Cormack, 10th con. of Glenelg, arr of age, met with an accident d fatal at East Saginaw, Mich., nst., while working on a skidway. ans several logs rolled over him almost instantly. His body was nd buried in the Roman Catholic lenelg Township, on Friday.

The Northern Lights presented a magnificent appearance on Sunday night.

We hear that Hill Bros. purpose running a woolen factory in connection with their elevator by steam power.

The Manitoba immigration foots up to 44,000 for the past year, of whom 27,000 were Canadians, mostly from Ontario.

W. F. Doll has engaged a man to fit up the skating rink this winter. He is determined to have it comfortable and run it "boss."

For A No. 1 Apples, Bread, Buns, Biscuit, Cakes, Confectionery, &c., go to Clark's bakery, Dunlop's block. Markdale.

We acknowledge with thanks the receipt of $1. being subscription to the STANDARD from Wesley Whitby, Portland P. O.; also J. S. Byers, Toronto.

Between damages and law costs, Listowel had to pay $506 recently in a suit brought by Mr. Climie for injuries sustained through a defective side walk.

Thanksgiving Day passed off very quietly in this place, business being suspended. Services were held in the Presbyterian church at 10.30 a.m., and in the Methodist church at 2 p. m.

McFarland is putting in a powerful steam engine to drive his elevator. He will also erect a stave factory which will be run by the same power, and will be under the management of Mr. J. H. Hull.

BEAT THIS, YE THRESHERS.—Messrs Ross & Roe, with their Vibrator Threshing Machine, threshed 5000 bushels of wheat in four hours, for Mr. Henry Hurd, Queen's Valley, Euphrasia. Trot out your big threshers.—Advance.

Subscribe for your local paper and pay for it in advance, and if you feel at the end of the year that you haven't got your money's worth, then your fortune is made. You can go to any Museum and get a salary of $5,000 a year as a curiosity.

Geo. Noble, auctioneer, has been favored with instructions from John Wesley Shore, lot 5, con. 8, Euphrasia, to sell by public auction on Monday, Nov. 27th, a large quantity of farm stock, implements, etc. Sale to commence at one o'clock p. m. Terms, twelve months credit on sums over $5 on approved joint notes.

VENNOR'S ALMANAC.—We have just received Vennor's Weather Almanac for 1883, published by A. Vogeler & Co., of Baltimore and Toronto. It is a readable publication and is of considerable interest to the public. Besides the weather predictions there are a large amount of useful information in regard to matters meteorological, so that its price, 10 cents, is not by any means, too much.

The STANDARD office is the place to get sale bills printed. Auctioneers say we do their bills the most prompt and satisfactory of any place they have dealt, and besides we have by far the largest and most general circulation of any local paper in Glenelg, Artemesia, Osprey, Euphrasia and Holland townships, and a free notice is given of every sale for which we print the bills.

DASTARDLY.—On Monday evening last Mr. John Middleton, in company with a neighbour, drove up to McAlear's Hotel, Flesherton Station, and after tying the horses to a post, went in. During the short interval which elapsed between the time they went in and came out again some villainous scoundrel had cut the harness on the horses to pieces almost. Mr. Middleton will pay $2 reward to any one giving information that will lead to the detection of the guilty party. —Advance.

The concert given on Thanksgiving Day in the Dufferin Hall by the Christ Church L. A. S. was a marked success in every way. The programme, which was not only lengthy but rich, was well sustained, almost every piece receiving an encore. The instrumental trios by Miss Ford and Messrs. Newen and Copeland, and by Messrs. Vick, Reid and Douglass, of Owen Sound, were enthusiastically received, as they well deserved to be; Mr. Vick is a most accomplished violinist. Where all did so well it is difficult to make distinction, but we could not in fairness allow to pass unnoticed the vocal solos of Mrs. Asbury and Miss Kelsey, from Durham, both of whom possess talent rarely surpassed by the most popular professionals. We were pleased to notice for the first time the appearance of Mrs. Turner as one of our Markdale amateurs, and we welcome the addition to our local talent. The Christ Church L. A. S. have always been successful in their attempts to provide the public with an enjoyable and profitable evening's amusement, and we must say that this was one of their best and most successful efforts. Proceeds $45.70.

BUCKLEN'S ARNICA SALVE.

The best salve in the world for Cuts, Bruises, Sores, Ulcers, Salt Rheum, Fever Sores, Tetter, Chapped Hands, Chilblains, Corns, and all Skin Eruptions, and Positively cures Piles. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by A. Turner & Co.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.

The advertiser, having been permanently cured of that dread disease, Consumption, by a simple remedy, is anxious to make known to his fellow sufferers the means of cure. To all who desire it, he will send a copy of the prescription used, (free of charge,) with the directions for prepairing and using the same which they will find a SURE CURE for CONSUMPTION, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, &c.

Parties wishing the Prescription, will please address, Rev. E. A. Wilson, 149 Penn st., Williamsburgh, N. Y. 75-127

AGENTS WANTED.—Big pay.—Light Work. Steady Employment. Samples free. Address, M. L. BYRN, 46 Nassau stree New York. 20

VALUABLE PROPERTY

FOR SALE

IN THE TOWN OF DURHAM, IN THE COUNTY OF GREY.

THE following valuable town properties will be sold on reasonable terms or will be rented for a term of years, or exchange for farm propeoty.

1st.

Lot No. 1 on the west side of Garafraxa street and south of Hunter street, opposite Mr. J. H. Hunter's store house, well fenced and first class frame buildings, good cellars, hard and soft water, a most conveniant residence and would make a good business stand.

2nd,

That most desirable property being park lots NOS. 2 and 3 on the north side of George st., 8 acres more or less, well fenced, front fenced with pickets, one and a half acres of a thriving young orchard and very convenient to the railway station.

The east half of the west half on lot 18 on the west side of countess street with a new frame house and kitchen, good stable and wood shed, well fenced, front fence painted white, hard and soft water on the premises.

4th,

Park Lot No. 8, Wm. Hunter's, Survey.

5th

Lots 1 and 2, Presbyterian Survey.

6th,

Lot No 15 on the North side of Mill street in the village of Markdale close to the railway station, with good frame house thereon. If the above properties are sold the very best title will be given free from all encumbrances.

—Also the—

Foliowing Farming Properties.

will be sold on reasonable terms of payment.

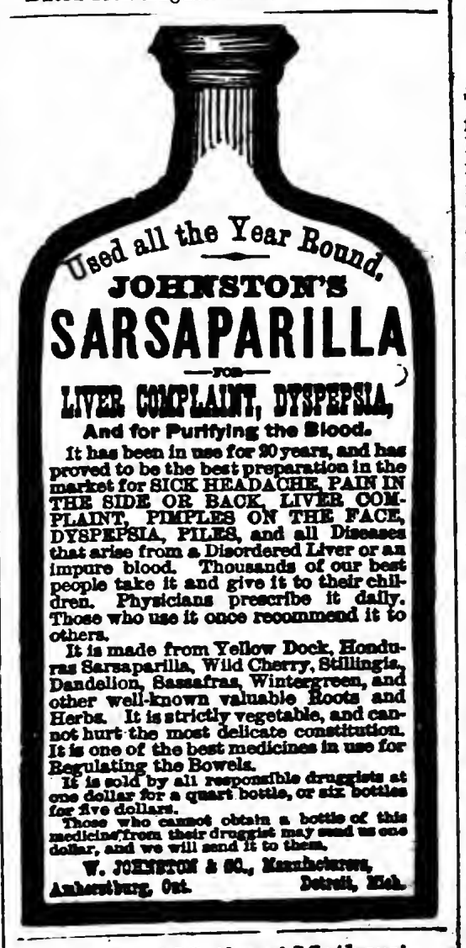
7th,

Lot No. 22, Con. 9 Glenelg, 100 acres more or less, 3½ miles from the T. G. & B. R. at Markdale, 75 acres cleared, a new frame house and two log barns.

8th

Lot No. 93 in the 3rd Con. W. T. & S. R., Glenelg. 50 acres, about 45 acres cleared and good log buildings, about 2½ miles from Markdale station T. G. & B. R.

9th,



The west half lot 17, Con. 4. N. D. R., Glenelg, 50 acres 40 acres cleared, good rough cast house and orchard on the premises. The house and one acre will be reserved during the life of the occupants who are now between 80 and 85 years of age.

10th

East part lot No. 1. con 2 Normanby, 63 acres, about 50 acres cleared, situation about 2 miles from the town of Durham. For further particulars apply to

FINLEY MACRAE, Durham.

Dated 15th August. 1882. tf 104.

Mothers! Mothers! Mothers!

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the excruciating pain of cutting teeth! If so, go at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately—depend upon it; there is no mistake about it. There is not a mother upon earth who has ever used it, who will not tell you at once that it will regulate the bowels, and give rest to the mother, and relief and health to the child, operating like magic. It is perfectly safe to use in all cases, and pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Sold everywhere at 25 cents a bottle. 75-127

Dye Stuffs.

Indigo,
Madder,
Logwood,
Fustic,
Camwood,
Cochineal,
Bluestone,
Madder Compound,
Copperas,
Bichromate Potash,
Cream Tartar,
Alum, and
many other Articles used in Dyeing.
Also, a large variety of the best Aniline Dyes.

Medical Hall.

A. Turner & Co.

Re-Fresh-ing

In the cool assertion of some people that they can sell below cost, &c., it may not be amiss to let the public of Markdale and surrounding country know that

Wilson Benson,

of the "BELFAST HOUSE." MARKDALE, can sell "cheaper than the cheapest," and "better than the best," all kinds of

Groceries, Liquors, &c.

Consisting of

TEAS, TOBACCOS, SPICES, CANNED FISH, ETC.,

And for those wishing pure Wine for sacramental purposes, will find a brand that will equal anything on this side the Atlantic.

Other Liquors equally pure.

SPECIAL! Pure Holland Gin.

Cheese from the best manufactories.

Our Whiskies are from the firm of Gooderham & Worts, Toronto, and the public may rely on receiving them as they are sent.

FLOUR, POTATOES, and everything in the household line kept constantly on hand.

Henceforth my Store will be supplied with Fruits of all kinds, such as

APPLES, PEARS, PLUMS, &c.

FRUIT CAKES of all kinds always kept on hand.

Essences, Hair Oils, and Perfumery of the choicest nectars.

TOILET & FANCY SOAPS, better than the best.

CANADIAN & WESTERN PORK, of first quality.

Everything in the Grocery Line kept on a fuller and more complete scale than at any other place in Markdale.

WILSON BENSON.

PIMPLES.

I will mail (Free) the recipe for a simple VEGETABLE BALM that will remove TAN-FRECKLES, PIMPLES and BLOTCHES, leaving the skin soft, clear and beautiful; also instructions for producing a luxuriant growth of hair on a bald head or smooth face. Address, enclosing a 3c. stamp, Ben. Vandelf & Co., 5 Beekman st., N. Y. 75-127

ERRORS OF YOUTH.

A GENTLEMAN who suffered for years from NERVOUS DEBILITY, PREMATURE DECAY, and all the effects of youthful indiscretion will, for the sake of suffering humanity, send free to all who need it, the recipe and directions for making the simple remedy by which he was cured. Sufferers wishing to profit by the advertiser's experience can do so by addressing in perfect confidence, JOHN B. OGDEN.
75-127 42 Cedar St., New York.

Gold. Great chance to make money. Those who always take advantage of the good chances for making money that are offered, generally become wealthy, while those who do not improve such chances remain in poverty. We want many men, women, boys and girls to work for us right in their own localities. Any one can do the work properly from the first start. The business will pay more than ten times ordinary wages. Expensive outfit furnished free. No one who engages fails to make money rapidly You can devote your whole time in the work, or only your spare moments. Full information and all that is needed sent free. Addres. STINSON & Co., Portland Maine. 71-126

MANHOOD

HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED

SEAL

We have recently published a new edition of Dr. CULVERWELL'S CELEBRATED ESSAY on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, &c., resulting from excesses.

☞ Price, in sealed envelope, only 6 cents, or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

☞ This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Address

The Culverwell Medical Co.,
P.O. box 450 41 Ann St., New York.

MARKDALE

Meat Market.

A constant supply of

Fresh Meats!

on hand, at the

Lowest Living Prices.

Orders solicited, and delivered free to all parts of the Town.

Farmers having fat stock to dispose of, will please leave their addresses.

TERMS, STRICTLY CASH.

FRED. SARJEANT.

Markdale, March 23, 1882. 80-ly

SEEING IS BELIEVING.

GENTLEMEN,—
If you want a first-class

Buggie or Wagon

call at

MCKENNA & MASON'S

CARRIAGE WORKS

MARKDALE.

They can supply you with anything from a

Lumber Wagon

up to

Extension Top Phæton.

To buy from them is to

SAVE MONEY!

They are both practical workmen, and employ none but

PRACTICAL WORKMEN

They guarantee their work
Second to none for Lightness of Draught and Superiority of Finish.

They use nothing but First-class White Oak for Wagons, and thrice Extra Second Growth Hickory for light work.

The immense amount of work turned out of McKenna & Mason's shop is sufficien proof of the wide reputation they enjoy for doing good work.

THE BEST IS THE CHEAPEST IN THE END
Poor cheap work we positively will not take.

Special attention given to Re-Trimming and Repainting all classes of Carriage Work.

Satisfaction guaranteed (or No Pay) in

HORSESHOEING

SHOP—On Mill Street opposite to Sproule's Hotel.

McKENNA & MASON.

THOS. MATHEWS,

HarneSS EstaBlishmenT!

MARKDALE.

EVERYTHING IN OUR LINE KEPT ON HAND OR MADE TO ORDER ON SHORT NOTICE.

LIVERY!

IN CONNECTION.

GEORGE WILSON.

Wholesale and Retail

BUTCHER!

BEEF, PORK OR MUTTON SUPPLIED, from a single pound to a whole carcass, at the lowest market prices.

FISH & FOWL IN THEIR SEASON

Farmers having Fat Cattle, Sheep, or Pigs to dispose of will do well to call at No. 3 Burns' Block, opposite the new Union Block.

Markdale, Oct. 25th, 1881

Nothing Like Leather.

M. M. M'LEOD,

MARKDALE.

NOT TO BE BEATEN!

All those who may have had the misfortune to have been born barefooted will bear in mind that we have just received the largest and best stock of leather ever before brought into Markdale, consisting of Spanish Sole, French Kip and Calf, and are now prepared to manufacture Ladies, Gents, Youths and Misses boots and shoes, from the stoga to the finest kid and prunella.

Sewed Work a Specialty.

All work warranted. Invisible patching also done here.

M. M. McLEOD.

Markdale, Sept 12th, 1881.

WEDDING CAKE

Some Historical Reminiscences Concerning it.—How it Works on the Newly Married Couple, and the Young and Old Maids Who "Dream" on it.

Peculiar Customs of the Sandemen Islanders.

The origin of wedding cake is lost in the shadows of antiquity. Civilization is gradually thrusting wedding cake out of common use, but the memory of man does not reach back to a period when wedding cake was unknown. In Pompeiian houses have been discovered slices of a fabric so hard, black, and utterly indigestible that antiquarians have instantly recognized it as Roman wedding cake; and it is the opinion of the best modern authorities that a peculiar substance frequently found in Egyptian mummy cases, and supposed by early Egyptologists to be bitumen in an amorphous state, is simply wedding cake made in Egyptian forges four or five thousand years ago.

With the appearance of genuine wedding cake we are all familiar. We know the black cement in which fossilized fruits, spices, and slabs of yellow gum-shellac are imbedded, and the plaster of Paris with which the indigestible and deadly edifice is crowned. Attempts have been made of late years to substitute edible and harmless cake for the fatal and customary wedding cake, but these attempts, originating as they did in a total misconception of the nature and functions of wedding cake, failed to meet with any popular support. The true wedding cake—a small cube of which when placed under a maiden's pillow is so hard that it frequently causes a pressure on the brain, giving rise to frightful dreams of perpetual celibacy, and which, when eaten by a child under ten years of age, or admitted to any but a robust and pork-proof stomach, produces death in less than three hours—has nothing in common with edible cake except the name.

What was the original purpose which wedding cake was intended to serve? This is a question to which no satisfactory answer can be found in any literature. The "Kalevala" speaks of "the fatal wedding cake of Siva," but it does not throw any light upon the subject which Siva had in view in its distribution. The learned Sanchoniathon describes as "the boldest of the Phœnicians" a soldier who "delighted in the roar of the lion, and feared neither wedding cake, nor deadly serpents, nor the wrath of kings." The fatal nature of wedding cake is alluded to by a score of ancient authors, but they never seem to have thought it necessary to explain why so deadly a substance was sent to the friends of newly married couples.

There is a custom prevailing among the inhabitants of the Sandeman Islands which may throw a little light upon the civilized use of wedding cake. When a native girl, whose exceptional beauty has brought her many suitors, is knocked down with a club and carried off by her accepted lover, the wedded pair within forty-eight hours of the wedding send a cup of poison distilled from the hula-hula-tree to each and every one of the bride's former admirers. If any recipient feels that he cannot become reconciled to the marriage, he drinks the poison and dies; but if he decides that he will survive the loss of his intended wife, he throws away the poison, and feels bound in honor never to show the slightest sign of disappointment. By this admirable system the husband is spared the pangs of jealousy, and is able to live on friendly terms with the surviving admirers of his wife. It is strange that the custom of sending wedding poison to unsuccessful suitors has never spread beyond the Sandeman Islands, but, as every one knows, each tribe or nation of Polynesians has its own peculiar customs, which are cherished with the utmost care as badges of independence.

Now it is quite possible that wedding cake was in its origin precisely analogous to the wedding poison of the Sandeman Islanders. It may have been more swiftly fatal in prehistoric times than it is at present, and it may have been used solely with the view of securing newly married people in the possession of undisturbed happiness. At present it fails to accomplish this purpose because no one ever dreams of eating it. Of course an occasional child surreptitiously devours wedding cake and perishes miserably, just as occasional and entirely incomprehensible children lunch on corrosive sublimate, or drink with apparent relish quantities of sulphuric acid. So, too, in rare instances, determined suicides have compassed their nefarious end with the help of wedding cake. Still, it is entirely accurate to say that no one to whom wedding cake is sent ever eats it, and it is highly improbably that the senders are ever actuated by a desire to destroy life.

If wedding cake was not originally intended as a means of removing dissatisfied lovers, it was in all probability purely symbolic. The Jewish custom of eating unleavened bread at the Passover is an illustration of the symbolic use of food. Nothing more unpalatable than unleavened bread can well be imagined; but this very peculiarity made it all the more efficacious in reminding the Jews of their escape from Egypt. They could comprehend how terribly disagreeable Egypt must have been under the rule of the National party, when the children of Israel were glad to leave it, even at the cost of having nothing for supper except unleavened bread.

Now may not wedding cake have had in the beginning a symbolic reference to the escape of the bride from the state of celibacy? By sending wedding cake to her friends she may have meant to say, "I would eat even this rather than remain single." Or the wedding cake may have been intended to remind those to whom it was sent that they had better eat it at once and perish, rather than to attempt to pass through life without husbands or wives. If we once assume that wedding cake was as much a symbol among those who first used it as unleavened bread was among the Jews, we have an explanation of an otherwise almost inexplicable custom. The meaning of it is, of course, utterly unknown to those who now send wedding cake to their friends, but it is only one of many customs that have survived their meaning as well as their usefulness.

Navigation is closed on the Neva, which is blocked with ice.

Wages' Scottish Residence.

The announcement that in future the Prince of Wales when in Scotland will not reside at Abergeldie castle, says the English journal Land, will surprise no one who has any knowledge of that pokey stronghold. Abergeldie contains a multitude of very small badly arranged and ill-ventilated apartments, and from the point of view of convenience, it would be none the worse for being "turned inside out." During his future visits to the north the Prince will stay at Birkhall, his own shooting box near Ballaster. Abergeldie is the property of her Majesty, who merely lends it to the prince. Birkhall is finely situated and commands magnificent views over the lower Deeside valley. It is a well-built and substantial house of a very plain style of architecture, and was erected not long before 1715 by one of the numerous branches of the Gordous. The Birkhall estate, which like the house is the property of the Prince of Wales, extends to 6,810 acres. It stands on the county valuation roll as being of the value of £750 per annum—£250 for the house, shooting, etc., and £500 as rent paid by the tenants. During the last three years his royal highness has spent over £20,000 in the improvement of the farms upon the estate and in the erection of new buildings. On one farm alone the expenditure has amounted to £4,000, exclusive of the tenants outlay. Most of the farm leases have been renewed during the last two or three years, and it is said that the conditions named in the leases were such as to be eminently satisfactory to the tenants. The result is that the prince is very popular on Deeside, and the news that he intends to spend some time every autumn at Birkhall has been received with pleasure by his tenants.

The Russian Sentry.

As a disciplinarian he was firm and strict. No point was too minute to be overlooked. Skobeleff's videttes were never caught napping. His knowledge of the details of military duty was universal—even to sounding all the bugle calls. An illustration of the discipline of his corps occurs to me. I had been talking with him of military breech-loaders and discussing the merits of the various systems. Taking a "Berdan," with which the troops were latterly armed, from a soldier, he undid the breech and lock and explained the mechanism with the precision of a gunsmith. Returning the rifle to the soldier, he turned, and walking up to a sentry a few paces distant, he said, "Let me see your rifle"—extending his hand as he spoke. The man saluted and replied, "I cannot, your excellency." "But I want to see if it is clean, persisted the general. "I cannot, your Excellency," again said the sentry, as firm as a rock. Skobeleff smiled, pulled his ears, and walked on. I asked an explanation, whereupon he said that a rule of war with him was that no sentry on duty was on any account to give up possession of his arms—not even to the Czar himself. "But," said I, "suppose the sentry had given up his rifle when you were seemingly so serious in asking it. What then?" "He would have been shot," quietly replied the General, "for disobedience to orders in the time of war.—The Fortnightly Review.

Utilizing Grass

Grass is the cream of the soil. Every element in this composition has been drawn from the soil; and if that grass were returned, as it should be, to the hungry land, every leaf and stem would add to the productiveness of the seed-bed. Yet a great many people who supervise the management of lawns and gardens direct every green thing in the form of grass to be cast on the beaten track of the highway, as if such plant-growth, if allowed to decay where it grew, would exert a pernicious influence on the fertility of the land.

There is no better fertilizer for lawns than the grass which the lawn-mower cuts down. The mown grass should never be raked off the lawn. If allowed to remain where it grew, every spear and stem will soon settle around the live roots of the growing herbage, where it will decay, and thus provide excellent pabulum for the roots that produced a crop. If the grass and weeds must be removed, let all such accumulations be spread neatly around the vines of strawberries, or near the bushes of blackberries or currants. If weeds and grass be collected in a pile, during hot and dry weather, every root and stem will soon die.

All the grass, weeds, and grass-roots that can be collected together, should be utilized for the purpose of mulching growing plants. Decayed grass will make rich land, and will keep the surface of the soil mellow. Don't allow grass to be wasted.—American Garden.

Alive in her Shroud.

On Tuesday afternoon last Mrs. W. L. Pettitt, wife of the teller of the first National Bank of Fort Wayne, apparently died, and the undertaker took charge of the body. Arrangements were making for the funeral, and watchers sitting with the supposed corpse. At ten o'clock at night a faint sigh was heard coming from the body. The watchers started to their feet with alarm, stepped to her side, found her eyes were wide open, while in a voice that was scarcely an audible whisper she recognized them and asked for her husband. For a moment the attendants were speechless with wonder at the resurrection of the dead; then, with the revulsion of feeling, they almost screamed with excitement. The husband came in haste, and with joy unspeakable elapsed again his living wife in his arms The doctor was sent for, and he was as much astonished as the rest of the household at beholding living what in his medical science he had declared dead. He administered the proper restoratives, and the patient rapidly recovered.

Wanting Protection.

From Moscow it is reported that since the Anglo-Afghan war English trade in Central Asia has made prodigious strides. To Bokhara alone two caravans are sent weekly from India with goods, and these are sold not only throughout Turkestan, but even in the southern districts of Siberia, whence they are gradually driving Russian products, and the merchants of Moscow have now petitioned their Government to establish a special prohibitive tariff for goods imported into Russia via Turkestan. English steamers already ply on the Upper Amu-Darja under the Afghan flag, and that these supply the towns of Central Asia with goods despached by way of Balkh.

Victims of Melancholy.

The terrible tragedy enacted in New York where a wife and mother deliberately killed herself and her three children, sent a shock throughout the entire community. It is the first and, and sad as it is to say it, will probably not be the last exhibition of a perverted and jangled mind, where gloomy and horrid impulses have displaced the sweetest of tempers and the most affectionate of dispositions; where, almost without warning, a lovely woman, possessing graces and beauties of both mind and body, is transformed into a demon as hideous as Dante or Milton ever imagined.

But all specialists in mental diseases declare that many a noble man and splendid woman is walking on the edge of this terrible precipice over which they are liable at any moment to plunge. This critical state of the mental faculties is one of the prices we are forced to pay for our finely wrought, high-strung civilization. It is a danger happily not frequent, but still a threatening one, which lurks in excitable and diseased constitutions. Luckily it often proceeds from bodily ill-health and is curable, but unluckily, also, may break out in some serious form before it is healed.

An unaccountable desire to kill, without motives of hatred, revenge or passion of any sort, is a common symptom of this derangement of mind. The victim may be the most loved and cherished friend or relative. The more the mother loves her offspring the more she wants when she kills herself to kill her children, so that either they may go with her to a happier realm or not be left to bear the evils and burdens of a life which her melancholy has made unbearable to her. Often this temptation to kill, in order simply to gratify an insane desire to kill, is fought and resisted. But some day a sudden opportunity carries them away. It is like the love of intoxicating liquor, which the victim knows is irrational, evil and destructive, and which he resists for years, only to be overwhelmed by some unforeseen and tempting chance. It is pronounced by some specialists to be a purely nervous disturbance, and is akin to that feeling which nervous and restless people experience when, confined too long, they are tempted to throw a chair at the head of somebody, who is disturbing them by talking, humming, whistling, drumming with the fingers, or in some other way irritating irritable nerves.

A writer in the New York Times tells of one victim of this mania who lately confessed to Dr. Beard or Dr. Hammond that he came very near killing his gardener. They had no dispute, but the man was at work in the garden when his employer passed him. A spade that was lying near he picked up, intending to brain the gardener the moment he turned his back. Luckily the gardener did not do so, and the feeling passing off he escaped the danger. About a year ago a woman in Jersey City killed five or six of her children and then tried to commit suicide, but failed. It is seldom, says Dr. Spitzka, another specialist, that these victims of melancholy ake a fiendish delight in these crimes. Their gloom and despair create compassion for those that they imagine must, like themselves, be victims of this dark temper, and they seek to put an end to the imaginary suffering.

The worst phase of this tragedy is its publicity. Those similarly affected will read, hear and talk of it; will compare with their own sympathies and experiences, and be tempted to imitate it. It not unfrequently happens that such prominent events are followed by an epidemic or "carnival"—to use a much-abused word—of suicides and murder.

Two Ghost Stories.

Ghost stories, which have suffered an eclipse for some time, appear to be undergoing a revival. Here is one that is entitled to credence if any are. It is usually only servants or ignorant persons who see ghosts, but in this case the apparition was seen by two persons simultaneously, both of them possessed more than common vigor of mind.

President Tyler had a sister who was reckoned one of the most gifted women of her day. She was the namesake of Patrick Henry and the pet of Jefferson. She lived with her father, Gov. Tyler, at Greenway, in Charles City country, Va. One night, while sleeping in the bed with a cousin, a young woman of her own age, she awoke and saw her mother, who had been dead for some months, sitting in the window seat. It was a bright night in summer, and under the window was the bed of a younger sister who was an infant at the time of her mother's death. The apparition leaned over the child and gazed intently on it. Miss Tyler remembered to have heard that an apparition would remain as long as the eyes were fixed on it. She looked steadily at it without the least alarm. Now comes the strangest part of the story. The girl lying by her side said quietly, "Maria, there is your mother." Then the form melted away.

Some years afterward, after Gov. Tyler's death, his daughter was at Greenway again. She was then married, and was visiting the first wife of her brother, President Tyler. He was absent at Washington, being in the Senate. One night one of Mrs. Tyler's children became ill, and her sister-in-law went to the nursery to help take care of it. She suggested that she should get a remedy from her own room, and, taking a candle in her hand, started for it. On her return, as she passed the staircase, she saw her father standing before her. The same idea flashed into her mind that she could hold the apparition by her fixed gaze. She observed it carefully, and recognized a certain suit of brown cloth which she had sometimes seen the Governor wear, and she was self-possessed enough to look for a mole on his forehead which was a birth mark. Mrs. Tyler, after waiting some minutes, called to her to hasten, whereupon the figure vanished.

An Address to a Barber.

"I want a close shave. I am in a hurry. Do not put any oil or grease upon my hair. I never use bay rum or cosmetics. Please comb my hair up and back. I do not wish my hair trimmed or cut. I do not want any hair tonic or skin medicine. I do not want any shampoo or a bath. I have not heard the latest news from Egypt, nor do I want to. I care nothing for politics, or crime, or society. I do not care for stock or market reports. I am not a stranger in the city and I am not going to the ball this evening. I am a professor in a deaf and dumb institute and I am glad of it. Go ahead and shave me."—Chicago Herald.

How to Pronounce "Clerk."

Freeman, the historian, in a readable paper on American speech and pronunciation published since his return to England, well says: "The words 'metropolis' and 'provinces,' used in this way, I venture to call slang, whether the city which is set up above its fellows is London or New York. Anyhow the use of them is in no way distinctively American; indeed the misuse of the word province is, I fancy, excessively rare in America, and it is certainly borrowed from England. Each side of the ocean unluckily finds it easier to copy the abuses of the other side than to stick to the noble heritage which is common to both." What he has to say about the pronunciation of the word "clerk" is worth reproduction at length:

The word "clerk" is in England usually sounded "clark," while in America it is usually sounded "clurk." I say "usually," because I did once hear "clurk" in England—from a London shopman—and because I was told at Philadelphia that some old people there still said "clark," and—a most important fact—that those who said "clark" also said "marchant." Now it is quite certain that "clark" is the older pronunciation—the pronunciation which the first settlers must have taken with them. This is proved by the fact that the word as a surname—and it is one of the commonest of surnames—is always sounded and most commonly written "Clark" or "Clarke." I suspect that "Clerk" as a surname, so spelled, distinctively "Scotch," in the modern sense of that word. Also in writers of the sixteenth and early seventeenth century, the word itself is commonly written "clark" or "clarke." But of course "clerk" was at all times the most clerky spelling, as showing the French and Latin origin of the word. It is plain therefore that the pronunciation "clurk" is not traditional, but has been brought in artificially out of a notion of making the sound conform to the spelling. But "clurk" is no more the true sound than "clark;" the true sound is "clairk," like French "clerc," and a Scotsman would surely sound it so. "Clark" and "clurk" are both mere approximations to the French sound, and "clark" is the older and surely the most natural approximation. The truth is that we cannot sound "clerk" as it is spelled; that is we cannot give the e before r the same sound that we give it when it is followed by any other consonant. We cannot sound e in "clerk" exactly as we sound e in "tent." This applies to a crowd of words, some of Teutonic, some of Latin origin, in which the spelling is e, but in which the sound has, just as in "clerk," fluctuated between a and u. The old people at Philadelphia who said "clark" also said "marchant." And quite rightly, for they had on their side both older English usage and, in this case, the French spelling itself. The sound "marchant" has come in, both in England and in America, by exactly the same process as that by which the sound "clurk" has come in America, but not in England.

Rothschild's Start.

Rothschild was the third son of a baker at Frankfort. "There was not," he said, "room enough for us all in the city. I dealt in English goods. One great trader came there who had the market all to himself; he was quite the great man, and did us a favor if he sold us the goods. Somehow I offended him, and he refused to show us his patterns. This was on Tuesday. I said to my father, 'I will go to England.' I could speak nothing but German. On Thursday I started. The nearer I got to England the cheaper goods were. As soon as I got to Manchester I laid out all my money, things were so cheap, and made good profit. I soon found that there were three profits—on the raw material, the dyeing and the manufacturing. I said to the manufacturers: 'I will supply you with the material, and you supply me with the manufactured goods.' So I got three profits instead of one, and I could sell goods cheaper than anybody. In a very short time I increased my £20,000 to more than £100,000.

"My success all turned on one maxim. I said I can do what another man can, and so I am a match for the man with the patterns, and all the rest of them. Another advantage I had—I was an off-hand man; I made a bargain at once. When I settled in London the East India Company had £800,000 of gold to sell. I went to the sale and bought all. I knew the Duke of Wellington must have it to pay his army in the Peninsula. I had bought a great many of his bills at a discount. The government sent to me and said they must have it. When they got it they didn't know how to get it to Portugal. I undertook all that, and sent it through France, and that was the best business I ever did."

London Pavements.

Beneath every square foot of wood paving in London there is a layer of concrete foundation five or six feet thick. It is very much like the macadamized road, only that it is very deep and very solid. It is made of fragments of stone rolled down in cement and clay, and it makes a magnificent bedrock for the blocks of wood to rest upon. The way they roll their macadam streets here is instructive. Over the various layers of broken stone and cement they run a steam boggest roller, which is quite as heavy as the railway engine in America. This goes back and forth over the same ground for days together until it has mashed the material down so that when it comes to be dug up for fixing street-pipes the only way to make any impression on it is with a drill and sledge-hammer, such as would be used in blasting a granite cliff. Making streets in London is mighty unpleasant for the neighbors, but when the work is done it doesn't fizzle out in a few days. One sees macadamized roads as smooth as a billiard table right in the heart of London, wholly unaffected by the flow of heavy traffic. The streets are dirtier here than they are anywhere else on earth. They have none of our street-sweeping machines, and when they "sprinkle" a street they simply flood it, so that there is nothing but a creamy quality of mud on the surface. To call London clean, as the natives always do, is a hideous and mocking sarcasm. To say it is the best paved city in the world is to tell this plain, unvarnished truth.

In 1873 Brazil had 333,201 slaves. On June 30th, 1883 their number was 147,168.

LATEST NEWS SUM

Lightening Flashes from Sparks From The W

Cholera is increasing in Mecca.

The German Government has the Bey of Tunis.

The Servian Cabinet has agreed in office, the King having refused its resignation.

Lieutenant Bove and scientists to the Antarctic expedition have Genoa, all well.

A violent earthquake has occurred vininity of Afntab, Nothern Syria villages were destroyed.

The Government has prohibited ing of a conference at Antwerp auspices of Louise Michel.

The sensational statement circ London that Russia was prohibiting portation of horses is incorrect.

The Swiss Government has Socialist paper Freheit, on account part it took in arousing the anarchist ment in France.

Fortunately the majority of the in the Lancashire colliery where plosion occurred on Tuesday we ground at the time of the calamity

A most violent storm prevailed out Denmark on Sunday night and morning. Much damage was done Several shipwrecks are reported.

The Pultowa police attempted to 200 persons concerned in the conspiring a revolt of the peasants most of them escaped by jumping windows.

On the London, Brighton & South Railway, England, on Monday a train from Croydon ran into Eleven persons were injured and badly wrecked.

Prince Bismark, with Princes and Reuss and Count Meunster, an important conference on the Eastern tion, with the object of conciliating pean interests.

The Swiss Federal Council, acting representations of the French Government have made a thorough investigation satisfied themselves that there is ist Committee in Geneva cannon.

The menacing language of the press toward Spain in regard to the fugees has caused a painful impression Government circles in Madrid, and a strong feeling of indignation among people.

Uneasiness is felt in Copenhagen quence of the report that Nordenskjold northwest coast of Siberia had been ed steamer, as the Danish polar "Dymphna" is known to be in that region.

Mohammed Khesnadar has resigned post of Prime Minister of Tunis. He be succeeded by Selazsis Bey, who always been favorable to France. The of Minister of War and Minister of have been abolished.

At Inverness on Saturday, Mr. nounced the manner in which the lation of the Highlands was going on he said, was an instance of the the land laws. He advocated the zation of land as a remedy.

The agency of the South American tres has engaged Sarah Bernhardt pally for the Brazils) for fifty repres the salary being $165,000. She from Paris on the 20th of next will remain absent 135 days.

Agrarian crime is rife in the Baltic inces of Russia. Armed bands of threaten their landlords from the One landlord has been shot dead, other has received a threatening the agrarian "Executive Committee."

An election for a member of Parliament was held in Edinburgh on Friday. Waddy received 8,454 votes and Renton 7,718. Both candidates were Mr. Waddy considered the disestablishment of the Scotch Church not a pressing while Mr. Renton favored immediate tablishment.

A riot occurred on Tuesday in the suburb of Vienna. A large number men, joined by the mob, stoned the and attacked and destroyed the police tion., wounding the commissary troops restored order. Twelve and several police were injured, very seriously. Many rioters were ed.

Trouble in Philipopolis between the Government and the representatives led to an open rupture, which may Governments, since it has been necessary to send a special envoy to tinople to explain the condition of the foreign abassadors and the Porte trouble grew originally out of local differences.

We are informed that the intend to establish a line of steel steamers upon the waters of lakes. If they do so the propeller "Asia" type will soon become a the past. Those dangerous, clumsy monstrosities of vessels will be able to compete with steel steamers thousand tons burden, drawing of water and provided with all the ges of an ocean steamer. The people country will owe the Canadian Pacific way a debt of gratitude if such a brought about as a result of the ment of this line. Vessels of the "Asia" are too dangerous to be regretted.

When Ireland had a Parliament in Green the House of Lords consisted peers of the blood royal, the Lord for, four Archbishops, one Duke, quisses, eighty Earls, fifty-six eighteen Bishops, nine peeresses in right, and sixty-five barons, or a in all. The greater number of peers maintained town houses on a great grandeur, with brilliant retinues corresponding outlay. There is now Irish peer who keeps a town house lower house was composed of 300 most of them also had town houses. three descendants of the then now represent Irish constituencies that were then in the centres of festivities are now gloomy and into wretched tenements.

A MALICIOUS PET.

Troubles Caused by an Illtempered Monkey.

"It's the most cantankerous, ill-conditioned and bad-tempered brute I ever had anything to do with," said Mr. Cills, the showman, as he pointed out to a Press reporter a vicious-looking little monkey of the Rhesus variety. The animal was seated on a soap-boxes box, to which he was attached by a chain, and was grinning, jabbering, and showing his teeth in a way that indicated a raging temper. He was about two feet high, gray and blue in color, and had a face ludicrously human in repose, but diabolically ugly and repulsively when excited by anger. This was his condition at the time of the reporter's visit, and it was only by a stern rebuke of his master that prevented him from springing at the visitor's throat. "That fellow has been in captivity since he was a baby," continued Mr. Cills, "and has, I have no doubt, received very kind treatment, but to-day he is as fierce, wild, and as treacherous as any of his brethren who are still at large in the forests of the west coast of Africa. He belongs to a class that is hard to tame, and that is composed of an inborn treachery and cussedness that cannot be cured. This fellow—I call him Jacko—has a history of his own, and is one among my collections because of his bad conduct. When he was brought over, several years ago, he was presented to Mrs. Tiffman, of North Fourth street, a newly married young lady, and was adopted at once as a cherished pet. He was good-natured and fairly obedient for some time, keeping his bad temper in control and rapidly learning the ways of the house; but not long since he became morose and disobedient, and more than once escaped to the roof and clambered over the roofs of the neighborhood.

His mistress, who was wrapped up in him, as the saying is, was greatly distressed at his troubled her kindness in order to punish him at home. The last time he escaped he made a tour of the whole neighborhood, climbed into the dwellings of many families, frightened some of the women into hysterics, finally broke through a garret window and coolly proceeded to inspect the house in search of provender. In the kitchen he encountered a young lady of more than ordinary pluck, who threatened him with a broom, and held him in a corner until Mr. Tiffman, a school-teacher, lassoed and bound him. Then she delivered him up to Officer Chapman, of the New Market street police. The police station Jocko made himself so uncommonly troublesome, and came very near cleaning out a whole platoon of officers, that in self-defense he was sent to me. I knew that the only way to tame him was to give him a sound thrashing, and I did it, and the very next day he revenged himself by seizing my little 3-year-old girl by the arm with his paws, drawing her near to him and leaving the prints of his tusks in her arm. This time I gave him a second thrashing that he will not soon forget.

When Jocko had been in my possession for a few days, Mrs. Tiffman, his late owner, called upon me and demanded his return. I told her I was willing to give him up if she would reimburse me for expenses incurred in keeping him; but this she refused to do. Tiffman next called, but not to demand the return of Jocko. He wanted me to keep the animal, and told me that he was afraid that some day kill his wife if she was not to keep him. Some time ago he bit her on the wrist, and she was disabled for three weeks; but in spite of this her husband for her fierce pet survived. Mr. Tiffman often turned Jocko out into the yard in the coldest nights of winter, but the monkey stood, unlike others of his race, to care nothing for cold weather or exposure, and always turned up bright and early and ready for any sort of mischief. Altogether, he was a good inmate, and Mr. Tiffman, after having to poison and to shoot him, and after having failed in both attempts, was delighted when he at length fell into the hands of the police and came to my store. One sure way to have of frightening him is to show him one of my tame turtles, of which I have several. Watch him now."

Mr. Cills went to a large box, glanced in it, and dipping into it much as though he were diving into a barrel after loose toys, brought forth a beautiful turtle-headed snake, about seven feet long and as thick around the middle as the wrist of a man. The reptile writhed and wriggled as he was removed, and darted forth his tongue rapidly in anger, but a gentle rubbing of his head soothed him, and he coiled himself slowly around the wrist and arm of his owner, and seemed perfectly contented. The minute Jocko caught sight of him he turned and crawled into his box, with a face as horribly distorted with fright and terror as to be almost painful to look at. For the time the snake was in sight the monkey could not be persuaded to come out, but when he peered forth to reconnoitre his face would have made a study for abject fear and dread. Jocko is a clever scholar, and has nearly learned several tricks. He stands on his head like a circus acrobat, and shakes hands with as much grace as a popular politician. On a drawback to any great sociability on the part of strangers is that he generally tries to supplement the hand-shaking with a vicious bite. Mrs. Tiffman is resolved to recover her pet, while her husband is equally resolved that she shall not. Thus the matter stands to-day, but further developments may be looked for speedily. Meanwhile Jocko is the centre of a little colony of snakes, white rats and mice, and other rare animals, and spends his time in vain efforts to escape and in grinning with a depth and width of general ugliness that no pen can describe.—Philadelphia Press.

His Soft Spot.

"You mustn't touch the top of baby's head," said a mother to her little four-year-old, "she has a soft spot there that is very tender." The youngster gazed at it curiously for a moment, and then asked, "Do all babies have soft spots on their heads?" "Yes." "Did papa have a soft spot on the top of his head when he was a baby?" "Yes," replied the mother, with a sigh, "and he has got it yet." And the old man, who had overheard the conversation from an adjoining room, sang out, "Yes, indeed, he has, my dear boy, or he would be a single man to-day."

The humane individual who could not crush a defenseless worm will never eat chestnuts in the dark.

Advices from Bogota

say that at 8.45 o'clock in the morning of Sept. 23, General Aldana left the Government House accompanied by an orderly. When passing the drug store owned by Dr. Cervantes the latter stepped out and the two walked together in the direction of the principal square. On passing the front of S. Borda's house the General stopped and asked his orderly for a light, and at that moment an individual walked up to him and fired at him from behind. Aldana cried out, "I am wounded," when the orderly at once drew his revolver to fire on the murderer. The latter, however, was too quick for him, and he fired and the soldier fell mortally wounded. Dr. Cervantes then took the revolver, but before he could discharge it the assassin had run away. Gen. Aldana was carried to his house and surgeons were called, and his orderly was taken to the hospital, where he died a few hours afterward. His actions saved the life of his General, at the cost of his own. Many rumors are current as to the motive which caused the attack. Politics, personal hatred, and the punishment of a near relative are the three most popularly reasons. Directly the affair became public an immense crowd gathered in front of the General's residence, and the police began a search for the assassin.

The assassin escaped from the city, and would have got safely out of the country had it not happened that a soldier who was travelling from one town to another, chanced to step into a wayside inn, where he saw and recognized Topez, and, with the assistance of two men, captured him and carried him to Bogota. The trial has already commenced, but up to the present time, none of the evidence received has been made public. It is strongly suspected that there are a number of accomplices, as the Secretary of Prefecture, who received the first proofs, has been sent to gaol for doing away with some documents of a compromising nature which were handed in. The precautionary measures taken by the Federal Government prove that it is able and determined to prevent any attempt to disturb public order.

Two Generals, Navarrette and Landaeta, were arrested on suspicion of having been connected with the affair, but were subsequently released. The friends of General Aldana (who has now recovered) declares that politics had nothing to do with the attack on him.

(London (Can.) Advertiser.)

The Electrical Girl Who Lives Again.

It is now about three years since the ADVERTISER published the story of the Electrical Girl in the township of Romney. The tale passed through nearly all of our exchanges, and occasionally re-appears now. The story in brief was that the girl was so highly charged with electricity that she could not handle any article of steel. She was a veritable magnet, and needles, knives, etc., would cling to any part of her person. The publication excited a good deal of curiosity concerning the girl, and many people called upon her at her home. Recently she was taken ill and the local physicians were called in. She described her peculiar sensations. In her knee-joints severe pains were felt shooting at intervals, as though a battery were at work and giving her intermittent shocks. The knee began to swell, and the pains spread to other parts of her body, generally becoming permanent in the joints. All the doctors could do was of very little avail. Occasionally slight relief would be obtained, but in wet or murky weather the pains would redouble in violence. Finally when the doctors had given up treating her, and regarded her simply as a physiological wonder, a tramp called one day at the house. While he was being given a meal he was told about and asked permission to see the girl. He had been a soldier in the Crimean army, and while working in the trenches around St. Petersburg he contracted rheumatism in its most severe form, and noticing that the girl's symptoms agreed with his, he pronounced her to be suffering from rheumatism. The parents of the girl were overjoyed, but were again cast down as they recalled the fact that the doctors had said they could do nothing for her. "Why," said the tramp, "do you want to bother the doctors about rheumatism? Get a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil. It cured me and will cure any case. I know plenty of old soldiers who have been cured of chronic rheumatism by the use of St. Jacobs Oil." The advice was taken, and the so-called Electrical Girl is to-day prepared to add her testimony to the thousands of others who bear witness to the efficacy of the Great German Remedy.

To the Editor of the London (Can.) Advertiser.

DEAR SIR:—As you have given me a good deal of notoriety by writing of me as the Electrical Girl, I thought I would write to tell you of my condition. * * * (Here follows the recital which is summarized above.) My parents obtained a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil, and to its effects I owe the fact that I am now able to walk without pain, and the swellings in the joints have all disappeared.

Yours very truly, Susan J. Hoffman.

Rheumatism. This painful disease that so often cripples for life, arises from poison circulating in the blood, and often from an excess of acid. Inflammation is developed in the muscles, ligaments and joints, by colds, damp clothing, &c. Liniments are servicable to relieve, among many, Hagyard's Yellow Oil is preferable. To eradicate the rheumatic poison from the system, nothing can surpass Burdock Blood Bitters. 5.

A solicitor in England has obtained a verdict of $10,000 against a town as compensation for personal injuries caused by drinking impure water supplied by the Corporation.

Never Neglect It.

If you suffer from a cough, never neglect it, it is no trifling matter, and might lead to a speedily fatal disease of the lungs. Hagyards Pectoral Balsam will allay all irritation of the mucous membrance by its soothing healing power; it cures Bronchitis, Asthma and all throat and lung complaints. 6.

Rams of choice breed fetch from $1,000 to $2,000 in Australia, while first-class mutton sells in Adelaide and Sydney for thirty-seven cents the stone—fourteen pounds.

It was out west that a political delegate moved that a bar be set up in the conference-room. He said he wanted to stop the numerous motions to adjourn.

A Smart Man

is one who does his work quickly and well. This is what Dr. R. V. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" does as a blood-purifier and strengthener. It arouses the torpid liver, purifies the blood, and is the best remedy for consumption, which is scrofulous disease of the lungs.

Astronomers continue to assert that there is something the matter with the comet's head. Men who are up all night as the comet is, well know what it means.

Extravagance

is a crime; and ladies can not afford to do without Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription," which by preserving and restoring health, preserves and restores that beauty which depends on health.

Absent-mindedness has been considered the mark of a great man, but a fellow never feels very big about it when he lugs a napkin away from the table in his handkerchief pocket.

Beautiful Women

are made pallid and unattractive by functional irregularities, which Dr Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" will infallibly cure. Thousands of testimonials. By druggists.

It may be all imagination, but when a man is drawn as a juryman he thinks every man he sees smiling is grinning at his misfortune, and it is as tormenting as fleas.

VEGETINE is now acknowledged by our best physicians to be the only sure and safe remedy for all diseases arising from impure blood, such as scrofula and scrofulous humors.

The reasons that æsthetes so admire the stork is that he can stand for hours on one leg, and look as though he didn't know anything or didn't want to.

Carboline the deodorized petroleum hair renewer and restorer, as improved and perfected, challenges the world and stands without a rival among the hair dressings, and is a universal favorite with the ladies.

A Vermont man who has been there fourteen times, says the meanest thing about a misfortune with a polecat is the difficulty of keeping it secret.

How can a single dose of Ayer's pills cure headache?

By removing obstructions from the system—relieving the stomach, and giving healthy action to the digestive apparatus.

There is a man in England who gained over fifty pounds in one week. He bet on the winning horse.

The E. E. A. Belt as a Preventative.—Through the use of Edison's Electric Absorbent Belt the prevention of all types of fevers is insured. It will prevent bowel complaint. It will prevent dyspepsia and costiveness. It will prevent rheumatism and neuralgia. It will prevent sick headache, heartburn and acidity of the stomach. It will restore the nerves, to a great extent after a paralytic stroke. It will prevent paralysis. It will prevent convulsions or fits of all types by the influence exercised upon the nervous system. All that is claimed for Edison's Electric Absorbent Belt is accomplished without any bad effects upon the system from its use.

A New York grand jury has decided that if a woman is assaulted, and the sheriff, in trying to arrest the villain, kills him, the husband of the woman can not be indicted for murder. This is an important precedent.

Best of All.

Our rigorous and changeable climate, and our mode of life induces frequent colds, that often lead to severe Coughs, Bronchitis and other lung troubles that are liable to end in Consumption. The best and most pleasant remedy known for these difficulties is Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam, to be obtained of any druggist. 2.

The present Lord Mayor of London has received £200,000 during his year of office in response to his appeals to the charitable.

A Fact.

If you suffer from Chronic Disease, and have little faith in advertised remedies and have sought vainly for a cure. Consult your druggist, or address T. Milburn & Co., Toronto, for proof positive regarding the merits of Burdock Blood Bitters, the Great Regulating Blood purifying Tonic, that acts on the liver, kidneys, stomach, bowels and skin. 1.

A steam tricycle enabling the rider to travel at from fifteen to twenty miles an hour, with very little labor, has been invented by a Frenchman.

A Word of Caution.

Beware of Opiates and powerful astringent drugs in the treatment of Bowel Complaints, they may lull the pain and check Diarrhœa, etc., but are liable to produce inflammation, Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry is guaranteed safe and reliable, even for Infants, and is a specifice for Cholera Morbus, Dysentery, Colic, Acute or Chronic Diarrhœa and Summer Complaints generally.

Robert A. Wilson, Dispensing Chemist, Brockville, says, under date of June 5th, '82, "I have not the slighest hesitation in saying that Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry has given my customers more satisfaction than any medicine in my store for the cure of Summer Complaints, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Pain in the Stomach Sea Sickness, Piles, etc. You can use my name, etc."

The Revue de Medicine records the case of a lady whose hair turned from black to gray between the hours of 2 and 7 a.m., during a very severe attack of neuralgia.

Better than Gold.

A good name, good health, a good companion and a bottle of Hagyard's Yellow Oil are among the first requisites for human happiness. Yellow Oil cures Rheumatism, Sprains, Lameness, Bruises, Burns, Frost Bites, Croup, Sore Throat, and all pain and inflammation. 4.

The British national debt has fallen from 839 millions sterling in 1857 to 763 millions to-day. Terminable annuities which will soon fall in will considerably diminish it.

A Reward

of $10 is offered in good faith for a hard case of corns that has stubbornly refused to be relieved by the use of Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor, the great corn extractor. Thousands in England, Canada, and the States testify to the efficiency of this celebrated corn cure, and the proprietors are anxious to hear if there is a single case of failure. Address N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston. Use Putnam's Corn Extractor, sure, safe and painless.

A.P. 99

Vegetine

Kidney Complaints.

DISEASE OF THE KIDNEYS.

The symptoms of an acute attack of inflammation of the kidneys are as follows: Fever, pain in the small of the back, and thence shooting downward; numbness of the thigh, vomiting, usually at first a deep red color of the urine, which becomes pale and colorless as the disease increases, and is discharged very often with pain and difficulty; costiveness, and some degree of colic. In chronic diseases of the Kidneys the symptoms are pain in the back and limbs, dryness of the skin, frequent urinations (especially at night), general dropsy, headache, dizziness of sight, indigestion, and palpitation of the heart, gradual loss of strength, paleness and puffiness of the face, cough and shortness of breath.

In diseases of the Kidneys the VEGETINE gives immediate relief. It has never failed to cure when it is taken regularly and directions followed. In many cases it may take several bottles, especially cases of long standing. It acts directly upon the secretions, cleansing and strengthening, removing all obstructions and impurities.—A great many can testify to cases of long standing having been perfectly cured by the VEGETINE, even after trying many of the known remedies which are said to be expressly for this disease.

Worth its Weight in Gold.

Toronto, Ont., June 2, 1880.

H. R. Stevens, Esq., Boston, Mass.:

Sir—Having been persuaded by a friend of mine to try VEGETINE for Kidney disease, with which I had been troubled for four years, I consented and have given it a fair trial and am happy to say that I am relieved to such an extent that I can attend to my work with ease and comfort which I was deprived of for over three years. The best medical men of Toronto have given my case up as hopeless. I have tried every kind of medicine I have ever heard of, but with no avail whatever. Any person who may be afflicted with the same terrible disease, I would certainly advise to try Vegetine, for I assure you (as many can testify) that it is undoubtly the best medicine on record for the Kidney Disease. I am able to work at my trade as gilder and earn a living for my wife, two children and myself, through Vegetine, which I consider is worth its weight in gold. Hoping that those who may give Vegetine a trial may receive the same benefit that I have I remain, Yours resp'y, CHAS COOKE.

106 John St.

Vegetine is Sold by All Druggists.

CORALINE! CORSETS unequalled for health, comfort and drability. Manufactured by the CROMPTON CORSET CO., Toronto.

WATCHES repaired. Trade work a specialty. A. BALLABEY, 8 King St. E., Toronto.

CHRIS. SHEPPARD, Manuf'r of Masonic and other Society Jewels, 151 King E., Toronto.

$5 PER DAY can be made by agents, male or female. C. W. DENNIS, Toronto.

TORONTO. — Mr. J. H. Mayne Campbell Barrister, Solicitor, Etc., 9 Victoria-st

WATCHES. Send for free illustrated catalogue to RYRIE, the Jeweler, 113 Yonge Street, Toronto.

HAND STAMPS, SEALS, &c., of every description and for all uses. KENYON TINGLEY & STEWART Mfg Co., Toronto.

CANADIAN MUTUAL AID ASSOCIATION. Co-operation Life Assurance. Great inducement to provide for families in case of death, at small cost. W. PEMBERTON PAGE, Sec., 87 King St. West, Toronto. Agents wanted.

CARDS Christmas, New Year, Birthday, and other Cards, at H. J. MATTHEWS & BROS. art depot, Toronto.

J. MURRAY McNEIL, LONDON, ONT., gives written guarantee that his moustache recipe will produce heavy moustache inside of 10 weeks or money refunded; price $1, Box 264, London.

GUNS Rifles, Ammunition, Fishing Tackle, and all kinds of Sporting Goods. W. McDOWALL, cor. King & George sts., Toronto

ONTARIO VETERINARY COLLEGE, TORONTO. Students can enter from October until January. PROF. SMITH, S., V. Edin., Principal. Fees, fifty dollars.

E. E. KNOTT'S Speculators' Mart 4 Adelaide St. East, Toronto. All kinds of real estate sold or exchanged on commission. Money loaned on all kinds of real estate at lowest rates of interest. Applications for money from farmers a specialty. Rents collected and estates managed in town or country. N.B.—Best of references on application.

BUSINESS CHANCES.

ONE OF THE BEST FARMS IN THE county of Bruce; containing 260 acres; 230 cleared; good house and out buildings; also good orchard; a never failing stream within thirty yards of the house; three miles from Teeswater, the terminus of the T. G. & B. Ry.: price moderate. Apply to C. STEIL, proprietor, or to J. MARSHALL, Teeswater, Ont.

$5.000.000 WORTH OF FARMING and other property in Ontario for sale by the CANADA WEST LAND AGENCY COMPANY, 14 Adelaide-st. East, Toronto. Send for list.

OWNERS OF FARM LANDS, CITY AND Town Properties, desiring to realize, will find purchasers by sending me full descriptions, lowest prices, and terms of payment. J. W. G. WHITNEY, Estate Agent, 25 Toronto street, Toronto.

CHEAPEST MUSIC IN THE WORLD.

Full size sheet, best print and good paper. Send 5 cents for sample copy and catalogue of 600 pieces of latest instrumental and vocal music.

S. C. BIGFORD,
23 King Street West, Toronto.
Dealer in picture frames and fancy goods.

SPECIAL HOLIDAY NOTICE!

NOW READY. Our three Mammoth Catalogues and Price Lists, with full description of the largest Stock of Xmas Goods, Cards, Albums, Xmas Tree Ornaments, Scrap Pictures, &c., &c. Sent free to any address by applying to BENNET & Co., Wholesale Stationers, and direct importers of Novelties. All goods sent same day by mail, 453 St. Paul-street, Montreal.

WOODSTOCK COLLEGE,

WOODSTOCK, ONTARIO.

Instruction most complete in all branches. A most thorough and complete

BUSINESS EDUCATION

In the Commercial Department at very low rates. For circulars address

N. WOLVERTON, B.A.,
Principal.

Xmas & New Year CARDS.

Largest and Choicest Selection
In the Dominion.

Assorted lots sent free by mail on receipt of $1 or upwards.

Lyon & Alexander,
110, 112, and 114 Bay Street.
TORONTO, ONT

Zopesa.

Zopesa was introduced in America two years ago. Large quantities have been used for Dyspepsia, and as a panacea for the Liver, and the manufacturers have yet to hear of a single case of Dyspepsia or Biliousness, when Zopesa was used as directed, in which it was not more than satisfactory. Many write that it is a wonderful remedy. We can show where as high as 40 pounds were gained by its use in breaking up chronic Biliousness and Dyspepsia. Its friends increase very fast, and all who use as directed are surprised and gratified.

ARTIFICIAL LIMBS

AUTHORS & COX, 91 CHURCH STREET Toronto, Manufacturers of our celebrated Raw Hide, Willow and Leather Legs. The best and cheapest made in Canada. First prize 15 years in succession. Send for reduced price list.

The Toronto General Trusts Co.,

27 and 29 Wellington St., Toronto.

HON. ED. BLAKE, Q.C., M.P., - President.
E. A. MEREDITH, Esq., LL.D., Vice President.
J. W. LANGMUIR, - - - Manager

This Company, which has been approved of by the High Court of Justice and the Lieutenant Governor in Council, accepts trusts of every description, and acts as executor, administrator, &c., and also as agent of existing trustees, executors, &c. $300,000 of Trust Funds to loan upon real estate and mortgages. For further information apply to

J. W. LANGMUIR, Manager.

WHAT IS CATARRH?

Catarrh is a muco-purulent discharge caused by the presence and development of the vegetable parasite amœba in the internal lining membrane of the nose. This parasite is only developed under favorable circumstances, and these are: morbid state of the blood, as the blighted corpuscle of tubercle, the germ poison of syphilis, mercury, toxæmea, from retention of the effeted matter of the skin, suppressed perspiration, badly ventilated sleeping apartments, and other poisons that are germinated in the blood. These poisons keep the internal lining membrane of the nose in a constant state of irritation, ever ready for the deposit of the seeds of these germs, which spread up the nostrils and down the fauces or back part of the mouth causing ulceration of the throat; up the eustachian tubes, causing deafness; burrowing in the vocal cords, causing hoarseness, usurping the proper structure of the bronchial tubes ending in pulmonary consumption and death.

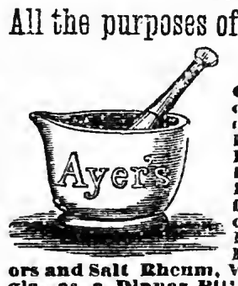
To effect a cure the parasite must be removed or destroyed, hence inhalants and snuffs are worthless.

Some time since a well known physician of 40 years standing, after much experimenting, succeeded in discovering the necessary combination of ingredients, which never fails in absolutely and permanently eradicating this horrible disease whether standing for one year or forty years. Sufferers should, without delay, communicate with the business manager, Mr. A. H. Dixon, 307 King St. West, Toronto, and get treatise free by enclosing stamp. Ask your druggist for it

Burdock BLOOD BITTERS

WILL CURE OR RELIEVE

BILIOUSNESS,	DIZZINESS,
DYSPEPSIA,	DROPSY,
INDIGESTION,	FLUTTERING
JAUNDICE.	OF THE HEART,
ERYSIPELAS,	ACIDITY OF
SALT RHEUM,	THE STOMACH,
HEARTBURN,	DRYNESS
HEADACHE,	OF THE SKIN,



And every species of disease arising from disordered LIVER, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS OR BLOOD,

T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, TORONTO.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

FOR

All the purposes of a Family Physic,

CURING

Costiveness, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Dysentery, Foul Stomach and Breath, Headache, Erysipelas, Piles, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Tetter, Tumors and Salt Rheum, Worms, Gout, Neuralgia, as a Dinner Pill, and Purifying the Blood, are the most congenial purgative yet perfected. Their effects abundantly show how much they excel all other Pills. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. They purge out the foul humors of the blood; they stimulate the sluggish or disorded organs into action; and they impart health and tone to the whole being. They cure not only the every day complaints of every body, but formidable and dangerous diseases. Most skilful physicians, most eminent clergymen, and our best citizens send certificates of cures performed, and of great benefits derived from these Pills. They are the safest and best physic for children, because mild as well as effectual. Being sugar coated, they are easy to take; and being purely vegetable, they are entirely harmless.

PREPARED BY

Dr. J. C. Ayer & CO.,

LOWELL, MASS.,

PRACTICAL AND ANALYTICAL CHEMISTS.

Sold by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine

P. Manshaw is now proprietor of the buss between this place and the station. He carries the mail and has a comfortable rig; has also opened a livery.....Mr. Varty, (brickmaker,) has erected a fine brick residence which will soon be completed. His child, which had its arm broken a short time ago, is doing well....W. H. Flesher, (painter,) has built a dwelling. McKechine, (cabinet maker,)and R. Clark, (blacksmith,) have both erected brick residence.

FLESHERTON STATION.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Mr. Doupe is doing a nice business in general merchandise, an sells very reasonable... ...R. Cook, blacksmith, has removed into his new brick residence and Thos. Addison, implement agent, into Cook's former dwelling.... ...Geo. Moorehouse, miller, has erected a dwelling this fall and is moving in.....Robert Morrow has purchased a lot, built a house, and now resides in our town.....Wm. McMillan will remove to our city next week.....A. Hannah moved to Flesherton this week.....James McMillan will open out in Cook's new brick store in a few days, where he will pay cash for all kinds of farm produce.

WILLIAMSFORD.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

C. Price has a good part of his large building veneered with brick.....G. N. Pereira has his machinery running and is now manufacturing furniture. .....Extensive improvements will take place in M. Smith's flour mill as soon as his millwright arrives. .... C. Price wants a few good house carpenters for about six weeks.

OSPREY NOTES.

(From our own Correspondent.)

MAXWELL.—The proprietor of the new Drug Store at Maxwell was fined $20 by the Liquor Inspector for selling intoxicating drinks for others than medical purposes. The Maxwell hotel keeper was fined a similar amount for selling on Sabbath, and the public are well plessed.....Maxwell's popular merchant is married. He shall have a good time, at least "as long as the moon endures."

FEVERSHAM.—The anniversary of the Gunpowder Plot was celebrated at Feversham on Monday, Nov. 6th. A large number sat down to an excellent supper prepared by Robert McGirr, at his own hotel, after which the members of the different lodges assembled in the Presbyterian Church where a very agreeable time was spent. Music was furnished in a manner that would reflect credit on professional singers by Misses A. McKinnor, L. McGirr and T. Grey. The chief speeches of the evening were given by Rev. Mr. Dowell, of Maxwell, and Rev. Mr. Chisholm, of McIntyre .After the former gentlemen had delivered a very humorous address, the latter in a most vigorous and impressive manner, pointed out that Romanism in all stages of its existence opposed the diversion of conscientiousness, with which safe popular freedom was essentially united.....A poor widow living in the neighbourhood of this place had 40 or 50 bushels of oats stolen from her granery on last Saturday night. It is said that the thieves are known, and unless they replace the stolen property or equivalent inside of two weeks they may prepare for a protracted stay in Kingston.

MCINTYRE.—Here everything is lovely. The two stores are doing a rushing business, so also is our new harness maker, whose work is superior to any thing ever seen in this country.....Neil McLean is enlarging and plastering his hall.

MAXWELL.—Mr. Ira H. Perigoe is doing a rushing business; two and three auction sales every week..... Messrs John Heron and Joseph Clinton returned from Manitoba last week. .....Twenty dollars is all the hotel man made it cost the druggist at Maxwell for selling liquor in an illegal manner, then the game changed and twenty dollars was all the drug store man made the hotel keeper pay for a similar offence.

CUT THIS OUT.

Five dollars will purchase a suit worth seven dollars at McFarland's.

Five dollars will purchase an overcoat worth $7.50 at McFarland's.

Twenty-five cents will purchase a box of collars, pocket knife, handkerchief and pair of fancy sleeve buttons, at McFarland's.

Blankets, furs, gloves, shirts and drawers and Flannels cheap at McFarland's.

TAILOR,

SYDENHAM STREET,

MARKDALE.

J. W. FORD

HAS RE-OPENED HIS

Flour and Grist Mill

IN MARKDALE.

AN IMMENSE STOCK OF

BOOTS & SHOES

JUST ARRIVED AT THE

TORONTO HOUSE

BEST QUALITY AND LOWEST PRICE.

STOCK COMPLETE IN

Dry Goods and Groceries!

PRICES ALWAYS RIGHT.

OUR THIRTY CENT TEA

Is the wonder of the day A trial solicited.

WM. BROWN.

Markdale, Oct. 11th, 1882.

GROCERIES. GROCERIES.

A. M'INTYRE

TEA! TEA! TEA!

A. M'INTYRE

Flour, Flour, Flour.

McINTYRE'S
LIQUORS! LIQUORS

McINTYRE'S
Cigars, Cigars.

McINTYRE'S
Coffee, Coffee.

McINTYRE'S
MEAL! MEAL! MEAL!

McINTYRE'S
Pork, Pork, Pork.

McINTYRE'S
Teas, Teas.

And everything kept in a first-class Grocery and Liquor Store. always on hand, CHEAP FOR CASH.

MARKDALE

Sash and Door Factory

SASH, DOORS,
BLINDS
MOULDINGS,
HOLLOW BATTONS,
FRAMES

Lumber, Lath and Shingles,

Always on Hand. Orders Promptly Filled,

The Subscriber wishes to return thanks to the people of Markdale and vicinity, for the very liberal patronage they have given him in the past, and hopes by close attention to business to merit a continuance of the same.

I have now extended my business,and will in future keep a full Stock of

PINE LUUBER.

Direct from the North Shore.

ALL SIZES, DRESSED AND UNDRESSED,

All Kinds of Plain and Fancy Turning

Done in a first-class manner.

THOS. McNEA.

Markdale May 27th, 1881. 37-tf

Dry Goods, Hardware, Crockery, Boots

Groceries, Provisions, &c. Stock kept full and well assorted goods received every week.

Cash paid for all kinds of Grain at the replenished with new goods every week. For sale cheap for cash

MY BRANCH STORE AT EUGENIA

My Saw Mill, Shingle Factoty, and Lime

AT LITTLE FALLS, ARE IN OPERATION.

All kinds Saw Logs bought at the Mill or sawn on

Lumber, Lath, Broom Handles, Shingles and Lime

WM. HO

November 7th, 1882.

TORONTO HOU

FLESHERTON.

Stock Fully Complete. Unusually

VERY ATTRACTIVE, AND

CHEAPER THAN THE CHEAP

EVERY DEPARTMENT SPECIALLY ATTRA

Variety and Value Unsurpasse

DRY GOODS DEPARME

Is this season very complete with a very large stock of Dress Goo prising in part Cashmeres in all colors. Worsted Wool Goo endless variety.

Boot and Shoe Departmen

Would call special attention of close buyers as my stock is unusu from the best manufacturers and at rock bottom prices.

ORDERED CLOTHING

Has been exceedingly brisk this season, on account of which I hav the largest and best stock of Tweeds, Coatings, Trowserings, and ings in this section of country. As I have always led the trade in partment buyers will find it to their advantage to call before p elsewhere.

Millinery Department.

Under the able management of a first-class milliner, with plenty o ance, will be found unusually attractive with the prettiest and most able, and cheapest stock to be found in the county. Ladies, it you good to call and look at the stock.

Hardware and Grocery Department.

Is always fully assorted and complete with the best goods, at the low sible price.

☞ I am the only constant and reliable buyer of Grain and Far duce in Flesherton, and for which I will pay the highest price in any quantity of good dry, sound grain, which I would specially ask to clean well. A call solicited.

R. J. SPROUL

Flesherton, Oct. 3rd, 1882.

OH, HEAR. OH, HEAR. OH, HEA

Squander your money if you want to, if not, get your Photograph

W. BULMER,

The People's Photographer,
Flesher

Who is again prepared to take Pictures, and do Copying and Enlarging as here

FRAMES AND FRAME FIXIN

We are receiving a large stock of MOTTOES and Motto and other Frames, and Fixings, which we can, and mean to sell at Remarkably Low Prices, C secure bargains.

Bring along your pictures and have them copied and enlarged by your old friend

BULME

Flesherton, March 10, 1881.

Markdale PUMP Factor

J. G. IRVING,

MAKER OF ALL KINDS OF PUMPS,

DROP VALVE PUMPS, CYLINDER PUMPS, CISTERN PUM FORCE PUMPS,

Also, ALL KINDS OF IRON PUMPS SUPPLIED.

Satisfaction guaranteed on all my work; the proof of it is found in fact that I am doing a larger business now than ever was done in Mark the Pump business. Remember the stand, 1 door north of Rutledge's H

Sydenham Street, Markdale.

HOLLAND COUNC

Holland Centre, Oct.

Council of the Townsh Vogan's Hall for the business. Members in the chair.

utes of former meeting ved by Mr. Shute, se t, that Mat Ceaser get oving dead cow from rk notify Mr. John me to the Township Tr e owner of said cow, an ees.

ved by Mr. Norton, sec ve, that the sum of $3 ross way on 50 side roa rd's.

ved by Deputy Reeve, s tt, that $13.60 be on 6 side road, Con ved by Mr. Deavitt, se eve, that John Lears or repairing two bridg 2 and side road 18.

ved by Deputy Reeve, on, that the road Com ted to repair crossing road, and that the C master to remove tree oved by Mr. Shute, itt, that the Inspector de road between 2 and ceed $10.

oved by Mr. Deavitt, on, that the Inspector by public auction the road, between con 10 oved by Mr. Shute, itt, that $5 be expend Chisholm's.

oved by Mr. Deavitt te, that the inspector feet of Sauble bridge ered with flatted cedar epair the rest of the b taken of 25 feet as ab oved by Deputy Reev avitt, that the sum of e road west.

Moved and seconded th rn till 12th December Ca

EUPHRASIA

A meeting of the Tow ove Township was h urnment on Nov. 3rd. Members all present eeting read and confir On report of commit r with a committee o nd to examine a prop he council passed a aid deviation road an otify Artemesia counc The clerk was order eld and F. Pentland rom road allowance on. 5.

The current year's 5.86, was remitted t ent.

Legal.

Frost & Fr RRISTERS, AND A aw, Solicitors in C , &c., Owen Sound, rton, Office open ev fore.

FROST, J. unty Crown Attorn

J. MASS RRISTER, MASTE n Chancery, Notary EY TO LEND AT ces—Owen Sound, t St.; and in Mark Store, on Friday a

Creasor& M RRISTERS,SOLIC ices, &c. &c. ices in Owen Soun W. F. Wolf's Store MARKDA W. J. McFarland's riday of each week. Funds to lend on re CREASOR, Q.C. rkdale, March 15, 1

Alexander UER of Marriage ife Insurance Ag R. &c. Convey neer for the Coun ants, and Land S to and charges eville, Sept. 17, 18

Hote EVERE MARK SPROULE HIS popular Hote dition added to it now second to stabling and at accommodation 1 per day. Ba

...to the Township Treasurer, ... the owner of said cow, and save ... further ...nses.

...oved by Mr. Norton, seconded by Depu... ...erve, that the sum of $... be given to re... ...ers way on 50 side ro... near Andrew ...ard's.

...oved by Deputy Reeve, seconded by Mr. ...vitt, that $13.60 be paid for making ... on 6 side road, Con 8.

...oved by Mr. Deavitt, seconded by Depu... ...eeve, that John Lears get an order ... for repairing two bridges ... Sau... ...o. 9 and side road 18.

...oved by Deputy Reeve, seconded by Mr. ...rton, that the road Commissioner be in... ...cted to repair crossing and bridge on ... road, and that the Clerk instruct ... ...hmaster to remove tree on 40 side road.

Moved by Mr. Shute, seconded by Mr. ...avitt, that the Inspector be sent to open ... side road between 2 and 4 con., cost not ...exceed $10.

Moved by Mr. Deavitt, seconded by Mr. ...rton, that the Inspector be empowered to ...l by public auction the pine trees on 60 ...e road, between con. 10 and 12.

Moved by Mr. Shute, seconded by Mr. ...eavitt, that $5 be expended on 6 side road ...ar Chisholm's.

Moved by Mr. Deavitt, seconded by Mr. ...nute, that the inspector be instructed to get ... feet of Sauble bridge at Holland Centre ...vered with flatted cedar 6 inches thick, and ... repair the rest of the bridge with the tim... ...er taken of 25 feet as above mentioned.

Moved by Deputy Reeve, seconded by Mr. ...eavitt, that the sum of $5 be put on 20 ...de road west.

Moved and seconded that this Council ad... ...urn till 12th December.

CARSON PRICE, Clerk.

EUPHRASIA COUNCIL.

A meeting of the Township Council of the above Township was held pursuant to adjournment on Nov. 3rd, 1882.

Members all present. Minutes of last meeting read and confirmed.

On report of committee appointed to confer with a committee of Artemesia council, and to examine a proposed deviation road, the council passed a resolution in favor of said deviation road and ordered the clerk to notify Artemesia council to that effect.

The clerk was ordered to notify W. Cornfield and F. Pentland to remove their fence from road allowance of 12 and 13 sideline, con. 5.

The current year's taxes, amounting to $5.86, was remitted to Mrs. Mick, an indigent.

...labor had been performed.

By-law No. 334, appointing deputy returning officers to hold the next municipal election and naming the polling places, carried ... the different stages and passed.

...treasurer ... authorized to remit ... Frost, barrister, Owen Sound, $30, as per account rendered, being costs in full in case of Clark vs. this corporation.

The treasurer was authorized to remit to R. Myles, reeve, $30, being payment for time and expenses in attending to suit between Clark and this corporation.

The Treasurer was ordered to pay as follows to the collector of junior, viz., to B. Dunlop, clerk, $6, to R. Myles, reeve, $4, to John Clugston, assessor, $4.

The treasurer was ordered to remit to B. McKnight, registrar, Owen Sound, $17.58, being fees for registering by-laws &c.

A report from Neilson Laird, complaining of the state of 6 and 7 sideline, laid before council and left over for further consideration.

The treasurer ... were issued on the treasurer to pay as follows:—Samuel Myles, $76, for road work on 7th line; John Blain, $67, work on side line 3 and 4; Jos. Burns, $12, work on 15 and 16 sideline; Thos. Abercrombie, $7, getting printing done for quarterly fair; Geo. Crabtree, $2, repairing door of town hall; John Neil, $25, work on 18 and 19 sideline; J. Clugston, $25, work on 21 and 22 sideroad; W. Warner, $10, for work on 3 and 4 sideroad, con. 10; Kilwin Kist, $5, repairing bridge on sideline; Wm. Wilson, $7, labor on 12 and 13 sideline, con. 8; Samuel Wright, $1.50, repairing bridge on 9th line; W. J. Blakely, $6, repairing road scrapers; W. Warner, $37.25, work on 12 & 13 sideline, con. 8; J. W. Knott, $30, labor on 15 and 16 sideline; Fawsett & Howell, $4, repairing road scrapers; Robt. Snell, $45, labor on 11th line, lot 10; Wm. Knott, $1.86, through error in assessment; John McNeely, $24, work on 11th line, lot 16; Jas. Johnston, $27.50, building bridge; Chas. Fawcett, $14, for labor on 16 and 18 sideline, con. 4; Wm. McAnsley, $3, labor on town line, Holland; Elizabeth Lake, $22, labor on town line Holland and Euphrasia.

On motion being made and seconded the council adjourned until the first Friday in December next.

R. DUNLOP, Clerk.

READ THIS

AND BUY YOUR

FURNITURE

FROM

G. GRANT

MARKDALE.

CHAIRS,
FROM 37c. UP.

BEDSTEADS,
FROM $2.50 UP.

NURSE ROCKERS
FROM $1.00

All other Furniture in proportion.

Undertaking Department

Six feet Glass Top Rosewood Coffin, with Hearse, all complete, from $16.00 up. Children's Coffins, with glass top and neatly trimmed, from $4.00 up. My Rosewood and French Burl Coffins and Caskets are of Canada Co.'s make, Toronto.

I have also one of the best Hearses in the county in connection.

G. GRANT

Markdale, Nov. 15th, 1882.

Markdale Standard

VOL. 3.--No. 11. MARKDALE, ONT., NOV. 23, 1882. No. 115.

The Markdale Standard

IS PUBLISHED

EVERY THURSDAY EVENING,

At Markdale, Ontario.

$1 Per Annum

IN ADVANCE.

$1.25 in three months, $2 if not paid till end of the year. No paper discontinued till arrears are paid up, except at the option of the publisher, and parties refusing papers without paying up will be held responsible for the years subscriptions until they comply with the rules.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING:

One inch one year	$50 00
Two inches do. do.	27 50
Three inches do. do.	15 00
Four inches do. do.	8 00
Five inches do. do.	4 00
Ten lines, first insertion per line	8
Each subsequent insertion	3

The number of lines to be reckoned by the space occupied measured by a scale of solid lines. Advertisements without specific instructions will be published till forbid and charged accordingly. All transitory advertisements must be in the office of publication by 10 o'clock on the wednesday proceed their publication.

JOB PRINTING

Of every description executed with neatness and despatch at the Office of the STANDARD, Markdale.

C. W. RUTLEDGE.

EDITOR & PROPRIETOR.

PROFESSIONAL AND BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

Drs. Sproule & Armstrong,

Physicians, Surgeons, Accoucheurs &c.

OFFICE - Medical Hall; residence at Markdale House.

Ghent, M.D., M.R.C.P. & S., O. Physician and Surgeon, Priceville, Graduate of University. Vict. College. " New York, and Graduate, of the same, " Aylesth Medical Institute. " Opthalmic Hospital, N.Y. Member Coll. Physicians & Surgeons, O. 104

Dental Card.

Cameron & Knight,

DENTAL SURGEONS,

Office over D. A. Cameron and Co's Drug Store, Poulett St., OWEN SOUND.

Every attention given to the preservation of natural teeth. Artificial Dentures mounted on Gold, Celluloid, and Rubber bases.

Will be at Markdale the last Tuesday in each month,

Cameron, M.D., & C. F. Knight, L.D.S. F.P.&S. Glasgow, Medalist Royal College Den. Sur., Ont. L.D.S., Ont.

Legal.

Frost & Frost,

BARRISTERS, AND ATTORNEYS-AT Law, Solicitors in Chancery, Conveyancers, &c., Owen Sound, have resumed at Priceville, Office open every Thursday, as before.

FRED FROST. J. W. FROST, LL. B. County Crown Attorney. 1

J. MASSON,

BARRISTER, MASTER AND DEP. REG in Chancery. Notary Public, Conveyancer &c.

MONEY TO LEND AT SIX PER CENT. Office - Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block Poulett St.; and in Markdale, over McFarlane's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week. 57.1y

Creasor & Morrison,

BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, CONVEYANCERS, &c. &c.

Offices in Owen Sound, Dufferin Block, over W. F. Wolf's Store and in

MARKDALE:

Over W. J. Mccarland's Store on Thursday and Friday of each week.

Funds to lend on reasonable terms.

W. CREASOR, Q.C. DUNCAN MORISON

Markdale, March 15, 1882. 79-1y

Alexander Brown,

ISSUER of Marriage Licenses, Fire and Life Insurance Agent. Commissioner in B. R. &c. Conveyancer and Licensed Auctioneer for the County of Grey. Farmers, Merchants, and Land Sales, Punctually attended to and charges made very moderate.

Priceville, Sept. 17, 1880. 1-y

Hotels.

REVERE HOTEL,

MARKDALE.

SPROULE, - Proprietor.

THIS popular Hotel has had a large addition added to it, thoroughly refitted, and is now second to none in the county. Good stabling and attentive ostler. First-class accommodation for commercial travelers $1 per day. Barber's shop in connection. 17-1y

Markdale Hotel.

Good Accommodation for Travellers. 'Bus to and from all trains. Charges moderate.

Markdale. A. RUTLEDGE, PROP.

COMMERCIAL HOTEL.

PRICEVILLE, Ont.

Large and commodious Sample Rooms Good Bed Rooms, &c. The Bar and larder well supplied with the best the market affords; good Stabling and attentive Hostler's

THOS. ATKINSON, Proprietor

CHATSWORTH HOUSE

(LATE MORROW HOUSE,)

CHATSWORTH, Ont.

THE undersigned having purchased the above property has had it thoroughly renovated and refurnished throughout beside making other new improvements, which will greatly add to the comfort and convenience of his guests, would respectfully solicit the patronage of the public generally. The best brands of liquors and cigars always in stock. Good meals and comfortable rooms guaranteed. Good stabling and attentive hostler.

—C. H. MATHEWS, Prop. 114.

Miscellaneous.

John McDonald,

CHATSWORTH,

DIVISION Court Clerk, Issuer of Marriage Licenses, Commissioner in B.R., Conveyancer, &c. Deeds, Mortgages, Wills, &c., attended to promptly, accurately, neatly, and cheaply. Private funds to lend in small sums on easy terms. Notes discounted

MISS LAMB,

DRESS-MAKER. UP-STAIRS IN Douglas' Block. Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges moderate.

Markdale, Nov. 15th, 1882. 114-3m.

R. M. Galbraith,

AUCTIONEER AND GENERAL LAND Agent, Williamsford Station. Auction Sales attended in all parts of the County. Goods sold on commission. Rates moderate. Pianos, Organs, and Sewing Machines; also Fruit and Ornamental Trees, Vines, Agricultural Implemennts, and Machinery of all kinds on sale.

Williamsford, Jan. 27, 1881.

T. E. SAYLES,

BUILDER & CONTRACTOR, (Stone and Brick). After completing 13 buildings his season is still on the track and is still prepared to do all kinds of stone and brick work, plastering and tuck pointing. Those who contemplate building will find it to their advantage to give him a call.

Residence corner of Brown and Sproule Stetes. MARKDALE. 16-v

MISS WELSH,

Dress & Mantlemaker. Charges moderate. Satisfaction guaranteed. Hill's Block, Sydenham street.

Markdale, Nov. 6th, 1882. 113-126

Wm. Brown,

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.

Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.

N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate security.

Joseph Gibson,

PLAIN & ORNAMENTAL

PLASTERER.

WHITEWASHING—CALSOMINING in Shades and Colors.

All work guaranteed. Charges moderate.

Markdale P.O.

LOYAL MARKDALE LODGE,

Of C. O. O. F. No. 78, will meet in their hall on Monday evening, Nov. 27th, at eight o'clock p. m.

108 W. L. YOUNG, Sec'y.

EUGENIA

Grist, Saw and Lath Mills

Having made eqtensive improvements in my Grist Mill I feel confident I can give good satisfaction.

GOOD FLOUR ALWAYS ON HAND.

Chopping Done Every Day.

Custom Sawing and Bills Filled on the shortest notice.

LUMBER AND LATH ALWAYS ON HAND.

Cherry, Butternut, White Ash, Black Ash Basswood, Pine and Hemlock Logs wanted

69ly. M. AKITT, Eugenia.

$2 WATCHES. Stem Winders $3.50. White metal Hunting Case $5. Imitation gold $6. Solid gold $12. Cheapest and best for your own use or speculative purposes. Valuable catalogue free. THOMPSON & CO., 123 Nassau St. New York.

ROBT. ASKIN,

MARKDALE,

Has opened out a First-Class

Furniture!

—AND—

UNDERTKING ESTABLISHMENT.

And therefore has supplied a want long felt, especially in the Undertaking Line.

COFFINS,

CASKETS,

SHROUDS,

and all

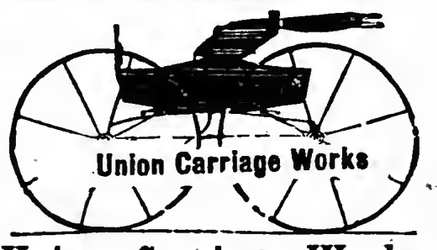
FUNERAL FURNISHINGS,

supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse

for hire at moderate rates.

FURNITURE!



From the Common to the

Best and Latest Styles,

in everything in the line.

Call and see for yourselves.

ROBT. ASKIN.

Union Carriage Works

Union Carriage Works.

All work manufactured from

FIRST CLASS MATERIAL

In the Lateat and Best Improved Style, and finished with English Varnish.

Painting & Trimming Rigs

will receive prompt attention.

All Repairs executed in the shortest possible time consistent with good workmanship.

GOOD WORK A SPECIALITY.

Remember the Shop, opposite the Cheapside

D. J. SHANAHAN,

Proprietor.

Markdale, Dec. 2nd, 1881. 64.

HAIR CUTTING AND SHAVING

By T. D. Smith,

Razors, Straps, and Shaving Brushes for sale. Razors sharpened.

☞ Orders filled for Tomb Stones.

STARTLING DISCOVERY!

LOST MANHOOD RESTORED.

A victim of youthful imprudence causing Premature Decay, Nervous Debility, Lost Manhood, etc., having tried in vain every known remedy, has discovered a simple self cure, which he will send FREE to his fellow-sufferers, address J. H. REEVES, 43 Chatham St., N. Y

$66 a week in your own town. $5 outfit free. No risk. Everything new. Capital not required. We will furnish you everything. Many are making fortunes. Ladies make as much as men, and boys and girls make great pay. Reader, if you want a business at which you can make great pay all the time you work, write for particulars to H. HALLETT & Co., Portland, Maine. 71-126

TEACHER WANTED.

MARRIED OR SINGLE—MARRIED man preferred—for School Section No. 4, Glenelg, holding second-class certificate. Duties to commence first of the new year. Apply stating salary, to

THOMAS TOWNSEND,

Glascott P. O.

Glascott, Nov. 1st 1882, 112-4t

WARNING!

There is great danger of taking cold from wet feet. If you want to Guard Against Sickness!

Keep your feet dry and warm by procuring your

BOOTS!

—FROM—

KAY & THOMAS.

Satisfaction Guaranteed. Medicated Cork Soles, all sizes, kept on hand. Remember the place opposite the new STANDARD Office. 49

Best business now before the public. You can make money faster at work for us than at anything else. Capital not needed. We will start you. $12 a day and upwards made at home by the industrious. Men, women, boys and girls wanted everywhere to work for us. Now is the time. You can work in spare time only or give your whole time to the business. You can live at home and do the work. No other business will pay you nearly as well. No one can fail to make enormous pay by engaging at once. Costly outfit and terms free. Money made fast, easily and honorably. Address TRUE & Co., Augusta, Maine. 71-126

REST AND COMFORT TO THE SUFFERING

Brown's Household Panacea has no equal for relieving pain, both internal and external. It cures pain in the Side, Back or Bowels, Sore Throat, Rheumatism, Toothache, Lumbago and any kind of a Pain or Ache. "It will most surely quicken the Blood and heal, as its acting power is wonderful." "Brown's Household Panacea," being acknowledged as the great Pain Reliever, and of double the strength of any other Elixer or Liniment in the world, should be in every family handy for use when wanted "as it really is the best remedy in the world for Cramps in the Stomach, and Pains and Aches of all kinds," and is for sale by all Druggists at 25 cents a bottle. 75-127

EARS FOR THE MILLION

FOO CHOO'S BALSAM OF SHARK'S OIL positively Restores the Hearing, and is the Only Absolute Cure for Deafness known. This Oil is abstracted from peculiar species of small White Shark, caught in the Yellow Sea, known as CARCHARODON RONDELETII. Every Chinese fisherman knows it. Its virtues as a restorative of hearing were discovered by a Buddhist Priest were discovered about the year 1410. Its cures were so numerous, and many so seemingly miraculous, that the remedy was officially proclaimed over the entire Empire. Its use became so universal, that for over 300 years no Deafness has existed among the Chinese people. Sent, charges prepaid, to any address at $1.00 per bottle.

Hear what the Deaf say:

It has performed a miracle in my case.

I have no unearthly noises in my head, and hear much better.

I have been greatly benefited.

My deafness helped a great deal—think another bottle will cure me.

Its virtues are unquestionable and its curative character absolute, as the writer can personally testify, both from experience and observation. Write at once to Haylock and Jenney, 7 Dey Street, New York, enclosing $1 and you will receive by return a remedy that will enable you to hear like anybody else, and whose curative effects will be permanent. You will never regret doing so."—EDITOR OF MERCANTILE REVIEW.

☞To avoid loss in the mails, please send money by Registered Letter.

Only imported by HAYLOCK & JENNEY, late Haylock & Co.,

Sole Agents for America. 7 DEY ST NEW YORK 93-145.

Wm. Lucas & Co.,

BANKERS,

Money Loaned

IN large or small amounts, at all times, on good endorsed notes, or on collateral security.

INTEREST AT 6 PER CENT.

Allowed on Savings Deposits.

☞Drafts issued and Collections made on points, at lowest rates.

W.M. LUCAS, Manager.

September 23, 1880. 2-ly

JOHN NOBLE,

MARKDALE.

GENER'L BLACKSMITH

HORSE SHOEING

A SPECIALTY.

EUGENIA.

(From our own Correspondent.)

The course of true love don't run one bit smoother than ever. Rumour has been very rife of late concerning a love scrape on the Meaford Road, the young man having been jilted, as reported by some, while others again say the young woman said she would travel a thousand miles in order to marry him. However, it turns out that the young man left his home in rather a distracted state of mind and has turned up in Barrie, the authorities having taken him up in charge for his safety. Much sympathy is felt for him. Had the case been reversed possibly twelve honest men and the judge might have been called upon to decide the amount required to appease the feelings of the young lady.

Last Saturday Geo. Latimore bagged a black fox.

Vennor says the comet was the cause of the late fine October weather, I guess this Monday will cause him to change his mind; every appearance of sleighing.

We want the Mail and Globe both to tell us why the Bible is not now taught in our public school. Yes, that is so?

[The above correspondence was unavoidably crowded out last week.—ED.]

DUNDALK ITEMS.

The Herald is very interesting; don't know how we could do without it now.

Messrs. Hewetson and Smith are winding up business here and going to Milton.

Neil McAnlay sold his farm in Osprey to Hugh Black, of Glenelg, price $1,800.

Mrs. Sweney sold her farm of 100 acres to Mrs. Brews, of Garafraxa, for $2,200.

A. G. Hunter is doing a good business in real estate, many properties having changed hands recently through his agency. Parties desirous of buying, renting, or selling cannot do better than give him a call, he is thoroughly reliable.

PRICEVILLE.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Winter seems to be approaching in spite of the comet's influence to the contrary.

Water in the wells is getting very low. The Saugeen is also lower for this season of the year than any resident has ever seen it.

The new bed of clay discovered, and used in making brick, has proved to be of such excellent quality that brick houses seem to be all the rage for the coming summer.

Several citizens are drawing and piling great heaps of bricks for future use.

The Baptist church is veneered with white brick and looks very neat.

Probably ten or twelve buildings will be erected next summer.

Some five or six mill carpenters are busy putting in the machinery in the new brick mill.

RUNAWAY STRATHROY BOYS.

STRATHROY, Nov. 14.—Quite an excitement has arisen here over the sudden departure from town of three young lads named Frank Cruickshanks, Charlie Dingman and Fred Kinder, aged in the vicinity of 15 and 16. They left without warning on Thursday, the 2nd Nov. taking with them, as was afterwards learned, two guns and three revolvers. It was thought they went away on a hunting frolic, but their long continued absence is causing considerable anxiety on the part of their parents, and it is the subject of much conversation about town. The direction in which they went is unknown further than that they passed their first night away from home in East Williams, and were seen in Ailsa Craig and Parkhill the next day. An Ailsa Craig livery man sent out a rig which has not yet been returned, and for which he holds the runaway boys to blame. It is needless to say the parents of the boys anxiously desire their return, and any information by telegraph or otherwise addressed to the Dispatch Office, Strathroy, Ontario, will be thankfully received by their parents.

GIVEN AWAY.

We cannot help noticing the liberal offer made to all invalids and sufferers by Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. You are requsted to call at A. Turner & Co's Drug Store, and get a Trial Bottle free of cost, if you are suffering with Consumption, Severe Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Hay Fever, Loss of Voice, Hoarseness, or any affection of the Throat or Lungs. It will positively cure you.

STEAMBOATS IN VENICE.

A Modern Innovation.

The little steamboats that now ply on the Grand canal are the first things to arrest the traveller's attention when he visits Venice. Till now, arrival at Venice has always been something unique and fascinating. Mr. Ruskin, indeed, thought the fascination already gone when, instead of stealing up to the city in a gondola across the open lagoon, he was driven by steam, and could only see the noble landscape of approach as the engine slackened its rushing on the iron line. But commonplace people found a good deal to say on the other side; and the suddenness of the contrast, as one stepped out of the railway carriage into a boat to be rowed down the untrodden streets of the island city, perhaps enhanced the charm and strengthened the impression. Lord Beaconsfield was certainly right in singling out the strange quiet of the canals as the particular quality which made Venice unlike all other places. But these "vaporetti di Venezia" have changed the aspect of things. They have two courses—one from the railway station to the public gardens, the other from the Rialto to the Piazetta; and they run every ten or fifteen minutes, calling at several intermediate stations. For the first day or two they were not popular, and their enemies even began to hope with some confidence that they would die a natural death; but the Venetians were seduced by the convenience of them, and now the boats are always well filled. So far, then, they must be admitted to have justified their existence, but it is a pity that they do not bear their success more quietly. The captains seem to delight in turning on the steam-whistle as if they were children playing with a new toy, and the whistles themselves are certainly miracles of shrillness. Mr. Ruskin diversified the pages of one of the earlier chapters of "Fors Clavigera" by keeping count of the number of whistles that proceeded from a steamer about to start for the Lido; and he counted seven during the writing of one page, when he gave up his writing in despair. But if he were to revisit his old quarters on the Grand canal now, he would probably find it impossible to write it at all. The steamers whistle in the improved fashion on arriving at and departing from each station; they whistle as they approach the ferries, they whistle as often as they happen to see a boat ahead, and they whistle at other times in case there might be a boat ahead. Altogether they have imported a very noisy element into the life of the canal; and one need not be cursed with a peculiarly sensitive nervous organization to feel how unpleasant the change is. It can no longer be said, as it was said in "Contarini Fleming," that in Venice "no rude sound distracts the ear" or that "there is nothing to put fancy to flight."—St. James's Gazette.

Thrashing Floors.

It was in the north of China that we first saw the thrashing-floor of the East and of the Bible. When we were travelling to some out-stations in Manchuria, the road bounded on both sides by endless fields of gigantic millet, there would come a farmer's house and a farm-yard, or a small hamlet, and on the skirt of it, the trodden spot of ground hard and smooth as stone. But it was not till some weeks later, as we were journeying slowly up to Pekin, and the harvest was now gathered, that we saw it in use. The grain was laid on the floor, and a pair of oxen were driven leisurely over the ears, and treading out the corn. Another form of thrashing was the stone roller, which was drawn over the ears by oxen or mules; and there was another still, where a flat board, furnished with some projections, was drawn over the ears by oxen or mules: and there was another still, where a flat board, furnished with some projections, was drawn in the same way, the driver or children perhaps sitting on the board to lend it additional weight. Sometimes the grain was piled up in a large heap in the centre of the floor, unsifted and then the men with the winnowing shovel (the Bible fan) would toss the grain into the air, or else into a flat basket, from which the man who held it flung up the corn, and the wind carrying the chaff away filled the air with dust. One Bible phrase after another was recalled to us. It was easy to see how the Philistines could rob the thrashing-floors at Keilah, those open spaces in the field on which the absence of any dread of rain induced the farmers to pile up their wealth of grain; or how the open floor, open to the sky and smooth, became the natural place to test the dew upon Gideon's fleece while all the rest of the ground was dry: or how, when the two kings, Ahab of Israel and Jehoshaphat of Judah, summoned the prophet, the place to set the royal thrones was on the smooth and empty thrashing floor just above the gate of Samaria; or how no better place than this could be found on which to build the altar that David raised when he had purchased the site of the temple from Araunah the Jebusite, and found in the thrashing instruments—the wooden fans and boards and oxen poles—the wood for the sacrifice. It would be easy for the oxen to stop in the midst of the abundance they were treading out and eat; the merciful Jewish law provided that they should eat if they would; there should be no muzzling of them; "thou shalt not muzzle the ox when he treadeth out the corn."—Good Words.

The Transit of Venus.

This event, which is to take place in December next, is attracting unusual attention to our neighboring planet, which is now so conspicuous an object in the evening sky. Venus is nearly as large as the earth, and, like our planet, travels around the sun continually, but makes its annual revolution in seven and a half of our months. Each of its four seasons, therefore, lasts eight weeks. Venus is so near the sun that if it is inhabited it must be by beings that can stand a continuous heat double that of this earth. Venus is surrounded with an atmosphere filled with moisture, and must be much more cloudy that is the sky of this earth. It undoubtedly has continents, islands, oceans, and rivers. It must have some forms of of life, for where there is heat and moisture there must be some vegetable growth, and, in all probability, some of the lower forms of insect life. The coming transit is an interesting event, and astronomers everywhere are getting ready to witness it from every point of view possible on this earth.

MORSELS FOR SUNDAY CONTEMPLATION.

Nothing great was ever achieved without enthusiasm.

You may depend upon it that he is a good man whose intimate friends are all good.

We should look at the lives of others as at a mirror, and take from others an example for ourselves.

We should do by our cunning as we do by our courage—always have it ready to defend ourselves, never to offend others.

It is only necessary to grow old to become more indulgent. I see no fault committed that I have not committed myself.—Goethe.

Said cynical, ungallant Diderot: "Women swallow at one mouthful the lie that flatters, and drink drop by drop the truth that is bitter."

There are many men who appear to be struggling against poverty, and yet are happy; but yet more, who, although abounding in wealth, are miserable.

Choose for your friend him that is wise and good, and secret and just, ingenious and honest, and in those things which have a latitude, use your own liberty.

Though a soldier in time of peace is like a chimney in summer, yet what wise man would pluck down his chimney because his almanac tells him 'tis the middle of June?

Men of great parts are often unfortunate in the management of public business, because they are apt to go out of the common road by the quickness of their imagination.

As in a man's life, so in his studies, I think it is the most beautiful and humane thing in the world so to mingle gravity with pleasure that the one may not sink into melancholy, nor the other rise up into wantonness.—Pliny.

Equality is one of the most consummate scoundrels that ever crept from the brain of a political juggler—a fellow who thrusts his hand into the pocket of industry and enterprising talent, and squanders their hard-earned profits on profligate idleness and indolent stupidity.

Every mind seems capable of entertaining a certain quantity of happiness, which no institutions can increase, no circumstances alter, and entirely independent of fortune. Let any man compare his present fortune with the past, and he will probably find himself, upon the whole, neither better nor worse than formerly.

It is well known that a black object on a white ground will appear to be much larger than it really is. A white stripe, for instance, on a black surface seems broader than a black stripe on a white surface, although both be of the same width. This phenomenon of simultaneous contrast is physiologically explained by Pater Scherffer in this way: When one of our senses receives a double sensation, one of which is active and strong while the other is weak, it will be found that the latter is not felt. This must be particularly the case when both impressions are of the same kind, or when a strong effect from the object on one of the senses is followed by another of the same kind which is milder and weaker.

Tricycles Run by Electricity.

Recently, inquiries appeared in our correspondence columns as to whether a tricycle could be lighted by electricity. We now learn that the improvements in the storage of electric energy and electro-motors has so far advanced that tricycles can not only be lighted but propelled solely by electricity, as was seen from the tricycle ridden last week by Prof. Ayrton in the city. The Faure accumulators, in which the energy was stored for the lighting and driving, were placed on the foot-board of the tricycle, and the motion was produced by one of Profs. Ayrton and Perry's newly patented electro-motors placed under the seat of the rider. Using one of these specially made tricycle electro motors and the newest type of the Faure accumulator, the total dead weight to be added to a tricycle to light and propel it electrically is 1½ hundred-weight—a little more than that of one additional person. In the tricycle ridden by Prof. Ayrton the ordinary foot-treadles were entirely absent, so that there could be no question as to electricity being the sole propelling agency, but with ordinary electric tricycles it may be desirable to leave the treadles, so that while electric propulsion alone is used on the level the rider can, engaging up a steep hill, supplement it by using the treadles instead of, as at present with the ordinary non-electric tricycles, having to get out and laboriously push the tricycle up the hill before him.—London Electrician.

Coal in China.

The geological investigations made by Baron von Richthofen in China show the existence of vast coal districts in the west and northwest. The whole surface of northern China is covered by rich yellow earth, to a depth of 1,000 and 2,000 feet, which overlies all the coal fields; and the great plain of China is bordered on the west by a vast limestone wall, 2,000 to 3,000 feet high, on the top of which extends a plateau of coal in a superior state of preservation, owing to its capping of hard limestone, which has resisted denudation. There are here 30,000 square miles of coal-bearing ground of the best quality, in which the coal beds lie perfectly horizontal, thirty feet thick, for a length of 200 miles. According to the best authority, the coal beds were deposited primarily around mountains of metamorphic and primary rocks, which then constituted the land, and have lain horizontally and undisturbed ever since.

According to Archibald Forbes, Sir Garnet Wolseley possesses "audacity, elan, buoyancy, debonnair aplomb, a strain of well-timed recklessness, alert dexterity, finesse, nimble suppleness, and warmth of heart," resulting from his Celtic blood; likewise steadfast constancy, doggedness against intrigue, calm manliness, unparalelled equanimity, cool, steady rancor against enemies, and unfaltering fidelity in friendships," resulting from Saxon blood. No wonder he got so many wounds; he must have been an uncommonly protuberant object to aim at.

Ducks Scared By An Electric Light.

As the steamer Emma C. Elliott was coming up the river last night the cabin passengers and the crew were startled by a singular whistling sound in the air all about the boat. No one could account for the noise, and the more they tried the more unaccountable it seemed. Capt. Pes al went to the electrical machine and turned on the light, 800 candle-power. In a moment the foggy river was flooded with light, and it was then that the noise proceeded from an immeasurable colony of wild ducks on their way southward. The blinding rays startled the fowls, and rising in great droves they began circling straight at the boat. In a few minutes the boat was literally full of ducks. Some of them would hit heavily against the glass around the light and fall stunned to the deck. Others fell into the faces of the men and were knocked down with sticks and canes. In all, several hundred were secured. Thirty-six were found concealed in different parts of the cabin this morning when the boat came into the wharf at St. Louis. Others were found about the boilers and in the engine-room, and a great number were killed by the wheels. The ducks were mostly in the water when the boat ran into the immense flock, and when the electric light was turned on them they seemed to grow crazy with fear. They rose in great droves and whirled around in the air before dashing themselves against the lamp. The men on the Elliott say that never on the river have there been so many ducks and geese as at present. Every slough and creek between here and Cairo had several hundred ducks floating on it this morning. The total catch on the Elliott will amount to several hundred. A great many of the ducks killed fell back into the water and were lost.

Mental Influence in Catching Cold.

It is noteworthy as a curious yet easily explicable fact that few persons take cold who are not either self-consciously careful or fearful of the consequences of exposure. If the attention be wholly diverted from the existence of danger by some supreme concentration of thought, as, for example, when escaping from a house on fire, or plunging into cold water to save life, the effects of "chill" are seldom experienced. This alone should serve to suggest that the influence exerted by colds falls on the nervous system. The immediate effects of a displacement of blood from the surface and its determination to the internal organs are not, as was once supposed, sufficient to produce the sort of congestion that issues in inflammation. If it were so, an inflammatory condition would be the common characteristic of our bodily state. When the vacular system is healthy, and that part of the nervous apparatus by which the calibre of the vessels is controlled performs its proper functions normally, any disturbance of equilibrium in the circulatory system which may have been produced by external cold will be quickly adjusted. It is therefore on the state of the nervous system that everthing depends, and it is, as we have said, on the nervous system the stress of a "chill" falls. Consciousness is one element in the production of a cold, and when that is wanting, the phenomenon is not very likely to ensue. It is in this way that persons who do not cultivate the fear of cold-catching are not as a rule subject to this infliction. This is one reason why the habit of wrapping up tends to creat, a morbid susceptibility. The mind by its fear-begetting precaution keeps the nervous system on the alert for impressions of cold, and the centres are, so to say, panic-stricken, when even a slight sensation occurs. Cold applied to the surface, even in the form of a gentle current of air somewhat lower in temperature than the skin, will produce the "feeling" of "chill." Conversely, a thought will often give rise to the "feeling" of cold applied to the surface—for example, of "cold water running down the back." Many of the sensations of cold or heat which are experienced by the hypersensitive have no external cause. They are purely ideational in their mode of origination, and ideal in fact.—London Lancet.

The Word "Wife".

Mr Ruskin says:— "What do you think the beautiful word 'wife' comes from? It is thegreat word in which the English and Latin languages conquered the French and Greek. I hope the French will some day get a word for it instead of that of femme. But what do you think it comes from? The great value of the Saxon words is that they mean something. Wife means 'weaver.' You must either be housewives or house moths, remember that. In the deep sense, you must either weave men's fortunes and embroider them, or feed upon and bring them to decay. Wherever a true wife comes, home is always around her. The stars may be over her head, the glow-worm in the night's cold grass may be the fire at her feet, but home is where she is, and for a noble woman it stretches far around her, better than houses ceiled with cedar, or painted with vermillion—shedding its quiet light for those who else are homeless. 'This, I believe, is the woman's true place and power."

French Jealousy of England.

The French press cannot keep its temper when writing of the English success in Egypt. There is great fun in the irony with which they critize Sir Garnet Wolseley's military tactics and the reward of $250,000, and they ask whether any French General was ever rewarded in a similar manner. The example of Montauban is given, for whom the Emperor tried in vain to obtain a dotation after the Chinese expedition, but who could not even obtain a pension from the Chambers. The General was forced to content himself with the handsome share of loot awarded him by fortune and the heavenly smile with which the beautiful young Empress of China saluted him as he met her flying thorough the narrow passages of the Summer Palace in such wild haste that she was forced to drop the casket which contained the splendid jewels, and which became the property of the conqueror, but which he would have willingly restored had she not fled with such speed.

A very old lady on her death-bed in penitential mood, said: "I have been a great sinner more than eighty years, and didn't know it." An old colored woman who had lived with her a long time, exclaimed, "Laws, I knowed it all the time."

Thought Himself A Woman.

A queer creature died recently in the almshouse in Philadelphia, who for twenty-eight years was afflicted with a mild form of insanity. His chief delusion was that he was a beautiful young woman, and that numberless suitors knelt at his feet to sue for his love. The name of the old man was John Talboy Bellis; but because of his idiosyncrasy, he was acknowledged finally "Sister." When a young man he was a member of an amateur dramatic society, and he often played female parts with a great deal of success. He was very polished and cultivated gentleman, and had a taste for painting, drawing, and fancy work. Although he became crazy, he made considerable money by making lace and working slippers for visitors to the asylum. Although nearly seventy years of age when he died, to the very last he imagined himself a pretty girl.

The Great City.

London has a larger population than many a European State with a sovereign and a Parliament. At the census of 1881 the area of metropolitan taxation and police contained 4,764,312 persons. Thus there are in London more than double the number of people in Denmark, including Greenland; nearly three times as many as in Greece; more than eighteen times the population of Montenegro; some thousands more than Portugal, including the Azores and Madeira; nearly treble the population of Servia; more than double that of Bulgaria; three-quarters of a million more than Holland; more than Sweden or Norway or Switzerland.

Send Me a "Telepheme."

We shall ask a dispensation, says an exchange, to permit us to introduce a new word into the language. It is "telepheme." The use of such phrases as "telephonic communication," "telephonic message," "news by telephone," and the like, seems a little clumsy, and a single word expressing their meaning has become a desideradum. We submit "telepheme" as a word properly made from the Greek, and a vocable which will conveniently serve our hurrying speech. Its formation is analogous to "telegram," the termination in both cases representing the result of the verb's action. Thus "to telegraph" is to write from a distance, and a "telegram" is that written from a distance. The new word 'telepheme' is similarly made.

A Narrow Escape for Royalty.

Lord Charles Beresford, finding after the bombardment of Alexandria that one of the "Condor's" shells had gone right through the roof of Fort Marabout, and thinking that it had not been charged, the gallant commander thrust a lighted candle into the fuse hole. Lord Charles then determined to present the shell to the Prince of Wales, and sent it to the Nordenfeldt works to be cut in two. Water was poured over it and was stirred in with a copper rod, but the shell had put up with a good deal and felt that it must really draw the line at being stirred with a copper rod. So it exploded, and the stirrer was seriously, if not fatally injured.

The Persean Rose.

Pyrethrum rose, the insecticide plant, is perfectly hardy in this climate, and may be raised as easily as the coneflower or mayweed. The value of the powder made from the flower as an insecticide can hardly be estimated, since it is sure death to many of our most destructive pests, and yet utterly harmless to human beings and the larger animals.

The London Truth says: "Whereas the Roman woman and the women of the middle ages spent perhaps more money on their adornment than modern ladies, they did so more judiciously, for they purchased what was intrinsically valuable and which could be handed down from generation to generation."

A Scotchman who has lately written a volume of "American Notes" concerning his travels here, says of the collection taken up in a Chicago church, that "if all genuine, it must have amounted to many dollars." This is the unkindest cut ever yet published on Chicago, and must rejoice the St. Louisians mightily. The Scotch estimate of the magnitude of a dollar is also exquisite.

A telegraphic experiment of a singular description was lately tried at the Trocadero, Paris. It consisted merely in the reading of large silvered zinc letters, a square metre in size, fixed on a blackened board, by refracting telescopes. This method has succeeded very well from the Trocadero to the Pantheon, a distance of about three miles. The inventor, an officer in the French service, thinks that he will succeed in reading messages at a distance of sixty miles in favorable circumstances.

One evening at my father's residence, relates Mrs. Kemble in her "Records," the comparative cheapness of living abroad and in England having been discussed, Sydney Smith declared that, for his part, he had never found foreign quarters so much more reasonable than home ones, or foreign hotels less exorbitant in their charges. "I know I could never live under fifty pounds a week," said he. "Oh, but how do you live?" was the next question. "Why, as a canon should live," proudly retorted he; "and they charged me as an enemy's ordinance!"

"If I were a girl," said a well-known New England clergyman recently, "I wouldn't parade too much in public places.", He mentioned a number of other things that he would not do. He would not think too much about dress, or about parties, or about fashionable society. But in regard to the folly of parading in public places he was particularly emphatic. A good many girls acquire the habit of parading the streets before they comprehend how objectionable it is. Their motive at first is simply amusement; afterwards they like thus to draw upon themselves the notice of others. But notice so attracted is seldom respectful, and the very young man who will look admiringly at the girls he meets under such circumstances will probably rejoice in his own heart that his sister is not among them. There is too much of this sort of thing in many of our smaller town and villages, and we are glad that the practice has been publicly denounced from the pulpit.—New York Ledger.

A Huge Hole.

The largest well in the world is being dug in Wilmington, California. It is twenty-five feet in diameter, and is so that the bottom is much wider than the top. There is room in it for some thirty men at work. The water supply is so abundant that the whole town of Wilmington can be supplied, and there is enough to spare to supply the ships in a port near by. Such is the land of big things.

A Definition.

Teacher—"Define the word exclaim."

Scholar—"It means to holler out."

Teacher—"Construct a sentence in which the word is properly used."

Scholar—"The baby excoriates when it gets hurt."

VERB SAP.—Never charge any man with the specific sins which he confesses in prayer-meeting; for, though he be prone to forgive, the sparks are to fly upward he will be sure to libel the next morning.

If the comet should collide with the earth, says an amateur astronomer of the Gazette, "its coma would be substituted by a full stop." Exactly as its tail would be broken off for a period.—N. Y. Commercial. Precisely. And at that point it would dash us all into eternity.—Detroit Free Press.

The proposals to build a tidal canal from Liverpool to Manchester have come to the point of practical adoption, and in the course of two or three years ships from America will be moored by the millers of Manchester. One effect this will have, besides saving the cost of transhipment at Liverpool, and that is, it will enable a cargo vessel, for instance, to sail straight from New Orleans to Manchester, without any transportation on this continent. Thus New York will lose considerable of the traffic she now has.

SINGULAR INCIDENT AT A WEDDING.—A rather singular circumstance has occurred at a wedding at the parish church of Yarmouth. The wedding ring was lost when wanted, and a search for it was fruitless. Eventually the bridegroom produced another for the completion of the ceremony, and the bride was in the act of fitting it upon her finger, when the ring which had been purchased for the occasion was discovered concealed within its substitute, where it had accidentally settled in the bridegroom's pocket.

AN INTELLIGENT COLLIE.—On the arrival of the mail train about five o'clock each morning across the village letter-bags are taken from the station to the Post Office by a handsome collie. The dog patiently reaches the station about five minutes before the train arrives, and when the bags are thrown from the van, takes them in his mouth and sets off without delay to deliver them. Few would dare to obstruct the dog in his duty, and his daily movements excite much interest to the railway travellers and visitors, while the residents are proud of their official.

A CURIOUS LIBRARY.—A curious collection of books is contained in the library of Warstenstein, near Cassel, in Germany. These books appear at first sight to be volumes of wood, but each volume is really a complete history of the tree it represents. The back shows the bark in which a small panel is left to write the scientific and the common name as a title. One side shows the trunk in its natural state, and the other polished and varnished. Inside are specimens of the leaves, fruit, fibre, and insect pests to which is added a full description of the tree and its products.

HIGH FALUTIN.—Erskine observed upon coming into court one day, that his brother, four, a brother barrister, had his ankle tied up with a silk handkerchief. "What's the matter, Balfour?" he inquired. The sufferer, whose mode of expressing himself was always very elaborate, replied—"I was taking a romantic ramble in my father's grounds, when, coming to a gate, I began to climb over it, by which I came in contact with the first bar, and grazed the epidermis of my leg, which has caused a slight extravasation of blood." "You may thank your lucky stars," observed Erskine, "that your brother's gate was not as lofty as your ideas, or you must have broken your neck."—London Society.

Another painting has been discovered in Pompeii. The Judgment of Solomon is the story it tells, and unusual interest attaches to it since it is the first picture on a classical subject ever found in the buried city. The picture is five and a half feet long and sixteen inches in height, bordered by a red line about an inch in width. The scene is laid upon a terrace in front of a palace. Above is a white awning and a canopy, while seated upon a dais is the king in white, bearing a sceptre. On either side of him are six soldiers under arms. The king leans forward toward a woman in a green robe, with hair dishevelled and arms reaching with out-stretched hands before him. Upon a three-legged stool a strange elephant is confined in a recumbent position, with a female wearing a turban. A soldier with helmet and plume holds in one hand the infant while with the other he raises the scimetar to cut the little form asunder. A group of spectators nineteen in number complete the blood-curdling picture. The painting is said to be bad but the coloring is perfect in an excellent state of preservation. The painting has been placed in the Naples Museum among the Pompeiian frescoes.

THE PROGRESS OF TEMPERANCE.—The temperance movement, initiated fifty years ago, has, at least, arrayed the clergy against intemperance. Fifty years ago a drunken cleric, especially in the country districts, was by no means rare. To-day such a scandal is almost unknown. The working class of artisans are more sober than they were, and there are signs that Cardinal Manning, "General" Booth, and the Blue Ribbon Army are beginning to reach the masses, whose intemperance has hitherto remained untouched. On the other hand we must not forget the dark shadow of the more cheering picture which is presented by the indisputable increase in drunkenness among women. It will be but a poor gain to the cause of temperance to gain a man, no matter how influential, and to lose a woman. On the whole, the chief claim that can be made for the temperance movement is that it has sown much valuable seed, but the harvest has still to be garnered.

CDDS AND ENDS.

ve that lasts—The love of er, an Englishman, has just is wife will be half-and-h a good swimmer the mo e kept shut. Women immers.

gular marriage" is the ph in one of the dailies.

a game that two played exceptional truthfulness

egins his advertisement

ble services to all who e as to require them."

French speak in the nose

the throat, and the Engli ." Either of which is speaking through the t er watch has been exhi watchmaker. The pap such a manner that th e as serviceable as those

Dr. H—— and Sergeant arm in-arm, a wag said

two are just equal to o

"Why?" was the resp is a lawyer and a d r your life."

ears from the annual ret

nal acquirements of the fficers and men in the twenty years ago 35,

read nor write, there a that ignorant condition.

ration turning one day

pper beeches, a lady re d in her school days and tangle" trees; when

"Oh, but I can never re

mes of things!"

declares that his wife

vom n he ever knew.

tly exclaimed, "she h ork quilts during the las them herself, sir, out of t

ted in her shopping t e."

ding a few drops of dilu mixture of equal parts filled water, and then a li nce of lime or lead will precipitate. The latter i hydric acid, w te black.

isville negro, after steal

hickens one night, t morning, and sold th gate. "You see," he didn't want to deprive hickens, you know. I

w."

wer animals are easily

by the vapors of naph used for a long time a moths, both in museum

ions of beetles, and in ecently it has been us

he itch, and in general it nds of vermin and inse

nner.

were talking about

t the table of their re already well awa to his own unaided ex

d of Rossini?" asked

"Passionately," rep

his 'Barber'?" "No, patronized the man—

r the last forty years."

many genders are t

blmaster. "Three, sir

ittle blue eyes—"masc nenter." "Give me a aid the master. "W e, because you are a ma

because I am a girl."

" "I don't know," s t I reckon Mr. Jenkin ld bachelor."

the time when it was rious warrior whose na

ria has endured more laces which date from

The attack made upo

ently was the last of nts of a similar natur celebrated in history,

the minor sieg s from consequences resulted al.

A Tough Bear Sto

esday evening George rough the woods to field, N. B., was attac

r. Having no other

f paraffine oil, he str

ke the bottle of oil ov

n sprung on him an him, when George ha to light a match and s stant old Bruin was go of him, and in less

s all consumed but t

e. George then com

t in his hat to quen

snout, so as to get t

vors had never before ventures with bears, hi

ined to doubt the accu

ut when they remem

r cently rode home w

d a live bear, a pa d, they will see there

ised at it this his

ING A PYRAMID.—T

Egypt, whose base

cres, and which rises required 100,000 build it; while a nsumption of only coal, would have lift

o i s place.

stolen a coat," sai

"and I wan't you

ou can prove me inno

yes. We can prove djoining township

en, and that the pr much will you cha t sort of a coat is it rate; never been w

ll, I wont charge

e me the coat."

stion, costiveness,

ediately cured wit

It stimulates and g

It increases the stomach, and caus

CDDS AND ENDS.

love that lasts—The love of money.

Beer, an Englishman, has just married. If his wife will be half-and-half.

be a good swimmer the mouth should be kept shut. Women are seldom swimmers.

singular marriage" is the heading to graph in one of the dailies. Thought as a game that two played at.

h exceptional truthfulness a quack begins his advertisement—"I offer luable services to all who are so unate as to require them."

e French speak in the nose, the Ger- in the throat, and the English through th." Either of which is more agree- han speaking through the telephone.

per watch has been exhibited by a watchmaker. The paper is pre- in such a manner that the watch is be as serviceable as those in ordinary n Dr. H—— and Sergeant A——were ng and in-arm, a wag said to a friend, two are just equal to one highway- "Wh ?" was the response. "Be it is a lawyer and a doctor—your or your life." pears from the annual return as to the ional acquirements of the non-commis- officers and men in the army that, s twenty years ago 35,000 could read nor write, there are now only n that ignorant condition.

versation turning one day on the sub- copper beeches, a lady remarked that sed in her school days to be called and tangle" trees; when another re- "Oh, but I can never remember the mes of things!"

s declares that his wife is the most woman he ever knew. "Why, sir," ly exclaimed, "she has made ten work quilts during the last two years them herself, sir, out of the samples ere in her shopping tours during me."

ding a few drops of dilute sulphuric a mixture of equal parts of glycerine illed water, and then a little alcohol, sence of lime or lead will be shown by precipitate. The latter is recognized lphydric acid; when the tate black.

isville negro, after stealing a gentle- chickens one night, took them back morning, and sold them to him at gate. "You see," he said to his I didn't want to deprive a gen'l'man chickens, you know. Dey was his'n, ow."

lower animals are easily driven away by the vapors of naphthaline. It used for a long time as protection moths, both in museums, especially ctions of beetles, and in the house. Recently it has been used with suc- the tion, and in general it can be used ds of vermin and insects, especial- mmer.

were talking about music and the at the table of their host, who, as re already well aware, owed his to his own unaided exertions. "You of Rossini?" asked one of the "Passionately," replied the host. Barber?" "No, sir, I do not patronized the man—have shaved for the last forty years."

w many genders are there?" asked schoolmaster. "Three, sir," promptly little blue eyes—"masculine, femin- neuter." "Give me an example of said the master. "Why, you are ine, because you are a man; and I am e because I am a girl." "Very well, ." "I don't know," said the little r I reckon Mr. Jenkins is neuter, as old bachelor."

e the time when it was founded by strious warrior whose name it bears, drian has endured more sieges than places which date from much earlier The attack made upon it by our ecently was the last of fifteen or six- vents of a similar nature which have e celebrated in history, without men- the minor sieges from which no im- t consequences resulted to the world eral.

A Tough Bear Story.

Tuesday evening George Trevors, while through the woods to his home in sfield, N. B., was attacked by a very ear. Having no other weapon than a of paraffine oil, he struck the bear oke the bottle of oil over him. The en sprung on him and commenced g him, when George had the presence d to light a match and set fire to him. instant old Bruin was all in a blaze t go of him, and in less than five min- as all consumed but the head and ets. George then commenced to car- ter in his hat to quench the fire to e snout, so as to get the bounty. If revors had never before had any not- dventures with bears, his friends might clined to doubt the accuracy of this re- but when they remember that it was o r cently rode home with two dead and a live bear, a paw clasped in and, they will see there is nothing to p ised at in this his latest achieve-

---

LDING A PYRAMID.—The great Pyra- f Egypt, whose base extends over acres, and which rises to a height of et, required 100,000 men for twenty to build it; while a steam-engine, consumption of only about 700 chal- of coal, would have lifted every stone to i s p'ace.

've stolen a coat," said a man to a r, "and I wan't you to defend me. you can prove me innocent?" n, yes. We can prove that you were adjoining township when the coat tolen, and that the prosecution is ma- ."

ow much will you charge?" hat sort of a coat is it?" rst rate; never been worn any." ell, I wont charge you anything. ive me the coat."

igestion, costiveness, or constipation, mediately cured with ZOPESA from It stimulates and gives activity to e. It increases the dissolving juices stomach, and causes the food to late.

INDISPENSABLE.—There are some simple remedies indispensable in every family. Among these, the experience of years assures us, should be recorded Briggs' Electric Oil. For both internal and external application we have found it of great value; especially can we recommend it for colds, rheumatism or nervous complaints.

Shaggy goods of all kinds in brown, fawn color, dark green, dark blue, or in plaids of heather-mixtures are the most fashionable of all utility fabrics.

Mr. J. R. Seymour, Druggist, St. Catharines, writes that he finds an ever-increasing sale for Burdock Blood Bitters, and adds that he can, without hesitancy, recommend it. Burdock Blood Bitters is the grand specific for all diseases of the Blood, Liver and Kidneys. 9.

Embroidery is still largely employed for dress-trimming, being used in all manner of materials, from the ladies' cloths to satin and gauzes.

Who Should Suffer.

The many who daily suffer agony from corns, bunions, callous lumps, when the means of remedy can be so easily procured. Putnam's great remedy for corns is the new article, but it commands the confidence of every druggist in Canada, as all can testify that Putnam's Corn Extractor is a sure thing. The man who neglects this suggestion to try Putnam's Extractor ought to suffer. Use not "the article just as good." Flesh destroying and dangerous substitutes are offered as a substitute for Putnam's. Of such beware.

Pretty black silk suits, made in the new style, with chicoree ruches, are selling cheap.

Mrs. Wm. Allan, of Acton, says she has never been without a bottle of Hagyard's Yellow Oil in the house for the last twenty years, and would not be for ten times the cost; adding that she has never known it to fail for Colds and Croup, Sore Throat, Stiff Neck, Burns, Scalds, etc. She concludes by saying, "if any one doubts its efficacy, refer them to me." 10.

Lovely little toques and turbans made of feathers are again imported. With these come graceful little mouchoir muffs made of feathers to match.

Deafness that is caused by colds, inflammation of the membrane of the ear, and Earache, is often cured by Hagyard's Yellow Oil, the great external and internal remedy for all Pain, Soreness, and Inflammation, Rheumatism, Burns, Scalds, Frost Bites, Sore Throat, Croup, Contracted Muscles, etc. Never be without it. 12.

Dorsay redingotes are imported made of black Lyons velvet and trimmed with a magnificent appliqué work of black embroidery and jet. They are fastened down the front from the throat to the bottom of the skirt with costly cordelieres and handsome cut jet buttons in medallion designs

"A. P." 160

Vegetine

Five Doctors Did Not Cure.

Clinton Street,
Toronto, Ont., Sept 13, 1879.

Mr. H. R. Stevens:

Dear Sir,—I hereby certify that I have been sick for three years, unable to get any relief whatever. I have been under the care of five of the best physicians, each one giving my illness a different name. The first said General Debility; the second, Female Debility and impoverished blood; the third, Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia; the fourth said I was in Consumption; the fifth said, Neuralgia on the lungs, and was certain I would never enjoy good health, so I concluded to give up doctors and commenced taking Patent Medicines. At this time I was very weak. I had pain in my side, back and chest, slept very little, and the food I ate caused me pain. I was a burden to myself and friends. I was persuaded to try Vegetine. A friend gave me a bottle to try, not thinking it would do me any good, as I had no hope of ever getting any better. After using the first bottle my head was better, and I could sleep better. The next two my appetite came, and I was able to enjoy my food. I have now taken five bottles. I have a good appetite and sleep well, have no pain, and am able to do most of my own work. I pronounce your Medicine far ahead of any other, and can cheerfully recommend it to any one in need of such a medicine.

Yours respectfully,
MRS. E. ALLEN.

Rheumatism Cured.

Toronto, March 29, 1879.

Mr. H. R. Stevens:

Dear Sir,—I was troubled with Rheumatism in my knee and hip joints for nearly a year.

I tried a number of medicines to effect a cure, but none gave me any relief. A friend recommended me to try your Vegetine, which I did, and after taking two bottles of it I found relief. I took four more bottles, and the pains completely left me. I feel satisfied it is a cure for Rheumatism.

Yours respectfully,
M. ALLEN,
6 Rossin House Block, Toronto, Ont.

Vegetine.—For eradicating all impurities of the blood from the system, it has no equal. It has never failed to effect a cure, giving tone and strength to the system debilitated by disease.

Vegetine
PREPARED BY
H. R. STEVENS, Toronto, Ont.

Vegetine is Sold by All Druggists.

RUBBER STAMPS.—ADDRESS R. H. COX, 4 King St. East, Toronto. Agents wanted.

HAND STAMPS, SEALS, ETC., of every description and for all uses. KENYON, TINGLEY & STEWART Mfg Co., Toronto.

WATCHES repaired. Trade work a specialty. A. BALLABEY, 8 King St. E., Toronto

CHRIS. SHEPPARD, Manufr of Masonic and other Society Jewels, 154 King E., Toronto.

$5 PER DAY can be made by agents, male or female. C. W. DENNIS, Toronto.

TORONTO.—Mr. J. H. Mayne Campbell, Barrister, Solicitor, Etc., 9 Victoria-st

WATCHES. Send for free illustrated catalogue to RYRIE, the Jeweler, 13 Yonge Street, Toronto.

CARDS Christmas, New Year, Birthday and other Cards, at H. J. MATTHEWS & Bros. art depot, Toronto

ONTARIO VETERINARY COLLEGE, TORONTO. Students can enter from October until January. PROF. SMITH, V. S. Edin. Principal. Fees, fifty dollars.

AGENTS WANTED—EITHER SEX—light, honourable, and steady employment; no book; for circular and particulars address Box 70, Sharon, Ont.

SPECIAL HOLIDAY NOTICE!

NOW READY. Our three Mammoth Catalogues and Price Lists, with full description of the largest Stock of Xmas Goods, Cards, Albums, Xmas Tree Ornaments, Scrap Pictures, &c., &c. Sent free to any address by applying to BENNET & CO., Wholesale Stationers, and direct importers of Novelties. All goods sent same day by mail, 453 St. Paul-street, Montreal.

The Billous,

dyspeptic or constipated, should address with two stamps for pamphlet, WORLD'S MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Buffalo, N. Y.

The coming of the "Jersey Lily" has largely increased the sale in America of the Jersey bodice, whose popularity she long ago inaugurated in London.

If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes bad, poor appetite, tongue coated, you are suffering from torpid liver, or "biliousness." Nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently as Dr. Pierce's, "Golden Medical Discovery." By all druggists.

The most luxurious petticoats are made of colored satin or black, with eider-down quilted in small diamond patterns. They cost $14 each in New York.

Who has not seen the fair, fresh young girl transformed in a few months into the pale, haggard, dispirited woman? The sparkling eyes are dimmed, and the ringing laugh heard no more. Too often the causes are disorders of the system which Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" would remedy in a short time. Remember, that the "Favorite Prescription" will unfailingly cure all "female weaknesses," and restore health and beauty. By all druggists. Send three stamps for Dr. Pierce's treatise on Disease on Women (96 pages). Address WORLD'S MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Buffalo, N. Y.

Pale pink and silver, and white and gold pekins, with alternating stripes of satin and moire, are very pretty and very fashionable combinations for young ladies' evening dresses.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is a really remarkable and time-honored medicine. It is the best remedy known for all diseases of the throat and lungs.

Large linen collars and cuffs embroidered upon the material in fine open-worked patterns are very elegant. Colours are embroidered upon the material.

Thousands will bear testimony (and do it voluntarily) that VEGETINE is the best medical compound yet placed before the public for renovating and purifying the blood, eradicating all humors, impurities or poisonous secretions from the system, invigorating and strengthening the system debilitated by disease, as many have called it, "The Great Health Restorer."

For evening wear tan-colored Suede shoes, trimmed with large satin bows and buckles of Rhine pebbles set with silver, are considered very chic; but, unless the feet are very small, there are fears that this adornment will cause them to assume the appearance of "beetle-crushers."

Those who use Carboline, as now improved and perfected, the great petroleum hair renewer, are always distinguished by the beautiful soft texture of the hair produced by the use of that most exquisite of all toilet preparations.

Polka-dotted fabrics are a feature. The spots occur and recur in every possible size and variety, from a dot the size of a pin's head to a spot resembling a tea dollar. They may be interwoven with the threads, or else appliqued, tufted, or embroidered.

BUSINESS CHANCES.

AGRICULTURAL FOUNDRY FOR SALE—in rapidly growing Western town; premises commodious, and plant very complete two competing railroads; price, $4,800; terms to suit, or would lease for five years. MACKINTOSH & PETERS, Toronto.

TIN AND STOVE BUSINESS FOR SALE in live village on the C.V. Railway—doing good trade: stock and tools about $500; low rent. MACKINTOSH & PETERS, Toronto.

THOSE WISHING TO DISPOSE OF OR purchase a business of any description in the city or elsewhere should call or send particulars to C. J. PALIN, 53 and 55 King-street East. Business Agent and Valuer.

FOR REMOVAL—THE ENTIRE PLANT and machinery for manufacturing American oil-cloth; a competent manager could be engaged to carry on the business; price $5,000; convenient terms. MACKINTOSH & PETERS Toronto.

SUBSCRIBERS WANTED FOR STOCK in Manufacturing Company established four years, to extend the business; have been unable to supply the demand; big profit on goods. Address MANUFACTURER, 35 Adelaide Street West, Toronto.

$5.000.000 WORTH OF FARMING and other property in Ontario for sale by the CANADA WEST LAND AGENCY COMPANY, 11 Adelaide-st East, Toronto. Send for list

FARM FOR SALE—BEING LOT 106 Gwillimbury, adjoining town of Holland Landing 212 acres. Northern R. R. Station situated on corner of this Lot, the land is high rolling clay loam Brick house frame Bank Barn. J. W. G WHITNEY, Estate Agent. 25 Toronto-st. Toronto.

A GOOD INVESTMENT IN THE CITY OF Brandon—new store and dwelling above, for sale; excellent business stand; central between freight and new passenger depot, two blocks from either; also four lots in block; most desirable spot in city for residences. Address Box 218, Brandon Manitoba.

ONE OF THE BEST FARMS IN THE county of Bruce; containing 260 acres; 230 cleared; good house and out-buildings; also good orchard; a never failing stream within thirty yards of the house; three miles from Teeswater, the terminus of the T. G. & B. Ry.: price moderate. Apply to C. STEIL, proprietor, or to J. MARSHALL, Teeswater, Ont.

LADIES! BEWARE of fraudulent corsets. "Coraline" corsets will not break, or lose their shape. Wear corsets made by Crompton Corset Co. Toronto.

"Wait Till the Clouds Roll By."

The latest New York sensation.

Everybody is Singing It.

Send five cents for copy in full size sheet music form.

S. FRANK WILSON,
Publisher, 33 Adelaide St. West, Toronto.

CHEAP FARMS NEAR MARKETS.

The state of Michigan has more than 4,000 miles of railroad, and 1,600 miles of lake transportation; schools and churches in every county, public buildings all paid for, and no debt. Its soil and climate combine to produce large crops, and it is the best fruit state in the northwest. Several millions of acres of unoccupied and fertile lands are yet in the market at low prices. The state has issued a PAMPHLET containing a map and descriptions of its soil, crops and general resources, which may be had free of charge by writing to the COMMISSIONER OF IMMIGRATION, Detroit, Mich.

WOODSTOCK COLLEGE,
WOODSTOCK, ONTARIO.

Instruction most complete in all branches. A most thorough and complete
BUSINESS EDUCATION
In the commercial department at very low rates. For circulars address
N. W. OLVERTON, B.A., Principal.

Burdock BLOOD BITTERS.

WILL CURE OR RELIEVE

BILIOUSNESS,	DIZZINESS,
DYSPEPSIA,	DROPSY,
INDIGESTION,	FLUTTERING OF THE HEART,
JAUNDICE.	ACIDITY OF THE STOMACH,
ERYSIPELAS,	DRYNESS OF THE SKIN,
SALT RHEUM,
HEARTBURN, HEADACHE,

And every species of disease arising from disordered LIVER, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS OR BLOOD,

T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, TORONTO

VEGETABLE SICILIAN HAIR RENEWER

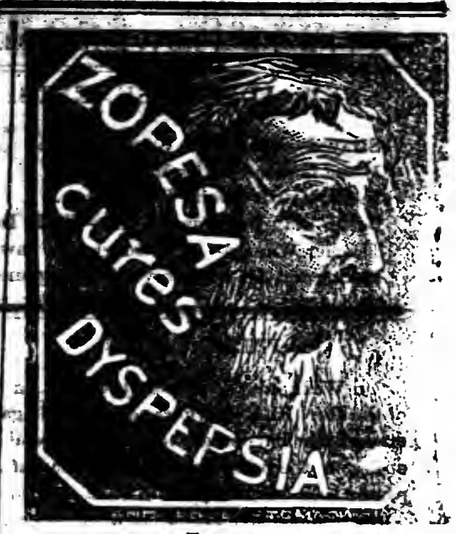
This standard article is compounded with the greatest care.

Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactory as ever.

It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color.

It removes all eruptions, itching and dandruff, and the scalp by its use becomes white and clean.

By its tonic properties it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness, and making the hair grow thick and strong.



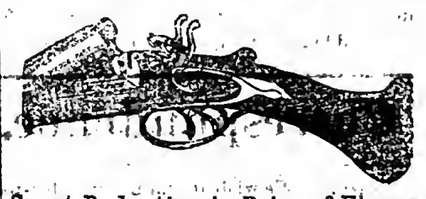
As a dressing nothing has been found so effectual, or desirable.

Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says of it: "I consider it the best preparation for its intended purposes."

Buckingham's Dye,
FOR THE WHISKERS.

This elegant preparation may be relied on to change the color of the beard from gray or any other undesirable shade, to brown or black, at discretion. It is easily applied, being in one preparation, and quickly and effectually produces a permanent color which will neither rub nor wash off.

MANUFACTURED BY 5
R. P. HALL & CO.,
NASHUA, N. H.
Sold by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine



Zopesa.

Zopesa was introduced in America two years ago. Large quantities have been used for Dyspepsia, and as a panacea for the Liver, and the manufacturers have yet to hear of a single case of Dyspepsia or Biliousness, when Zopesa was used as directed, in which it was not more than satisfactory. Many write that it is a wonderful remedy. We can show where as high as 40 pounds were gained by its use in breaking up chronic Biliousness and Dyspepsia. Its friends increase very fast, and all who use as directed are surprised and gratified.

CHEAPEST MUSIC IN THE WORLD.

Full size sheet, best print and good paper. Send 5 cents for sample copy and catalogue of 600 pieces of latest instrumental and vocal music.

S. C. BIGFORD,
23 King Street West, Toronto.
Dealer in picture frames and fancy goods.

Great Reduction in Price of Firearms

We will sell for the next 30 days at the following reduced prices:—

Our $25 English genuine twist double barrel breech-loading shot gun for	$ 18 00
Our $30 English genuine twist double barrel breech-loading shot gun for	25 00
Our $10 English genuine twist double barrel breech-loading shot gun for	30 00
Our $15 double muzzle gun, genuine twist barrels, for	10 00
Our $20 double muzzle gun, genuine twist barrels, fine front action locks, beautifully finished, for	15 00
Joslyn carbine rifle reduced to	7 00
Evans' 26-shot repeating rifle reduced to	18 00
Zulu single barrel breech-loading shot gun reduced to	3 50
Climax single barrel breech-loading shot gun reduced to	5 00
Pioneer single barrel breech-loading shot gun reduced to	5 00
Spencer repeating rifle, long barrel, 7-shot, reduced to	15 00
Winchester repeating rifle, 13-shot, reduced to	18 00

Parties desiring to inspect these goods before purchasing can do so by sending us $1. We will express the Gun C.O.D. If not satisfactory you have the privilege of returning it. If the $1 more than covers express charges, we will remit you the difference; and this rule applies to all goods in our catalogue. Send 6 cents for our 96 page catalogue, containing over 600 illustrations of Eircarms, Watches, Jewellery, Silverware, etc.

Chas. Stark, 52 Church street, Toronto.

LADIES!

Why pay from two to four dollars per year for American fashion magazines when you can get the "Ladies' Journal" monthly for one year for fifty cents. A sixteen-page paper, containing the very latest and best fashion articles beautifully illustrated; also, one piece of full size sheet music—always the latest popular song or instrumental piece going. This feature alone is worth five times the subscription price. Also, short stories, useful recipes, and other matters particularly interesting to ladies. Send fifty cents for a year's subscription. In clubs of five, thirty-five (35) cents. In clubs of ten, thirty (30) cents. Get ten of your friends to subscribe and send three (3.00) dollars, together with your own subscription, and I'll mail you a handsome triple-silver-plated Butter Knife with ivory handle. Or get 20 subscribers at thirty (30) cents each and send me six (6.00) dollars, and I'll mail you, postage paid, an elegant rolled gold Roman Necklet, with locket attached. Sample copies, five cts. S. FRANK WILSON, Publisher, 33 and 35 Adelaide St. West, Toronto.

See Dunlop's Organs and Sewing Machines before purchasing and save 25 per C

The Standard.

MARKDALE, NOV. 23rd, 1882.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

Strayed—W. J. & R. Ward.
Music Lessons—Miss McDowell.
Estray Cattle—John Hutchinson.
Better than Bankrupt Stock—W. F. Doll.
Teacher Wanted—A. Murdock, Harkaway.
Baking and Confectionery—J. Montgomery.

PRESENTATION.

On Wednesday evening (15th inst.) a few of the Rev. N. A. McDiarmid's friends gathered at the Parsonage to spend a social evening on the occasion of the birthday of the parson. A very enjoyable time was spent during which Mr. McFarland, on behalf of the congregation, presented Mr. McDiarmid with a beautiful Astor Fur Overcoat, worth $40 retail. It was known that the reverend gentleman was in communication with dealers in such goods in Toronto with a view to purchasing such an article, and it was thought well to forestall his action and procure a coat at a very much cheaper rate to himself. Mr. McDiarmid was completely taken by surprise not having the most remote idea that he was to be the recipient of so valuable and appropriate a birthday present, and in his reply thanked the brethern present and through them those members and friends who had so cheerfully contributed to the purchase of an article he had long desired to enable him to meet with comfort the cold blasts of our rigorous winters.

Correspondence.

NOTICE.—We wish it distinctly understood that we do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions expressed by our correspondents

To the Editor of the STANDARD.

DEAR SIR,—The Rev. James Ward has seen fit to reply to my article of two weeks ago in a way peculiar to himself, he steers clear of the main question at issue. "Did he or did he not" advise his congregation to withhold countenance and aid to the church enterprises of the other religious bodies of the village? It is commonly asserted that he did do so, and he fails to deny it. Instead of answering my question he flies off at a tangent and rides his favorite hobby, the Church of England, the only true and apostolic church. Now, Mr. Editor, I acknowledge there are different denominations, but I deny entirely that the churches represented in Markdale (other than the English church) "are cut off from the old faith and church of the apostles." The original meaning of the word church was a congregation, without reference to the character of the persons composing it, or the purpose for which they assembled; the apostles seized upon the word and used it to express a company of believers meeting together to worship God. Now, they speak of the church in the house of Priscilla and Aquilla and give it a visible and local form; and again, they used the word to express that company of believers who are mystically united to Christ by a firm faith in whatever part of the earth they dwell, so that the church is either local and visible or universal and spiritual. Now, if Mr. Ward says that we are cut off from the local and visible Church of England I gladly agree with him, but if he says we are cut off from the Apostolic Church, the church of which Christ is the head and His apostles were the ministers, I must politely inform him that though ranged under a different denominational banner the other churches of Markdale still cling to the "one Lord, one faith, and one baptism," and are as much, if not more, the church of Christ than the English church, which, while professedly united is, as everyone knows, rent into factions. Under the banner of the English church everything is tolerated, from broad church Rationalism to high church Romanism. Dr. Pusy on the one hand and Bishop Colenso on the other will be fitting illustrations of what I mean, and the only bond between them is that wretched figment of the imagination "apostolic succession" which will not stand for a moment enlightened investigation; and if Mr. Ward thinks it will probably it would be well for him to ponder carefully the following sentences of Bishop Hoadly, one of the most eminent ministers of the English church.

"I am fully satisfied that till a consummate stupidity can be happily established and universally spread over the land, there is nothing that tends so much to destroy all due respect to the clergy as the demand of more than can be due to them, and nothing is so effectually throwing contempt upon a regular succession of the ministry as the calling no succession regular, but which was uninterrupted and the making the eternal salvation of Christians to depend upon that uninterrupted succession of which the most learned must have the least assurance, and the unlearned can have no notion but through ignorance and credulity."

Space this week will forbid my enlarging on the subject of denominationalism, but if Mr. Ward desires I am willing to discuss this matter with him in a friendly way through your columns, inasmuch as I firmly believe that he has not the shadow of a shade of proof for his dogmatic assertions that he has been making both in his pulpit and through the press. But quietly leaving these things to be discussed at another time, I want to deal with Mr. Ward's lack of courtesy in his remarks about patronizing church enterprises other than those for the benefit of the English church. Everybody knows that we are considerably divided on religious questions in this village. We have three churches very well filled every Sabbath, each church has its adherents and historic associations, we are neighbors and friends desiring to live in peace with each other, we have hitherto fraternized in social and church relations. After Mr. Ward and the other ministers who may be here now are gone we hope to live together and perpetuate the feelings of amity that now exist. Why then does Mr. Ward try to disturb the harmony of our village by throwing the bombshell of religious animosity in the midst of our hitherto quiet community? That's the question. Let him answer that.

If the English church wishes the countenance and support of Presbyterians and Methodists then they should be willing to return the compliment, on the principal that he that hath friends should show himself friendly. But if Mr. Ward wishes to cultivate an exclusive feeling in the minds of his people then it better be so understood by the public, that they may govern themselves accordingly. Whatever money I give to any church enterprise I never desire to have it returned, therefore I do not feel free to send my name to the reverend gentleman, and must again subscribe myself

"G."

PRICEVILLE, 16th Nov., 1882.

DEAR SIR,—Please inform teachers and trustees of our schools that the School Supply Depot of J. B. Carter, 216 Terauley st., Toronto, has been transferred to the School Supply Co., 31 King st. East, Toronto. Liquid Slating for blackboards may be had or ordered through this house. Trustees' orders should be sealed. Also that the W. J. Gage & Co. educational publishers, advertise a large assortment of school maps.

Yours truly
W. F. FERGUSON, I. P. S.

P. S.—The pattern drawings by the Markdale pupils are receiving very flattering notice by the teachers and pupils of many other schools.—W. F FERGUSON.

Let kings enjoy their viands grand,
Prepared by skilled and costly hand;
Of all famed dishes old or new
Give me McFarland's JAPAN TEA.

Let Irishmen enjoy their potheen fine,
While Scotchmen haggis says divine;
Go through the dainties of every land,
But leave me McFarland's twenty cent Japan.

WANTED.—A second hand box stove. Apply at the STANDARD office.

Coatsworth fire brigade will have a supper at Mathews Hotel on Friday evening, the 1st Dec.

Mr. Doll is having the rink fitted up in good style; it will be warm and comfortable. We bespeak for him a generous support.

The Markdale lodge of A. O. U. W. have decided to give a literary and musical entertainment in the Dufferin Hall on Friday, Dec. 8th, of which further particulars will be given by posters. The Committe are determined to make it a rich treat.

BIRTHS.

TAYLOR—At Dromore, on the 9th inst., the wife of A. Taylor, merchant, of a son.

SCOTT.—In Glenelg, on the 10th inst., the wife of Mr. Andrew Scott of a daughter.

GIBSON.—At the Rocky Saugeen, on the 9th inst., the wife of Mr. Joseph Gibson of a daughter.

GRAHAM—In Artemesia, on the 28th Oct., the wife of Mr. Robert Graham, of a son.

DAVIS—In Euphrasia, on the 6th inst., the wife of Mr. John Davis, of a daughter.

WALTER—In Artemesia, on the 10th inst., the wife of Daniel Walter, of a son.

MARRIAGES.

GIBSON—HILL—On the 14th inst., at the residence of Mr. Thos. Christmas, Collingwood, by Rev. Mr. Sallows, Mr. Joseph Gibson, plasterer, Markdale, to Miss Elizabeth Hill, of Artemesia.

GOOD—CHRISTMAS.—On the 13th inst., at the residence of the bride's father, by the Rev. Mr. Sallows, Mr. James Good, of the township of Collingwood, to Miss Jane Christmas, of Collingwood.

BOYD—DODSON—At the Revere House, Markdale, on the 22nd inst., by the Rev. J. S. Corcoran, Mr. James Boyd to Miss E. J. Dodson, all of Euphrasia.

REMARKABLE CLUBBING OFFER

THE STANDARD
—AND—
The Farmer's Advocate
AND HOME MAGAZINE

from now until the end of 1883, for

ONLY $1.85!

By special agreement with The Farmer's Advocate, we are enabled to offer that well-known agricultural journal—a 36-page illustrated monthly, and really the best agricultural paper in America, for Canadians—to our readers, clubbed with THE STANDARD, for the sum of $1.85 in advance. The regular price of the two papers is $2.

At great expense, we have also secured for each subscriber who accepts this offer, one plant, 6 to 12 inches, of the introduced from Western Russia by the Mennonites, grows very rapid, is a handsome tree, and bears fine fruit, equal to our best Raspberry or Blackberry. This tree is hard and very suitable for streets and lawns.

Russian Mulberry,

Subscribe Now!

and obtain November and December numbers of The Farmer's Advocate FREE.

W. J. McFarland took in one day this week 2400 lbs of fowl.

DIED.

JONES.—In Markdale, on the 17th inst., Martha Jane, youngest child of Mr. A. Jones, (blacksmith.)

COOEY—In Artemesia, on the 20th inst., youngest child of W. J. Cooey, aged 6 mon.

JNO. MONTGOMERY,
BAKER,

Begs to tender his thanks to the inhabitants of Markdale and surrounding country for past patronage, and to intimate to them that he is prepared to supply the public with either plain or iced and ornamented. Also Brides' Cakes got up in the best style that can be done this side of Toronto.

Fruit, Pound and Plum Cake

Bread, Buns and Cakes!

in great variety. All these are manufactured on his own premises by himself, besides Biscuit of every description from the best manufacturers in Ontario.

CHOICEST CONFECTIONERY

in great variety. Tea Meetings, Socials, and other parties supplied on the shortest notice and on the most reasonable terms.

JOHN MONTGOMERY.
Markdale, Nov. 22nd, 1882. 115-3m

Teacher Wanted

FOR S. S. No. 3, Holland and Euphrasia. Duties to commence the 2nd day of January, 1883 Apply, stating salary, to ALEX. MURDOCK, Sec'y,
115-4w. Harkway P. O.

MISS McDOWELL,

OF FLESHERTON, BEGS LEAVE TO notify any who would wish to receive instructions on the Piano or Organ that she can be consulted at Mr. James Trimble's, Markdale, on Mondays and Thursdays.
November 22nd, 1882. 115-4w.

STRAYED

FROM THE PREMISES OF THE SUBSCRIBER, Lot 20, Con. 8, Euphrasia, about the 1st Sept., one steer, red, and 2 heifers, spotted red and white, all rising three years old. Information that will lead to their recovery will be thankfully received. Any person harboring them after this date will be dealt with according to law.
W. J. & R. WARD.
Rocklyn P. O., Nov. 17th, 1882. 115 3w

STRAYED

FROM THE PREMISES OF THE UNdersigned Lot 3, Con. 7, Euphrasia, about the last of August, one Steer and one Heifer, all rising two years old. Any person giving such information as will lead to their recovery will be suitably rewarded.
JOHN HUTCHINSON,
115-3w* Vandeleur P. O.

TO SELL OR RENT.

LOT 15, CON. 12, HOLLAND, 122 acres, 100 cleared, good buildings thereon. Terms easy. Apply to James Logan, Postmaster, near the premises, or to
M. S. KELLOW, Tara P. O.
November 14th, 1882. 114-tf.

ESTRAY.

CAME INTO THE PREMISES OF D. McMillan, Lot 10, Concession 3, S. D. Road, Artemesia, about the 1st of August, a Shearling Ram. The owner is requested to prove property, pay expenses and take him away.
DONALD McMILLAN.
Artemesia, Nov. 10th, 1882. 114 117

Teacher Wanted.

FOR SCHOOL SECTION No. 6, ARTEMESIA, holding Second or Third Class Certificate. Duties to commence on the second day of January, 1883. Apply, stating salary, to
JOHN HAZARD,
Sec. & Treas. to Trustees,
114-117* Flesherton P. O.

A CARD.

To all who are suffering from the errors and indiscretions of youth, nervous weakness, early decay, loss of manhood, &c., I will send a receipe that will cure you, FREE OF CHARGE. This great Remedy was discovered by a missionary in South America. Send a self-addressed envelope to REV. JOSEPH T. INMAN, Station D, New York City.

J. L. BROWNE
—IS—Better than Ever!
—IN—PHOTOS!
Cabinet, Card or Tablet.

A LARGE STOCK OF
FRAMES
NEWEST DESIGNS, CHEAP.

T. C. & B. RAILWAY.

TIME TABLE.

Change of Time.

On and after Monday, Nov. 20th, 1882, trains will run as follows:

GOING N'TH.			GOING SOUTH
Read Down.			Read Up.
A.M.	P.M.		A.M.	P.M.
7 30	4 25	TORONTO	10 45	9 10
9 05	6 00	CARDWELL JUNC.	9 05	7 31
9 55	6 45	ORANGEVILLE...	8 27	6 50
12 20	8 44	MOUNT FOREST..	6 30	4 30
12 55	9 12	HARRISTON.....	6 05	4 00
2 25	10 15	TEESWATER	5 00	2 45
11 50	[illegible]0	F'ESHERTON	6 43	4 47
1 30	9 55	OW ..OUND....	5 15	3 10
P.M.	P.M.		A.M.	P.M.

A Mixed Train will also run between Toronto and Owen Sound. See Time Table.

D. McNICOLL, Gen. Pass. Agt. EDMUND WRAGGE, General Manager.

Just Arrived!

A LARGE STOCK OF
NEW AND FASHIONABTE
DRY GOODS,
Boots and Shoes,
NEW GROCERIES,

At prices which will astonish you. Call and see.

Highest price paid for Butter and Eggs or any kind of Fowl at the CHEAP STORE.
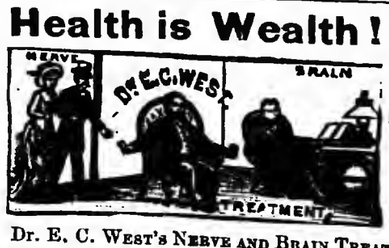
JOHN DOUPE,
Flesherton Station.
Nov. 15th, 1882. 114-3m.

NOTICE TO FARMERS.

BUSINESS STILL INCREASING WITH
W. J. ROWE
—AT THE—
Barrhead Mill
UNDER THE OLD PROCESS.

Gristing and Chopping done every working day. Farmers from a distance can have their stuff home with them the same day.
All orders for Flour and Feed promptly filled.
W. J. ROWE, "Barrhead Mills."
October 28th 1882. 113-126



$500 Reward!

We will pay the above reward for any case of Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Indigestion, Constipation or Costiveness we cannot cure with West's Vegetable Liver Pills, when the directions are strictly complied with. They are purely Vegetable, and never fail to give satisfaction. Sugar Coated, Large Boxes, containing 30 Pills, 25 cts. For sale by all Druggists. Beware of counterfeits and immitations. The genuine manufactured only by JOHN C. WEST & CO., "The Pill Makers," 81 & 83 King St. East, Toronto, Ont. Free trial package sent by mail prepaid on receipt of a 3 cent stamp. For sale at Turner &Co. Drug Store.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from active practice having had placed in his hands by an East Indiana Missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma, and all Throat and Lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for General Debility and all nervous complaints, after having thoroughly tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, feels it is his duty to make it known to his fellows. The recipe, with full particulars, directions for preparation and use, and all necessary advice and instructions for successful treatment at your own home, will be received by you by return mail, free of charge, by addressing with stamp or stamped, self-addressed, envelope to
DR. J. C. RAYMOND,
164 Washington Street, Brooklyn, N.Y.
110-62

Health is Wealth!

Dr. E. C. WEST'S NERVE AND BRAIN TREATMENT, a guaranteed specific for Hysteria, Dizziness, Convulsions, Fits, Nervous Neuralgia, Headache, Nervous Prostration caused by the use of alcohol or tobacco, Wakefulness, Mental Depression, Softening of the Brain, resulting in Insanity and leading to misery, decay and death, Premature Old Age, Barrenness, Loss of Power in either sex, Involuntary losses and Spermatorrhœa, caused by over-exertion of the brain, self-abuse or over-indulgence. One box will cure recent cases. Each box contains one month's treatment. One dollar a box, or six boxes for five dollars; sent by mail prepaid on receipt of price. We guarantee six boxes to cure any case. With each order received by us for six boxes, accompanied with five dollars, we will send the purchaser a written guarantee to refund the money if the treatment does not effect a cure. Guarantees issued only by A. Turner &Co., sole authorized Agent for Markdale Ont. John C. West &Co. sole proprietor, Toronto, Ont.

MARKDALE MARK

Fall Wheat, $0.83 to $0.85; [illegible] to $0.90; Barley, 45c; Peas, 65c; Butter, 20c; Eggs, 22c; Potatoes, $10.00.

FLESHERTON MARK

Fall Wheat, $0.80 to $0.85; Spring to $0.90; Barley, 55c; Peas, 66c; Butter, 20c; Eggs, 22c; Potatoes, $9.00; Pork, $7.00 to $7 50

TORONTO MARKETS

Fall Wheat, $0.90 to $0.93; Spring to $1.02; Barley, 56c to 72c; Oats, Peas, 70c to 75c; Hogs, $7.50 to $8 toes, per bag. 75c to 80c; Butter, to 20c; eggs. 23c to 24c.

GENERAL
Blacksmith
Flesherton Station

The subscriber begs to announce to inhabitants of Flesherton, Markdale, Priceville, and surrounding country that he has commenced business at Flesherton, where he hopes by satisfactory work and moderate rates to secure a share of public patronage.

HORSE-SHOEING A SPECIALTY

And guaranteed that in a case of injury to horses he will cure the defect in the shoeings or no charge will be made for second shoeing.

A TRIAL SOLICITED.
HENRY WE
Flesherton Station, Oct. 17, 1882.

A. HILL

TAILOR

Over McFarland's St
MARKDALE.

☞ Special attention to Cutting

If you want a Perfect Fit your Order with.

A. HIL
September 20th, 1882. 10

Moffat Bros
MARKDALE

Foundry
—AND—MACHINE WORK
MANUFACTURERS OF MILL MACHINE
Steam Engine
SHAFTING, HANGI
Pulleys, &c. Land Roller

PLOWS
And Plow Points
MACHINERY REPAIR

Done in a practical manner.

We also introduce our new FAMILY MANGL
to the public. This new machine will [illegible] Linen, Cotton, and Woollen Goods, them a beautiful smooth and glossy [illegible] ance. It also improves the clothes, [illegible] hot irons injure them. We also [illegible] facture

ORNAMENTAL CRESTIN of various designs for Buildings, Ver[illegible] &c. Ornamental Cast iron Chair[illegible] Pall Pillars. Fencing, Ventilat[illegible] Columns, Iron Beams. Gratings for Cellar Windows, &c.

++IRON & BRASS CASTING
Of Every Description Made to Or[illegible]
MOFFAT BRO

ETTE

—THAN—

KRUPT STO

—THE—

,500 SA

—OF—

HES, JEWELEERY, CLOCK
R AND ELECTRO-PLATE
Tea Setts, Cruets, Cake
, Butter Coolers, Fruit D
etc., etc., etc.,
NS,
CONCERTINAS,
XMAS TOYS, &c

e decided to leave Markda January to go into the y business in Toronto, a ring Sale on 1

FOR 30 DAY
lass Goods will be sold at
This is a genuine sale as to reduce my stock.

e engaged the services of aker to take charge of 1st of January.

W. F. DO

nted Immed
FOR l Bros.' New Ele
bushels Wheat,
40,000 bushels Barley,
30,000 bushels
25,000
hich the highest market cash. 111-tf.

Local Ite

rs. Rastall and Brownell ville Advertiser to Mr. R.

Northern Railway shed s contents was consume dozen Sewing Machines to be sold at half the c

F. Doll's.

acknowledge with than m David Wark, Calke
iber to the STANDARD fo Janet Samson, of Ora
d $2,000, the amount of iary certificate, from th
A No. 1 Apples, Bread
Cakes, Confectionery,
's bakery, Dunlop's blo
Smith, (the barber,) is a hair or shave, and if you urself he can put your or sell you a new on y cheaper than they ca

Robert Warling, of Van to his connections and casion of his birthday.
ters, with their families had seen how the roast wl disappeared; but afte laught on the apples, w id make complete havoc E.—We are sorry to ng-house and wagon a belonging to Thos. B s Corners, Glenelg, were by fire on the evenin
There was a large stock
me. Insured in the G
. We hope Mr. B. wil is a good business man in that locality. Tho resting.—Chronicle.

R.—Here are some fact ribers: "A doctor in St before death sent over for his account, stating ie easy unless the pr her it was a desire s
"clear sheet," or the Devil in the world
ed him, is not stated.
satisfaction to not a fe people constituted take a notion to die."

P's COMIC ALMANAC been favored with advan
ar annual, and have g that if the rest of the sample submitted in ypographical merit, it annual yet issued,
Every line is teemi
ictures are equal to the nac is to be considera
's fourth year, though ade in the price.
should lay by a qu labelled "for Grip's

ETTER!

—THAN—

NKRUPT STOCKS.

—o—

—THE—

3,500 SALE

—OF—

TCHES, JEWELEERY,
CLOCKS,
ER AND
ELECTRO-PLATED WARE,
n Tea Setts, Cruets, Cake Baskets, Butter Coolers, Fruit Dishes, etc., etc., etc.,
LINS, CONCERTINAS,
XMAS TOYS, &c., &c., &c.

ave decided to leave Markdale about the of January to go into the wholesale ry business in Toronto, and will com-e a aring Sale on 1st Dec.

FOR 30 DAYS.

-class Goods will be sold at and under This is a genuine sale as I am obliged to reduce my stock.

ave engaged the services of a practical maker to take charge of the business 1st of January.

W. F. DOLL.

anted Immediately!

—FOR—

ill Bros.' New Elevator,

0 bushels Wheat,
40,000 bushels Barley,
30,000 bushels Oats,
25,000 bushels Peas,

which the highest market prices will be in cash. 111-tf.

Local Items.

ssrs. Rastall and Brownell have sold the geville Advertiser to Mr. R. Lee, a school er.

e Northern Railway shed at Toronto its contents was consumed by fire re-y.

lf dozen Sewing Machines and two new ns to be sold at half the catalogue price . F. Doll's.

acknowledge with thanks receipt of from David Wark, Calkensville, being riber to the STANDARD for 1883.

s. Janet Samson, of Orangeville, lately ed $2,000, the amount of her husband's ficiary certificate, from the A. O. U W.

r A No. 1 Apples, Bread, Buns, Bis-, Cakes, Confectionery, &c., go to k's bakery, Dunlop's block, Markdale.

r. Smith, (the barber,) is a real good hand t hair or shave, and if you prefer shav-your-self he can put your razor in good r, or sell you a new one of the best lity cheaper than they can be had else-re.

r. Robert Warling, of Vandeleur, gave a per to his connections and neighbours on ccasion of his birthday. His sons and hters, with their families, convened, and n had seen how the roast geese, ducks fowl disappeared; but after supper, came nslaught on the apples, which the young s did make complete havock of.

IEF.—We are sorry to learn that the lling-house and wagon and blacksmith ps belonging to Thos. Brown, junr, at n's Corners, Glenelg, were entirely con-ed by fire on the evening of Saturday There was a large stock in the shop at time. Insured in the Gore Mutual for 00. We hope Mr. B. will rebuild again, e is a good business man and cannot be d in that locality. The particulars are nteresting.—Chronicle.

ACT.—Here are some facts for delinquent scribers: "A doctor in St Thomas a few rs before death sent over to the "Times" e for his account, stating that he could die easy unless the printer was paid. ether it was a desire simply to depart h a "clear sheet," or the fear of the (prin-s) Devil in the world to come, that uated him, is not stated. It would be a n satisfaction to not a few publishers if re people constituted like that doctor uld take a notion to die."

GRIP'S COMIC ALMANAC FOR 1883.—We e been favored with advance sheets of this pular annual, and have no hesitation in ring that if the rest of the book is equal to sample submitted in literary, artistic typographical merit, it will be the best mic annual yet issued, even from Grip ce. Every line is teeming with fun, and pictures are equal to the letterpress. The anac is to be considerably improved in its fourth year, though no advance is to made in the price. Every one of our ders should lay by a quarter in a bit of er, labeled "for Grip's Almanac only."

5 lbs tea for $1.00 at Foster's.

Read W. F. Doll's advertisement.

Over coats and ready-made clothing cheap at Fosters.

RHEUMATINE—For sale at the Medical Hall, Markdale.

A fine assortment of horse blankets and robes at T. Mathews.

Singhampton held a concert in aid of building sidewalks; very sensible.

Mr. McGill, of Chatsworth, intends building a new foundry next summer.

Get your clocks cleaned and your watch put in good repair at R. G. Trimble's Flesherton.

KEEP THIS IN VIEW.—The only direct importer doing business in Markdale is W. J. McFarland.

Mr. Joseph Gibson arrived with his better half on Saturday, and has become a resident of our village.

For a good time piece, either watch or clock, go to R. G Trimble, Flesherton, the people's jeweller.

We had a friendly call from Mr. Watson, of the Meaford Mirror, and Mr. J. M. Burnett, of St. Vincent Tp.

The Ontario Legislature has been summoned to meet on the 13th December for the transaction of business.

Master John Meldrum, agent at Kleinburg station, has been again promoted, and takes a situation in Toronto.

Mr. Geo. Beatty was removed to the Markdale House on Saturday. He is still improving and will be able to be about in a few days.

Neilson Bros., of Proton station, have shipped this season 800,000 feet of lumber and over 700,000 shingles besides their custom work.

If you are going on a journey, drop into Smith's barber shop and have your hair dressed. He can do it as well as Toronto barbers, and besides you will be supporting home.

Mr. Wm. Cullen returned a few days since from Manitoba. He has located about 12 miles from Regina and speaks in high terms of the N. W. T., and will remove his family thither in the spring.

The latest arrival is a S. B. Smith, son of the late S. Smith, Presbyterian Minister, Belfast, Ireland. Mr. S. is a young man whose countenance beams with intelligence. He arrived last week, and is salesman in Mr. McFarland's store for the present.

Geo. Brown, son of Mr. G. S. Brown, went to Durham last week and was suddenly taken down with Diphtheria in that place. The doctor thinks he will be able to be removed home to Meaford this week by rail via Toronto, and will fully recover shortly.

A new puzzle for our readers:—

A fte rhar vesty onshou ldpayth eprinter!

Father Stafford, a well known and highly esteemed Catholic priest, died in Lindsay on Sunday last. Deceased was an able champion of temperance, and he was also a strong French supporter of a liberal unsectarian system of education. Father Stafford was highly esteemed by Protestants as well as his own congregation, and his loss is lamented by all.

SOMNAMBULISM.—On Saturday night last Mr. Alex. Lyons, (cattle dealer,) arose in his sleep in the "Revere House" and walked out of the door on the second flat, falling a distance of twelve feet to the sidewalk. Doctor Sproule was immediately summoned and upon examination found that his injuries were not of a serious nature, and he is now able to attend to his business.

A. O. U. W.—The benefits of the Ancient Order of United workmen were exemplified in the case of the late Asia disaster, Mr. John McDougall, purser, and Mr. John McDonald, mate, both having belonged to the Owen Sound Lodge, and the relatives in both instances being entitled to the sum of $2000. A Committee of the lodge recently waited on Mrs. McDougall, and presented her the sum coming to her on account of the sad affair. A very appropriate address was also presented and a suitable reply given.

We have considerable annoyance in regard to mail matter being delayed. Berkeley papers do not reach that place until Monday when they should arrive on Friday; they are always mailed here on Thursday evening. Mail matter to Dundalk does not reach that place, in many instances, until two days after it has been mailed here. Last Friday's Flesherton Advance did not reach until Monday, and then it came from the north. We have no idea where the delay is, but one thing we do know, it is very annoying, and if continued we will take steps to find the cause of the delays.

BUCKLEN'S ARNICA SALVE.

The best salve in the world for Cuts, Bruises, Sores, Ulcers, Salt Rheum, Fever Sores, Tetter, Chapped Hands, Chilblains, Corns, and all Skin Eruptins, and Positively cures Piles. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by A. Turner & Co.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.

The advertiser, having been permanently cured of that dread disease, Consumption, by a simple remedy, is anxious to make known to his fellow sufferers the means of cure. To all who desire it, he will send a copy of the prescription used, (free of charge,) with the directions for prepairing and using the same which they will find a SURE CURE for CONSUMPTION, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, &c.

Parties wishing the Prescription, will please address, Rev. E. A, Wilson, 149 Penn st., Williamsburgh, N. Y. 75-127

AGENTS WANTED.—Big pay.—Light Work. Steady Employment. Samples free. Address, M. L. BYRN, 46 Nassau stree New York. 90

VALUABLE PROPERTY
FOR SALE
IN THE TOWN OF DURHAM, IN THE COUNTY OF GREY.

THE following valuable town properties will be sold on reasonable terms or will be rented for a term of years, or exchange for farm propeoty.

1st.

Lot No. 1 on the west side of Garafraxa street and south of Hunter street, opposite Mr. J. H. Hunter's store house, well fenced and first class frame building, good cellars, hard and soft water, a most convenient residence and would make a good business stand.

2nd,

That most desirable property being park lots nos. 2 and 3 on the north side of George st., 8 acres more or less, well fenced, front fenced with pickets, one and a half acres of a thriving young orchard and very convenient to the railway station.

The east half of the west half on lot 18 on the west side of countess street with a new frame house and kitchen, good stable and wood shed, well fenced, front fence painted white, hard and soft water on the premises.

4th,

Park Lot No. 8, Wm. Hunter's, Survey.

5th

Lots 1 and 2, Presbyterian Survey.

6th,

Lot No 15 on the North side of Mill street in the village of Markdale close to the railway station, with good frame house thereon. If the above properties are sold the very best title will be given free from all encumbrances.

—Also the—

Following Farming Properties.

will be sold on reasonable terms of payment.

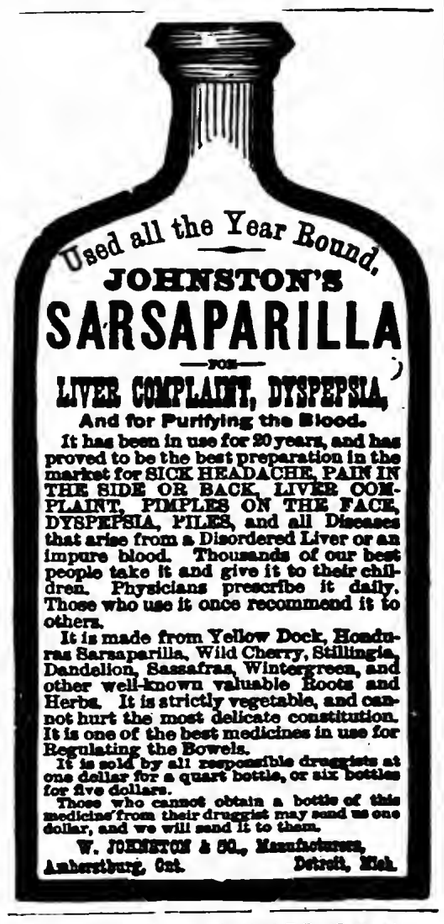
7th,

Lot No. 22, Con. 9 Glenelg, 100 acres more or less, 3½ miles from the T. G. & B. R. at Markdale, 75 acres cleared, a new frame house and two log barns.

8th

Lot No. 93 in the 3rd Con. W. T. & S. R., Glenelg. 50 acres, about 45 acres cleared and good log buildings, about 2½ miles from Markdale station T. G. & B. R.

9th,



The west half lot 17, Con. 4. N. D. R., Glenelg. 50 acres 40 acres cleared, good rough cast house and orchard on the premises. The house and one acre will be reserved during the life of the occupants who are now between 80 and 85 years of age.

10th

East part lot No. 1. con 2 Normanby, 63 acres, about 50 acres cleared, situation about 2 miles from the town of Durham. For further particulars apply to

FINLEY MACRAE, Durham.

Dated 15th August. 1882. tf 104,

Mothers! Mothers! Mothers!

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the excruciating pain of cutting teeth? If so, go at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately—depend upon it; there is no mistake about it. There is not a mother upon earth who has ever used it, who will not tell you at once that it will regulate the bowels, and give rest to the mother, and relief and health to the child, operating like magic. It is perfectly safe to use in all cases, and pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Sold everywhere at 25 cents a bottle. 75-127

Dye Stuffs.

Indigo,
Madder,
Logwood,
Fustic,
Camwood,
Cochineal,
Bluestone,
Madder Compound,
Copperas,
Bichromate Potash,
Cream Tartar,
Alum, and
many other Articles used in Dyeing.
Also, a large variety of the best Aniline Dyes.

Medical Hall.

A. Turner & Co.

Re-Fresh-ing

In the cool assertion of some people that they can sell below cost, &c, it may not be amiss to let the public of Markdale and surrounding country know that

Wilson Benson,

of the "BELFAST HOUSE," MARKDALE, can sell "cheaper than the cheapest," and "better than the best," all kinds of

Groceries, Liquors, &c.

Consisting of

TEAS, TOBACCOS, SPICES, CANNED FISH, ETC.,

And for those wishing pure Wine for sacramental purposes, will find a brand that will equal anything on this side the Atlantic.

Other Liquors equally pure.

SPECIAL! Pure Holland Gin.

Cheese from the best manufactories.

Our Whiskies are from the firm of Gooderham & Worts, Toronto, and the public may rely on receiving them as they are sent.

FLOUR, POTATOES, and everything in the household line kept constantly on hand.

Henceforth my Store will be supplied with Fruits of all kinds, such as

APPLES, PEARS, PLUMS, &c.

FRUIT CAKES of all kinds always kept on hand.

Essences, Hair Oils, and Perfumery of the choicest nectars.

TOILET & FANCY SOAPS, better than the best.

CANADIAN & WESTERN PORK, of first quality.

Everything in the Grocery Line kept on a fuller and more complete scale than at any other place in Markdale.

WILSON BENSON.

PIMPLES.

I will mail (Free) the recipe for a simple VEGETABLE BALM that will remove TAN-FRECKLES, PIMPLES and BLOTCHES, leaving the skin soft, clear and beautiful; also instructions for producing a luxuriant growth of hair on a bald head or smooth face. Address, enclosing a 3c. stamp, Ben. Vandelf & Co., 5 Beekman st., N. Y. 75-127

ERRORS OF YOUTH.

A GENTLEMAN who suffered for years from NERVOUS DEBILITY, PREMATURE DECAY, and all the effects of youthful indiscretion will, for the sake of suffering humanity, send free to all who need it, the recipe and directions for making the simple remedy by which he was cured. Sufferers wishing to profit by the advertiser's experience can do so by addressing in perfect confidence, JOHN B. OGDEN.
75-127 42 Cedar St., New York.

Gold.

Great chance to make money. Those who always take advantage of the good chances for making money that are offered, generally become wealthy, while those who do not improve such chances remain in poverty. We want many men, women, boys and girls to work for us right in their own localities. Any one can do the work properly from the first start. The business will pay more than ten times ordinary wages. Expensive outfit furnished free. No one who engages fails to make money rapidly. You can devote your whole time in the work, or only your spare moments. Full information and all that is needed sent free. Address, STINSON & Co., Portland Maine. 71-126

MANHOOD
HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED

SEAL

We have recently published a new edition of Dr. CULVERWELL'S CELEBRATED ESSAY on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, &c., resulting from excesses.

☞ Price, in sealed envelope, only 6 cents, or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

☞ This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Address

The Culverwell Medical Co.,
P.O. box 450 41 Ann St., New York

MARKDALE
Meat Market.

A constant supply of

Fresh Meats!

on hand, at the

Lowest Living Prices.

Orders solicited, and delivered free to all parts of the Town.

Farmers having fat stock to dispose of, will please leave their addresses.

TERMS, STRICTLY CASH.

FRED. SARJEANT.

Markdale, March 23, 1882. 80-ly

SEEING IS BELIEVING.

GENTLEMEN,—

If you want a first-class

Buggie or Wagon

call at

MCKENNA & MASON'S

CARRIAGE WORKS
MARKDALE.

They can supply you with anything from a

Lumber Wagon

up to

Extension Top Phæton.

To buy from them is to

SAVE MONEY!

They are both practical workmen, and employ none but

PRACTICAL WORKMEN

They guarantee their work Second to none for Lightness of Draught and Superiority of Finish.

They use nothing but First-class White Oak for Wagons, and thrice Extra Second Growth Hickory for light work.

The immense amount of work turned out of McKenna & Mason's shop is sufficien proof of the wide reputation they enjoy for doing good work.

THE BEST IS THE CHEAPEST IN THE END
Poor cheap work we positively will not take.

Special attention given to Re-Trimming and Repainting all classes of Carriage Work.

Satisfaction guaranteed (or No Pay) in

HORSESHOEING

SHOP—On Mill Street opposite to Sproule's Hotel.

McKENNA & MASON.

THOS. MATHEWS,
Harness Establishment!
MARKDALE.

EVERYTHING IN OUR LINE KEPT ON HAND OR MADE TO ORDER ON SHORT NOTICE.

LIVERY!

IN CONNECTION.

GEORGE WILSON,

Wholesale and Retail

{BUTCHER!}

BEEF, PORK OR MUTTON SUPPLIED. from a single pound to a whole carcass, at the lowest market prices.

FISH & FOWL IN THEIR SEASON

Farmers having Fat Cattle, Sheep, or Pigs to dispose of will do well to call at No. 3 Burns' Block, opposite the new Union Block.

Markdale, Oct. 25th, 1881

Nothing Like Leather.

M. M. M'LEOD,

MARKDALE.

NOT TO BE BEATEN!

All those who may have had the misfortune to have been born barefooted will bear in mind that we have just received the largest and best stock of leather ever before brought into Markdale, consisting of Spanish Sole, French Kip and Calf, and are now prepared to manufacture Ladies, Gents, Youths and Misses boots and shoes, from the stoga to the finest kid and prunella.

Sewed Work a Specialty.

All work warranted. Invisible patching also done here.

M. M. McLEOD.

Markdale, Sept. 19th, 1881.

The Way.

"First find thou truth, and then
Although she strays
From beaten paths of men
To untrod ways,
Her leading follow straight,
And hide thy fate;
And whether smiles or scorn
Thy passing greet,
Or findest thou flower or thorn
Beneath thy feet,
Fare on! nor fear thy fate
At Heaven's gate."

Luxury and Poverty.

In an article discussing the statement that luxury creates results in effeminacy, and leads to the destruction of nations, castes and families, the London Spectator says: "There is scarcely any truth in that assertion, perhaps none at all. The Western Jews, who for generations have sought in personal luxury indemnification for their humiliations, are as strong, as active, as healthy as ever they were, and decidedly brighter than they were in Palestine. The patrician caste of Germans, which for 500 years has enjoyed all of luxury obtainable in a not very fertile land, is still a caste of vigorous soldiers, quite able to hold its own, and take away other people's. The Brahmins are the brightest of Indians. All that the world can give of luxury—often of luxury carried into insane lengths—has been given to the royal caste of Europe for 600 years on end, and the representatives of that caste include to-day many of the stateliest men in Europe, and would make a most formidable, troop of dragoons, while intellectually they are quite on a par with any, except the statesmen, authors and men of science, who are the picked men out of millions. And this is true; though in the royal caste the women as well as the men have lived 'lapped in luxury;' and although incessant intermarriage continued for centuries should have exaggerated and intensified every weakness in the caste. The most competent politicians among the English peers come from the old, not the new families—e. g., Earl Russell, Lord Salisbury, two Lords Derby, Lord Rosebery—that is, from families coddled and comforted and protected by wealth for two hundred years at least, in a way that would have driven Latimer to despair. On the other hand, the advocates of the theory dear to so many economists, and incessantly taught by writers like Oliver Wendell Holmes, that persistent poverty takes the pith out men, that men born 'on the thin streak' are thin, have just as little to say for themselves. The Islesmen of Scotland are not weak, the Pomeranians are not feeble, and the Arab of the desert is worth three as a man of the Arab of the fat land of Egypt. Mental and moral causes operate far more on races than physical causes, at least if by them we mean the effects either of continuous plenty or of poverty lasting long. Let us be content to know that a prosperous people is a happier people and usually a more quiet people than an impoverished one, and not dream that because we take off a tax forgery will decrease, or that theft can be extinguished by a bumper harvest. Men's conduct is governed a good deal more by their ideas than by their wants, and though a poor population be a population of thieves, it may also be a population in which theft is unknown."

Baby's Victory.

Once upon a time, and not very long at that, says a newspaper correspondent, a young man of Atlanta, Ga., fell in love with an Atlanta girl. This happens every day, and, as also happens, the girl fell in love with the young man. Somehow or other the parents of the girl frowned upon the union of these two hearts that beat as one, and they continued to frown until the young people, thrown upon their own resources, eloped, as young people will do, and the parental frown, alluded to, instead of becoming a smile and a benediction in the presence of the inevitable, widened and deepened into bitter disapprobation.

The father and mother set great store by their daughter, and they were overwhelmed with grief when they discovered that for the first time in her life she had disobeyed them. They did not seek her out for the purpose of bestowing their forgiveness.

In the course of time a little boy was born to the couple—a marvelously beautiful child we have been told—and it grew to be as cunning as it was beautiful. One day recently a lady acquainted with the facts and intimate with both families called upon the young mother, but found nobody at home but baby and nurse. An idea struck her, and she lost no time in carrying it out. She seized the baby and bore it off in triumph to its grandmother. When she rang the door-bell at grandmother's house the lady was in a tremor, but the baby was as cool and unconcerned as a cucumber. Perhaps we ought not to say unconcerned, for when the grandmother opened the door the baby laughed and crowed in her face, and was as pert and saucy as you please, and wouldn't the lady come in and rest herself? Well, the lady didn't know; she was just passing, and she thought she would ring and see how all were getting along; but in she went, and presently grandmother was admiring baby as it sat perched, bright and buoyant, upon the lap of the lady. At this junction the baby displayed the most exquisite diplomacy. It boldly held out its dimpled little arm to its grandmother, and was soon nestling against her motherly bosom. It laughed and crowed and cuddled, and when anybody made a pretense of taking it, it cuddled the closer. What wonderful bright eyes it had, to be sure! What a cunning little curl, half hidden behind its little pink ear! What tempting little toes! What dainty little hands! Oh! a wonderful baby altogether, the grandmother thought and said.

At this critical moment the grandfather made his appearance, and this remarkable baby seemed to understand its business thoroughly. It cooed and crowed at the grandfather, found a place in his strong arms and hid its little face in his coat-collar. The grandfather was captivated. He tossed and dandled it in a way quite unusual. Then the lady was asked whose baby it was. Her position was embarrassing. She had no idea of the result, but she made bold to tell the two old people that it was their daughter's child. With this the grandmother fell to weeping and clasped the wonderful baby to her breast, and the grandfather walked nervously around wiping his eyes and wondering why he was so foolishly happy. Nothing would do these two old people but their daughter must be sent for, and such another reunion and revival as was held over that baby was never before seen in Atlanta. That we'll say and stick to.

English People Abandoning Mutton.

It is a fact not known to all political economists, that the taste for mutton is on the decline. The agricultural returns just issued show that there are fewer sheep kept in Great Britain now than for twelve years past, and that the falling off in this item of live stock in the case of England alone has amounted to over $2,500,000. Moreover in the case of England the decrease has been going on at an accelerated pace up to this year, the total for 1882 being no less than 3,500,000, below 1879, whereas in Scotland the figures for the two years, and, indeed, for the whole period, do not vary materially. Such being the state of the home supply of sheep, it may be supposed that the deficiency would be made up by an increase of exports from abroad. Here, however, we are confronted with a condition of affairs altogether belying such expectations. For the foreign supplies of live sheep brought to our cattle markets are seen to have diminished instead of increasing within the last short period. A steady decline ever since 1876 brought the number down from 807,000 to 718,000, and the falling off was greater than usual in 1881, amounting to no less than 19,000. On the whole, taking the home and foreign supply together, there is a loss of 125,000 head on the year, and of 300,000 on the total for 1868, which is the first year included in the report. Under these circumstances it will be imagined likely that the supply of meat and dead animals would proportionately increase. It has not, however, done so, for the tables show a heavy decline under each of these headings. What is the explanation of this remarkable phenomenon? It is not to be accounted for by saying that the flesh of the sheep was dearer, for the price paid was somewhat less. There is, therefore, only one conclusion to be drawn—that the English people have been losing that appetite for mutton which once prevailed so extensively among them.—London Globe.

Searchin for Gold With an Imbecile for a Guide.

A few weeks since a gentleman was visiting the State Lunatic Asylum of Colorado, when he saw an inmate occupied in drawing rough diagrams upon the wall. They seemed to resemble a mountainous country with rivers and streams running in different directions. Then he recognized the man as one Thompson, who a few years before was the survivor of a party of four which discovered a wonderful vein of gold in Montana, three of whom were killed by the Indians. A search for their "lost cabin" was begun under Thompson's direction, but he suddenly disappeared and the search abandoned. Stepping up to the lunatic the visitor put his finger at a circle on the map and asked: "Is that gold?" He sprang at the visitor in a wild rage and then the gentleman knew that this was the secret. The gentleman confided his discovery to the superintendent, who agreed that in one of Thompson's lucid intervals, he would broach the the subject to him and persuade him to lead them to the treasure. This was successfully accomplished a short time after. A small party started and arrived in the vicinity of the gold deposit. They would reach it next day, Thompson said, and were wild with excitement in consequence. Being tired, they slept soundly, but when they awoke in the morning Thompson was gone. They hunted him for three days, and finally found him lying, bruised and dead, at the foot of a cliff fully a thousand feet high. As a search for the treasure would be hopeless without his assistance, they turned back.

Simplicity in Food.

How, asks Dr. Nicholls in the Food Reform Magazine are we to get at the proper quantity of food?

There are some good rules for feeding as to quantity. When our food is simple and natural in kind and quantity and mode of preparation, there is little danger of eating too much. There is little danger, for example, of eating too many grapes, apples, pears or bananas. Salt, sugar, spices and luxurious cookery tempt to excess. With men, as with animals, a natural diet is self-limiting, and we are disposed to stop when we have got enough. The more artificial the food, the more elaborate and luxurious the feast, the more liability to overload the stomach, overtax the digestive power and overweight the forces of life. Simplicity of food is a condition of health, and promotes longevity. The quantity of food which enables a man to do his daily work without loss of weight is precisely what he requires. He supplies the daily waste—no more, no less. This quantity may vary a little with each individual, but every one can easily ascertain his own measure of requirement by reducing the quantity of daily food until he finds a balance of force and weight. It is my opinion that the average quantity of water-free aliment required, say by business and literary men, is twelve ounces. Men of great muscular activity may require sixteen to twenty ounces. I have found myself in very good condition for sedentary work on eight or ten ounces. When any one is in good condition for his work and keeps his normal weight, he has food enough. Dr. Nicholl's advice is, find this quantity by experiment, and then habitually keep to it.

Banking in the West.

It is related that the President of a bank in the Gunnison region had occasion to visit Denver, and on his return he met the porter of the bank at the depot, and asked:

"Well, James, has the cashier absconded?"

"No, sir."

"Burglars broken in?"

"No, sir."

"Book-keeper been charged with embezzlement?"

"No, sir."

"Been a run on the bank?"

"No, sir."

"Then everything is all right, eh?"

"Yes, sir, except a rumor around town that you had robbed the bank of $50,000, and sailed for Europe."

It is said that the latest thing in kid gloves are gloves that cover the arm and shoulder and go over the back and button together like a corset—that is if a corset buttons in the back.—Peck's Sun.

Masculine Extravagance in New York.

Men are becoming very luxurious, and their dressing rooms, sitting rooms, wardrobe and repositories for personal belongings display tastes more costly than those of women. Underwear of the sofest, richest knitted silk; dozens of South American pajamas, for night and dressing room wear, of China crepe, soft twilled Chinese silk, cashmere, flannel bound with satin and embroidered, and all in the daintiest, most delicate tints and colors, such as ivory, pale blue, pink, buff or violet. The pajama consists of drawers and loose blouse jacket with sailor collar. When made in ivory they are often faced with a color and embroidered with ivory silk in a little vine or in the corners of collars and cuffs. If the pajama is in colors it will perhaps be embroidered with white or have appliques cut out of white satin cloth or velvet embroidered on. The daintiest of all is an white pajama of ivory Chinese crepe or silk enriched with hand embroidery, and these are made for the wedding outfits of fashionable men, who will have a dozen of white, a dozen of trimmed with color and a dozen in various delicate colors embroidered in white.

These elegant gentlemen have for smoking companions the gate of a country house in nickel or silver, with chain rings instead of bars to hold cigars upright and side lights representing gate lamps, but holding candles, and post pedestals to form match holders. These cost from $150 to $250 and are sometimes ornamented with a bird or a rooster in the act of crowing. Another recently imported piece of masculine extravagance is a lamp, the lower part of which forms a tripod set in a double hoof, decorated with natural hair. There are two burners representing wax candles under tinted and decorated glass, and the cost for a lamp of this kind is about $250. Another lamp has for its standard a horse shoe, with stirrup and riding whip crossed and twisted. As for the expensive ash trays and liquor sets and pipe racks and dressing cases and the like space and time would both fail in their enumeration.

It may be mentioned that among the personal properties of one young gentleman in New York City are three hundred and seventy odd silk, satin and knitted neckties and upwards of fifty walking sticks. The inventory did not go any further, or it might have developed equally curious results in other departments.—Albany Journal.

How to Mount your steed, and What to do Having Once Mounted.

In mounting face the near side of the horse. The near side is the side nearest to yourself. If you stand on the right side of the horse, which is the wrong side when you mount, you will face the crupper. Then everybody will know what your name is. Johann Gottlieb Ernsigefolger.

"If you cannot mount from the ground, lead the horse to a high fence, say "Whoa," two or three times, and jump over the horse's ears. You will light somewhere on his neck, and you will have plenty of time to adjust yourself while the horse is running away. Another method of mounting, largely practised by young men from the city, is to balance yourself on one foot on the fence, and point the other leg at the horse in the general direction of the saddle, saying "Whoa" all the time. The horse, after this gesture has been repeated a few times, backs away, pulls the alleged rider off the fence, and walks up and down the lane with him at a rapid gallop. This gives the rider in about ten minutes all the exercise he wants for a week.

If by some miracle you manage to get into the saddle, hold on by both hands and say "Whoa." The faster the horse goes the tighter you must hold on, and the louder you must "holler."

If you are from New York or Philadelphia you will shorten the stirrups until your knees are on a level with your chin. Then, as you ride, you will rise to your feet and stand in the attitude of a man peering over a fence to look for his dog, and then suddenly fall in the saddle like a man who has stepped on a banana peel. This is the English school. It is hard on the horse, but is considered very graceful. A man cannot wear false teeth, however, and ride in this manner.

Terrible Hardships of Some Nova Scotian Farmers.

Twenty-five sons of Nova Scotia farmers, tired of humdrum agriculture and desirous of adventure, made a contract to go to Mexico to work in a silver mine. They were promised good pay, comfortable board, and all the known safeguards against accidents in the mine. After a horseback journey of 325 miles from El Paso, in which they were menaced all the way by Indians, they arrived at Cusihuatchle, a mining village which failed utterly to satisfy the promises. The board consisted of wretched fare in roofless adobe pens, and the mine was so dangerous that the natives would not work in it. The shaft was 600 feet deep, and the descent had to be made on a Mexican ladder, which is merely a notched pole, or in the bullock skins in which the quartz was raised by ropes. The Nova Scotians refused to work, and were imprisoned for breaking their contract. Then they escaped, and started across the plains on foot, but were overtaken by a military company, and two were killed. At the end of a year and a half of hardships, they have been released, and are now on their way home.

A Puzzle for Physiosophers.

Professor Proctor may tell within the sixteenth of an inch the length of a comet's tail, and Professor Huxley give us the exact weight and age of the earth, and Herbert Spencer evolve more philosophy in one day than the average man can understand in six months; but when it comes to determining the ripeness of a water-melon from its exterior, the trinmvirate of scientific sharps must take a back seat and let the Southern colored man, who never had a day's schooling, step to the front.—Norristown Herald.

Recent writers upon public health claim that the wooden blocks used in many cities for pavements have a decided unhealthy influence. The blocks, being placed with their fibrous ends upward, are saturated by rain, in which is dissolved the filth of the streets. The pavement thus remains damp for a long time, and presents a large and unwholsome evaporating surface.

Wonderful Manitoba.

Col. B. B. Lamborn, Land Commissioner of the Northern Pacific Railway, was duly interviewed by a St. Paul Pioneer Press reporter on his return from Winnipeg. He went there, with President J. J. Hill and others as an invited guest, and did not take part in the business relating to the affairs of the Manitoba South-Western Railway. He was somewhat surprised at the evidences of go-ahead thrift he found in Winnipeg. That city, he said, has all of 25,000 inhabitants. Main street is lined with shops on both sides, one and one-half miles long, all of them doing a rushing business, and more than can be found in other towns of its size. The assessment voluation this year is $31,000,000. Col. Lamborn said said with regard to land sales, "We think we are doing a good business down here, but it seems to be a retail traffic compared with what the Canadian Pacific Railway company and Hudson Bay Company have done in real estate in the last year."

THE HUDSON BAY COMPANY, whose land business is handled by Mr. C. J. Brydges, the well-known former general manager of the Grand Trunk Railway, is said to have sold in the past year 1,000,000 acres at an average of $6 per acre. The Hudson Bay Company own one-sixteenth of the land in Manitoba and the North-West Territory. The Canadian Pacific Company is said to have sold 1,000,000 acres of land in the past year. They sell none without the prerequisite of cultivation, and have adopted the wise rule of selling no land within two miles of their road, except with the binding requirement that all the lands shall be broken and put into crops within two years. By this policy the Canadian Pacific Company intend to have their road running through a continuous wheat field, 500 miles west from Winnipeg, inside of three years. Manitoba is in a very prosperous condition, and expects to be still more so next year, more than ever before. Col. Lamborn said the party he was with returned to Winnipeg along the Red River valley, on the west side, in Dakota, and found the whole country settled with producing farmers. On the Larimore extension of the Manitoba line, to Devil's Lake, the place is already keeping pace with the track layers. The country is the finest in the world.

THE LAND CRAZE.

Reliable information received from private sources report a big boom for Regina on the line of the Canadian Pacific. This town site, about 250 miles west from Winnipeg, has been laid out, four miles square in extent, by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company and the Dominion Government. The latter put in the even sections, and the Canadian Pacific the odd sections of land. The whole four miles are platted, and valuation placed on the land at $4,000,000. The lots are disposed of by allotment to parties applying for them, in blocks of $5,000 in value each. Two million dollars' worth of lots have thus far been allotted. The craze for town lots is simply marvellous, and due to the fact that Manitoba is the only live territory for speculation of this character.

Safety of Life at Sea.

Mr. George Turner Phillips, writing to the Times, says: Presuming that in the eyes of most of your readers the life of an Englishman is as dear to himself and his family as that of a Frenchman, I would beg through you to direct the attention of the owners of our large passenger ships to a simple and inexpensive aid to saving life that I have noticed during the last month in the Mediterranean adopted by two of the largest French navigation companies. In every saloon passenger's cabin there was placed in a light wooden frame attached to the planks above his berth a "cork jacket," one to each berth. It consisted merely of five or six flat pieces of cork, 10 inches long by 3 inches wide, and 2 inches thick, strongly attached at intervals to stout pieces of canvas painted white, which could be slipped over the head and shoulders in a few seconds and more securely fastened by its strings if time allowed, thus forming a broad, buoyant belt, similar to those in use among the men of the Royal Humane Society. To a nervous traveller there must be something reassurring in such an object—the last his eyes would linger on at night, the first to meet his gaze in the morning. But, sir, in the hour of danger the value of such a companion—enabling the helpless to float till succor arrived, and conferring upon the swimmer additional power to rescue a sinking neighbor—appears to me immense. For a minimum of expense a maximum of safety! The life-buoys, too, so often secured to the stern rail with a seizing, here were simply hung upon a stout hook, so that the few precious seconds, if not longer, necessary for the production of a knife were saved. Apropos of lifebuoys, why, sir, should they not all be coated with white luminous paint, which would at once point out their position to the passengers on deck at night, would be the more plainly visible to the man overboard, and also would serve as a guide to a boat when lowered for his rescue?

Staff Commander James Charles Atkinson, the oldest naval officer on the English official record, died at Southampton a few days ago in the 100th year of his age. In 1803 he joined the navy as a volunteer. He was, in 1814, appointed to the Penguin, an 18-gun brig, with 117 men. In an engagement with the American corvette Hornet, 22 guns and 177 men, off the Island d'Acunha in 1815, the Penguin was sunk, and the deceased was taken prisoner with the remaining officers and crew. He was shipwrecked in 1824 in the Grecian Archipelago, and in 1833 retired from active service. The deceased officer was blind for the last fifteen years, but otherwise retained all his faculties until his death.

The great ball at Hatfield, Lord Salisbury's seat, for the coming of age of his son, Lord Cranborne, proved a strange and interesting experience to London society, which mustered in great force, and was more American than English in its character. The ladies got themselves up in cloaks and furs of various kinds, as if for an adventure. The men went in thick boots or galoshes, and carried their pumps in their pockets. Hatfield disputes with Burghley, the Marquis of Exeter's seat, the distinction of being the best house in England. A large temporary iron building was put up in front of the house for supper, the marble hall was devoted to tea, and the dancing took place in the gallery.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE

The most successful Remedy ever discovered, as it is certain in its effects and does not blister. READ PROOF BELOW.

Kendall's Spavin Cure

HAMILTON, Mo., June 24, 1882.

B. J. KENDALL & Co.—Gents:—I am pleased to certify that I have used Kendall's Spavin Cure, and have found it to be all that is recommended to be and in fact more than I have claimed for it. I have removed by using the above remedy Bone Spavins, Ring-bone, Splints, Curbs, and Swellings, and will cheerfully testify and recommend it to be the best thing for any bony substance that I have ever used, and have tried many of them, as I made that my study for years.

Respectfully yours,
P. V. [illegible]

FROM

Col. T. L. Foster

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, May 10, 1882.

DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents:—I have used your very valuable Hambletonian colt that I value very highly, he had a large bone spavin on one joint and a small one on the other, which made him very lame; I had him under the charge of two veterinary surgeons who undertook to cure him. I was one day reading an advertisement of Kendall's Spavin Cure in the Chicago Express. I determined to try it, and got our druggist here to send for it, they ordered three bottles; I took it all and thought I would give it a thorough trial, I used it according to directions and in a short time the colt ceased to be lame, the lumps have disappeared. I used but one bottle and the colt's limbs are as free from lumps and as smooth as any horse's, in fact sound state. He is entirely cured. The cure was so remarkable that I let two of my neighbors have the remaining two bottles who are now using it.

Very respectfully,
L. T. FOSTER

Kendall's Spavin Cure

WINGHAM, Ont., Jan. 17, 1882.

DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents:—I am pleased to certify that I have used Kendall's Spavin Cure, bought from C. E. Williams, druggist, Wingham, Ont., and do without hesitation pronounce it to be an invaluable remedy for the cure of Spavins, Ringbones, or Curbs. I have used it on a bone spavin of several years growth which it completely removed. I can safely say it will remove any Spavin, Curb or Ringbone it properly used. I have also recommended friends to use it, which they done so with perfect success. I gladly recommend this public, and will answer any questions by letters sent me.

Yours &c.
GEORGE BEN[illegible]

Kendall's Spavin Cure

ON HUMAN FLESH.

WEST ENOSBURGH, Vt., Feb. 15, 1882.

DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents:—Six months ago I injured my knee joint which caused an enlargement to grow the size of a walnut and caused me very severe pain. At the time for four or five weeks, when I began to use Kendall's Spavin Cure with the most satisfactory results. It has entirely removed the enlargement and stopped the lameness and pain. I have long known it to be excellent for horses but now I know it to be the best liniment for human flesh that I am acquainted with.

Yours truly,
T. P. LAWRENCE

ST. JOHN, P Q Oct. 27, 1882.

DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents:—I have used your Spavin Cure with great success for spavins, curbs and splints. I knew it was a good remedy for ringbones, bone spavins, cuts, galls and all kinds of lameness and difficulties about the horse. One of my horses sprained his ankle very badly. I applied Kendall's Spavin Cure and I never saw anything work like it. he was well in a few days. I know it to be good for man as well as beast. I procured one of your Treatise on the Horse by mail for 25cts. and I think it was the means of saving me $100 on one horse. I treated according to the direction given in your book for displaced stifle.

Yours truly,
WM. J. PEARSON

Send address for Illustrated Circular, which we think gives positive proof of its virtues. No remedy has ever met with such unparalled success to our knowledge, for beast as well as man.

Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. All druggists have it or can get it for you, or it will be sent to any address on receipt of price by the proprietors. DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

Sold by all Druggists.

LYMAN, SONS & CO., Montreal, P.Q.
Wholesale Agents

GEORGE NOBLE,

INSURANCE AND LAND AGENT

LICENSED AUCTIONEER

For the County of Grey.

AGENT for the following reliable Companies:
CITIZENS', of Montreal,
AGRICULTURAL, of Watertown, [illegible]
TRADE & COMMERCE, (Mutual) of Toronto.

A number of Choice Farms for sale. also Village Lots.

Auction Sales conducted in Town or Country on Shortest Notice. Charges moderate. Bills, Blank Notes, and Stamps provided.

GEO. NOBLE.

How?

n dying, Egypt, dying,
which I'm barely just alive, n exhaustive efforts trying o pronounce that word "Khedive."

they lying, Egypt, lying,
Who assert we should receive as "e?" And are they guying
When we call the cuss "Khedeve?"

m crying, Egypt, crying—
Orthoepistical contriver!
the face of English flying!
Won't it do to say 'khedever?'

m sighing, Egypt, sighing,
For my girl—can I believe her hen she's twisting, when she's tying Her sweet tongue into "khedever?"

m nighing, Egypt, nighing
My finale. Ere 'tis over—e I'm frying, Egypt, frying,
I would fain suggest "khedover."

—Puck.

HIS SACRIFICE:

OR,

FOR LOVE OF HER.

CHAPTER I.

s nearly eight o'clock in the evening, , starlight, icy cold night early in y. A great deal of snow had fallen m Christmas and New Year's—plenty ll remained in the streets, piled up in near the sidewalks. A bitterly cold certainly, the faces and fingers of the ootblacks looked blue and pinched, rse-car drivers stamped first one foot e other, and drew their woollen muf closer about their ears; probably many omeless wretches would be frozen to between the hours of midnight and nevertheless, New York's fashionable ghfares were thronged with people—ressed, warmly clad people—who Lurrying along (it was entirely too dawdle), men in groups of two or ladies with their escorts, on their way ous places of amusement.

spacious library in Graham Trow- 's handsome residence was at a l times rful, pleasant room; it looked partic- warm and bright this freezing Janu- ght. The wine-colored curtains fell in , unbroken folds over the windows, ng out all possible draughts, the soft, w light of the argand lamp brought out ch tints in the Persian rugs thrown in such profusion upon the inlaid floor, e sea-coal fire that blazed and crackled ly on the tiled hearth sent out gleams shes of rosy, flickering light that play- out the helmeted heads of the two e Roman warriors which stood one on side of the fireplace. Everything in om bespoke the wealth and taste of its r; each one of the pictures hanging up he panelled walls was a chef-d'œuvre were rare and priceless volumes in the e mahogany bookcases, and upon a sily-carved Japanese cabinet were red bits of bric-a-brac almost worth weight in gold. But Graham Trow- e was not thinking how fortunate he n possessing such a luxurious fauteuil rtain, as he sat in front of the library , which was strewn with books and pa- his head resting upon one hand, while the other he was restlessly pulling at rk moustache which almost concealed outh; and that his thoughts were the se of pleasant ones was very evident, one of his many friends looking in upon am Trowbridge as he sat there, would wondered what brought that worried, lexed expression upon his face, would said, "Surely he has nothing to trouble ; he has everything that can make life unt and free from care; few men are rtunate as he has been." Certainly ne had favored him, had smiled most ously upon him. Twenty-five years re he had come to New York with a ar or two in his pocket; now, the pic- s alone in his house were worth thous- of dollars; and he had made every pen- f his money himself—by his own efforts he raised himself to the high place he ied in society.

e had been born and bred in a quiet lit- New England village; his father, a Con- gational minister, a good, true man, but the most rigid ideas as to right and g, and a narrow-mindedness of thought quisition which he had inherited from Puritan ancestors; his mother, unfortun- y for her, had been born about twenty rs too soon; neither her husband, her ldy, nor her friends ever understood gentle, refined nature, with its intense ings for a little of the art and poetry e. It was from her that Graham in- ted the exquisite taste and innate refine- t which softened and toned down the ter, vigorous nature that was his by t of birth. The very night he was born, father decided that if he lived he should educated for the ministry, and as soon Graham was able to understand anything, understood that it was a pre-established that in time he should become a spirit- guide and teacher. In his boyhood the wledge troubled him but little; he only d to himself, "If I am a minister, I shan't me like this, and preach year after year to epy congregation." In due time he was t away to college, and at the expiration the first term came home with advanced ories and ideas which shocked and rtled his grave father beyond measure; e end of the second year he calmly and etly informed his parents that he could become a minister.

n vain his father argued, in vain his gen- mother pleaded, with tears in her soft es; when Graham Trowbridge decided on any course of action, he did it only for er long and serious consideration, and en that decision was as fixed and unalter- e as were the laws of the Medes and Per- ns. He told his father that it seemed to n a sin and a shame for a man to enter the nistry unless he knew he was especially apted to that noble and honorable calling; felt he was not adapted to it, therefore he uld not, what is more, he would not, take on himself vows he knew he could not fill. r once in his life, the Rev. Robert Trow- idge lost his iron self-control, and the ap- ot of it was Graham left his quiet home, d went to New York to seek and make his n fortune. Connecting himself with a ge mercantile house, he devoted himself to rning the business; this once done, he rrowed a few thousand dollars from a wealthy gentleman, whose acquaintance he had made, and who, seeing that the young New Englander possessed business abilities of no inferior order, gladly and willingly lent him the money, feeling quite sure it would be a safe investment, and started in business for himself. In a very short time the borrowed money, interest and principal, was made, and steadily the little business assumed larger and larger proportions. It was wonderful how it grew, but grow it did, until Graham Trowbridge was spoken of as one of the rapidly rising men in New York. His father and mother, knowing not their disappointment, watched his career with proud fond eyes, and died happy, thinking that, after all, Graham knew his own mind best when he gave up the ministry, "for," his father said, wisely, "a man with the strongly marked abilities for business and money-making which he has shown himself to possess, under any circumstances, have made a good minister."

He had married, when quite young, a very lovely girl, who had given him, through all the twenty years of her married life, a love that bordered closely on idolatry; one child had been born to him, a daughter, now just budding into womanhood, and fair as her mother had been when he first met and loved her. His beautiful home was a perfectly happy one, his lovely wife and child were devoted to him, he had hosts of warm, true friends, he was only forty-five, yet he had made with his own hands a fortune; and any one knowing all this, and looking in upon him as he sat there in his richly furnished library, would certainly have wondered what there was in Graham Trowbridge's life to bring upon his handsome face the anxious, troubled look that rested upon it.

Every life has its secret, be it great or small, noble or ignoble, real or fancied. Graham Trowbridge had his. It dated about three years back. At the suggestion of a friend he had bought a few hundred dollars' worth of certain mining stock, which was generally considered to be worthless. One day that stock began to rise, and when it had gone away up Graham Trowbridge sold his few shares, and thought how easy it was for men to grow rich speculating. From that time he had dabbled more or less in stocks; he was very successful at first, and, shrewd, clear-headed man that he was, the fever of speculation grasped him; then the fortune, which had attended him through life, took it into her fickle head to frown upon him. Within the past two years he had met with serious losses in his business; he had lost large amounts which he had thought were safely invested; he had thought to cover his losses by successful speculations, the speculations had proved the very reverse of successful; and sitting alone in his library this bitterly cold January night, Graham Trowbridge had looked his business affairs straight in the face, and had seen that they were in a very precarious condition. Money he must have and at once; with a certain amount which he had in mind, he could straighten up his accounts, then by practicing a little economy, and giving his business very close attention, he would be able in a year or two to regain his former position.

But the question was, where should he get this money, this large amount he must have immediately! He was a proud man, proud of his reputation in mercantile and social circles; how could he go to any of his friends and implore them to lend him money tell them he was standing very near the brink of failure, he, whom all men credited with a large bank account and superior business abilities? Could he tell them he had lost money speculating, had not given his business the careful attention it required, had let opportunities slip by which should have been grasped? The shadow upon his face grew darker, the expression of disquietude in his eyes deepened; hastily rising from his chair he began pacing up and down the long room, running the slender fingers of one white hand through his dark hair with a restless, impatient movement unusual to him.

Of course there was his house with its costly furniture and rich decorations, but it belonged to his wife—he had built it for and given it to her; well he knew that was she aware of his financial embarrassments, she would say, "I have nothing, my husband, but what is yours—do with the house as you like." But he had built it according to his own ideas, had thought it would be his home as long as he lived, that the voices of his grandchildren would some day ring through the rooms—it must not pass into the hands of strangers, surely there was some other way. He had some real estate in the upper part of the city, unimproved lots that would sell for little or nothing now, who eas in ten years time they would bring him in a small fortune; it would be perfect folly to sacrifice them. If there was only some one in his own family, some relative who would lend him the money, he would be able to repay it in a short time, of that he was quite sure. But he had no relative possessed of sufficient means to lend, without inconvenience, the sum he required. It was no use; he must let some in the outside world know that he, Graham Trowbridge, was in actual need of money. His lip curled scornfully; just at that moment Graham Trowbridge was supremely disgusted with himself, had for himself the same feeling of contempt that he would have felt for any man who had told him a story of wasted opportunities and want of forethought.

He paused in front of the crackling fire, his head bent a little forward, thinking which one of his many friends would be most likely to accommodate him; even as he pondered, there came a knock at the door, and a servant entered the room.

"A gentleman to see you, sir," he said, giving his master a card; and glancing down at it, Graham Trowbridge read with some surprise the name—Russel Anthon.

"Why I did not know Anthon was in town," he thought, then aloud:

"Show the gentleman in, Thomas."

And still standing on the rug in front of the fire he waited for his visitor.

CHAPTER II.

He did not wait long, scarcely a moment had elapsed before a firm footstep sounded outside on the marble-paved hall, and a tall, rather heavily built gentleman came into the library, and the shadow disappeared from Graham Trowbridge's face, as having grasped his visitor's hands with words of warm welcome, he drew forward a large fauteuil for him, and then resumed his own chair.

The soft mellow lamplight fell upon Russel Anthon's face—a handsome face, the complexion a clear olive, the eyes large and dark, the features straight and regular; a thin (legally, perhaps, in repose) was proud blood in Russel Anthon's veins, it was surely no fault if his face showed it—but one forgot the tinge of haughtiness about the mouth when the well-cut lips curved in a smile, revealing the perfect teeth, which seemed dazzling white in contrast with the silky, dark moustache which shaded, but did not hide, the mouth.

Thirty his last birthday, but looking two or three years older, because of the grave thoughtfulness of the deep eyes, the firm look about the mouth and chin; in short, it was an attractive face; a face that inspired trust and confidence, a face that had won many friends for its owner.

That he was a favorite of Graham Trowbridge's was very evident; too well bred to be anything but courteous especially in his own house, there was a warmth and sincerity in Mr. Trowbridge's manner, which the most casual observer would have seen was thoroughly hearty.

"Have a cigar, Anthon," he said, taking a box of cigars from one the table drawers; "genuine Havanas these are, I've only had them a day or two, and last night as I sat here alone trying one, I was thinking of you, wondering how long it would be before we would have a smoke together again. I am very glad to see you, my boy, I have missed you since you went away; and now tell me, how did you find business in Chicago?"

And then followed a conversation upon the business and political affairs of the Queen city of the West.

"But though you say you like Chicago, you did not like it sufficiently well to remain there very long, did you?" laughed Mr. Trowbridge, shaking the ash from his cigar. "Well, I don't blame you. New York is about as good a place to live in as there is this side of the water."

A faint flush overspread Russel Anthon's face.

"Mr. Trowbridge," he said, slowly, "when I went West six weeks ago, I went with an object, I wanted to fully decide a question in my own mind. Some time ago I met a lady, who from the first attracted me; since I have known her I have seen a great deal of her—circumstances have thrown us together; she is very young, and at first I thought the feelings I entertained for her were those a brother might have for a young sister; but within the last six months the conviction has been growing upon me that my love for her was not the calm affection of a brother for a sister: it was the deeper, stronger, warmer love that a man bears the woman he would make his wife—would cherish as the most precious thing on earth. I have not been able to rightly understand my own feelings—it may seem strange, but I have never in all my life before loved any woman—so I thought I would go away from her for a little while and unbiassed by her presence lay bare my own heart. There are no longer any doubts in my mind; while I have been away I have hungered for the sight of her face—the sound of her voice; and I know that I love her, as it has always seemed to me a man should love the woman he would make his wife, and that I shall love her as long as my life lasts."

He had spoken earnestly; the flush had faded from his face, leaving it very pale. Graham Trowbridge knew that every word he had uttered had come straight from his heart. He was a little surprised that grave reserved Russel Anthon had spoken even to himself of this love affair, but he did not show it: he only said:

"Well, Anthon, I wish you every happiness, I am sure. I have often wondered why it was you had never married; bachelorhood at best is a lonely sort of a life. Have I ever met the lady?

"Have you ever met her! Mr. Trowbridge, have you never suspected that I loved your daughter Muriel?"

This time Graham Trowbridge's great surprise showed itself in his face. With a gasp of astonishment he sat upright in his chair.

"You love my little Muriel! Why, Anthon, she is nothing but a child; you are twice as old as she is."

Russel Anthon smiled—a little, sad sort of a smile.

"Not quite twice as old," he said. "Muriel was eighteen last October, you know; many women have been married at that age."

"Yes, that is so," said Mr. Trowbridge, musingly; "her mother was only eighteen when I married her, but then I cannot realize that Muriel is as old as that. It seems only a few years ago since she was a little child, climbing in my lap to play with my watch, and now somebody wants to marry her. You are sure that she loves you, Anthon?"

A faint shadow came into Russel Anthon's eyes.

"I am not at all sure," he answered, "but I came to-night to question you if I have your consent to ask her if she loves me well enough to be my wife. Mr. Trowbridge, if she does love me well enough, I am almost certain I can make her happy. No man could love a woman better than I love Muriel, and for her sake I am deeply thankful that I have money sufficient to keep every care of her dear life—to give her everything she might desire. Very likely you know that I am not a poor man, but I do not think, Mr. Trowbridge, that you are aware of the extent of my fortune—when my father died he left me nearly a million dollars, that amount I have since largely increased."

No, Graham Trowbridge had not been aware that Russel Anthon was a millionaire. He had supposed he had a good income, large enough to enable him to live with perfect comfort, but nothing more. Hearing it now for the first time, a sudden thought sprang up within him; the next instant he was bitterly ashamed of it, and tried to crush it down. Still there was a slight flush on his face as he said earnestly—all the more earnestly because of that half-formed snake-like thought in his mind:

"I have always liked you, Russel Anthon, from the very first time that I saw you, and I know of no man to whom I would more willingly give my little daughter. The fact that you are a millionaire matters nothing to me: so long as you had enough to give Muriel the comforts of life, and perhaps a few of its luxuries, I should have been satisfied, because in the two years that I have known you I have gained a thorough knowledge of your character, and I can trust you—trust you even with my little girl's happiness, which, next to her mother's, is the dearest thing to me that the world holds."

Russel Anthon's expressive eyes were lustrous with feeling.

"Thank you, Sir," with just a quiver in his voice, "you are kind and generous indeed. And now may I see Muriel to tell her I have your consent to ask for her love?"

Mr. Trowbridge paused only an instant, but in that instant, that sixtieth part of a minute, the old crushed thought with renewed self-growing strong and mighty, conquering and subduing the nobler thoughts which hastened to make war against it. He did not raise his eyes to Russel Anthon's face; he was gazing intently into the burning of the fire.

"Mr. Anthon," the firm voice was perfectly clear and unbroken, "before you see Muriel again, I would like to tell her the subject of our conversation this evening. You know that although she is eighteen years old, she is a very child as far as experience and worldly wisdom go; I doubt very much if she has ever looked into her own heart. You do not know, nor do I, whether her feelings for you are any warmer than those of sincere friendship. I know she cares for you as a friend, but I do not know whether she could ever give you the love of a wife. If, after having thought the matter over, she should come to the conclusion that she could never give you that love—I am looking now on the darkest side of the question—it would hurt her terribly to tell you so. Let me, her father, broach the subject to her. If she loves you, well and good. You can go to her then and tell her the extent of your love for her, that a woman expects. If, however, it should be the contrary, it would be best for you as well as for her, that the matter was never mentioned between you."

Russel Anthon had listened attentively; when Mr. Trowbridge had finished, he said quietly:

"I think you are right. I will leave it to you to apprise Muriel of my love for her."

"I will speak to her to-night," continued Graham Trowbridge.

"Come into my office to-morrow morning after 10 o'clock and I will tell you the result. I don't think you need have any fears, my boy," noticing the little anxious look on Russel's face and laughing lightly as he spoke. Then more earnestly: "I think any woman would be proud to call you husband; I know I should be pleased to call you son."

That Graham Trowbridge was not a man given to saying anything he did not mean Russel Anthon well knew, and his handsome face flushed as he murmured:

"I hope I may never do aught to destroy your confidence in me."

"I have no fears that you ever will," answered Mr. Trowbridge. "Must you go?" as Mr. Anthon rose from his chair "well, I shall expect you to-morrow morning, some time between ten and eleven. Take another cigar—I insist upon it; and since you are determined to go, good night, Anthon, good night!"

He went back to the library after Russel Anthon had taken his departure, and sat thinking. That Muriel should accept Mr. Anthon's offer he was fully determined. It would be an easy matter to borrow of his wealthy future son-in-law the money required. His reputation among his business friends would remain unimpaired. No one would ever know of the strait he had been in—the strait he had brought about by his own folly and carelessness—he frowned as he acknowledged it mentally to himself—but the man who was Muriel's husband would be one of his family.

As far as it is possible justice should be done every man. Let it be said in justice to Graham Trowbridge that unless he had known Russel Anthon to be a noble, honorable man, he would not have entertained a thought of [illegible] his wife for ten times one million dollars that he saw no earthly reason why his daughter should not love and be perfectly happy with him. He had spoken the truth when he said: "I know of no man to whom I would more willingly give my daughter," and it was for her sake, as well as his own, that Mr. Trowbridge had decided Muriel should become Russel Anthon's wife.

He leaned his head back against the cushions of his chair, with a long sigh of relief; the library looked brighter and pleasanter to him than it had looked for the whole evening before.

"It is very fortunate for me that Anthon came her to-night," he said, to himself, "for to-morrow morning I should have gone to Tom, Dick, or Harry, to ask if they could favor me with a loan. Well, it will be a lesson to me; hereafter I shall leave speculating to richer men than I. I wonder where Muriel is?"

He was just about to rise from his chair and go in search of her, when there came the sound of light, flying footsteps along the hall, the heavy library door was thrown wide open, and a girl, followed by a beautiful setter dog, burst like a small whirlwind into the room, and threw herself down on an ottoman at his feet; and Graham Trowbridge's eyes were very tender in their expression as he said:

"Muriel, my darling, I was just wondering where you were."

CHAPTER III.

It was not at all strange that Mr. Trowbridge's eyes softened as they rested upon his daughter, nor was it to be wondered at that she was the very pride and idol of his heart. Was she pretty? That is the first question generally asked about a woman, and I, taking it for granted that you have asked that question regarding Muriel Trowbridge, answer yes, she was very pretty. She was not strictly beautiful, her features were all too short for perfect classical beauty nor did she belong to any especial order. Her eyes, with her curly black lashes and brows, were to dark to warrant her being called a blonde, yet no one would have thought of speaking of her as a brunette: that would have been nonsense with her hair. It was not brown, it was not golden, it was not red, the soft hair that lay in broken rings on the low, white forehead, and fell in losse, heavy curls upon her shoulders, it was a marvellous mixture of all three, bronze-gold in the sunshine, red-brown in the shade, and her eyes matched that changeable hair to perfection. Properly speaking they were gray, that is, gray was their normal color, but they were those rare amber-gray eyes, black as night when their owner was angry or excited (and as Muriel Trowbridge was not particularly saint-like in her disposition, she was very often one or the other,) brown when she was quiet and dreamy, almost golden when her quick sympathies were aroused. She was not very tall, scarcely five feet, but the graceful little figure was daintily rounded and proportioned. Sitting there on the ottoman at her father's feet, her dark green velvet dress falling in heavy folds about her, one small hand resting upon the head affectionately of the dog crouched beside her, Muriel looked younger by two years than she really was, and it was no wonder that Graham Trowbridge found it hard to realize the fact that she had been asked in marriage.

"Who has been here, papa?" she asked, not waiting for him to open the conversation.

"Thomas told me a gentleman had called to see you."

"Thomas spoke the truth, my dear," said Mr. Trowbridge, lightly, wondering to himself how he had best break to Muriel the news he had for her. "Who do you suppose it was?"

"Oh, I am sure I don't know," answered Muriel, carelessly, "somebody, probably I don't care anything about. See, papa, I want you to look at Leo's new collar."

"Well, if you won't guess, I shall have to tell you," said her father, paying no attention to the small request; "it was Mr Anthon."

"Mr. Anthon!" echoed Muriel, opening her eyes very wide, "I thought he was in Chicago: and why" with a little pout, "didn't he come in and see me? I think he might have, when he was away so long, and I would so much have liked him to see Leo's beautiful new collar."

Mr. Trowbridge bit his lip.

"I don't think Mr. Anthon takes any interest in dog-collars," he said, almost impatiently, "although I am quite sure he would have liked to have seen you. Muriel, do you like him?"

He asked the question abruptly; he had concluded that there was no use beating about the bush, that it was best to come to an understanding at once.

"Very much," answered Muriel, with a decided emphasis upon the very. "I always have, ever since we met him at the funny little Swiss inn; you like him, too, don't you, papa?"

"Oh, yes," said Mr. Trowbridge, quickly. "Would you be very much surprised, dear, if I should tell you he loves you?"

"Loves me!" The lovely, questioning eyes looked straight up into his,—entirely too straight to please her father; he would have preferred to see the long-lashed lids droop. "Why, what do you mean, papa?"

"I mean, Muriel, that Russel Anthon loves you very dearly—so dearly that he wants you for his wife."

He drew a long breath, half anxiety, half relief that the first step had been taken.

A burning flush swept over Muriel's face, the hand that still rested on Leo's head trembled.

"He wants to marry me," she said slowly, as though she could not quite understand it? "It seems very strange that he should want to marry me."

"I do not see anything strange about it, dear; when a man loves a woman with all tenderness and respect, his first thought is to make her his wife; and why should he not love you Muriel?"

"Why! Because it does not seem to me that we are suited to each other; I cannot understand him sometimes, and I know it is because his thoughts are higher, his principles loftier than mine. I have always thought that a man and wife should stand nearly on the same level, for if one is far above the other, certainly there cannot be that same singleness of thought and purpose that I am sure God meant there should be; eagles do not mate with little brown thrushes, papa."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

RE-ISSUES.

Fun and fact, with scissors caught,
Have many a pleasant moral taught.

If you want to find out how great a man is, let him tell it himself.

Time is a good deal like a mule. It is better to be ahead of time than behind time.

Some writers never succeed in making a point except when they sharpen a lead pencil.

The Egyptian emblem of a snake with its tail in its mouth, was the earliest sign of the "swallow tail."

Archimedes invented the slang phrase, "Give us a rest," when he offered to move the world with his lever.

The Buffalo Express has decided that there's no such thing as a well running dry. When it is dry it won't run.

It isn't that a man means to lie about snakes, but when one two feet long comes at him it looks as big as a fire-engine hose.

We are told "the evening wore on," but we are never told what the evening wore on that occasion. Was it the close of a summer's day?

Notwithstanding the multiplication of trust companies in all our large cities, it is just as hard as ever for the impecunious man to get trusted.

Tootsy, on making the horrible discovery that her kitten had whiskers: "Ma, I don't want dis tat. Dis is a man tat. I want a dirl tat. I want a dirl tat."

Some scientist now observes that even a clam has parasites. He would have observed as much before if he had ever noticed the crowd around a free chowder.

It was a dull period for news when the enterprising managing editor of a Western daily headed an item concerning the death of a cat, "Nine Lives Lost."

It is possible to tell the age of a cow by the wrinkles on her horns, but nature has provided no outward signs by which the age of an egg can be computed. Break it gently.

It is the easiest thing in the world to distinguish between an English lord and an American copy, commonly called a snob. The Englishman always speaks well of his own country.

Six-year old Fannie had eaten heartily, finishing her dessert with a full supply of ice-cream. Her mixture of sensations were thus expressed: "Oh dear, I'm so tight I can't shiver!"

ONTARIO HIGH SCHOOLS.

The following regulations were approved by the lieutenant governor in council on Saturday:

Drawing is removed from the obligatory subjects of study in the lower school and at the intermediate. The item 7 e, now 6 e, in the optional subjects thereat, shall therefore read, 'French or German, and when selected by the parent or guardian of such pupil music or drawing.'

In the subject of English literature, prescribed by the order in the council of the 31st March last, Goldsmith's Traveller or Marmoin may be used by any pupil in the high schools or candidate at the departmental examinations in July next, as the parent or guardian may select.

SHILOH'S CATARRH REMEDY.

A marvelous cure for Catarrh, Diphtheria, Canker mouth, and Head Ache. With each bottle there is an ingenious nasal Injector for the more successful treatment of these complaints without extra charge. Price 50c. Sold by A. Turner & Co. Markdale.

Wm. Lucas & Co. bankers, Markdale, have $200,000.00 to loan on real estate. Straight loan system. No fines. Low interest; moderate charges.

ANSWER THIS QUESTION.

Why do so many people we see around us, seem to prefer to suffer and be made miserable by Indigestion, Constipation, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, Coming up of the Food, Yellow Skin, when for 75 cts., we will sell them Shiloh's Vitalizer, guaranteed to cure them. Sold by A. Turner & Co. Markdale.

The Mail or Globe to the end of 1883 for $1.00. Leave your subscription at the STANDARD office. Subscribe at once and get the balance of this year free.

SHILOH'S CONSUMPTION CURE.

This is beyond question the most successful Cough Medicine we have ever sold, a few doses invariably cure the worst cases of Cough, Croup, and Bronchitis, while its wonderful success in the cure of Consumption is without a parallel in the history of medicine. Since its first discovery it has been sold on a guarantee, a test which no other medicine can stand. If you have a Cough we earnestly ask you to try it. Price 10cts, 50 cts. and $1.00. If your Lungs are sore, Chest, or Back, Lame, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Sold by A. Turner & Co., Markdale.

W. A. McLeod passed up on Monday bringing with him his winter stock of store goods to Manitowaning.

Mr. T. E. Davis, of this village, has called a public sale for Saturday, the 25th inst., when he will sell a horse, cow, household furniture, etc., etc. Sale to commence at 10:30 a. m. Geo. Noble, auctioneer.

FROM A PROMINENT PHYSICIAN.

Washingtonville, Ohio, June 17, 1880.—Reading the advertisement of Kendall's Spavin Cure, and having a valuable and speedy horse which had been lame from a spavin for eighteen months, I sent to you for a bottle by express, which in six weeks removed all lameness and enlargement, and a large splint from another horse, and both horses are to day as sound as colts. The one bottle was worth to me one hundred dollars. Yours truly,

H. A. BERTOLETT, M. D.

Mr. Montgomery is making great preparations for the holidays. For particulars see his new advertisement in another column.

John Doyle, who stabbed Beatty, is lying in Owen Sound gaol awaiting his trial which will not come off until the next assizes. He has been at the point of death from injuries received at the time of the row, but is recovering.

Republican City, Neb., March 31, 1880.—I tried your Kendall's Spavin Cure, and it had the desired effect. It cured the spavin which other treatments failed to do. I did not use quite one bottle of your liniment. After the spavin was removed I drove the horse and his mate over 500 miles, from Linn County, Iowa, to Harlin County, Neb., with a load of 2,000 pounds and made the trip in four weeks. Please send me your "Treatise on the Horse."

Yours truly, JAMES YELLENIC.

Mrs. Kells has returned from a pleasant and enjoyable trip to the old country. She visited many places of note which on the Emerald Isle.

Dr. T. F. Brown, L. D. S., leaves Markdale to-day and will remain at Flesherton for a week and return to Woodstock. He will return to this place the week before Christmas.

WORTHY OF PRAISE.

As a rule we do not recommend Patent Medicines, but when we know of one that really is a public benefactor, and does positively cure, then we consider it our duty to impart that information to all. Electric Bitters are truely a most valuable medicine, and will surely cure Billiousness, Fever and Ague, Stomach, Liver and Kidney Complaints even when all other remedies fail. We know whereof we speak, and can freely recommend them to all.—Exch.—Sold at fifty cents a bottle, by A. Turner & Co.

Subscribe for the STANDARD and get that splendid horse book free. Commence any time.

Messrs. Hendrie and Wragge of the T. G. & B. Ry. passed up on Monday.

John Welsh has arrived at Brooksville, Florida, having stood the journey very well.

Mr. John Davidson, formerly station agent at this place, died in Winnipeg on the 14th inst.

Robt. S. Rae.

TAILOR,

SYDENHAM STREET,

MARKDALE.

J. W. FORD

HAS RE-OPENED HIS

Flour and Grist Mill

IN MARKDALE.

AN IMMENSE STOCK OF BOOTS & SHOES

JUST ARRIVED AT THE

TORONTO HOUSE

BEST QUALITY AND LOWEST PRICE.

STOCK COMPLETE IN

Dry Goods and Groceries!

PRICES ALWAYS RIGHT.

OUR THIRTY CENT TEA

Is the wonder of the day A trial solicited.

Markdale, Oct. 11th, 1882. WM. BROWN.

A. M'INTYRE

TEA! TEA! TEA!

A. M'INTYRE

Flour, Flour, Flour.

GROCERIES. GROCERIES.

McINTYRE'S LIQUORS! LIQUORS

McINTYRE'S Cigars, Cigars.

McINTYRE'S Coffee, Coffee.

McINTYRE'S MEAL! MEAL! MEAL!

McINTYRE'S Pork, Pork, Pork.

McINTYRE'S Teas, Teas.

And everything kept in a first-class Grocery and Liquor Store. always on hand, CHEAP FOR CASH.

MARKDALE

Sash and Door Factory

SASH,

DOORS,

BLINDS

MOULDINGS,

HOLLOW BATTONS,

FRAMES

Lumber, Lath and Shingles,

Always on Hand. Orders Promptly Filled.

The Subscriber wishes to return thanks to the people of Markdale and vicinity, for the very liberal patronage they have given him in the past, and hopes by close attention to business to merit a continuance of the same.

I have now extended my business, and will in future keep a full Stock of

PINE LUUBER.

Direct from the North Shore.

ALL SIZES, DRESSED AND UNDRESSED,

All Kinds of Plain and Fancy Turning

Done in a first-class manner.

Markdale May 27th, 1881. THOS. McNEA.

37-tf

W. BULMER,

The People's Photograph

FLESHERTON,

Continues to take Pictures,

Do Copying and Enlarging in good

—o—

FRAMES and FRAME FIXIN

in great variety and latest designs at desperate low prices.

W. BULME

ARTEMESIA WAREHOU

FLESHERTON STATION.

Dry Goods, Hardware, Crockery, Boots and S

Groceries, Provisions, &c. Stock kept full and well assorted wit goods received every week.

Cash paid for all kinds of Grain at the Stat

MY BRANCH STORE AT EUGENIA

replenished with new goods every week. For sale cheap for cash or

My Saw Mill, Shingle Factoty, and Lime

AT LITTLE FALLS, ARE IN OPERATION.

All kinds Saw Logs bought at the Mill or sawn on sh

Lumber, Lath, Broom Handles, Shingles and Lime for s

November 7th, 1882. WM. HOG

TORONTO HOUS

FLESHERTON.

Stock Fully Complete. Unusually La

VERY ATTRACTIVE, AND

CHEAPER THAN THE CHEAPE

EVERY DEPARTMENT SPECIALLY ATTRACT

Variety and Value Unsurpassed.

DRY GOODS DEPARMENT

Is this season very complete with a very large stock of Dress Goods, prising in part Cashmeres in all colors. Worsted Wool Goods in endless variety.

Boot and Shoe Department.

Would call special attention of close buyers as my stock is unusually from the best manufacturers and at rock bottom prices.

ORDERED CLOTHING.

Has been exceedingly brisk this season, on account of which I have la the largest and best stock of Tweeds, Coatings, Trowserings, and Over ings in this section of country. As I have always led the trade in this partment buyers will find it to their advantage to call before purcha elsewhere.

Millinery Department.

Under the able management of a first-class milliner, with plenty of as ance, will be found unusually attractive with the prettiest and most fas able, and cheapest stock to be found in the county. Ladies, it woul you good to call and look at the stock.

Hardware and Grocery Department.

Is always fully assorted and complete with the best goods, at the lowest sible price.

☞ I am the only constant and reliable buyer of Grain and Farm P duce in Flesherton, and for which I will pay the highest price in cash any quantity of good dry, sound grain, which I would specially ask farm to clean well. A call solicited.

Flesherton, Oct. 3rd, 1882. R. J. SPROULE

Markdale PUMP Factory

J. G. IRVING,

MAKER OF ALL KINDS OF PUMPS,

DROP VALVE PUMPS, CYLINDER PUMPS, CISTERN PUMPS FORCE PUMPS,

Also, ALL KINDS OF IRON PUMPS SUPPLIED.

Satisfaction guaranteed on all my work; the proof of it is found in fact that I am doing a larger business now than ever was done in Markdale the Pump business. Remember the stand, 1 door north of Rutledge's Ho

Sydenham Street, Markdale.

Markdale Standard

VOL. 3.--No. 12. MARKDALE, ONT., NOV. 30, 1882. No. 116.

The Markdale Standard

IS PUBLISHED

EVERY THURSDAY EVENING,

At Markdale, Ontario.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING:

Transient advertisements reckoned by the space occupied by a scale of solid nonpareil. Advertisements without specific directions published till forbid and charged accordingly. All transitory advertisements must be in the office not later than the Wednesday preceding publication.

JOB PRINTING

of every description executed with neatness and despatch at the Office of publication, Markdale.

C. W. RUTLEDGE.

EDITOR & PROPRIETOR.

PROFESSIONAL AND BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

Sproule & Armstrong,

Barristers, Solicitors, Accoucheurs, &c.

Office: Meford Hall; residence at Flesherton.

Grant, M.D., M.R.C.P. & S., O. Physician and Surgeon, Priceville, Graduate University, Viet. College, New York, and Member of the same. Asclepi Medical Institute. Ophthalmic Hospital, N.Y. Physicians & Surgeons, O. 104

Dental Card.

Cameron & Knight,

L.D.S. SURGEONS.

Over P. A. Cameron and Co's Drug Store, OWEN SOUND.

Special attention to the preservation of the natural teeth. Artificial Dentures mounted on Gold and Rubber bases.

Markdale the last Tuesday in each month.

A. D. Cameron, L.D.S. C. F. Knight, L.D.S. Glasgow. Medalist Royal College Den. Sur., Ont

Legal.

Frost & Frost,

BARRISTERS, AND ATTORNEYS-AT LAW, Solicitors in Chancery, Conveyancers, Owen Sound, have resumed at Markdale, Office open every Thursday, as usual.

J. W. Frost, LL. B. Crown Attorney. 1

J. MASSON,

CERTIFIED MASTER AND DEP. REG Commissioner, Notary Public, Conveyancer, &c.

MONEY TO LEND AT SIX PER CENT. Office in Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block Office in Markdale, over McFarland's Store Friday and Saturday every week. 57.ly

Creasor & Morrison,

BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, CONVEYANCERS, &c.

Office in Owen Sound, Dufferin Block, Office in Wood's Store and in MARKDALE: Over McFarland's Store on Thursday of each week.

Money to loan on reasonable terms.

A. G. C. DUNCAN MORISON

Owen Sound, March 15, 1882. 79-1y

Alexander Brown,

Issuer of Marriage Licenses, Fire and Life Insurance Agent. Commissioner in B.R., Conveyancer and Licensed Auctioneer for the County of Grey. Farmers, Sales and Land Sales, Punctually attended to, charges made very moderate.

Markdale, Sept. 17, 1880. 1-y

Hotels.

SEVERE HOTEL,

MARKDALE.

SPROULE, - Proprietor.

The popular Hotel has had a large addition added to it, thoroughly refitted, and is now one of the best in the county. Every attention paid to the comfort of guests. First-class accommodation for commercial travellers. Good livery. Barber's shop in connection. 17-1y

Markdale Hotel.

Good Accommodation for Travellers. 'Bus to and from all trains. Charges moderate.

Markdale. A. RUTLEDGE, PROP.

COMMERCIAL HOTEL.

PRICEVILLE, Ont.

Large and commodious Sample Rooms Good Bed Rooms, &c. The Bar and larde well supplied with the best the market affords; good Stabling and attentive Hostler's

THOS. ATKINSON, Proprietor

CHATSWORTH HOUSE

(LATE MORROW HOUSE,)

CHATSWORTH, Ont.

THE undersigned having purchased the above property has had it thoroughly renovated and refurnished throughout beside making other new improvements, which will greatly add to the comfort and convenience of his guests, would respectfully solicit the patronage of the public generally. The best brands of liquors and cigars always in stock. Good meal and comfortable rooms guaranteed. Good stabling and attentive hostler.

—C. H. MATHEWS, Prop. 114.

Miscellaneous.

John McDonald,

CHATSWORTH,

DIVISION Court Clerk, Issuer of Marriage Licenses, Commissioner in B.R., Conveyancer, &c. Deeds, Mortgages, Wills, &c., attended to promptly, accurately, neatly, and cheaply. Private funds to lend in small sums on easy terms. Notes discounted

MISS LAMB,

DRESS-MAKER. UP-STAIRS IN Douglas' Block. Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges moderate.

Markdale, Nov. 15th, 1882. 114-3m.

R. M. Galbraith,

AUCTIONEER AND GENERAL LAND Agent, Williamsford Station. Auction Sales attended in all parts of the County. Goods sold on commission. Rates moderate. Pianos, Organs, and Sewing Machines; also Fruit and Ornamental Trees. Vines, Agricultural Implemennts, and Machinery of all kinds on sale.

Williamsford, Jan. 27, 1881.

T. E. DAVIS,

BUILDER & CONTRACTOR, (Stone and Brick). After completing 13 buildings his season is still on the track and is still prepared to do all kinds of stone and brick work, plastering and tuck pointing. Those who contemplate building will find it to their advantage to give him a call.

Residence corner of Brown and Sproule Stetes, MARKDALE. 16-v

MISS WELSH,

Dress & Mantlemaker. Charges moderate. Satisfaction guaranteed. Hill's Block, Sydenham street.

Markdale, Nov. 6th, 1882. 113-126

Wm. Brown,

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.

Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.

N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate security.

Joseph Gibson,

PLAIN & ORNAMENTAL

PLASTERER,

WHITEWASHING—CALSOMINING in Shades and Colors.

All work guaranteed. Charges moderate.

Markdale P.O.

LOYAL MARKDALE LODGE,

Of C. O. O. F. No. 78, will meet in their hall on Monday evening. Nov. 27th, at eight o'clock p. m.

108 W. L. YOUNG, Sec'y.

EUGENIA

Grist, Saw and Lath Mills

Having made eqtensive improvements in my Grist Mill I feel confident I can give good satisfaction.

GOOD FLOUR ALWAYS ON HAND.

Chopping Done Every Day.

Custom Sawing and Bills Filled on the shortest notice.

LUMBER AND LATH ALWAYS ON HAND.

Cherry, Butternut, White Ash, Black Ash Basswood, Pine and Hemlock Logs wanted

69ly. M. AKITT, Eugenia.

$2 Watches, worth $5.00. White metal Hunting Case $6. Imitation gold $6. Solid gold $12. Cheapest and best for your own use or speculative purposes. Valuable catalogue free. THOMPSON & Co., 291 Canal St., New York.

ROBT. ASKIN,

MARKDALE,

Has opened out a First-Class

Furniture!

—AND—

UNDERTKING ESTABLISHMENT,

And therefore has supplied a want long felt, especially in the Undertaking Line.

COFFINS,

CASKETS,

SHROUDS,

and all

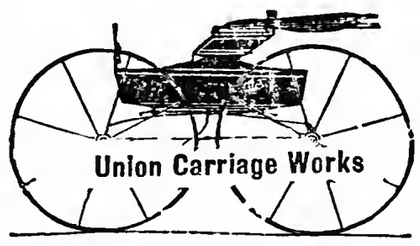
FUNERAL FURNISHINGS,

supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse

for hire at moderate rates.

FURNITURE!



From the Common to the

Best and Latest Styles,

in everything in the line.

Call and see for yourselves.

ROBT. ASKIN.

Union Carriage Works.

All work manufactured from

FIRST CLASS MATERIAL

In the Lateat and Best Improved Style, and finished with English Varnish.

Painting & Trimming Rigs

will receive prompt attention.

All Repairs executed in the shortest possible time consistent with good workmanship.

GOOD WORK A SPECIALITY.

Remember the Shop, opposite the Cheapside

D. J. SHANAHAN,

Proprietor.

Markdale, Dec. 2nd, 1881. 64.

HAIR CUTTING AND SHAVING

By T. D. Smith,

Razors, Straps, and Shaving Brushes for sale. Razors sharpened.

☞ Orders filled for Tomb Stones.

STARTLING DISCOVERY!

LOST MANHOOD RESTORED.

A victim of youthful imprudence causing Premature Decay, Nervous Debility, Lost Manhood, etc., having tried in vain every known remedy, has discovered a simple self cure, which he will send FREE to his fellow-sufferers, address J. H. REEVES, 43 Chatham St., N. Y.

$66 a week in your own town: $5 outfit free. No risk. Everything new. Capital not required. We will furnish you everything. Many are making fortunes. Ladies make as much as men, and boys and girls make great pay. Reader, if you want a business at which you can make great pay all the time you work, write for particulars to H. HALLETT & Co., Portland, Maine. 71-126

TEACHER WANTED.

MARRIED OR SINGLE—MARRIED man preferred—for School Section No, 4, Glenelg, holding second-class certificate. Duties to commence first of the new year. Apply stating salary, to

THOMAS TOWNSEND,

Glascott P. O.

Glascott, Nov. 1st 1882, 112-4t

WARNING!

There is great danger of taking cold from wet feet. If you want to Guard Against Sickness!

Keep your feet dry and warm by procuring your

BOOTS!

—FROM—

KAY & THOMAS.

Satisfaction Guaranteed. Medicated Cork Soles, all sizes, kept on hand. Remember the place opposite the new STANDARD Office. 49

Best business now before the public. You can make money faster at work for us than at anything else. Capital not needed. We will start you. $12 a day and upwards made at home by the industrious. Men, women, boys and girls wanted everywhere to work for us. Now is the time. You can work in spare time only or give your whole time to the business. You can live at home and do the work. No other business will pay you nearly as well. No one can fail to make enormous pay by engaging at once. Costly outfit and terms free. Money made fast, easily and honorably. Address TRUE & Co., Augusta, Maine. 71-126

REST AND COMFORT TO THE SUFFERING

Brown's Household Panacea has no equal for relieving pain, both internal and external. It cures pain in the Side, Back or Bowels, Sore Throat, Rheumatism, Toothache, Lumbago and any kind of a Pain or Ache. "It will most surely quicken the Blood and heal, as its acting power is wonderful." "Brown's Household Panacea," being acknowledged as the great Pain Reliever, and of double the strength of any other Elixer or Liniment in the world, should be in every family handy for use when wanted "as it really is the best remedy in the world for Cramps in the Stomach, and Pains and Aches of all kinds," and is for sale by all Druggists at 25 cents a bottle. 75-127

EARS FOR THE MILLION

FOO CHOO'S BALSAM OF SHARK'S OIL positively Restores the Hearing, and is the Only Absolute Cure for Deafness known. This Oil is abstracted from peculiar species of small White Shark, caught in the Yellow Sea, known as CARCHARODON RONDELETII. Every Chinese fisherman knows it. Its virtues as a restorative of hearing were discovered by a Buddhist Priest were discovered about the year 1410. Its cures were so numerous, and many so seemingly miraculous, that the remedy was officially proclaimed over the entire Empire. Its use became so universal, that for over 300 years no Deafness has existed among the Chinese people. Sent, charges prepaid, to any address at $1.00 per bottle.

Hear what the Deaf say:

It has performed a miracle in my case.

I have no unearthly noises in my head, and hear much better.

I have been greatly benefited.

My deafness helped a great deal—think another bottle will cure me.

Its virtues are unquestionable and its curative character absolute, as the writer can personally testify, both from experience and observation. Write at once to Haylock and Jenney, 7 Dey Street, New York, enclosing $1 and you will receive by return a remedy that will enable you to hear like anybody else, and whose curative effects will be permanent. You will never regret doing so."—EDITOR OF MERCANTILE REVIEW.

☞To avoid loss in the mails, please send money by Registered Letter.

Only imported by HAYLOCK & JENNEY, late Haylock & Co.,

Sole Agents for America. 7 DEY ST NEW YORK 93-145.

Wm. Lucas & Co.,

BANKERS,

Money Loaned

IN large or small amounts, at all times, on good endorsed notes, or on collateral security.

INTEREST AT 6 PER CENT.

Allowed on Savings Deposits.

☞Drafts issued and Collections made on points, at lowest rates.

W.M. LUCAS, Manager.

September 23, 1880. 2-ly

JOHN NOBLE,

MARKDALE.

GENER'L BLACKSMITH

HORSE SHOEING

CATTLE FAIRS.

Markdale, Saturday, Dec. 9th.
Flesherton, Monday, " 11th.
Priceville, Tuesday, " 12th.
Dundalk, " " "

COUNCIL MEETINGS.

Artemesia, Monday, 4th December.
Euphrasia, Friday, 1st " Glenelg, Monday, 11th " Holland, Tuesday, 12th "

FROM WOLSELEY, N. W. T.

The following is gleaned from a letter from G. L. Dodds which was too lengthy to give in full. Mr. Dodds keeps a provision and general store at Wolseley, 300 miles west of Winnipeg, between Fort Ellis and Qu-Appelle. They have a daily mail, several stores, and prospects for a smart town. The place is healthy and water good. A large number of good settlers are in that district. The following are some of the market prices: Flour, $3.50 per hundred; Oats, per bushel, $1; Hay, per ton, $25 to $30; Oat Meal, 8 cents per pound; Sugar, 6 lbs. for $1: There are several good points for capitalists on the C. P. R. to invest in.

TERRIBLE FATALITY IN ARTHUR.

A well known citizen acknowledges the killing of thirteen of his neighbours. Our readers will be shocked at learning that a person named Charles McLean of this village conceived the idea of putting an end to some petty annoyances which he was in the habit of receiving from some of his neighbours, by causing their death. It appears that the more he dwelt on the horrible subject the firmer he became in his resolve; and he finally took the first step by procuring the instrument of death from W. F. Johnston, hardware merchant. His victims not having the slightest intimation of his purpose, and being in very indigent circumstances accepted his invitation to partake of some refreshments, and were therefore more easily lured into the very jaws of death. The terrible nature of their death can only be realized by the fact that after partaking of the proffered refreshment they were unconsciously transferred to a place of confinement in which they were compelled to remain until the next day, when they were taken separately, regardless of age or sex, and cruelly clubbed to death. They were mice.

ANSWER THIS QUESTION.

Why do so many people we see around us, seem to prefer to suffer and be made miserable by Indigestion, Constipation, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, Coming up of the Food, Yellow Skin, when for 75 cts., we will sell them Shiloh's Vitalizer, guaranteed to cure them. Sold by Wm. Brown's General Store Markdale.

BURGLARIES.—We observe that there are a large number of burglars operating in Canada just now. Toronto, Galt, Tottenham, Beamsville, &c., have been visited and a large amount of money obtained. These are professional burglars, and it will be well for the people of this town to be careful, as we may also receive a visit. We give this notice for the benefit of others as burglars are too wise to make any attempt to rob a printing office. He knows well that there is no money to be had there.

SHILOH'S CATARRH REMEDY.

A marvelous cure for Catarrh, Diphtheria, Canker mouth, and Head Ache. With each bottle there is an ingenious nasal Injector for the more successful treatment of these complaints without extra charge. Price 50c. Sold by Wm. Brown's General Store Markdale.

PATENTS.

We continue to act as solicitors for patents, caveats, trade-marks, copyrights, etc., for the United States, and to obtain patents in Canada, England, France, Germany, and all other countries. Thirty-six years' practice.

No charge for examination of models or drawings. Advice by mail free.

Patents obtained through us are noticed in the Scientific American, which has the largest circulation, and is the most influential newspaper of its kind published in the world. The advantages of such a notice every patentee understands.

This large and splendidly illustrated paper is published weekly at $3.20 a year, and it is admitted to be the best paper devoted to science, mechanics, inventions, engineering works, and other departments of industrial progress, published in any country. Single copies by mail, 10 cents. Sold by all newsdealers.

Address, Munn & Co., publishers of Scientific American, 261 Broadway, New York.

Her Future.

Oh, what will you do, my little girl,
And what will you do, my sweetness,
When woman's life shall come to you,
With all its grand completeness?

I cannot tell you, my father dear,
And indeed I often wonder;
For each of the married friends I know
Has made a distressing blunder.

You need not marry at all, sweet love,
And you need not marry, my dear one;
Yet still you may make that life of yours
A rounded, complete, and clear one.

No, no, my father, your words are wrong;
There still would be something lacking;
A weary and painful sense of loss.
My brain and heart would be racking.

But if you should marry, my darling child,
My innocent, tender, and glad one,
And make a mistake, as so many do,
Your life would be such a sad one!

I think, and I think, my father dear,
That true love is never mistaken;
Though heavy its fetters may be, like lead,
Like down they are lightly shaken.

Whatever may fall, my father dear,
True love is ever victorious;
And sad and bitter though life may be,
To live and to love is glorious.

I need not have asked you, my little girl,
Of your woman's hope hereafter,
For I see that your heart is already full
Of a woman's tears and laughter.

EDWARD WILLETT.

HIS SACRIFICE:

OR

For Love of Her.

CHAPTER III.—[CONTINUED.]

Simple little Muriel, wiser in her inexperience than was Russel Anthon in his love or her father in his worldly wisdom!

Mr. Trowbridge laughed.

"What a fanciful little girl you are, Muriel," he said. "I do not know that Russel Anthon is particularly high-minded, but I do know that he is a noble fellow, and would make you a perfectly devoted husband."

The girl shivered.

"I don't think he will ever be my husband," she murmured.

"Muriel!" There was a ring of bitter disappointment in Graham Trowbridge's voice. "Then you do not like him?"

She clasped her small hands tightly together, her eyes growing dark with excitement.

"That is not so, papa," she said passionately. "I do like Mr. Anthon, like him better than any gentleman I have ever met; but it seems to me a woman should do more than like the man she would marry."

It seemed so to Mr. Trowbridge, so he did not attempt to argue the question, he only said, sorrowfully.

"I see no reason why you should not love Russel Anthon; can't you try and love him, Muriel? I do not think you would find it a very difficult matter; you have never thought of it, have you? that is what makes it seem so strange."

"No," she answered truthfully, "I have never thought of loving him;" then almost sadly, "Is it your wish that I should marry him, papa?"

"My dearest wish," her father said earnestly, and then drawing her into his arms, he talked long and seriously, speaking in the highest terms of Russel Anthon, telling her how dearly he loved her, and how terribly he would feel if she should send him word she could not be his wife. Very eloquently Mr. Trowbridge pleaded Russel Anthon's suit, and Muriel listened, her face very thoughtful.

"And now, my darling," he said, by way of conclusion, "don't you think that in time, perhaps in a very short time you will learn to love Mr. Anthon very dearly?"

"It may be," murmured Muriel; "at all events, papa, since both you and he so much desire it, I will try."

"And may I tell him, Muriel, that some day you will be his wife?"

She looked at him a few moments with a helpless, perplexed expression in her eyes.

"Papa," she said, at last, "there is no one in the world I like better, honor and respect more, than I do Mr. Anthon; perhaps, as you say, there may be more love for him deep down in my heart than I myself am aware of. I have perfect confidence in him, I am always happy with him, I miss him when he is away; yet for all that I know I do not love him, as I have thought I would love somebody. I want you to tell him all this, and if he is satisfied, if he thinks he can be content with what I can give him, I am willing to marry him, and I will try to be a faithful, loving wife."

Greatly relieved, Mr. Trowbridge kissed her warmly.

"My own dear little girl," he said "Yes, I will tell him. Hark! there comes mamma. Shall we tell her to-night?"

"Oh, of course," said Muriel.

If gentle Mrs. Trowbridge was surprised, she was also very much pleased when she heard the news. She had always liked Russel Anthon—they were few indeed, those who had met him and did not like him—and winding her arms around Muriel, she told her that she had always hoped this which had happened would come to pass.

So sitting there, Muriel listened dreamily, while her parents spoke of her future, which seemed so bright; and a thrill of pride went through her as remembering the position Russel Anthon occupied in society, the attention that was always paid him, she thought, "he loves me, little Muriel Trowbridge."

She stood for a long time in one of the windows of her room that night looking out into the darkness, and thinking as she had never thought before in all her short, happy life.

"I know I am not half good enough for him," she thought; "but if I marry him, I will try, oh, so hard, to make him happy."

Russel Anthon, too, watched the stars from his window that night—watched them with eyes that were very wistful.

"How I love her," he said to himself, "dear little Muriel; and if she will give herself to me, I will strive to make her life a bright, happy one, free from every cloud of sorrow and care. I wonder if many men love women as I love her. Nothing would be too much for me to do for her; I think for Muriel's sake I would give up everything in the world."

Would the time ever come when Russel Anthon's love would be put to the test? Ah, only the future could show, the mysterious future that looms so darkly before us all, that our weak, short-sighted earthly eyes cannot pierce its heavy, dusky shadows. Two years previous, the Trowbridges, stopping at one of the many quaint little inns that are to be found in Switzerland, had met for the first time Russel Anthon; he happened to be travelling in the same direction as they were, and so joined the party to which he had proved a pleasant acquisition. In a very short time the acquaintance grew into friendship, from that into a warm intimacy. He wandered with them over Europe, they came home together on the same steamer, and from that time scarcely a week had ever passed that Russel had not dined at least once at Mr. Trowbridge's table or spent an evening in his parlors. They knew that he belonged to a proud, rich old Maryland family, that his parents were dead, that he had very few near or dear relatives; more than that, they neither knew, nor cared to know, if there had been any dark, unclean places in Russel Anthon's private life. Mr. Trowbridge's keen eyes would long since have discovered them.

The following morning dawned as clear and cold as the preceding night had been, and when shortly after ten o'clock Russel Anthon entered Mr. Trowbridge's well furnished private office, he found that gentleman waiting for him.

He had been waiting some time, and while he had waited he had concluded that under the circumstances it would be just as well to omit the proviso Muriel had stipulated.

"For what would be the use of telling Anthon all that?" he said to himself, by way of appeasing his own conscience, which was muttering rather unpleasantly. "All he wants to know is whether or not Muriel will be his wife. She was excited last night and did not know very clearly what she was saying. Of course she will love him. I dare say in a week's time she will think she could not live without him. It will only make him feel badly, and it won't affect her one way or the other. Muriel is a little sentimental and romantic—all girls her age are—and they think they sacrifice some of their maiden modesty if they confess to loving a man, but they soon get over that. No, I shall not say anything about it. I shall simply tell Anthon, Muriel's answer is yes."

So, having quieted his conscience, Graham Trowbridge told Russel Anthon, in a few words, that which brought a flush of happiness over his face, a look of great joy into his eyes.

He went that afternoon to see Muriel, and when she came shyly down into the parlor, her lovely eyes downcast, he drew her into his arms, saying only:

"My own little Muriel."

And, feeling those strong arms around her, a sense of perfect security stole over Muriel such as she had never known before, and unconsciously she nestled closer to him as she thought:

"Papa was right; it will not be hard to learn to love him dearly."

She went with him into the hall when he rose to go, and, standing in the open doorway, watched him go down the stone steps and away from the house with proud eyes—watched the tall, upright figure until it was out of sight; then she went back to the parlor, and, sinking down into a low chair, sat looking at the magnificent diamond that blazed, star-like, in the heavy golden band he had slipped upon her finger.

"Leo," she said, solemnly, looking down at her dog who had followed her into the room, and lay stretched out on a Turkish rug at her feet, "Leo, I am going to marry Mr. Anthon; I am going to be his wife, and, Leo, I am not one bit sorry."

And Leo gave a short bark, as though he approved of what his little mistress had said.

Society was very much surprised when it was announced that Muriel Trowbridge was engaged to Russel Anthon—had won the heart which so many women had tried in vain to win.

The remainder of the winter passed swiftly and happily to Muriel; surrounded on every side by love and tenderness, no thought of care or sorrow entered her mind; she did not trouble herself as to whether she loved her betrothed husband as he deserved to be loved; she was content that he loved her. The shadows entirely disappeared from Graham Trowbridge's face; gladly and willingly had Russel Anthon lent the money he required, saying, "I don't want you to thank me, Mr. Trowbridge, you know it is a pleasure for me to do anything I can for you; I would give you half my fortune if you desired it, and that would be nothing compared to the precious thing you gave me."

Early in the pleasant month of June Muriel Trowbridge and Russel Anthon were married: and certainly no woman's future ever looked brighter or more beautiful than did Muriel Anthon's on her wedding-day.

CHAPTER IV.

A dreary, gloomy March afternoon. All day the rain has fallen steadily from the leaden-hued clouds that hang low over the city; the wind is blowing furiously—a genuine March gale—and it hurries through the streets, now moaning and sobbing mournfully, now shrieking as if in mad despair, dashing the rain in slanting lines against the window-panes, and threatening with utter destruction the gilded signs in front of the stores, which creak dismally as it sweeps by them.

The large front room on the second floor of the house which was Muriel Anthon's wedding present from her husband, is fitted up half as library, half as sitting-room, a cheerful pretty room, with, besides its other furniture, an upright piano in one corner, which Muriel uses far more than she does the magnificent Steinway grand down stairs in the parlor, a well-fitted book-case in another, wherein may be found all Mr. Anthon's favorite authors, and a crimson-covered library-table in the centre, a table always strewn with the popular monthly magazines and the daily papers. At this table Russel Anthon sits this gloomy afternoon, busily writing, looking up now and then from his paper, as a sudden gush of wind dashes against the window-panes with such violence, that it is a source of wonderment that the huge sheets of glass can withstand the furious assaults that are constantly being made upon them.

Nearly a year has passed since that sunshiny June day when Russel Anthon and Muriel Trowbridge took each other for better for worse, until death should part them; not quite a year, yet twelve months ago there was not the sorrowful look upon Russel Anthon's face that there is to-day.

No man ever entered into married life with a happier heart, with brighter hopes, than he did, no man ever took upon himself the vows of matrimony with a fuller sense of their sacredness and solemnity, their purity and holiness than he had done. For a month or so his dreams of happiness had been realized, then, slowly, but ah, with what terrible certainty, the truth began to force its way upon him—his Muriel, the beautiful young wife he idolized, for whose dear sake he would have lain down his life without a murmur, did not love him as he loved her, as he had thought she did love him when he married her. You ask how did Muriel show her husband that her love for him had in it nothing of the depth, and strength, and intensity which made his love for her the grandly noble passion it was? In a thousand ways she showed it; inexperienced in the ways of the world, accustomed from her childhood to act out her feelings, she all unconsciously laid bare her own heart before him. The little things she did so many times a day that hurt him cruelly, she did ignorantly and innocently, without a thought to wound him. If any one had said to her, "Muriel Anthon, you don't love your husband," she would have opened her lovely eyes very wide, and answered, "Why, of course I love him:" and she would have spoken truly; she did love him, though her love for him in comparison to his love for her, was as the light of one small star compared to the glory of the full, round moon. Deep in her heart Muriel knew she felt bored and listless when she was alone with her husband, that his earnest conversations wearied her inexpressibly, that she found herself wishing many times that he was not quite so high-minded; and when she mentally acknowledged it with a pang of self-reproach, as she did very often, she always tried to excuse herself by thinking, "I knew I was not half good enough for him; that I did not love him as he deserved to be loved, but so long as he knew it too, and knowing it, was willing to take me, I don't see how I am to blame for it."

Before their marriage Russel had thought her restlessness, when sometimes he slipped his arms around her, the passive manner in which she accepted his kisses, was only because of her maiden delicacy, but after they were man and wife, he found, to his sorrowful surprise, that it was just the same; when with his heart throbbing with love for her, he would fold her in his arms, she would draw herself away from him, saying, with a little pout, "I wish you would not do that Russel, you muss me all up." So, after having been repulsed many times, he learned his lesson and even when he yearned to fold his wife to his heart, to feel her head upon his breast, he would sit in silence, watching with wistful eyes the daintylittle figure that seemed so much more comfortable lying among the velvet cushions of the low couch, which was Muriel's favorite lounging-place than he did in his arms. If Russel Anthon had been less sensitive than he was, if he had been more of the earth earthy, it would have been better for them both; Muriel would have yielded if her husband had laid siege to her heart with more violence and passion; as it was, they had drifted apart. Do you wonder now at the sorrowful look that has come upon Russel Anthon's face since his marriage?

"There, that is finished," he murmurs, as having written the last words, he lays his pen down on the table and leans back almost wearily in his chair. "Five o'clock!" as the little French clock on the mantel chimes out the hour. "I thought it was later than that, it has been such a long, dreary day; how it rains, and how the wind blows."

With something like a sigh, he draws his chair closer to the fire, that burns brightly in the grate, and, taking a cigar from his cigar-case, is about to light it when there is a knock at the door.

"Come in," he says, pausing with the match in his hand. "Ah, Mary," as the door opens to admit one of the servants, "a letter for me?"

"Yes, sir," giving him a letter as she speaks, "the postman has just brought it."

He rises from his chair, lays the cigar and the match upon the mantel-piece, and with the letter in his hand, walks toward the window. As the servant turns to leave the room, he asks,

"Mary, do you know whether Mrs. Anthon is in her boudoir?"

"She's not, sir; she is in her room dressing. She rang for Annette a few moments ago sir.'

"Very well."

The door closes after the girl; Russel Anthon is alone again. Although it is only five o'clock, the room is beginning to fill with the dusky shadows of the approaching night. It will be a dark night, the clouds are settling lower over the city, the rain still falls unceasingly; if anything the wind is rising. Sweeping aside the lace curtains, Mr. Anthon steps into the embrasure of the window, and then looks down with some curiosity at the letter he holds in his hand. It is a very different looking letter from those he generally receives; the envelope is of coarse thick paper, and it is soiled and crumpled though it has passed through many hands; the address is scrawled rather than written the letters are instinct and uncertain, they look as if the hand that had formed them had been a weak and trembling one; above all, it bears as postmark the name of a Mexican city.

A puzzled, perplexed expression settles upon Russel Anthon's face, as having studied the envelope to no purpose, he says to himself.

"I wonder who my Mexican correspondent is? I was not aware that I had any friends in that charming country." Then tearing it open, he takes out the sheet of paper it incloses, and begins to read its closely written contents. Even at the first few words the puzzled, curious look upon his face, gives way to one of blank astonishment, bordering closely upon horror; the astonishment fades and goes out, but the horror remains, growing deeper, more intense as Russel Anthon's eyes travel rapidly down the pages, covered so closely with the same uncertain, weak-looking letters that characterize the writing upon the envelope; at last he has read all, every word of that strange letter. The shadows have deepened in the room; in the grim, gray white his face looks white, almost haggard, as, stepping out of the embrasure of the window he sinks heavily down into a chair.

"My God!" he mutters, "can it be true? It does not seem as though it could be possible—that the letter explains it all; nevertheless it seems as if the dead had risen out of their graves, only to go back again: perhaps, dangerously ill when that letter was written; dying, perhaps—now dead, may be, before I can gee there. I must go. How can I resist that pitiful appeal, dying amongst strangers in a foreign land—ah, yes, I must go. and yet, how can I leave Muriel?"

At the bare thought of leaving her every nerve in his body quivers with pain, yet the written words he has just read rings strangely in his ears, "For the sake of the love you once bore me, come to me, Russel, before I die." It seems as though the wind moaned them out as it swept by the windows.

Low and lower his head droops upon his hands, and while the gloomy night shadows deepen and darken in the room, he sits there motionless. He does not heed the sobbing of the wind, the patter of the rain, the crackle of the fire in the grate, whose bright glow alone lights up the room; heavy reverie has fallen upon him, his thoughts are wandering back over the past.

One—two—three—four—five—six.

The silvery strokes sound clearly through the silent room, yet he does not raise his head. Five minutes slip by, then the door is pushed wide open, there is a rustle of silk, the faint odor of a delicately sweet perfume, a clear, ringing laugh, and a musical voice rings merrily:

"Why, Russel, what are you sitting here alone in the dark for? It is surely not possible that you are moping, yet it looks very much like it. Do you know dinner will be ready in a few minutes!

All the time she has been talking Muriel has been busy; she has lighted the argand burner and two or three gas jets, has pulled down the shades and arranged the curtains, and when she has finished the room is bright and brilliant, and the black shadows have taken to themselves wings and flown away. Although she is not aware of it, Muriel herself contributes largely to the general brightness the room has gained since she entered it; in her rich dinner dress, of wine colored silk and velvet, diamonds flashing in her small ears and upon her busy little hands, her wavy hair gleaming red gold as the gaslight falls upon it, she seems to be the center from which emanates all the brilliancy in the room. She has changed but little since her marriage; the pretty figure is a trifle fuller, its soft curves more richly rounded, and the loose, heavy curls that used to fall upon her shoulders are gathered up in a shining mass low at the back of the small head; other than she looks exactly the same as she did that January night, when, sitting at her father's feet in the library at home, she told him eagles did not mate with little brown thrushes.

"Come, Russel, she says, as a clear-toned bell sounds through the house: "there is the dinner-bell. Come!"

Very lovingly his eyes rest upon her.

"I will not tell her until after dinner," he thinks to himself as he follows her along the hall. As they go down the broad staircase together, he throws his arm about her.

"You love me, don't you, Muriel?" he whispers, pleadingly.

She looks at him a little surprised, he seldom speaks like that.

"Why, of course I love you," patting his hand softly by way of emphasis; "and you know I do. Come, let us hurry down to dinner. I am awfully hungry. It seems like an age since luncheon."

Though he helps himself to a little of nearly everything that is on the table, scarcely a mouthful passes Russel Anthon's lips. But Muriel does not notice it; busy with her own dinner, she talks and laughs in her pretty way, alternately scolding and praising the cook, until the meal is completed.

"Muriel," he says, as they leave the dining-room, "come up stairs into the sitting-room with me; I have something to tell you."

"Something important?" she asks; then, as she looks into his grave, and face, she adds, quickly: "Yes, it is important; I see it in your eyes."

He sighs heavily.

"Yes, it is of the utmost importance," he murmurs.

As soon as they are in the sitting-room Muriel closes the door, and, hurrying to her husband's side, lays one hand upon his arm.

"Tell me now, Russel," she says, anxiously. "Is it something concerning you?"

"It is something concerning a part of my life of which you know nothing, my darling," he answers, as he leads her to a small couch and seats himself by her side. "It is a strange, sad story, Muriel, that which I am about to tell you."

And sitting beside him, Muriel listens to the story which, but for the letter that had come that day to her husband—the letter with the Mexican postmark—she would have never heard.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

The New Red Riding Hood.

The subject of this sketch was a little girl, who derived her odd name wearing on her head the sleeve of one father's old red flannel shirts. She independent little piece, and when why her mother didn't buy her a new said she would "just sleeve wear had on." When one of the neighbor ren sneeringly said, "Your pa gets Little Red Riding Hood responded, pa would too, but he can't afford it; when the next-door ill-naturedly said mother takes in washing," Little Red ing Hood answered, "She don't take when your mother gets the first the line."

It will be seen from these incidents her life that, though little read, she posted, and the confidence with which mother dispatched her to carry cod down into Stoora Township to her sick mother is easily understood.

Holding the lead dime which her had given her for car fare tightly hand Little Red Riding Hood started street car, and, having a few minutes wait improved the opportunity by seeing a howl that attracted the attention of nevolent old gentleman, to whom she ed her cause for grief. She was going said, to her poor, sick grandmother had just been put off a car because her was counterfeit. The gentleman gave quarter and put her on the next car conductor in due time called upon Red Riding Hood for a fare, when duced the lead dime. "This is counterfeit," said the conductor, whereat Riding fell to sobbing as if her heart would the conductor passed her, an old lady her a dime, and a boy shared some bread with her. Arrived near her mother's house Little Red Riding Hood down and ate the codfish balls; bought some milk from a drunken man upon whom she passed the counterfeit, receiving from him sixteen cents in change after which she proceeded to her mother's and stayed with her for weeks.

In contrasting this story with the Little Red Riding Hood the reader bear in mind the disadvantage under labored under in having to be her own a role which she sustained with signal There does not appear to be anything to add, except that the town is full of kind of Little Red Riding Hoods.—Cincinnati Saturday Night.

Shut Out the Cold.

The temperature of the living animal cannot vary greatly, and therefore when weather grows colder there is an increased demand for food to be consumed in order to keep up the natural heat. A low temperature is an expensive condition, as every farmer has wintered his stock well knows. There are two general methods of overcoming the wearing or exhausting effects of severe cold weather; giving the animals an abundance of rich and palatable, heat-forming food, or securing them from exposure in warm and comfortable stables. A happy combination of these two methods is the one to be provided by every stock raiser who looks to the comfort of his animals and their profitableness.

If stables generally could be warmed by stoves, there is no doubt that a saving in the amount of fodder would result. Much could be done in this direction by keeping the animals in well-built stables, and free from all chilling currents of frost-laden air. The writer has in mind a stable, where a row of milch cows suffered, almost to the point of freezing, on many winter nights because the stable was full of large cracks in the doors only partly shut out the cold snows. A few hours of patching the flooring, and doors, with very little cost for lumber, would have made its goodness evident within a single week at the room.

A cow is not at her best when she shiver with the cold and have her rough covered with the frost and snow of a winter night. Looked at in simply the uniary light, this method of keeping stock does not bring the best returns. There is no farmer who, being able to own a few cows or a flock of sheep, can afford not to them well. He may let them eat from the stack of the best hay that is but if they have no more shelter than stack affords, he may come to the conclusion common to all bad agricultural practices farming does not pay. Let this be in season for all those who may profit. Stop the cracks in the stables, and save for your animals and money for you. Take special care not to have the farm exposed to the chilling winter blasts. Shut out the cold.

A Baby Killed by a Bear.

One of the eight little children be to the gang of Arab gypsies was killed a large half-starved black bear at the sies' camp, twenty miles from here. ker's "Human and Comparative (New Sydenham Society's ii., 255. I find the following: The different colors presented depend chiefly on the pigment cells hair cells, that either exist of granules, or is equably diffused color of the hair also depends on les of air that either occur between cal scales and the medullary found in their interior."

this is so, and the observation an are correct, this sudden blanching of the hair in comparatively young e to an abnormal production of les of air which are always present ith regard to J. H. L. A.'s experiment blanching of Marie Antoinette's single night, I cannot admit it possible. Marie Antoinette was the time of her death. and her light brown hair. It is rare, ase of men, for hair of this color gray at so early an age, and undoubtedly retains its abundance color much longer than that of most supposing Marie Antoinette had hair, and were no longer able dye, neither one night or a few its would be sufficient to restore ral gray upon the surface. Let consult any competent hair- he will be told the same thing. is no longer applied, the hair resumes ral color at the roots only, and rable time would elapse before would be long enough for their

The Bey Leaves 365 Widows.

A large number of widows have been made in Tunis by the death of the Bey. The deceased potentate was not a very remarkable person in history, and would have been but little heard of but for the action of the French Government with regard to Tunis. When the French bombarded and threatened his capital the unfortunate monarch was compelled by M. Roustin to sign a treaty which left him as completely in the power of the French as the Khedive is now in that of the English. He was, however, the most married man in the world, the number of spouses who now lament his loss being about equal to the days of the year.

French finance is in a plight very satisfactory to Prince Bismarck. The Paris correspondent of the London Times writes: "It is easy to see the ruin that the crisis of last year has left behind it. The Bourse is comparatively empty. A few groups stand on the steps talking of anything but business. Inside it is the same story." Rents have for two years been declining while so many foreign securities have been rising.

An enormous bunch of grapes, cut enclosed in a glass case, was shown in Michigan by a peddler, who had for sprouts from what he said was a vine the same variety. The exhibit was length discovered to be waxwork.

Two of Them.

farm house porch the farmer sat his daughter having a cosey chat was his only child, and he ght her as fair as a girl could be.
bit jealous the old man grew,
fancied any might come to woo;
me pet lamb and her loving care
ished with nobody else to share.

re should be two of you, child," re should be two to welcome me
I come home from the field at night would make the old home bright.
e's neighbor Gray, with his child
e glad together. Had I one more, ud old father I'd be, my dear,
two good children to greet me here by the gate, 'neath the old elm tree ld waited alone; and she whom he waited his love call hear on either cheek the blushes stirred her," she cried. and knelt her down kissed the hand that was old and her, there may be two if you will ll—your only daughter still.

to welcome you home at night,
to make the old man bright;
somebody else." "I see."
the farmer; "and who may somet
he dimples on Bessie's cheek, played with the blushes at hide a from his gaze she turned her hea of neighbor Gray's children, sir,

" said the farmer: "make it plai
Susan, Alice, or Mary Jane?"
her kiss on the aged hand,
lp the farmer to understand—
" said the farmer; "Yes, I see;
o for yourself, and one for me."
Bessie said, "There can be but one e and for my heart till life is done

R TURNING SUDDENLY

ussion of a Singular Phenomenon
he part Hair Dyes Have P oms Noted Metamorphoses.

e following is from Notes and rather hard to be lugged in a di st one's will; but such is the c ow. I never wrote one syllab subject of this note, and n, jumbling two notes together rites as if I had. and tells me physician, I know that a retion," etc. I am a physici tedly, though I have long ice, but I do not know, and I d to know, that a hair is a se as such "without any real vitali
I look upon bile, saliva, tions or excretions. but I cons a growth, and as such I consid dowed with real vitality, just e skin is, of which it is, perha ails, but another form. The ou f a hair, like the outer layers (cuticle or scarf skin). and like t ree (for I see considerable resem een the trunk of a tree and th no doubt but comparatively litt them, but this is not the ca layers. I altogether demur
's dictum that a hair has not t get rid of the coloring matter ited in its substance. If so, never begin to get gray at t yet everybody almost who h at middle age, must have ips getting gray first, and ently noticed it myself upon for hair turning suddenly whi bility of its doing so is certai ally admitted by medical m paid attention to the subject.

knew a lady (a French woman ne that the hair of one side of h e gray in a single night on th the death of her husband, wh ed suddenly and under peculia ng circumstances; and when her, though years had ela nce in color between both si tanding that both were then gr most marked. And my wife h n an almost precisely similar c r's wife was the first to see one nd's ricks on fire. The shock and very shortly afterward been the next morning) she no white band running across one ead. My wife did not see years afterward; still then 30, and her hair was p with the exception of the brea

y years ago I remember readi an medical magaziue a paper by hysician, in which he described which had come under his own e had gone further; he had ed the hairs under the microsco d found that the coloring mat here, but that a quantity of bu ad introduced themselves into t ers of the hair, and produced nce of whiteness. Yet, thou ness was thus really due to wh been expected to be only a te
, the whiteness persisted unti ng as the cases remained under tion, and seemed likely to be
It seems that a certain am les of air are always present and that the color of the hair, xtent, depends upon them.
ker's "Human and Comparative " (New Sydenham Society's ii., 255. I find the following:
he different colors presented epend chiefly on the pigment c e hair cells, that either exist of granules, or is equably diffu olor of the hair also depends o les of air that either occur betw al scales and the medullary ound in their interior."
his is so, and the observation an are correct, this sudden bl e hair in comparatively young e to an abnormal production les of air which are always pre ith regard to J. H. L. A.'s exp e blanching of Marie Antoinet single night, I cannot admit i possible. Marie Antoinette w the time of her death. and r light brown hair. It is rare, ase of men, for hair of this col gray at so early an age, and undoubtedly retains its abunda olor much longer than that of m supposing Marie Antoinette h air, and were no longer able dye, neither one night or a ts would be sufficient to res ral gray upon the surface. Le consult any competent hair-he will be told the same thing.
is no longer applied, the hair re ral color at the roots only, and rable time would elapse before would be long enough for their

Two of Them.

e farm house porch the farmer sat,
h his daughter having a cosey chat,
was his only child, and he ught her as fair as a girl could be.
re bit jealous the old man grew,
e fancied any might come to woo;
one pet lamb and her loving care
ished with nobody else to share.

ere should be two of you, child," said he—ere should be two to welcome me en I come home from the field at night;
would make the old home bright.
's neighbor Gray, with his children four,
e glad together. Had I one more,
ood old father I'd be, my dear,
two good children to greet me here."

by the gate, 'neath the old elm tree, d waited alone; and she whom he waited his love call heard, n either cheek the blushes stirred.
her," she cried, and knelt her down, ssed the hand that was old and brown—ther, there may be two if you will your only daughter still.

to welcome you home at night,
to make the old man bright;
somebody else." "I see."
the farmer; "and who may somebody be!
the dimples on Bessie's cheek, aired with the blushes at hide and seek!
from his gaze she turned her head—of neighbor Gray's children, sir," she said

," said the farmer; "make it plain,
Susan, Alice, or Mary Jane?"
her kiss on the aged hand, e the farmer to understand—the farmer; "Yes, I see;
," said the farmer; "one for me,
two for yourself, and one for me," Bessie said. "There can be but one and for my heart till life is done."

R TURNING SUDDENLY WHITE.

ussion of a Singular Phenomenon—
e part Hair Dyes Have Borne in me Noted Metamorphoses.

llowing is from Notes and Queries:
atter hard to be lugged in a discussion ce as well; but such is the case with
w. I never wrote one syllable about ject of this note, and yet Mr.
umbling two notes together (pp. 85, ntences as if I had, and tells me that, bea physician, I know that a hair is a retion," etc. I am a physician, unedly, though I have long ceased to e, but I do not know, and I do not in-know, that a hair is a secretion, as such "without any real vitality of its I look upon bile, saliva, etc., as ucts or excretions, but I consider hair growth, and as such I consider it to owed with real vitality, just as much skin is, of which it is, perhaps, like , but another form. The outer lay-f hair, like the outer layers of the uticle or scarf skin), and like the bark ree for I see considerable resemblance ween the trunk of a tree and the hair), no doubt but comparatively little vitalream, but this is not the case with ayers. I altogether demur to Mr.
ditum that a hair has not the powental of the coloring matter already ed in its substance. If so, a hair never begin to get gray at the tip, g everybody almost who have ar-middle age, must have noticed getting gray first, and I have rly noticed it myself upon my own hair turning suddenly white—the ity of its doing so is certainly not ly admitted by medical men who e attention to the subject. I, my-ew a lady (a French woman), who that the hair of one side of her head gray in a single night on the occathe death of her husband, which had suddenly and under peculiarly dis-circumstances; and when I first her, though years had elapsed, the e in color between both sides, notnding that both were then gray, was ost marked. And my wife has also an almost precisely similar case. A s wife was the first to see one of her

's ricks on fire. The shock was inand very shortly afterward (it may the next morning) she noticed a white band running across one side of head. My wife did not see her till years afterward: still then she was
, and her hair was perfectly with the exception of the broad white y years ago I remember reading in a n medical magazine a paper by a Ger-hysician, in which he described similar which had come under his own notice.

e had gone further; he had also ex-the hairs under the microscope, and found that the coloring matter was ere, but that a quantity of bubbles of introduced themselves into the outes of the hair, and produced the ap-ce of whiteness. Yet, though the ness was thus really due to what might seen expected to be only a temporary ce whiteness persisted undiminished as the cases remained under his ob-n, and seemed likely to be perman-
It seems that a certain number of es of air are always present in every d that the color of the hair, to a cerextent, depends upon them. Thus in 's 'Human and Comparative Physi-
New Sydenham Society's transla-
p. 255, I find the following:
e different colors presented by the depend chiefly on the pigment contained hair cells, that either exists in the e granules, or is equably diffused. But lor of the hair also depends on small es of air that either occur between the al scales and the medullary cells, or und in their interior."
this is so, and the observations of the n are correct, this sudden blanching hair in comparatively young persons to an abnormal production of these es of air which are always present. s regard to J. H. L. A.'s explanation blanching of Marie Antoinette's hair ingle night, I cannot admit it to be possible. Marie Antoinette was only the time of her death, and she had light brown hair. It is rare, even in se of men, for hair of this color to be-gray at so early an age, and woman's doubtedly retains its abundance and lor much longer than that of men. But supposing Marie Antoinette had dyed hair, and were no longer able to apply dye, neither one night or a month of ts would be sufficient to restore the ral gray upon the surface. Let J. H.
consult any competent hair-dresser, he will be told the same thing. When is no longer applied, the hair resumes its ral color at the roots only, and a con-rable time would elapse before the new s would be long enough for their natural color to show itself through the dyed upper part of the hair, of which the artificial color would remain.

As for Lord Beaconsfield, he may, of course, have dyed his hair and beard, as I feel sure his friend and fellow dandy, Lord Lytton did, but, from my own personal observation, I do not believe that he did. It has been an amusement of mine for some years past, when I have nothing better to do—as e. g., in railway carriages, at evening parties, etc.,—to study people's hair and see whether it is dyed or not, and I have acquired considerable experience. It is very difficult to keep the roots thoroughly well dyed, as they grow a little every day, and therefore, if one looks closely, one can always see some gray or white roots somewhere, and these would be apparent even in a photograph. Then, again, in the case of a man with a swarthy complexion, without color, like Lord Beaconsfield, when the hair grows gray the complexion, as a rule, grows gray likewise, and consequently, if the hair is dyed dark brown or black (the color of Lord Beaconsfield's) the hair no longer suits the complexion. Now I had an opportunity of closely examining Lord Beaconsfield from a short distance at a public meeting some four or five years before his death, and I saw nothing of this sort about him. Besides this it was stated by at least one newspaper corrrespondent who had seen Lord Beaconsfield after his death that there were a few, very few silver streaks in his hair. Now no silver streaks can possibly appear in any hair that has been dyed.

F. CHANCE.

The following story was told me by one convinced of its truth: A young lady went to France as governess, but endured some cruel treatment from her employers. She ultimately succeeded in getting away, and came to her married brother in England. Worn out with fatigue, sorrow and anxiety, her relatives begged her to go to bed at once, and defer until the morrow the account of her sufferings. She yielded to their entreaties, but on entering her bedroom the next morning they found the poor sufferer dead. She lay on her side, and on lifting her head they found all the hair next to the pillow perfectly white. The medical men thought, had she been permitted to relieve her mind of all its sorrows immediately on her return, her life might have been spared, and her hair remained unchanged.

ELAN.

I was intimately acquainted with a lady whose hair, when she married, at the age of 26, was raven black. When I saw her six months after, it was white as snow. In the interval she had made the terrible discovery that she had married a maniac.

When I was in India and my hair was beginning to fall off, my native barber used to encourage me by saying "High cast only go bald." Whether this was Hindoo folklore, or simply flattery to a sahib, I could not tell.

G. L. F.

Chicago's First Citizen.

The Chicago Tribune, in closing an elaborate article on Hon. Carter H. Harrison, Mayor of that city, gives the following as Mr. Harrison's opinion of St. Jacobs Oil: "When I first found myself suffering from the rheumatism, my leading thought naturally was to call a physician, but my neighbors all advised me to try St. Jacobs Oil, the Great German Remedy. I procured some of it immediately, and found it excellent for that ailment.

A German emperor made a visit to one of his towns, and was received at the gate by a long row of deputies. Just as they were about to address him a neighboring donkey set up a terrible bray. "Gentleman," said the emperor, "if you wish me to understand you, you must speak one at a time."

Mother Shipton's prophecy is supposed to be about four hundred years old, and every prophecy has been fulfilled except the last—the end of the world in 1881. Buy your Carboline, a deodorized extract of petroleum, the great natural hair restorer, before the world comes to an end.

About six hundred years ago a country editor started a joke about a printer who made a mistake in setting up a piece of copy. The next week the editor tried to set up a three-line editorial, and the proof looked like Alexandra after the bombardment, or a rubber overshoe after three years' service.

A Cure for Croup. There is no better remedy for Croup than Hagyard's Yellow Oil taken internally and applied according to the special directions, this is the great household panacea for Rheumatism, Stiff Joints, Pain Inflammation &c. 23.

Overhead telegraph wires have been strictly prohibited by the Government of Bombay, though existing lines will be allowed to remain till the present contracts have run out.

W. T. Bray, Pharmacist, Wingham, Ont., writes that the sale of Burdock Blood Bitters has very largely increased in that locality, and adds that he hears very favorable opinions expressed regarding it, and, if time permited, could send many names of benefitted parties, 22.

The total salmon pack from British Columbia canneries may be estimated at 54,000 cases, while the canneries will carry over some 26,000 cases.

A Word of Caution.

Beware of Opiates and powerful astringent drugs in the treatment of Bowel Complaints, they may lull the pain and check Diarrhœa, etc., but are liable to produce inflammation, Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry is guaranteed safe and reliable, even for Infants, and is a specifice for Cholera Morbus, Dysentery, Colic, Acute or Chronic Diarrhœa and Summer Complaints generally.

The works of the Channel tunnel are said to have extended on the French side 3½ miles.

VEGETINE is a great panacea for our aged fathers and mothers; for it gives them strength, quiets their nerves, and gives them Nature's sweet sleep.

It is estimated that the humbug marriage associations have swept up $2,000,000 from various parts of Texas, a sum more than sufficient to run the public schools since the first association began business.

Briggs' Black Oil has stood the test of public scrutiny for over twenty years and now sells better than any other liniment. Why? Because it is the best and cheapest.

If the blood be impoverished, as manifested by pimples, eruptions, ulcers, or running sores, scrofulous tumors, swelling, or general debility, take Dr. R. V. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery." Sold by druggists.

Some men are born slight, some achieve slightness, but most men have slights put upon them.

Tennyson's "May Queen."

Who knows that if the beautiful girl who died so young had been blessed with Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" she might have reigned on many another bright May-day. The "Favorite Prescription" is a certain cure for all those disorders to which females are liable. By druggists.

"When will this car go?" asked a gentleman, the other evening. "As soon as it has a cargo," was the prompt reply.

Our Progress.

As stages are quickly abandoned with the completion of railroads, so the huge, drastic, catharic pills, composed of crude and bulky medicines, are quickly abandoned with the introduction of Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets," which are sugar-coated, and little larger than mustard seeds, but composed of highly concentrated vegetable extracts. By druggists.

Twenty-nine cowboys, who lately visited Topeka, Kansas, represented over 400,000 cattle, worth $10,000,000.

A Sure Thing.

In the treatment of Chronic disease with that great system renovator and restorative, Burdock Blood Bitters, there is no uncertainty as to its action, its curative powers are speedily manifest by its marked effect upon the Liver, the Bowels and the Kidneys. Every dose performing its work in a perceptible manner. 24.

Ayer's Pills promote digestion, improve the appetite, restore healthy action and regulate the secretive functions of the body, thus producing a condition of perfect health.

A Wise Maxim.

"A stitch in time saves nine," not only in making garments, but also in mending health. If Hagyard's Pectorial Balsam were used in the earlier stages of Colds and Coughs, many a "stitch in the side" and many a case of torn lungs might be avoided, that neglected, rapidly develope into irreparable Consumption. 21.

A powder magazine at Scutari fortress, near Constantinople, was exploded by lighting the other day. Several soldiers were injured.

A Reward

of $10 is offered in good faith for a hard case of corns that has stubbornly refused to be relieved by the use of Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor, the great corn extractor. Thousands in England, Canada, and the States testify to the efficiency of this celebrated corn cure, and the proprietors are anxious to hear if there is a single case of failure. Address N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston. Use Putnam's Corn Extractor, sure, safe and painless.

We esteem in the world those who do not merit our esteem, and neglect persons of true worth; but the world is like the ocean—the pearl is in its depths, the sea-weed swims.

Daughters, Wives, Mothers, look to your health! The many painful and weakening diseases from which you suffer, despairing of a cure, can be remedied by that unfailing regulator and purifying tonic, Burdock Blood Bitters. Ask your druggist for proof. 20.

Cremation has established a firm foothold in Italy. At a convention just held in Modena there were representatives of twenty-seven cremation societies established in different Italian cities.

Keep it in your family. The best remedy for accidents and emergencies, for Burns, Scalds, Bruises, Soreness, Sore Throat, Croup, Rheumatism, Chilblains, and Pain or Soreness of all kinds, is that marvellous healing remedy, Hagyard's Yellow Oil. 19.

Be noble-minded. Our own heart, and not other men's opinion of us, forms our true honor

Robert A. Wilson, Dispensing Chemist, Brockville, says, under date of June 5th, '82, "I have not the slighest hesitation in saying that Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry has given my customers more satisfaction than any medicine in my store for the cure of Summer Complaints, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Pain in the Stomach Sea Sickness, Piles, etc. You can use my name, etc."

A.P. 101

Vegetine

The Barks, Roots and Herbs
FROM WHICH VEGETINE IS MADE,
In Powder Form,
SOLD FOR FIFTY CENTS A PACKAGE.

Prostrated from Weakness.

Baltimore, Md., June 6, 1879.
Mr. Stevens—Dear Sir: I can testify to the good effects of your medicine. For several years I was afflicted with a severe cough and weakness, and was perfectly prostrated; but after taking three bottles of your Vegetine, made from the Powder, I was entirely relieved.
Very respectfully,
Mrs. M. E. STREET, 51 Gilmore-st.

One Package in Powder form Cured Scrofula.

86 Bremen st., East Boston, Mass.
Sept 30, 1879.
Mr. H. R. Stevens—Dear Sir: My little daughter Stella has been afflicted a long time with Scrotula, suffering everything. I employed different physicians in East Boston, but they helped her none. I bought some of your Powder Form Vegetine, and my wife steeped it and gave it to the child according to the directions, and we were surprised in a fortnight's time to see how the child had gained in flesh and strength. She is now gaining every day, and I can cheerfully recommend your remedy to be the best we have ever tried.
Respectfully yours
J. T. WEBB.

Vegetine in Powder Form is sold by all druggists and general store. If you cannot buy it of them, inclose 50c. in postage stamps for one package, or $1 for two packages, and I will send it by return mail.

VEGETINE
PREPARED BY
H. R. STEVENS, Toronto, Ont.
Vegetine is Sold by All Druggists.

How can a single dose of Apple pills cure headache?

By removing obstructions from the system—relieving the stomach, and giving healthy action to the digestive apparatus.

It ought to be a cold day when summer gets left.

Old and young should use "TRABERRY,"
Then your laugh may be quite merry;
Fragrant Breath shall pass your lips,
And your Teeth shall pearls eclipse.

The King of Spain is reported to have relieved his mother's heavy embarrassments only on condition that she will not return to Paris.

RUBBER STAMPS.—ADDRESS R. H. COX, 4 King St. East, Toronto. Agents wanted.

WATCHES repaired. Trade work a specialty. A. BALLARBY, 8 King St. E., Toronto.

CHRIS. SHEPPARD, Manufr of Masonic and other Society Jewels, 154 King E., Toronto.

$5 PER DAY can be made by agents, male or female. C. W. DENNIS, Toronto.

TORONTO.—Mr. J. H. Mayne Campbel Barrister, Solicitor, Etc., 9 Victoria-st

WATCHES. Send for free illustrated catalogue to RYRIE, the Jeweler, 113 Yonge Street, Toronto.

HAND STAMPS, SEALS, &c., of every description and for all uses. KENYON TINGLEY & STEWART Mfg Co., Toronto.

PRICE TICKETS, SHOW CARDS, WINDOW SHADES. Newest designs. Send for price list. F. WILLIAMS, 4 King E., Toronto.

CARDS Christmas, New Year, Birthday, and other Cards, at H. J. MATTHEWS & BROS. art depot, Toronto.

GUNS Rifles, Ammunition, Fishing Tackle, and all kinds of Sporting Goods. W. McDOWALL, cor. King & George sts., Toronto

AGENTS WANTED—EITHER SEX—a light, honourable and steady employment; no book; for circular and particulars address Box 70, Sharon, Ont.

TAGS—PATENT EYELET SMOOTH SURFACE, heavy, and very tough; prices very low. Send for new price list. J. G. WOOD LAND & CO., Printers, Toronto.

ONTARIO VETERINARY COLLEGE, TORONTO. Students can enter from October until January. PROF. SMITH, S., V. Edin., Principal. Fees, fifty dollars.

BUSINESS CHANCES.

TWO-RUN GRIST MILL FOR SALE—water and steam power—Durham county; gristing about 18,000 bushels per annum; good local trade; dwelling and five acres of land: price $3,500; favourable terms. MACKINTOSH & PETERS, Toronto.

AN OYSTER, FRUIT, AND RESTAURANT business for sale—established ten years and doing a very profitable trade of $10,000 per annum; no opposition in the town: stock and furniture about $1,500. MACKINTOSH & PETERS, Toronto.

GROCERY AND LIQUOR BUSINESS FOR sale in a live manufacturing town of 6,000 population; doing cash trade of $24,000 per annum; stock about $4,000. MACKINTOSH & PETERS, Toronto.

A GOOD INVESTMENT IN THE CITY OF Brandon—new store and dwelling above, for sale; excellent business stand; central between freight and new passenger depot, two blocks from either; also four lots in block; most desirable spot in city for residences. Address Box 218, Brandon, Manitoba.

THOSE WISHING TO DISPOSE OF OR purchase a business of any description in the city or elsewhere should call or send particulars to C. J. PALIN, 53 and 55 King-street East. Business Agent and Valuer.

OWNERS OF FARM LANDS, CITY AND Town Properties, desiring to realize, will find purchasers by sending me full descriptions, lowest prices, and terms of payment. J. W. G. WHITNEY, Estate Agent, 25 Toronto street, Toronto.

SUBSCRIBERS WANTED FOR STOCK in Manufacturing Company established four years, to extend the business: have been unable to supply the demand; big profit on goods. Address MANUFACTURER, 35 Adelaide Street West, Toronto.

ONE OF THE BEST FARMS IN THE county of Bruce; containing 260 acres; 28 cleared; good house and out buildings; also good orchard; a never failing stream within thirty yards of the house; three miles from Teeswater, the terminus of the T. G. & B. Ry.: price moderate. Apply to C. STEIL, proprietor, or to J. MARSHALL, Teeswater, Ont.

CHRISTMAS & NEW YEAR'S CARDS

In assorted lots, specially selected, for 25c, 50c, 75c, $1 and upwards. Free by mail on receipt of price.

The Newest Styles in Birthday Cards.

SELBY & CO.,
Booksellers & Stationers, 344 Yonge-st, Toronto.

CANADIAN MUTUAL AID ASSOCIATION. Co-operation Life Assurance. Great inducement to provide for families in case of death, at small cost. W. PEMBERTON PAGE, Sec., 87 King St. West, Toronto. Agents wanted.

$5.000.000 WORTH OF FARMING and other property in Ontario for sale by the CANADA WEST LAND AGENCY COMPANY, 14 Adelaide-st. East, Toronto. Send for list.

SPECIAL HOLIDAY NOTICE!

NOW READY. Our three Mammoth Catalogues and Price Lists, with full description of the largest Stock of Xmas Goods, Cards, Albums, Xmas Tree Ornaments, Scrap Pictures, &c., &c. Sent free to any address by applying to BENNET & Co., Wholesale Stationers, and direct importers of Novelties. All goods sent same day by mail, 453 St. Paul-street, Montreal.

WOODSTOCK COLLEGE,
WOODSTOCK, ONTARIO.

Instruction most complete in all branches. A most thorough and complete

BUSINESS EDUCATION

In the Commercial Department at very low rates. For circulars address
N. WOLVERTON, B.A.,
Principal.

LADIES! Why pay from two to four dollars per year for American fashion magazines when you can get the "Ladies' Journal" monthly for one year for fifty cents? A sixteen page paper, containing the very latest and best fashion articles, beautifully illustrated; also one piece of FULL SIZE SHEET MUSIC—always the latest popular song or instrumental piece going. This feature alone is worth five times the subscription price. Also, short stories, useful receipts, and other matters particularly interesting to ladies. Send fifty cents for a year's subscription. In clubs of five, thirty-five (35) cents. In clubs of ten, thirty (30) cents. So get ten of your friends to subscribe and send three ($3.00) dollars, together with your own subscription, and I'll mail you a handsome triple-silver-plated Butter Knife, with ivory handle, ordinarily sold at one dollar and a-half. I want to introduce the LADIES' JOURNAL into every household in Canada, and so make these big offers. Remember, the getter-up of a club of ten who sends three dollars ($3.00) for the ten subscribers, and thirty (30) cents for her own subscription, will get this elegant butter knife by return mail, and the LADIES' JOURNAL for one year for herself and her ten friends. A 16-page fashion paper, with full sized piece of music in each number. Sample copies, five cents. Address—S. FRANK WILSON, Publisher, 33 & 35 Adelaide St. West, Toronto. ☞ Don't wait for this advertisement to appear again. Go to work NOW.

Zopesa.

Zopesa was introduced in America two years ago. Large quantities have been used for Dyspepsia, and as a panacea for the Liver, and the manufacturers have yet to hear of a single case of Dyspepsia or Biliousness, when Zopesa was used as directed, in which it was not more than satisfactory. Many write that it is a wonderful remedy. We can show where as high as 40 pounds were gained by its use in breaking up chronic Biliousness and Dyspepsia. Its friends increase very fast, and all who use as directed are surprised and gratified.

"Wait Till the Clouds Roll By."
The latest New York sensation.

Everybody is Singing It.

Send five cents for copy in full size sheet music form.

S. FRANK WILSON,
Publisher, 33 Adelaide St. West. Toronto

The Toronto General Trusts Co.,
27 and 29 Wellington St., Toronto.

HON. ED. BLAKE, Q.C., M.P., - President.
E. A. MEREDITH, Esq., LL.D., Vice President.
J. W. LANGMUIR, - - - Manager

This Company, which has been approved of by the High Court of Justice and the Lieutenant Governor in Council, accepts trusts of every description, and acts as executor, administrator, &c., and also as agent of existing trustees, executors, &c. $300,000 of Trust Funds to loan upon real estate and mortgages. For further information apply to
J. W. LANGMUIR, Manager.

Burdock BLOOD BITTERS
WILL CURE OR RELIEVE

BILIOUSNESS,	DIZZINESS,
DYSPEPSIA,	DROPSY,
INDIGESTION,	FLUTTERING
JAUNDICE.	OF THE HEART,
ERYSIPELAS,	ACIDITY OF
SALT RHEUM,	THE STOMACH,
HEARTBURN,	DRYNESS
HEADACHE,	OF THE SKIN,

And every species of disease arising from disordered LIVER, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS OR BLOOD,

T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, TORONTO.

WHAT IS CATARRH?

Catarrh is a muco-purulent discharge caused by the presence and development of the vegetable parasite amœba, in the internal lining membrane of the nose. This parasite is only developed under favorable circumstances, and these are: morbid state of the blood, as the blighted corpuscle of tubercle, the germ poison of syphilis, mercury, toxœmea, from retention of the effeted matter of the skin, suppressed perspiration, badly ventilated sleeping apartments, and other poisons that are germinated in the blood. These poisons keep the internal lining membrane of the nose in a constant state of irritation, ever ready for the deposit of the seeds of these germs, which spread up the nostrils and down the fauces or back part of the mouth causing ulceration of the throat; up the eustachian tubes, causing deafness; burrowing in the vocal cords, causing hoarseness, usurping the proper structure of the bronchial tubes ending in pulmonary consumption and death.

To effect a cure the parasite must be removed or destroyed, hence inhalants and snuffs are worthless.

Some time since a well known physician of 40 years standing, after much experimenting, succeeded in discovering the necessary combination of ingredients, which never fails in absolutely and permanently eradicating this horrible disease whether standing for one year or forty years. Sufferers should, without delay, communicate with the business manager, Mr. A. H. Dixon, 307 King St. West, Toronto, and get treatise free by enclosing stamp. Ask your druggist for it

AYER'S
CHERRY PECTORAL,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

The few compositions which have won the confidence of mankind and become household words, among not only one but many nations, must have extraordinary virtues. Perhaps no one ever secured so wide a reputation, or maintained it so long as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It has been known to the public about forty years, by a long continued series of marvelous cures, that have won for it a confidence in its virtues, never equaled by any other medicine. It still makes the most effectual cures of Coughs, Colds, Consumption, that can be made by medical skill. Indeed, the CHERRY PECTORAL has really robbed these dangerous diseases of the terrors to a great extent, and given a feeling of immunity from their painful effects, that is well founded, if the remedy be taken in season. Every family should have it in their closet for the ready and prompt relief of its members. Sickness, suffering, and even life is saved by this timely protection. The prudent should not neglect it, and the wise will not. Keep it by you for the protection it affords by its early use in sudden attacks.

PREPARED BY 1
DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.,
Practical and Analytical Chemists.
SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS AND DEALERS IN MEDICINE.

Christmas Presents. - - Confined to 30 Days.

As we are desirous of reducing our stock of General Dry Goods to the lowest possible point before the approaching period of stock taking, and also in order to induce customers at a distance to increase their purchases with us as well as our numerous patrons residing in the immediate vicinity who have favored us with their patronage in "the days that are gone," we beg to offer the following inducements, for cash purchasers only, FROM THE FIRST UNTIL THE THIRTIETH OF DECEMBER INCLUSIVE, THE FOLLOWING GIFTS:

For amounts of $5 and under $7, choice of either a beautiful Vase, Album, Children's Dolls, and Cup and Saucer, ... worth 25c. to 30c.
" " $7 and under $10, " " " Album, Jet Necklet, Vases, Butter Knife, Ladies' Cup and Saucer, ... worth 50 cents.
" " $10 and under $12, " " " Vase, Ladies' Cup and Saucer, Child's Doll. ... ... worth 60 cents.
" " $12 and under $15, " " handsome Child's Toy Trunk, Album, Jet Bracelet, Child's Doll, ... worth 75 cents.
" " $15 and under $20, " " " Child's Toy Trunk, Child's Doll, ... worth 90 cents.
" " $20 and under $25, " " " Album, Toy Trunk, Ladies' Bag, Cup and Saucer or Gent's Cup and Saucer, E. P. Butter Knife, worth $1.00.
" " $25 and under $30, " " lovely Album, Toy Trunk, Child's China Tea Set, Ladies' Bag, Toilet Set, E. P. Butter Knife, ... worth $1.25.
" " $30 and under $35, " " " Album, Child's Toy Trunk, ... worth $1.50.
" " $35 and under $40, " " " Ladies' Bag, Child's Toy Trunk, ... worth $1.75.
" " $40 and under $45, " " " Album, ... worth $2.00.
" " $45 and under $50, " " " Superb Electro-Plate Glass lined Sugar Bowl, Child's Case, E. P. Set Knife, Fork and Spoon worth $2.50.
" " $50 and over " Elegant Electro-Plate Butter Dish, ... worth $10.

Our stock is choice, new and fresh and well assorted, and a great opportunity is thus afforded for securing goods on such rare inducements.

☞ PLEASE NOTE.—On account of the desperately dull state of the wholesale market we have secured unparalleled bargains in all departments. Dress Goods at 5c., 12½c., 15c., worth double the price. Tweeds 50c., 60c., and 75c., worth 40 per cent. more. Men's and Boys' Imitation Lamb Caps from 50c. up. Tapestry Carpets 40c. per yd. up. 8-4 Bleached Sheeting 30c. Gray Flannels 25c. and up. In very few words, stock very large, very attractive, and very cheap,

D. MELVILLE & CO.,

DIRECT IMPORTERS, Union Street, Owen Sound.

Owen Sound, November 28th, 1882.

The Standard.

MARKDALE, NOV. 30th, 1882.

CHEAP GOODS.

Markdale has become noted for cheap merchandise and is drawing a trade from a great distance. Large numbers of strangers are in our village daily, many from a distance of 15 miles and upwards, and each week the number increases.

It is one of the best markets on the line of the T. G. & B. R., and has store-room for any quantity of grain. The very appearance of our large elevators give a favorable impression to strangers coming in, many of which remark, "this must be a good country or they would not require such large storehouses," and on leaving "we seldom strike a place of the size which does the amount of business." The two new elevators are now in full blast, which together with the sleighing the past few days has made quite a stir.

And now the question arises, how can we hold the large trade? The keen competition of our enterprising business men, together with the superior quality of work turned out by our mechanics, has been successful in drawing a trade, in many instances from a distance over bad roads. We believe the most efficient means of holding the trade would be to make good leading roads, and this is perhaps one of the most difficult matters we could deal with. We are situated at the corner of four townships—Artemesia, Glenelg, Holland and Euphrasia—none of which from past experience have sufficient interest here to induce them to do anything that would be for the benefit of Markdale, but rather the contrary. For instance, in Glenelg we have a bridge not half a mile out of the village on the most public road of the township which is in a dangerous condition, and though the officials have been requested and entreated to have it rebuilt they have treated us with indifference, whil on the other hand when Durham wanted sidewalks the above township granted money for that purpose. We claim that the interest of the village and that of the surrounding country are identical, the more the village grows the more valuable the farms in the district become. It is just as desirable for farmers to have a good road to get to market as it is for the village, hence any means that may be adopted for the growth of one must be for the benefit of all. We invite discussion on the above from any one interested hoping that good results may follow.

Orangeville.

The Advertiser has changed its form to the popular eight page.

Dr. Washington has removed to Toronto.

A curling club is being organized.

Collingwood.

Mr. Long, M. P. P., is recovering from his late severe illness.

Mr. Hogg is a candidate for Mayor.

F. J. Telfer sent a cablegram to Birmingham, Eng., and received an answer in 3 hrs. and 2 min. The best time on record.

ON OUR TABLE.

PICTURESQUE CANADA.—Numbers 13 and 14 of this valuable work was delivered to us by Mr. J. B. Crysler, agent, last week. It is growing more interesting each number.

LITTLE ONES for December is before us and is the best we have yet seen. It is a juvenile magazine for the young folks; profusely illustrated, with over 30 pages. Price $1.50 per year. Russel Pub. Co., Boston, Mass.

FORTUNES FOR FARMERS AND MECHANICS.

Thousands of dollars can be saved by using proper judgement in taking care of the health of your self and family. If you are sick, have sallow complexion, poor appetite, low and depressed spirits, and generally debilitated, do not delay a moment, but go at once and procure a bottle of those Electric Bitters, which never fail to cure, and that for the trifling sum of fifty cents.—Tribune. Sold by A. Turner & Co.

Wm. Lucas & Co. bankers, Markdale, have $200,000.00 to loan on real estate. Straight loan system. No fines. Low interest; moderate charges.

SHILOH'S CONSUMPTION CURE.

This is beyond question the most successful Cough Medicine we have ever sold, a few doses invariably cure the worst cases of Cough, Croup, and Bronchitis, while its wonderful success in the cure of Consumption is without a parallel in the history of medicine. Since its first discovery it has been sold on a guarantee, a test which no other medicine can stand. If you have a Cough we earnestly ask you to try it. Price 10cts, 50 cts. and $1.00. If your Lungs are sore, Chest, or Back, Lame, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Sold by Wm. Brown's Gene-Store Markdale

BIRTHS.

JONES—In Markdale, on Nov. 27th, the wife of Mr. A. Jones, (blacksmith,) of a daughter ELDER—In Flesherton, on the 20th inst., the wife of Mr. W. H. Elder of a daughter.

MCMILLAN.—In Meaford, on the 19th inst., the wife of Jas. McMillan, of the Monitor, of a daughter.

RICHARDSON.—In Flesherton, on Friday morning, the 17th inst., the wife of Mr. Wm. Richardson, of a daughter.

DIED.

CORCORAN.—In Markdale, on the 28th inst., Eliza, eldest daughter of Rev. J. S. Corcoran, aged 4 yrs., 7 mons., 11 days.

BILLIARD ROOM

D. M. HOGAN, PROPRIETOR.

First class tables. Cigars and temperance drinks to be had. 116.ly.

WARNING.

I HEREBY GIVE NOTICE THAT I WILL not be responsible for any debts contracted by my family or any one else; also, all moneys due me must be paid to myself.

WILSON BENSON.

Markdale, Nov. 29th, 1882. 116-1t

NOTE LOST.

A NOTE DRAWN IN FAVOR OF JOHN McKenna, Markdale, by Edmund Steer, Harkaway P. O., for $160. Any person finding or having the same in their possession will please return it to the undersigned as payment has been made.

EDMUND STEER,
Harkaway P. O.

November 28th, 1882. 116-4t*

Teacher Wanted.

FOR SCHOOL SECTION No. 6, ARTEMESIA, holding Second or Third Class Certificate. Duties to commence on the second day of January, 1883. Apply, stating salary, to

JOHN HAZARD,
Sec. & Treas. to Trustees,
Flesherton P. O

114-117*

JNO. MONTGOMERY,

BAKER,

Begs to tender his thanks to the inhabitants of Markdale and surrounding country for past patronage, and to intimate to them that he is prepared to supply the public with either plain or iced and ornamented. Also Brides' Cakes got up in the best style that can be done this side of Toronto.

Fruit, Pound and Plum Cake

Bread, Buns and Cakes!

in great variety. All these are manufactured on his own premises by himself, besides Biscuit of every description from the best manufacturers in Ontario.

CHOICEST CONFECTIONERY

in great variety. Tea Meetings, Socials, and other parties supplied on the shortest notice and on the most reasonable terms.

JOHN MONTGOMERY.

Markdale, Nov. 22nd, 1882. 115-3m

A CARD.

To all who are suffering from the errors and indiscretions of youth, nervous weakness, early decay, loss of manhood, &c., I will send a receipe that will cure you, FREE OF CHARGE. This great Remedy was discovered by a missionary in South America. Send a self-addressed envelope to REV. JOSEPH T. INMAN, Station D, New York City.

T. C. & B. RAILWAY.

TIME TABLE.

Change of Time.

On and after Monday, Nov. 20th, 1882, trains will run as follows:

GOING N'TH.			GOING SOUTH
Read Down.			Read Up.
A.M.	P.M.		A.M.	P.M.
7 30	4 25	TORONTO	10 45	9 10
9 05	6 00	CARDWELL JUNC.	9 05	7 31
9 55	6 45	ORANGEVILLE...	8 27	6 50
12 20	8 44	MOUNT FOREST..	6 30	4 30
12 55	9 12	HARRISTON.....	6 05	4 00
2 25	10 15	TEESWATER	5 00	2 45
11 50	[illegible] 0	FLESHERTON	6 43	4 47
1 30	9 55	OWEN SOUND....	5 15	3 10
P.M.	P.M.		A.M.	P.M.

A Mixed Train will also run between Toronto and Owen Sound. See Time Table.

D. MCNICOLL, Gen. Pass. Agt. EDMUND WRAGGE, General Manager.

Teacher Wanted

FOR S. S. No. 3, Holland and Euphrasia. Duties to commence the 2nd day of January, 1883 Apply, stating salary, to

ALEX. MURDOCK, Sec'y,
Harkway P. O.

115-4w.

MISS McDOWELL,

OF FLESHERTON, BEGS LEAVE TO notify any who would wish to receive instructions on the Piano or Organ that she can be consulted at Mr. James Trimble's, Markdale, on Mondays and Thursdays.

November 22nd, 1882. 115-4w.

STRAYED

FROM THE PREMISES OF THE SUBSCRIBER, Lot 20, Con. 8, Euphrasia, about the 1st Sept., one steer, red, and 2 heifers, spotted red and white, all rising three years old. Information that will lead to their recovery will be thankfully received. Any person harboring them after this date will be dealt with according to law.

W. J. & R. WARD.

Rocklyn P. O., Nov. 17th, 1882. 115 3w

STRAYED

FROM THE PREMISES OF THE UNdersigned Lot 3, Con. 7, Euphrasia, about the last of August, one Steer and one Heifer, all rising two years old Any person giving such information as will lead to their recovery will be suitably rewarded.

JOHN HUTCHINSON,
Vandeleur P. O.

115-3w*

TO SELL OR RENT.

LOT 15, CON. 12, HOLLAND, 122 acres, 100 cleared, good buildings thereon. Terms easy. Apply to James Logan, Postmaster, near the premises, or to

M. S. KELLOW, Tara P. O.

November 14th, 1882. 114-tf.

ESTRAY.

CAME INTO THE PREMISES OF D. McMillan, Lot 10, Concession 3, S. D. Road, Artemesia, about the 1st of August, a Shearling Ram. The owner is requested to prove property, pay expenses and take him away.

DONALD McMILLAN.

Artemesia, Nov. 10th, 1882. 114 117

J. L. BROWNE

—IS—

Better than Ever!

—IN—

PHOTOS!

Cabinet, Card or Tablet.

A LARGE STOCK OF

FRAMES

NEWEST DESIGNS, CHEAP.

Just Arrived!

A LARGE STOCK OF

NEW AND FASHIONABTE

DRY GOODS,

Boots and Shoes,

NEW GROCERIES,

At prices which will astonish you. Call and see.

Highest price paid for Butter and Eggs or any kind of Fowl at the CHEAP STORE.

JOHN DOUPE,
Flesherton Station.

Nov. 15th, 1882. 114-3m.

NOTICE TO FARMERS.

BUSINESS STILL INCREASING WITH

W. J. ROWE

—AT THE—

Barrhead Mill

UNDER THE OLD PROCESS.

Gristing and Chopping done every working day. Farmers from a distance can have their stuff home with them the same day.

All orders for Flour and Feed promptly filled.

W. J. ROWE, "Barrhead Mills."

October 28th 1882. 113-126

Moffat Bros'.

MARKDALE

Foundry!

—AND—

MACHINE WORKS,

MANUFACTURERS OF

MILL MACHINERY,

Steam Engines,

SHAFTING, HANGERS,

Pulleys, &c. Land Rollers,

PLOWS!

And Plow Points

MACHINERY REPAIRING

Done in a practical manner.

We also introduce our new

FAMILY MANGLE!

to the public. This new machine will mangle Linen, Cotton, and Woollen Goods, giving them a beautiful smooth and glossy appearance. It also improves the clothes, whereas hot irons injure them. We also manufacture of various designs for Buildings, Verandahs, &c. Ornamental Cast iron Chains, Pall Pillars. Fencing, Ventilators, Columns. Iron Beams. Gratings for Cellar Windows, &c.

ORNAMENTAL CRESTING

IRON & BRASS CASTINGS

Of Every Description Made to Order.

MOFFAT BROS.

MARKDALE MARKETS.

Fall Wheat. $0.80 to $0.83; Spring to $0.93; Barley, 45c; Peas, 65c; Oats, Butter, 20c; Eggs, 22c; Potatoes, $10.00; Pork, 7.25 to 7.50.

FLESHERTON MARKETS.

Fall Wheat, $0.80 to $0.84; Spring to $0.90; Barley, 55c; Peas, 66c; Oats, Butter, 20c; Eggs, 22c; Potatoes, 80c to $9.00; Pork, $7.00 to $7.50

TORONTO MARKETS.

Fall Wheat, $0.90 to $0.94; Spring to $0 68; Barley, 56c to 72c; Oats, 34c; Peas, 70c to 74c; Hogs, $7.50 to $7.75; Potatoes, per bag, 75c to 80c; Butter, dairy to 20c; eggs, 23c to 24c.

GENERAL

Blacksmithing

Flesherton Station.

The subscriber begs to announce to the inhabitants of Flesherton, Markdale, Priceville, and surrounding country, that he has commenced business at Flesherton, where he hopes by satisfactory attention, and moderate rates to secure a share of public patronage.

HORSE-SHOEING A SPECIALTY.

And guaranteed that in a case of interfering horses he will cure the defect in two sittings or no charge will be made for the second shoeing.

A TRIAL SOLICITED.

HENRY WHITE.

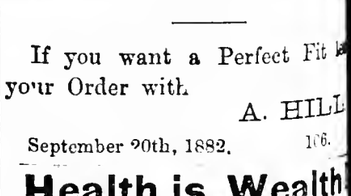
Flesherton Station, Oct. 17, 1882.

A. HILL

TAILOR.

Over McFarland's Store

MARKDALE.



☞ Special attention to Cutting.

If you want a Perfect Fit leave your Order with

A. HILL.

September 20th, 1882. 106.

Health is Wealth!

DR. E. C. WEST'S NERVE AND BRAIN TREATMENT, a guaranteed specific for Hysteria, Dizziness, Convulsions, Fits, Nervous Neuralgia, Headache, Nervous Prostration caused by the use of alcohol or tobacco, Wakefulness, Mental Depression, Softening of the Brain, resulting in Insanity and leading to misery, decay and death, Premature Old Age, Barrenness, Loss of Power in either sex, Involuntary losses and Spermatorrhœa caused by over-exertion of the brain, self-abuse or over-indulgence. One box will cure recent cases. Each box contains one month's treatment. One dolar a box, or six boxes for five dollars; sent by mail prepaid on receipt of price. We guarantee six boxes to cure any case. With each order received by us for six boxes, accompanied with five dollars, we will send the purchaser a written guarantee to refund the money if the treatment does not effect a cure. Guarantees issued only by A. Turner & Co., Agents authorized Agent for Markdale Ont. J. C. West & Co. sole proprietor, Toronto, Ont.

Local Items.

R. & A. Neilson, of Proton [illegible] loppers to cut 1200 cords soft

Xmas Cards from New York [illegible] ck ever shown in Markdale [illegible]'s.

Christmas Day falls on Monday [illegible] the municipal nomina[illegible] d on the Friday previous.

Preparations are being [illegible] thodist tea-meeting on Christmas will be three weeks [illegible] day.

House and shop to rent [illegible] nahan's carriage works sa[illegible] ker, Cre-smaker, &c. Ap[illegible] nahan, who will fit it up to

While in Markdale we called [illegible] Office and interviewed [illegible] has a finely equipped print[illegible] ns out very good work.—M[illegible]

The circulation of the STA[illegible] ased on all sides this fall [illegible] ily in the neighbourhood [illegible] se who don't read their nei[illegible]

Mr. Robt. Chapman, pu[illegible] ceville, is working up a [illegible] is giving satisfaction.

ew dwelling this season [illegible] ereto.

The annual school meeting [illegible] ions will take place on the [illegible] in December. Printed [illegible] ANDARD Office suitable for a [illegible], only 10 cts. a set.

The case, Hendrie vs. the [illegible] decide who shall control [illegible] ey & Bruce railway, which [illegible] over a year, will come be[illegible] hearing on the 12th of De[illegible]

The large wholesale firm of [illegible] Co., of Toronto, has recei[illegible] whole of their stock of [illegible] counting to $135,000, is [illegible] tion. W. J. McFarland is [illegible] with the cash in his po[illegible] ers may look out for some[illegible] the way of cheap goods [illegible] ne.

CARD ON THE EGG BUSINESS [illegible] a mile or two north of Du[illegible] ttle of whiskey was ma[illegible] hands that he could n[illegible] en and a half of eggs in [illegible] ommenced and managed [illegible] the first day leaving 34 [illegible] ppears the bet was that [illegible] eggs as they were presen[illegible] ancient ones were inte[illegible] a flavour to the opera[illegible] g with the more modern [illegible] own and disappeared, w[illegible] asional wry face, and so [illegible] rable well until he had [illegible] whole number specified, [illegible] ounted that contained a [illegible] ken, an objection was r[illegible] ng that one, but the pro[illegible] coveted bottle of "Old [illegible] cripples, and so the chi[illegible] the "red lane" along w[illegible] said he believed he coul[illegible] ubbing his throat He g[illegible] Review.

BETTER!

—THAN—

BANKRUPT STOCKS.

—o—

—THE—

$3,500 SALE

—OF—

WATCHES, JEWELERY,
CLOCKS,

SILVER AND ELECTRO-PLATED WARE,

in Tea Setts, Cruets, Cake Baskets, Butter Coolers, Fruit Dishes, etc., etc., etc., VIOLINS,

CONCERTINAS,
XMAS TOYS, &c.. &c.. &c.

I have decided to leave Markdale about the 1st of January to go into the wholesale jewellery business in Toronto, and will commence a Clearing Sale on 1st Dec.

FOR 30 DAYS.

First-class Goods will be sold at and under cost. This is a genuine sale as I am obliged to reduce my stock.

I have engaged the services of a practical watchmaker to take charge of the business after the 1st of January.

W. F. DOLL.

Wanted Immediately!

—FOR—

Mill Bros.' New Elevator,

100,000 bushels Wheat,
40,000 bushels Barley,
30,000 bushels Oats,
25,000 bushels Peas,

for which the highest market prices will be paid in cash. 111-tf.

Local Items.

R. & A. Neilson, of Proton Station, want loggers to cut 1200 cords soft wood.

Xmas Cards from New York, the finest ever shown in Markdale, at W. F. Doll's.

Christmas Day falls on Monday this year, and the municipal nominations will be held on the Friday previous.

Preparations are being made for the festive tea-meeting on Christmas day. Christmas will be three weeks from next Sunday.

Store and shop to rent next door to Mill Bros.' carriage works suitable for shoemaker, tinsmith, &c. Apply to D. J. Sproule, who will fit it up to suit tenant.

Two in Markdale we called at the STANDARD office and interviewed Mr. Rutledge. He has a finely equipped printing office, and turns out very good work.—Meaford Mirror.

The circulation of the STANDARD has increased on all sides this fall; nearly every one in the neighbourhood takes it, and those who don't read their neighbours' copy.

Mr. Robt. Chapman, pumpmaker, of Proton, is working up a good business and is giving satisfaction. He has erected a new dwelling this season and removed same.

The annual school meeting in the various sections will take place on the last Wednesday in December. Printed notices at the STANDARD Office suitable for any school section, only 10 cts. a set.

Tenders, Hendrie vs. the Grand Trunk, Leeds who shall control the Toronto, Grey & Bruce railway, which has been pending for a year, will come before the Court of Appeal on the 12th of December.

The large wholesale firm of David Arnott & Co. of Toronto, has recently failed and a sale of their stock of fresh goods, amounting to $135,000, is being sold by auction. W. J. McFarland is attending the sale and will fill his pocket. His customers must look out for something startling in the way of cheap goods upon his return home.

HARD ON THE EGG BUSINESS.—At a threshing a mile or two north of Durham a bet of $25 of whiskey was made with one of the hands that he could not swallow five dozen and a half of eggs in two days. Bill commenced and managed to swallow 32 on the first day leaving 34 for the second. It appears the bet was that he was to take the eggs as they were presented to him. A few ancient ones were intermixed, just to give a flavour to the operation, but these along with the more modern ones were sucked down and disappeared, with perhaps an occasional wry face, and so Billy got along remarkable well until he had nearly gulped the whole number specified, when one was presented that contained a well developed chicken, an objection was made at first to swallowing that one, but the prospect of losing the coveted bottle of "Old Rye" overcame all scruples, and so the chickeny egg went down the "red lane" along with the rest but Billy said he believed he could feel the feathers tickling his throat He got the bottle.—Review.

Municipal election on New Year's day.

Socials, surprise parties, etc., furnished on reasonable terms at Clark's.

Biscuits and Confectionery in great variety at Clark's, sign of the red flag.

McFarland commenced taking grain into his new elevator last Saturday.

An immense quantity of grain has been marketed in this place the past week.

93 loads of farm produce was sold in Markdale on Tuesday and 86 on Wednesday.

A new Dress Making establishment will be opened in about a week in McDougall's block.

Rheumatine, the universal cure for Rheumatism, at the Medical Hall, A. Turner & Co.

A lot of beautiful Dolls just opened at Trimble & Wright's for the holidays. See them.

Look out for grand stock of Christmas and fancy goods to be opened at the Medical Hall next week.

One thousand good Tamrack Pump Logs wanted at the Markdale Pump Factory.—J. G. IRVING, Prop.

There will be a credit auction sale at the Revere Hotel on the 6th December, (Fair Day.) See posters.

New and fashionable goods arriving daily at Trimble & Wright's. Haven't time to write particulars this week.

All wool Canadian Tweeds, pure stock, no shoddy, at 50, 55, and 60 cents per yard at M. Richardson's, Flesherton.

There are 62 subscribers to the STANDARD who get their papers at the Flesherton P. O. and new names added weekly.

Mantle Cloth, Tweeds, Velveteens, Promenade Clouds, Ladies' Jerseys, Shawls, &c., all at a big reduction at Reynolds & Son.

ANOTHER BOAT LOST.—The Collingwood went down near St. Helena with the whole crew, all of which were lost except three souls.

The A. O. U. W. concert will no doubt be largely patronized. W. J. Speers is coming and is a whole team in himself. Remember the date, December 8th.

BOOTS, BOOTS, BOOTS.—Our stock of boots is now complete in every department. You can save from 10 to 25 per cent by purchasing your boots from Reynolds & Son.

We have 31 bona fide subscribers at Vandeleur P. O., and the number increasing; that speaks well for the intelligence of the people in that section of the country.

For a cheap overcoat see McFarland. For a cheap suit see McFarland. For a cheap hat or cap see McFarland. For a cheap pair of boots see McFarland.

Ellen Bayes, a young woman of St. Vincent, attempted suicide recently by taking Paris Green. The stomach pump had the desired effect and she will likely recover.

The STANDARD is only $1 in advance, and is the leading local paper. Subscribe at once and get the balance of the year free, together with a splendid horse book of over 90 pages as a premium.

BILLIARD PARLOR.—Mr. D. M. Hogan purposes opening a billiard parlor in Markdale early in December which will be conducted on strictly temperance principels. Cigars and soft drinks supplied. Parlor next door to Trimble & Wright's.

BUSINESS, BUSINESS.—We mean business. Having just received a new and complete stock of Hats and Caps, Muffs, Ready-made Clothing, Boots and Shoes, &c. Intending purchasers will do well to give us a call. —REYNOLDS & SON.

FAST THRESHING.—John Williams threshed on Thursday last at Sheppard Boyce's farm 200 bushels of fall wheat in one and a quarter hours. The grain was the product of four and a half acres. The truth of the above is vouched for by parties who were there.

A BONANZA.—Andrew Meldrum, son of Mr. Henry Meldrum, agent at Flesherton Station, who left this part some two years ago has, together with three others, discovered a rich mine in Colorado. The bed is rich in silver and lead, and has since been disposed of for $125,000. There is great excitement in that vicinity owing to the valuable find.

BUCKLEN'S ARNICA SALVE.

The best salve in the world for Cuts, Bruises, Sores, Ulcers, Salt Rheum, Fever Sores, Tetter, Chapped Hands, Chilblains, Corns, and all Skin Eruptins, and Positively cures Piles. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by A. Turner & Co.

M. Richardson, of Flesherton, is doing a large trade this Fall. His store is daily crowded with customers who can generally rely on getting the article they want, his stock being so complete and replenished each week. His prices, qualities considered, will be found low as the lowest. He is in Toronto this week attending the large trade sales of D. Arnott & Co.'s stock and of Hughes Bros.

Miss Hollingshead's stock is being rushed off by W. J. McFarland at ridiculously low prices. Feathers for 5 cts., worth 50 cts; Flowers 5 cents, worth 40 cents; 25 trimed Hats, $1.00, Miss Hollingshead's price $2.50; 700 yds. ribbon, 2 cents, 5 cents, and 10 cents, worth four times the money; satins, laces, silks and ornaments almost given away for the next few days at McFarland's.

FREE OF COST.

All persons wishing to test the merits of a great remedy—one that will positively cure Consumption, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, or any affection of the Throat and Lungs—are requested to call at A. Turner & Co's Drug Store and get a Trial Bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption free of cost, which will show you what a regular dollar-size bottle will do.

Remember Doll's Great Clearing Sale commencing December 1st. See adv.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.

The advertiser, having been permanently cured of that dread disease, Consumption, by a simple remedy, is anxious to make known to his fellow sufferers the means of cure. To all who desire it, he will send a copy of the prescription used, (free of charge,) with he directions for prepairing and using the same which they will find a SURE CURE for CONSUMPTION, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, &c.

Parties wishing the Prescription, will please address, Rev. E. A, Wilson, 149 Penn st., Williamsburgh, N. Y. 75-127

AGENTS WANTED.—Big pay.—Light Work. Steady Employment. Samples free. Address, M. L. BYRN, 46 Nausau stree New York. 20

VALUABLE PROPERTY

FOR SALE

IN THE TOWN OF DURHAM, IN THE COUNTY OF GREY.

THE following valuable town properties will be sold on reasonable terms or will be rented for a term of years, or exchange for farm propeoty.

1st,

Lot No. 1 on the west side of Garafraxa street and south of Hunter street, opposite Mr. J. H. Hunter's store house, well fenced and first class frame buildings, good cellars, hard and soft water, a most conveniant residence and would make a good business stand.

2nd,

That most desirable property being park lots nos 2 and 3 on the north side of George st., 8 acres more or less, well fenced, front fenced with pickets, one and a half acres of a thriving young orchard and very convenient to the railway station.

The east half of the west half on lot 18 on the west side of countess street with a new frame house and kitchen, good stable and wood shed, well fenced, front fence painted white, hard and soft water on the premises.

4th,

Park Lot No. 8, Wm. Hunter's, Survey.

5th

Lots 1 and 2, Presbyterian Survey.

6th,

Lot No 15 on the North side of Mill street in the village of Markdale close to the railway station, with good frame house thereon. If the above properties are sold the very best title will be given free from all encumbrances.

—Also the—

Following Farming Properties.

will be sold on reasonable terms of payment.

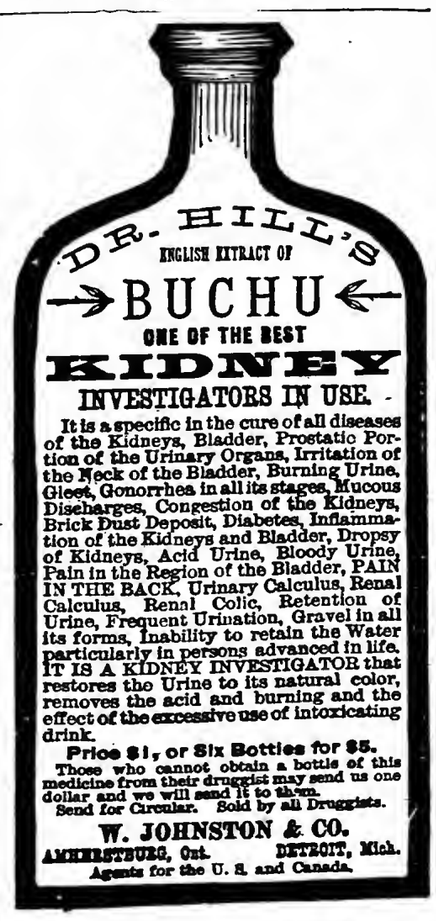
7th,

Lot No. 22, Con. 9 Glenelg, 100 acres more or less, 3½ miles from the T. G. & B. R. at Markdale, 75 acres cleared, a new frame house and two log barns.

8th

Lot No. 93 in the 3rd Con. W. T, & S. R., Glenelg. 50 acres, about 45 acres cleared and good log buildings, about 2½ miles from Markdale station T. G. & B. R.

9th,



The west half lot 17, Con. 4. N. D. R., Glenelg. 50 acres 40 acres cleared, good rough cast house and orchard on the premises. The house and one acre will be reserved during the life of the occupants who are now between 80 and 85 years of age.

10th

East part lot No. 1. con 2 Normanby, 63 acres, about 50 acres cleared, situation about 2 miles from the town of Durham. For further particulars apply to

FINLEY MACRAE, Durham.

Dated 15th August. 1882. tf 104,

Mothers! Mothers! Mothers!

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the excruciating pain of cutting teeth! If so, go at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately—depend upon it; there is no mistake about it. There is not a mother upon earth who has ever used it, who will not tell you at once that it will regulate the bowels, and give rest to the mother, and relief and health to the child, operating like magic. It is perfectly safe to use in all cases, and pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Sold everywhere at 25 cents a bottle. 75-127

Re-Fresh-ing

In the cool assertion of some people that they can sell below cost, &c, it may not be amiss to let the public of Markdale and surrounding country know that

Wilson Benson,

of the "BELFAST HOUSE." MARKDALE, can sell "cheaper than the cheapest," and "better than the best," all kinds of

Groceries, Liquors, &c.

Consisting of

TEAS, TOBACCOS, SPICES, CANNED FISH, ETC.,

And for those wishing pure Wine for sacramental purposes, will find a brand that will equal anything on this side the Atlantic.

Other Liquors equally pure.

SPECIAL! Pure Holland Gin.

Cheese from the best manufactories.

Our Whiskies are from the firm of Gooderham & Worts, Toronto, and the public may rely on receiving them as they are sent.

FLOUR, POTATOES, and everything in the household line kept constantly on hand.

Henceforth my Store will be supplied with Fruits of all kinds, such as

APPLES. PEARS, PLUMS, &c.

FRUIT CAKES of all kinds always kept on hand.

Essences, Hair Oils, and Perfumery of the choicest nectars.

TOILET & FANCY SOAPS, better than the best.

CANADIAN & WESTERN PORK, of first quality.

Everything in the Grocery Line kept on a fuller and more complete scale than at any other place in Markdale.

WILSON BENSON.

PIMPLES.

I will mail (Free) the recipe for a simple VEGETABLE BALM that will remove TAN-FRECKLES, PIMPLES and BLOTCHES, leaving the skin soft, clear and beautiful; also instructions for producing a luxuriant growth of hair on a bald head or smooth face. Address, enclosing a 3c. stamp, Ben. Vandelf & Co., 5 Beekman st., N. Y. 75-127

ERRORS OF YOUTH.

A GENTLEMAN who suffered for years from NERVOUS DEBILITY, PREMATURE DECAY, and all the effects of youthful indiscretion will, for the sake of suffering humanity, send free to all who need it, the recipe and directions for making the simple remedy by which he was cured. Sufferers wishing to profit by the advertiser's experience can do so by addressing in perfect confidence, JOHN B. OGDEN.
75-127 42 Cedar St., New York.

Gold Great chance to make money. Those who always take advantage of the good chances for making money that are offered, generally become wealthy, while those who do not improve such chances remain in poverty. We want many men, women, boys and girls to work for us right in their own localities. Any one can do the work properly from the first start. The business will pay more than ten times ordinary wages. Expensive outfit furnished free. No one who engages fails to make money rapidly You can devote your whole time in the work, or only your spare moments. Full information and all that is needed sent free. Addres. STINSON & Co., Portland Maine. 71-126

MANHOOD

HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED

SEAL We have recently published a new edition of Dr. CULVERWELL'S CELEBRATED ESSAY, on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility; Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, &c., resulting from excesses.

☞ Price, in sealed envelope, only 6 cents, or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

☞ This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Address

The Culverwell Medical Co.,
P.O. box 450 41 Ann St., New York

$500 Reward!

We will pay the above reward for any case of Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Indigestion, Constipation or Costiveness we cannot cure with West's Vegetable Liver Pills, when the directions are strictly complied with. They are purely Vegetable, and never fail to give satisfaction. Sugar Coated, Large Boxes, containing 30 Pills, 25 cts. For sale by all Druggists. Beware of counterfeits and immitations. The genuine manufactured only by JOHN C. WEST & CO., "The Pill Makers," 81 & 83 King St. East, Toronto Ont. Free trial package sent by mail prepaid on receipt of a 3 cent stamp. For sale at Turner & Co. Drug Store.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from active practice having had placed in his hands by an East Indian Missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma, and all Throat and Lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for General Debility and all nervous complaints, after having thoroughly tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, feels it is his duty to make it known to his fellows. The recipe, with full particulars, directions for preparation and use, and all necessary advice and instructions for successful treatment at your own home, will be received by you by return mail, free of charge, by addressing with stamp or stamped, self-addressed, envelope to

DR. J. C. RAYMOND.
164 Washington Street, Brooklyn, N.Y.
110-62

MARKDALE Meat Market.

A constant supply of

Fresh Meats!

on hand, at the

Lowest Living Prices.

Orders solicited, and delivered free to all parts of the Town.

Farmers having fat stock to dispose of, will please leave their addresses.

TERMS, STRICTLY CASH.

FRED. SARJEANT.

Markdale, March 23, 1882. 80-ly

SEEING IS BELIEVING.

GENTLEMEN,—

If you want a first-class

Buggie or Wagon

call at

MCKENNA & MASON'S

CARRIAGE WORKS

MARKDALE.

They can supply you with anything from a

Lumber Wagon

up to

Extension Top Phæton.

To buy from them is to

SAVE MONEY!

They are both practical workmen, and employ none but

PRACTICAL WORKMEN

They guarantee their work Second to none for Lightness of Draught and Superiority of Finish.

They use nothing but First-class White Oak for Wagons, and thrice Extra Second Growth Hickory for light work.

The immense amount of work turned out of McKenna & Mason's shop is sufficient proof of the wide reputation they enjoy for doing good work.

THE BEST IS THE CHEAPEST IN THE END

Poor cheap work we positively will not take.

Special attention given to Re-Trimming and Repainting all classes of Carriage Work.

Satisfaction guaranteed (or No Pay) in

HORSESHOEING

SHOP—On Mill Street opposite to Sproule's Hotel.

McKENNA & MASON.

THOS. MATHEWS,

Harness Establishment!

MARKDALE.

EVERYTHING IN OUR LINE KEPT ON HAND OR MADE TO ORDER ON SHORT NOTICE.

LIVERY!

IN CONNECTION.

GEORGE WILSON,

Wholesale and Retail

BUTCHER!

BEEF, PORK OR MUTTON SUPPLIED, from a single pound to a whole carcass, at the lowest market prices.

FISH & FOWL IN THEIR SEASON

Farmers having Fat Cattle, Sheep, or Pigs to dispose of will do well to call at No. 3 Burns' Block, opposite the new Union Block.

Markdale, Oct. 25th, 1881

Nothing Like Leather.

M. M. M'LEOD,

MARKDALE.

NOT TO BE BEATEN!

All those who may have had the misfortune to have been born barefooted will bear in mind that we have just received the largest and best stock of leather ever before brought into Markdale, consisting of Spanish Sole, French Kip and Calf, and are now prepared to manufacture Ladies, Gents, Youths and Misses boots and shoes, from the stoga to the finest kid and prunella.

Sewed Work a Specialty.

All work warranted. Invisible patching also done here.

M. M. McLEOD.

Markdale, Sept. 19th, 1881.

Christmas Day.

WHAT'S this hurry, what's this flurry,
All throughout the house to-day?
Everywhere a merry scurry,
Everywhere a sound of play.
Something, too, 's the matter, matter,
Out-of-doors as well as in,
For the bell goes clatter, clatter,
Every minute—such a din!

Everybody winking, blinking,
In a queer, mysterious way;
What on earth can they be thinking.
What on earth can be to pay?
Bobby peeping o'er the stair-way,
Bursts into a little shout;
Kitty, too, is in a fair way,
Where she hides, to giggle out.

As the bell goes cling-a-ling-ing
Every minute more and more,
And swift feet go springing, springing,
Through the hall-way to the door,
With a glimpse of box and packet,
And a little rustle, rustle,
Makes such sight and sound and racket,—
Such a jolly bustle, bustle,—
That the youngsters in their places,
Hiding slyly out of sight,
All at once show shining faces,
All at once scream with delight.

Go and ask them what's the matter,
What the fun outside and in—
What the meaning of the clatter,
What the bustle and the din.
Hear them, hear them laugh and shout then,
All together hear them say,
"Why, what have you been about, then,
Not to know it's Christmas day?"

—Nora Perry, in the CHRISTMAS ST. NICHOLAS.

ESPECIALLY FOR LADIES.

Mrs. Langtry's Beauty Analyzed by One of Her Own Sex.

The Princess Mary of Teck—Flirting in the Street-Cars—Small Talk for the Ladies.

Langtry's Beauty Analyzed.

A woman it is who thus relentlessly, in a letter, from New York to the Cincinnati Enquirer, dissects the beauty of Mrs. Langtry: I am not going to harp much on the played-out string of Langtry, and will simply say that those who were reasonable in their expectati ns found her satisfactory, but those who looked for a transcendent beauty were woefully disappointed. I counted five women in the audience who, beyond all question, were a great deal nearer to perfection than this prince's darling. The chief charm was a lady-like aspect and manner, quite out of keeping with the part she was acting in the play. And it was observed that when she did unrehearsed things (as in picking up the dumped flowers from a basket handed to her while in front of the curtain, and leading out her reluctant manager) she was even more graceful and free than when she was following instructions as Hester Grazebrook. It was easy to comprehend how, with the prince of Wales to push her, she has made such a headway in London aristocratic socie y. She has grown thin since the familiar portrait, exposing taper arms and boneless bosom, were made and she made no exhibition of those things, nor is she likely to during her American tour. She is a large-jointed woman, with big hands, and her elbows are larger than the parts of her arms between them and the shoulders, as was plainly disclosed by the tight sleeves of her c stumes. No, she will bare no such arms as she now possesses, believe me. Only one of her dresses was low, and that exposed only a w e lge of skin down the centre of her breast. This garment was of rich, warm-toned yellow satin, simple in style, and fitting perfectly. The waist was heart-shaped, coming low down on the shoulders, and beneath the frill of point lace, which circumscribed the fleshy area and the narrow limits already described, was only a piece of lightly twisted satin following its outlines. The corsage simply carried the line below the waist, and ended in small points. The sleeves reached below the elbow, with a piece of the satin carried round the edge, and a little puff of white silk edged with lace in each, tying it to the arm. The front of the skirt was laid in large plaits, which gave a fullness that was lightly caught here and there, making a careless drapery. This train was long, and its beauty left to depend on its own color and folds. In all of her dressing she was careful to show the outlines of her waist, which is slender, and to my mind, rather out of proportion with her broad shoulders and ample hips. The idea suggested by her figure was not of fleshy roundness at the two wide parts mentioned, but a b g-boned frame not smoothly filled out. The impression was strengthened by the visible action of her shoulder-blades under the thin covering and above the tops of her corsets, as well as by the meagreness of her bosom. I fancied that she was about seven-eighths bone, and when she smiled, with her extensive mouth and white teeth, the unpleasant thought came to me that she was exposing the whole front of her skull, which might at any moment drop out, leaving her head a shapeless mass of hair and skin. Having expressed that horrid idea I must not fail to do the woman justice by saying that, as an entirely, she is about as wholesome, healthy, clean-looking a creature as one would wish to see. She walked with a stride that indicated a sturdy pedestrian, and altogether, she had more out-door breeziness than one would expect in a dainty, drawing-room pet. Langtry was a focus for every glass in the house, instantly on her appearance, and when she made her first exit there arose such a babel of comment that the other actors could not be heard at all. She bore the ordeal without a tremor. I have no doubt she liked it.

"She talks about her personal charms with the utmost freedom," said a journalist who had interviewed her several times.

"Well, I suppose you gentlemen of the press bored her until she talked as a means of getting rid of you quickly," I remarked.

"Bored her," he retorted, "well, that's funny. There wasn't a reporter went down the bay to meet her, and wrote her up for his paper, who wasn't impor uned to call on her at her hotel. And, if he did it; and wrote something more than his managing editor deemed worth publishing, then he soon got a little note begging him to call again. Bored by reporters? Please permit me to langh."

The Girly Girl.

The girly girl, says the Philadelphia Progress, is the truest girl. She is what she seems, and not a sham and a pretense. The slangy girl has a hard job of it not to forget her character. The boy girl and the rapid girl are likewise wearers of masks. The girly girl never bothers about woman rights and woman wrongs. She is a girl and is glad of it. She would not be a boy and grow up into a man and vote and go away to war and puzzle her brain about stocks for a kingdom. She knows nothing about business, and does not want to know anything about it. Her aim is to marry some good fellow and make him a good wife, and she generally succeeds in doing both. She delights in dress and everything that is pretty, and is not ashamed to own that she does. She is pleased when she is admired, and lets you see that she is. She is feminine from the top of her head to the end of her toes and if you try to draw her into the discussion of dry themes she tells you squarely that the conversation does not suit her. She is the personification of frankness. There is not a particle of humbug in her composition. Here is health to the girly girl! May her numbers never grow less.

Kissing as a Cure for Freckles.

One fine evening recently, says a German paper, Mr. R., a government employe in the town of Brunn, was taking a walk in the castle grounds, when, on reaching a less frequented portion of the park, he saw a young lady coming in the opposite direction. As they were about to pass each other, the lady suddenly turned toward Mr. B., threw her arms around his neck and kissed him; then as if ashamed of what she had done, she covered her face with her hands and ran off as fast as she could. The gentleman unable to account for this agreeable surprise, followed the young lady, and, taking her by the arm, asked for an explanation of her strange procedure. "I beg a thousand pardons," was the reply of the blushing damsel: "you must be greatly shocked at my behaviour. I had been to consult a 'wise woman' as to the best means of charming away the freckles on my face, and she advised me to kiss the first gentleman I met, when they would be sure to disappear." The couple continued their walk together, and though we are not told whether the singular remedy proved effecacious or not, it may interest the reader to learn that, not many days afterward, the two were joined together for better or for worse.

Waiter Girls in Germany.

Nasby writes thus of Germany: It is astonishing how alike everything is the world over. In these beer halls the waiter girls who have plump, shapely arms wear short sleeves, while those whose arms are very thin and not at all shapely wear long sleeves, holding that short sleeves are immodest.

This conversation probably occurs between girls of the two types, the plump and the scraggy:

"You are entirely right, Bertha darling; short sleeves may be immodest. On such arms as yours, my love, they would be positively indecent."

And then they wouldn't kiss each other, and move off as on a happy campaign against incoming thirst. But Pauline, the plump, would laugh a saucy laugh, and Bertha, the skinny, would assume a very sour look. Likewise those who are too plain to attract the attention of customers are very severe upon flirting, and have no hesitation in asserting that the pretty ones are bold, pert things. It makes but little difference in what country people are born they are sons and daughters of Adam and Eve, and Adam and Eve runs through them all.

The Sin-Impelling Sealskin.

The sealskin sacque so popular among women, says the New York Times, has long been an object of masculine dread, according to the newspaper humorists. The comic department of a Chicago, Cincinnati, or St. Louis paper never fails to contain some reference to the sufferings of the man who is requested to buy a sealskin sacque for his wife, and the western father is, according to the same authority, constantly brought to the verge of bankruptcy through buying sealskin sacques for his daughters.

There is another grave charge which may be brought against the same attractive and costly garment. It leads to more violations of our revenue laws than does any other article known to importers. Sealskin sacques can be bought in Canada much more cheaply than in the United States, and the dream of every enterprising American woman is to smuggle it through the United States custom-house. The chief statistician of the custom-house asserts that 17,000 (in round numbers) American women annually visit Canada in order to make this dream a blessed reality. Of these, 2,718 are detected in the possesion of sealskin sacques, and are made to pay duty thereon; 19 openly acknowledge their possession of the dutiable garment, and after failing to bribe the inspectors with smiles and sweet words, pay the duty, and the rest of the 17,000 successfully smuggle their purchases.

Now, when we think what the act of smuggling a sealskin sacque through the custom-house involves, the falsehoods that must be told and sworn to; the loss of self-respect consequent upon the commission of perjury and fraud, and the terrible strain upon the temper that results from making a sealskin sacque temporarily take the place of the delicate and esoteric cambric fabrics said by experts to be worn by ladies in the summer season, we comprehend the sealskin sacque is a fearfully demoralizing garment. Women who would never think of smuggling steel rails, hemp rope, or English blankets can not resist the temptation, to smuggle sealskin sacques. and we shall probably never know the vast extent of the demoralization which the gratification of this propensity entails.

A Canadian Romance.

Thirty-six years ago, according to the Montreal Star, there lived in that pleasant little town down the river called Sorel—very little it was then—a youth and a maiden. The name of the youth was George Beaupre, the name of the maiden Mary Ann Pearce. They belonged to families of moderate circumstances. He, with the strength and devotion of young manhood, loved this maiden, and wooed her with that earnestness which only such a lover can. He was given every encouragement; was, some say, actually accepted; was congratulating himself, at least, on the smooth coursing of true love, when suddenly a rival appeared, and everything for him turned back. The rival was one Jacob Savage of the same town. Pretty soon she and Savage were married and settled down in the place, and then young Beaupre's hope died out. He tried to work on as before, but could not. He closed up his business, settled up his affairs, and started to the far west, toward which so many adventurous spirits were about that time shaping their course.

From that day to within a few weeks ago he had not set foot in this part of Canada. He had worked hard, saved carefully, prospered and laid up property worth at least $200,000. He had never married. He was getting up toward 60 years of age. Several weeks ago he took an idea to go back once more to see his friends, and he started east. He searched out relatives in Sorel and Montreal, but found few that he remembered. He inquired for the woman, who, as a girl, had so many years before thrown him overboard for a rival. They told him she was widowed; her husband had been dead many years; she had been living several years in Montreal; he went to call upon her; met her, and then——. He found her getting old, in poor circumstances, with several children, but that made no difference; he saw only the girl of thirty-six years before. On Saturday they were married by his lordship Bishop Fabre, the wealthy bridegroom being content with no other dignitary than the highest in that part of the country. He has bestowed all the happiness that wealth and affection can upon his bride and her children, and in a short time tney will go to his house in the Black Hills.

Flirting With Street-Car Conductors.

"It isn't our fault always, depend on that, and there isn't as much of it done as some of the officials would have the public believe." The speaker was a conductor on one of the Pittsburgh street-car lines, and he uttered the above remark in answer to the question of a reporter on the subject of flirtation.

"What interest have some of the officials of the road in making the public believe conductors are as a general rule, inclined to engage in surreptitious courting with their female passengers?" inquired the reporter.

"Why, simply this: They have several 'spotters' at work on the road. These 'spotters' find that two or three conductors are beating the company systematically. It is a hard thing to prove that a street-car conductor is a thief, and so the best thing to be done with a suspected man is to 'fire' him from his position. Perhaps three go at a time, and in answer to the inquisitive the superintendent or secretary says he was discharged for flirting with women on his car."

"But is there no flirting done?

"Why, certainly there is, and as I say, it isn't all our fault. A pretty girl gets in your car; and for half-way to the city sits and stares you in the face; or may be gives you an encouraging smile inviting familiarity. What can you expect of a young fellow but that he will respond suitably? Married conductors are not invulnerable to women's coquetry. Why, I know one woman on Penn avenue that watches day and night for one man's car, and every time it passes the conductor responds to the wave of the handkerchief. Such things sometimes result in the ruin of families, but as a general thing the flirtation amounts to nothing, though once in a while the presumptuous conductor gets thumped for his trouble by some big brother."

"What class of women flirt with street-car men?"

"Oh, school girls mostly, and giddy married women, who carry their husband's honor in their hand. Depend on it, though, no woman that thinks anything of herself will flirt with a conductor."

Where to Put a Kiss.

An esteemed young friend of Hamilton asks a funny question. He wants to know where he shall put his kisses. Probably any number of people, without much thought, would rush rapidly forward to tell him all about it and consider the conundrum a perfectly easy one. The problem, however, is really very difficult, and any one who has had experience enough to know what kissing is will shrink from quick or direct advice on the subject.

As a matter of course the young man who has kisses to give away will give them to his girl if she is willing; if she isn't willing—but this is so improbable that it would be a waste of time to say anything about it. If a young man who has no girl of his own he will naturally—such is the waywardness of human nature—find some one else's girls or girls, and to some a good many girls is not too much of a good thing. They say it isn't such a bad thing sometimes when you find you have kissed the wrong girl, if there can be any wrong girl in a matter like that.

But the trouble on the young man's mind seems to be regarding the proper place for the kiss. He does not feel certain whether he should kiss his girl on the lips, or the forehead, or the chin, or the cheek, or the hand. There are some young men who would regard the poorest of all these chances as the extreme of bliss. But such young men lack the snap and enterprise which a wide-awake and desirable girl rather likes. The young man who hesitates and trifles with uncertainty about the proper site upon which to build his kiss will lose the delight of kissing. If there were a worse fate he would deserve it. There is, however, no worse fate.

Kissing the hand is a very neat but colorless sort of compliment. It is unsatisfactory to both parties, they say. We are also reliably informed that kissing the forehead or the chin is a cold sort of thing and not largely indulged in by people of good taste. The cheek, if not too hard, is understood to be very fair kissing ground, but good judges have very generally agreed upon the lips as offering superior inducements. If his mouth is not too large or the girl's mouth is not too small, or if the girl's mouth is not too large and his too small, perhaps the young man who wants advice had better stick to the lips. If there is anything sweet in a kiss—and doubtless there is—he will find it there.

"Well madame, how's your husband today?" "Why, doctor, he's no better." "Did you get the leeches?" "Yes, but he only took three of them raw—I had to fry the rest."

BRACE UP—Your system for work. ZOPESA, the new Dyspepsia and Liver remedy, attends strictly to business in correcting the Stomach, Liver and Kidneys. Sample bottles, 10 cents; large bottles, 75 cents.

Printing in China.

In an interesting article on printing in China The North China Herald says that the first great promoter of the art of printing was Feng Ying Wang, who in 932 A. D. advised the Emperor to have the Confucian classics printed with wooden blocks engraved for the purpose. The first books were printed in a regular manner, and in pursuance of a decree in 953. The mariners' compass and rockets were invented about the same time, showing that at this period men's minds were much stirred toward invention. Twenty years after the edict the blocks of the classics were pronounced ready, and were put on sale. Large-sized editions, which were the only ones printed at first, were soon succeeded by pocket editions. The works printed under the Lung emperors at Hangchow were celebrated for their beauty; those of western China came next, and those of Fokhein last. Moveable types of copper and lead were tried about the same time; but it was thought that mistakes were more numerous with them, and therefore the fixed blocks were prepared. Paper made from cotton was tried, but it was so expensive that the bamboo made paper held its ground. In the Sung dynasty the method was also tried of engraving on soft clay and afterward hardening it by baking. The separate characters were not thicker than ordinary copper coin. Each of them was in fact a seal. An ironplate was prepared with a facing of turpentine, wax, and the ashes of burnt paper. Over this was placed an iron frame, in which the clay types were set up until it was full. The whole was then sufficiently heated to melt the wax facing. An iron plate was placed above the types, making them perfectly level, the wax being just soft enough to allow the types to sink into the proper depth. This being done it would be possible to print several hundred or thousand copies with great rapidity. Two forms prepared in this way were ready for the pressman's use so that when he had done with one he would proceed with another without delay. Here is undoubtedly the principle of the printing-press of Europe, although western printers can dispense with a soft wax bed for types and can obtain a level surface without this device. Perhaps the need of capital to lay in a stock of types, the want of a good type-metal easily cut and sufficiently hard, and the superior beauty of the Chinese characters when carved in wood, have prevented the wide employment of the moveable types which are so convenient for all alphabetic writing. The inventor of this mode of printing in moveable types five centuries before they were invented in Europe was named Pi Sheng.

Distance of the Sun.

The problem of the sun's distance is of paramount importance, and fully justifies the outlay of brain, labor, and money lavished on the transit of Venus which it is hoped will correct past errors. It is the unit or yardstick of celestial measurement, the standard by which everything outside of the earth in the material universe is measured, excepting the distance of the moon. A mistake here makes all celestial computation inaccurate, the diameter of every planet, the radius of every orbit, the distance of every star. Thus, the nearest fixed star in the northern hemisphere is 61 Cygni. Its distance is estimated at about 366,000 times the sun's distance or earth's radius. This means 366,000 times 92,885,000 miles. If there be an error of half a million miles in this estimate of the sun's distance, it will readily be seen that the error in the star's distance takes on gigantic proportions.

The 6th December will therefore be a great day on the annals of the nineteenth century. Transit observers will do their utmost to obtain a more accurate determination of the sun's distance. If they do not reach perfect success, and there is little hope of such a result, they will have the satisfaction of feeling that they are laboring in a noble cause. For the observations made during the transit of 1882 will be a rich legacy to aid the astronomers who, 122 years hence, will observe the next transit in 2004.

We can only wish for good weather and good luck to the brave adventurers, and join in the prayer of the great astronomer, Halley, who, from an observation of the transit of Mercury in 1677 at St. Helena, was the first to discover the scientific import of transits; In recommending to future astronomers a careful observation of the transit of 1761, he says, in closing:

"May Heaven favor their observation with the most perfect weather. And when they shall have attained their object, and determined as well as they can our distance from the sun, let them remember that it was an Euglishman who first conceived this fortunate idea."—Scientific American.

Dr. Talmage Describes a Good Woman.

You see hundreds of men who are successful only because there is a reason at home why they are successful. If a man marry a good, honest soul he makes his fortune; if he marry a fool, the Lord help him. The wife may be a silent partner in the firm. There may be only masculine voices down on the exchange, but there often comes from the home circle a potential and elevating influence. The woman of Shunem, at whose house the prophet Elisha stopped, was a great woman and the superior of her husband. He, as far as I can understand, was what we often find in our day, a man of large fortune and only a modicum of brains, intensely quiet, sitting a long while in the same place without moving hand or foot; if you say yes responding yes; if you say no responding no; insane eyes half shut, mouth wide open, maintaining his position in society only because he has a large patrimony. His wife belonged to that class of people who need no name to distinguish them, no title of princess or queen. She was great in her hospitality. Jupiter had the surname of "The Hospitable," and he was said to avenge the wrongs of strangers. Homer extolled hospitality in his verse. The Arabs were punctilious about it.

The Roman Catholic Archbishop of Quebec, Mgr. Taschereau, has issued a pastoral in which he urges the faithful to give no heed to the allurements of American immigration agents. He fears that if his people leave Canada for the United States they will forsake their faith, and "only encounter deception and misery."

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE

The most successful Remedy ever discovered, as it is certain in its effects and does not blister. READ PROOF BELOW.

Kendall's Spavin Cure

HAMILTON, Mo., June 14, 1881.

B. J. KENDALL & Co.,—Gents:—This is to certify that I have used Kendall's Spavin Cure, and have found it to be all that is recommended to be and in fact more than I have removed by using the above: Curb, Bone Spavins, Ring-bone, Splints, and cheerfully testify and recommend it to be the best thing for any bony substance I ever used, and have tried many as I have made that my study for years.

Respectfully yours,
P. V. CRISE.

FROM

Col. T. L. Foster

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, May 10, 1881.

DR B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents:—I had a very valuable Hambletonian colt that became very highly, he had a large bone spavin on one joint and a small one on the other which made him very lame; I had him under the charge of two veterinary surgeons which failed to cure him. I was one day reading an advertisement of Kendall's Spavin Cure in the Chicago Express. I determined at once to try it, and got our druggist here to send for it, they ordered three bottles; I took it all and thought I would give it a thorough trial, I used it according to directions and by fourth day the colt ceased to be lame and the lumps have disappeared. I used but one bottle and the colt's limbs are as free from lumps and as smooth as any horse in the state. He is entirely cured. The cure was so remarkable that I let two of my neighbors have the remaining two bottles who are also using it.

Very respectfully,
L. T. FOSTER.

Kendall's Spavin Cure

WINGHAM, Ont., Jan. 17, 1882.

DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents:—I have to certify that I have used Kendall's Spavin Cure, bought from C. E. Williams, druggist, Wingham, Ont., and do without hesitation pronounce it to be an invaluable remedy for the cure of Spavins, Ringbones, or Curbs. I used it on a bone spavin of several years growth which it completely removed, and can safely say it will remove any Spavin, Curb or Ringbone it properly used. I have also recommended friends to use it, who have done so with perfect success. I gladly recommend this public, and will answer any questions by letters sent me.

Yours &c.
GEORGE BRYCE.

Kendall's Spavin Cure

ON HUMAN FLESH.

WEST ENOSBURGH, Vt., Feb. 15, 1881.

DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents:—Several months ago I injured my knee joint which caused an enlargement to grow the size of a walnut and caused me very severe pain for the time for four or five weeks, when I began to use Kendall's Spavin Cure with the most satisfactory results. It has entirely removed the enlargement and stopped the lameness and pain. I have long known it to be excellent for horses but now I know it to be the best liniment for human flesh that I am acquainted with.

Yours truly,
T. P. LAWRENCE.

ST. JOHN, P Q Oct. 27, 1881.

DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents:—I have used your Spavin Cure with great success for spavins, curbs and splints. I know it to be a good remedy for ringbones, bone spavin, cuts, galls and all kinds of lameness and other difficulties about the horse. One of my mares sprained his ankle very badly. I applied Kendall's Spavin Cure and I never saw anything work like it, he was well in a few days. I know it to be good for man as well as beast. I procured one of your Treatise on the Horse by mail for 25cts. and I think it was a means of saving me $100 on one horse. I treated according to the directions given in your book for displaced stifle.

Yours truly,
WM. J. PEARSON.

Send address for Illustrated Circular, which we think gives positive proof of its virtues. No remedy has ever met with such unqualified success to our knowledge, for beast as well as man.

Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. All druggists have it or can get it for you, or it will be sent to any address on receipt of price by the proprietors. DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

Sold by all Druggists.

LYMAN, SONS & CO., Montreal, P. Q.
Wholesale Agents

GEORGE NOBLE,

INSURANCE AND LAND AGENT

LICENSED AUCTIONEER

For the County of Grey.

AGENT for the following reliable Companies:
CITIZENS', of Montreal,
AGRICULTURAL, of Watertown,
TRADE & COMMERCE, (Mutual) of Toronto.

A number of Choice Farms for sale. Also Village Lots.

Auction Sales conducted in Town or Country on Shortest Notice. Charges moderate. Bills, Blank Notes, and Stamps provided.

GEO. NOBLE.

HE CANADIAN REBELLION.

Survivor's Recollections of the Affair of 1838.

A representative of the St. Louis Republi- one day last week fell in with Mr. W. S. ichols, one of the survivors of the so-called ..., who burned the British steamer ... Robert Peel in American waters on the ... of the 22nd of May, 1838. Only two ...ons who participated in that affair are ... Mr. Nichols is a saloon-keeper at ..., Jefferson county, N. Y., and his ...ociate, Jefferson county, N. Y., and his ...ovring compatriot in the raid is Marshall ... Forward, now at Rochester, N. Y., ...here he carries on a large planing-mill and ...extensive lumber-yard.

The Sir Robert Peel, it will be remember- ...s many now living, was burned in re- ...ation for the destruction of the American ...mer Caroline, Dec. 29, 1837, by a party ...Canadians under Capt, Drew, who board- ...the boat at Schlosser, and after killing ...d drowning several of the crew, set fire ...the boat and sent her adrift over Niagara ...lls. This outrage, combining, as it did, ...e crimes of murder and arson committed ...a British armed force on American wat- ...s, produced a tremendous excitement ...ng the entire frontier from Detroit to ...aine, and President Van Buren made it ...e subject of

A SPECIAL MESSAGE TO CONGRESS.

...e Alexander McLeod, a British subject, ...me three years after the event, in a spirit of ...olent defiance, returned to the county of ...iagara, where the outrage had been com- ...itted, and foolishly boasted that he had ...en one of the destroyers of the Carolina. ...e was arrested, indicted, and tried. After ...lengthy trial, and the assumption by the ...ritish Government of McLeod's offence, ...d a prolonged diplomatic controversy, ...tween the two nations that threatened to ...d in war, it turned out that McLeod was ...t there as he had boasted, and he was ...ccordingly acquitted by the jury.

It is curious to remark on the statement ...of F. B. Hough, of the bureau of forestry, ...Washington, who was in St. Louis re- ...ently, that the Caroline was built on a ...sail boat-ting sail vessel in South Carolina ...(hence her name), and her timber was the ...work of that section. At Troy, N. Y., ...e was changed into a small steamer, and ...ter running between Troy and Albany she ...as taken through the Erie canal to Lake ...Ontario and through the Welland canal to ...Chippewa, where she was employed in the ...mail service until she was seized and burn- ...ed by the British.

The whole frontier was in a blaze of ex- ...citement, public meetings were held ...throughout the country to express an hon- ...est indignation at the outrage and invoke ...the national government to avenge the in- ...sult. Advantage was taken of this inflamed ...state of the public mind by William Lyon ...Mackenzie and other Canadian refugees to ...form foot expeditions for the invasion of ...the Canadas. "Hunters' lodges" were ...started in the large towns, to organize a hos- ...tile movement. The state arsenal at Water- ...town, N. Y., was robbed, and other means ...taken to gather arms and munitions of war. ...During the height of this excitement ...the Sir Robert Peel, on her passage ...from Prescott to the head of the lake, while ...lying on fuel at Wells, or Wellesley's Is- ...land in the St. Lawrence, was boarded by a ...company of armed men, all Canadian re- ...fugees, under the leadership of the celebrat- ...ed Bill Johnson, who, after driving the crew ...ashore, set fire to the steamer. There were ...many conflicting accounts of the affair at ...the time, but the following statement, as ...made by a participant to a Republican re- ...porter, and made after the lapse of so many ...years, when the feelings engendered ...have entirely died out, may be accepted as ...truthful:

MR. NICHOL'S STORY.

Mr. Nichols said: "There were twenty- ...seven men in the party. We rendezvoused on ...Navy Island (one of the Thousand Is- ...lands), and were concealed by one Scanlon, ...an auctioneer from Kingston. We were ...all Canadians. I left Ogdensburgh for ...French Creek, where I met friends who told ...me there was some enterprise on foot, and ...asked me to join them. I did not then know ...the object or that Bill Johnson was the ...leader, and I did not see him at our place of ...rendezvous. Scanlon said he was the lead- ...er, and wanted a competent person to act as ...second in command. He placed a barrel ...upright on its head and leaped over it at a ...bound. He then said that the man who ...could do the feat without touching the bar- ...rel should be his first lieutenant. I jumped ...over the barrel with perfect ease, clearing it ...without touching it.

"On the night of the 28th of May the ...Sir Robert Peel was observed coming up the ...river, and preparations were made to board ...her. We were disguised—some with hand- ...kerchiefs on our faces and others with what- ...ever material was at hand. The boat tied ...up at MacDonald's wharf on Wells' island ...to take on wood. Just before we came up, ...as was subsequently learned, our enterprise ...came very near proving a failure. As the ...boat was being made fast to shore Capt. ...Armstrong, the commander of the Peel, ...went ashore and was observed in conversa- ...tion with MacDonald, the owner of the ...wharf. MacDonald intimated to the captain ...that there were "patriots" under Bill John- ...son around, who no doubt were intent on ...mischief, and he was cautioned to beware. ...The captain, with an affectation of contempt, ...spoke up in a loud voice so as to be heard ...by those standing around, that he had 100 ...soldiers in the hold of his boat, but the ...assertion did not have the effect intend- ...ed. It

DID NOT INTIMIDATE ANYONE.

"At a given signal we rushed on board with ...shouts of "Remember the Caroline," and in ...three minutes had complete control of the ...boat. We ordered the passengers to go on ...shore, allowing them to take their baggage ...and assuring them that they would not be ...molested. All the passengers and crew, as ...was supposed, were put on shore, except the ...chambermaid, who was allowed to remain on ...board to pack her things. The boat was ...then anchored out in the stream, a few rods ...from the wharf, so that while burning it ...would not destroy the property belonging to ...Americans. We put the chambermaid, who ...had remained on board until the anchor was ...cast, on the jolly-boat and sent her ashore. ...The clerk, who had been on a spree at Brock- ...ville the night before, was sound asleep, and, ...not being discovered by the boarding-party, was only awakened by the crackling of the flames and made a NARROW ESCAPE.

Yes, I approved of the act of burning the Peel, and I approve of it now. Still it was a foolhardy attempt. That very thing led to the letting up of the tyranny that Great Britain was holding over Canada. Our object was not plunder. The valuables that were saved from the flames were delivered up to the owners. I give the following instance: Mr. Forward found in the clerk's office a package of money which was consigned to parties in Toronto, and he secured it. He said nothing about it, but after arrest and the preliminary trial at Depauville he did not want the money found on him, so he put the roll into Bill Smith's bed. Smith, on rolling round, found something hard under him, and finding the package called in the constable, and handing him the package saying that somebody had been making game of him. The package was delivered by the constable to the justice of the peace, who, on opening it found it, to contain four thousand and odd dollars, which was immediately forwarded to the parties in Toronto to whom it was consigned. After our arrest we were taken to Watertown, N. Y., and put in jail. One of our party, Anderson, was put on trial as a test case. Three indictments were found against him. He was tried on the first indictment, that of arson, for setting fire to a boat while the clerk was asleep on board, but the testimony of Capt. Armstrong, who swore that the boat was boarded by the attacking party, with loud shouts and yells, an admission that was adroitly used by the defence, went to show that the noise was sufficient to awaken the clerk, and Anderson was cleared on that charge. He was admitted to bail on the second and third indictments. The trial was before Judge Isaac H. Bronson, of the United States district court, the only Judge who had jurisdiction. He resigned to run for Congress, and was subsequently appointed by President Van Buren a judge in Florida, where he died. After he left, District Judge Gridley, of Utica, the "stem judge," came on to try the cases.

THE TRIALS

were reopened on the 12th of November, when the district attorney, George C. Sherman, said he was not ready, he claiming that Bill Johnson, still at large, was keeping the witnesses back, such as Dr. Scott, who was a passenger on the Peel, and others, from testifying.

Judge Gridley then said; "If you are not ready for trial I will discharge the first indictment and admit the prisoners to bail on the other indictments." At the regular term he came on to try us, and the district attorney again was not ready. The judge then let us out, subject to rearrest whenever the district attorney was ready with his witnesses. Our attorneys were Bernard B. Bagley, Charles E. Clark, Thomas C. Chittenhen, and Judge Mason, the most eminent lawyers in the State. The popular feeling was strongly in our favor, and in some of the towns on the road to Auburn the stages were stopped with the object of rescuing those concerned in burning the Peel, had they been sentenced and en route to prison. A bigamist sentenced at Auburn was subjected to considerable annoying delay by the stopping of the stage all along the road by the sympathizers who wanted to know if he was one of the Peel prisoners.

The above is Mr. Nichol's statement in nearly his language. He would have made a first-class Fenian, though the part he took in resiting oppression of the "tyranny of Great Britain" long preceded the raids of that class of patriots on Canadian soil. He said that the uprising of 1838 in Canada grew out of the feeling of oppression. It was, he said, to get a change of government, but the Reformers were betrayed by the Methodist church. In 1838 the Tories held the power through the

INTRIGUES OF THE BRITISH METHODISTS.

Their leader was Charles Egerson Ryerson, editor of the Christian Guardian, at Hamilton. He and his church had been with the Reform party up to that time. Sir John Colborne, the Governor General, was recalled and Sir Francis Bond Head sent out to take his place. He convened parliament at Toronto. The parliament passed a reform measure to test the sincerity of the Governor General, and he vetoed it. Again to try him, they passed a second and a third reform measure, and he vetoed them. The parliament then voted to stop supplies, when the Governor dissolved them and ordered a new election. Then it was that Ryerson came out with a leader recommending his church to rally to the support of the Governor. That church, obeying the dictum of their leader, voted the Tory ticket. William Lyon McKenzie, of the third riding of York, was three times elected by the Reformers, and was three times expelled from parliament. McKenzie then raised the standard of revolt in Toronto, but was expelled by McNab and sought refuge on Navy Island.

All subsequent attempts for the invasion of Canada proved abortive. As a sequel to Nichol's statement of the burning of the Peel, it may be added that the old bulk of the boat was a conspicuous object in the St. Lawrence near Mullet creek to passing steamers for twenty-five years after the boat was burned. Bill Johnson, the leader of the gang, with eight others, baffled all attempts to capture them, although a joint search among the islands was made by both Governments under Maj. Gen. Macomb, of the United States, and Col. Dundas, of the British army. Kate, the daughter of Bill Johnson, known as the heroine of the Thousand Islands, conveyed intelligence and provisions to the father. Johnson publicly acknowledged the act, with the motives that influenced him, in a proclamation, stating that he was a natural-born citizen of Canada, and certifying that he held a commission in the patriot service of Upper Canada as commander-in-chief of the naval forces and flotilla, and as such he commanded the expedition that attacked and destroyed the steamer Sir Robert Peel. He added: "The men under my command in that expedition were nearly all English subjects. My headquarters were on an island in the St. Lawrence without the jurisdiction of the United States, at a place named by me Fort Wallace. It was British territory. I yet hold possession of that station. I act under orders. The object of my movement is the independence of the Canadas. I am not at war with the commerce or property of citizens of the United States."

The proclamation is dated June 10th, 1838. Johnston was eventually captured and tried before Alfred Conkling, the father of Roscoe, on a charge of violating the neutrality laws, and acquitted. He was again arrested, escaped, and a reward offered for his apprehension. He was finally arrested, tried, and sentenced to a year in jail and a fine of $250. His daughter Kate shared his imprisonment. On the expiration of half of his time of sentence he again escaped one night, and walked forty miles before morning. After tranquility was restored he went to Washington with a petition, numerously signed, asking for a pardon, which was refused by Van Buren, but which was soon after granted by Harrison.

Bill Johnston was born in Canada, his father being Irish and mother Dutch. He died in February, 1870, at the age of 88 years. He had been for some years lighthouse keeper in the vicinity where the Peel was burned.

Lieut. Lucius O'Brien, of the 8th United States infantry, the poet soldier, author of the famous army song, "Benny Havens, O!" wrote a poem dated French Creek, December 16, 1838, from which the following is quoted:

TO MISS KATE JOHNSTON.

"Her efforts to relieve her outlawed father, amid the perils of war and the dangers of the storm, are on record in the details of the Canadian rebellion of 1838. Unaccompanied she would venture in the most tempestous weather, in her little skiff to find his hiding place and minister to his necessities. No night too dark, no lightning too vivid, for her labors of love."

ay with thy bark, lovely maid, o'er sea,
On thy heaven-born mission, away;
Undeterred by the sentinels' watchfulness,
flee,
Where a father regrets thy delay.
Oh, who but a daughter, the purest, sincerest,
Would brave the vexed elements' strife;
The frowns of the stern, and the sighs of the dearest,
To watch o'er a doomed father's life

Kate Johnson, the beautiful heroine so often mentioned in connection with the events of that period, married Mr. Charles H. Hawes, and died at French Creek in March, 1878, aged nearly 60 years.

Prime Donne and their Clothes.

Emma Abbott, according to The St. Louis Globe-Democrat, is always ready for an interview. A reporter met her behind the scenes at the opera house the other night, as happy as a lark, and when questioned by the newspaper man about the cause of her happy frame of mind answered that she had won a diamond ring from her husband on Cleveland's majority. She wagered that the democratic candidate for governor of New York would get over 50,000 majority; he got over 150,000, and she got the ring, a five karat solitaire, which sparkled upon one of her fingers.

"If I had lost," said Miss Abbott, "I would now feel very much as Mme. Gerster used to feel just about this time when she sang Amina. How is that? Well, she got very mad. The costumer who made dresses for her when she with Strakosch—Nina Cerbi—told me that Mme. Gerster always tore the bridal veil she wore in 'Somnambula' to pieces. So, too, when she sang Lucia she kept picking at the waist of her peasant dress until it was in ribbons, and when she came off the stage took a scissors and cut the front. She wouldn't wear the same dress twice. Strakosch paid for her wardrobe, so that it did not cost her anything to indulge her passion to destroy the garments. Cerbi said Gerster was very sweet off the stage, but always got mad as a hornet when she appeared in opera; she couldn't sing without first getting mad. As Cerbi said, 'the more she get mad, the more good she sing.'"

"Mme. Cerbi, I suppose, knew all the prime donne?" the reporter suggested.

"Oh! yes, and told many stories about them. Nilsson, she said, was greatly feared by the costumers, because she was so extremely hard to please. Patti was just the contrary very easy to suit; she took everything just as it came. Minnie Hauk was particular only about her boots; she liked pretty boots, and was fond of showing her nicely-shaped feet."

"I am glad to see," said the prima, "that Salvini has met with such a nice reception in New York. He is an old and dear friend of mine. I met him in Florence when I was studying in 1875, and he took me to his home on the Arno, where I saw his sweet little English wife, with her blue eyes and fair hair, worshipping her husband as if he were a god. Why, one day he fixed up a very ordinary pedestal, in one of the rooms and covered it with green baize and had brass tacks sticking out at every point. A cheap carpenter could have fixed it up ten times more artistically, yet the tragedian's wife went into ecstacies over it, and thought and said there was nothing like it. A very simple thing but it shows how much she thought of him and of what he did. But I ought not to talk of Salvini in this way. He was very good to me, and gave me letters that proved of great service. He also encouraged me to work hard, saying that all his own success had come only from the hardest kind of labor. He told me he had studied Othello four years before attempting to play it on the stage and I see by the papers that he gave his King Lear the same lengthy study and attention."

Miss Abbott wanted to say something about her own success the present season, and the excellence of her company, but the reporter cut her short, and was moving away when the prima called out:

"Be kind enough to say that Denver baby does not exist. It is a first-class myth. We have nothing of the infant caliber in our company, although Gus Hall and John Gilbert, whom we call Jumbo and Bolivar, have asked to be cast for the babies in 'Norma,' which we are soon to produce."

Although as regards the interior life of the Spanish Court King Alphonso has made, in accordance with the spirit of the times, very liberal modifications of the extremely rigid etiquette observed in past years, the pomp which has always been characteristic of Spain with regard to public ceremonies in which the King takes part continues to be exercised on the reception of the newly-accredited representatatives of foreign countries. The etiquette of the ceremony is precisely the same now as was observed in Spain's palmiest days, when nothing that the wealth and the love of ostentation could do to enhance the solemnity of such occasions and give the new comer an imposing idea of the power of the Spanish monarchs was neglected.

THE JOYCE MASSACRE

THE STORY OF THE CRIME.

A Wild Locality.—Scenes of Dark Deeds.—A Terrible Night.—Food for Dogs.

The terrible locality in which the crime was committed, on the night of the 27th of August last, lies in the wildest and loneliest district of the most remote regions of the Joyce country, Connemara, and is almost inaccessible, owing to the mountain fastnesses and miles of lake around which it is situated. From Cong it is over twelve miles distant, and from Maam it is nearly an equal distance, these being the two nearest villages to the scene of the murder. Within views are the water of Lough Mask, beneath whose glassy surface were last January found the bodies of Joseph and John Huddy, the two bailiffs who were captured by a band lying in ambush and tied together—whether first killed remains unknown—placed in a sack and flung in the lough. Here, also, Mr. George Robinson, the agent of Colonel Clements (Lord Leitrim's heir,) was fired at, but

ESCAPED ASSASSINATION,

and yet, ten miles distant lies the ground where Lord Montmorres was shot dead and the place where the boy Gibson was assassinated. The cabin lies in a hollow at the mountain ranges, the situation being one of the loneliest and most inaccessible imaginable. The land here forms a portion of the estate of Colonel Clements, whose tenantry in the Joyce country, numbering some three or four hundred, have with one or two exceptions, not paid a single farthing of rent for the past three years. John Joyce was one of these tenants. He was a man of about forty-five years of age, and some considerable time ago held a farm from the murdered Earl of Leitrim at a district in the Joyce country called Derry Park, but had been evicted. In 1877, then being a widower with four children, he married the poor woman

WHO SHARED HIS TRAGIC FATE.

She was a widow, and, at the time of the wedding, was in possession of a farm at Maamtrassna. Since then he had lived peaceably upon the farm, his mother, Margaret Joyce, eighty five years of age; his daughter, Margaret Joyce, eighteen years of age, and his sons, Michael Joyce, sixteen years of age, and Patrick Joyce, eleven years of age, residing in the same house with himself and his wife Bridget. His oldest son, Martin, a young man of about twenty years, lived at Clenbur, being a servant in the employment of George Hare, a farmer, and to this circumstance he owes his escape from being one of the victims of the bloody tragedy.

It appears that the Joyce family retired to bed at their usual hour, John Joyce and his wife sleeping on a miserable little bed composed of rags and straw and placed in a slight recess in the wall, a few feet from the door, on the left hand side as the cabin is entered.

THE REST OF THE FAMILY

slept in one bed, a wretched couch in the inner apartment, the old woman and one of her grandsons lying with their heads towards the little window, and Margaret and her older brother lying in a contrary direction. All was quiet for the first few hours, till about one o'clock in the morning, when as Michael related with his dying breath, he heard shots. The door was taken off its hinges and a number of armed assassins poured into the cabin. The father was shot on the floor, having sprung out of bed; the wife was bludgeoned to death, and then the inner room was entered. The feeble old grandmother was attacked and her skull was crushed in by a rain of blows which left bone, blood and brain one mass of pulp. Michael was shot in the head and stomach; his sister was struck on the head by a blow which left her a corpse, and Patrick, the younger child was badly beaten over the head and face with a stick. Michael, wounded fatally and through a bullet rent in the stomach, crawled out of the bed in which lay the corpses of his grandmother and his sister. He found his father lying dead on the floor and his step-mother dying in her bed. Terrified and faint, afraid to return to that horrible bed, reeling with gore and ghastly with its dead, than he had left in the inner room, trembling with dread to remain by the naked corpse of his father, feeling the pangs of death himself, he crept in by the side of his father's wife. She lay till morning, but though her head and face had been beaten into a bloody mass she did not die till some time subsequently.

HIS BOWELS PROTRUDING,

Hours slowly passed before assistance came. At length the son of a farmer named Collins, accompanied by two women named O'Brien, who were coming to the cabin to borrow a pair of cattle for woollen spinning, arrived at the door, and Collins entered. Horrified at what he saw he did not advance further, but raised the alarm in the village, which lies in a scattered, straggling form along the valley and mountain sides. The villagers soon collected, and a body of them entered the cabin. There they beheld a spectacle which beggars description. At half-past nine o'clock eleven men went to the police hut at Finney, a distance of two miles across the mountains, and told what they had seen and heard. Two constabulary men returned with them and visited the cabin, when they beheld a sight of the most terrible character. Two dogs were in the bed where the bodies of the grandmother and granddaughter were lying, and off the left arm of the old woman, which was hanging over the bedside. The police endeavored to drive away the animals, which were a sort of sheep dog, but they had the greatest difficulty in doing so. The dogs ran under the bed, evidently reluctant to leave this horrible feast of human flesh. When at length they were driven away they are said to have become mad, and were destroyed by the inhabitants of the place.

THEY HAD EATEN ALL THE FLESH

The following story is current in the West of Ireland; Mrs. Joyce, one of the murdered family, witnessed the sinking in the lake of the bodies of Lord Ardilaun's bailiffs, but was so terrified that for some time she did not venture to tell anyone what she had seen. One night, however, she could no longer keep it to herself and described to her husband what she had seen certain men do. This was overheard by her son, who shortly after, being bullied at school by another boy, cried out, "I suppose you want to murder me and throw me into the lake as your father did the bailiffs." The boy having repeated this to his father, the latter and his confederates determined upon their dreadful crime of massacring the whole family of the Joyces in order to put out of the way such awkward witnesses of their former guilt. The story seems too circumstantial to be untrue, nor is it easy to see why it should be invented. At any rate, it offers a very sufficient explanation of the massacre, the motives for which has never been very clearly made out.

A CANNIBAL FEAST.

How Some Explorers on a Colombian River were Cooked and Eaten.

PANAMA.—Dr. Agnozzi, Papal delegate to Colombia, has addressed a circular to the Archbishop and the bishops begging them to obtain all possible information respecting the number and condition of the savages in the interior. This measure is consequent on a massacre and cannibal feast which have recently taken place, and which is thus described:—The River Putumayo is one of many which run from the eastern slope of the Colombian Andes, about which little is known. Rising in the mountainous districts of the upper altitudes of Pasto, in the State of Cauca, it runs nearly one thousand miles, receiving in its course the tributary waters of more than thirty streams. Within the past few years adventurous residents in Pasto have endeavoured to turn the riches of the river to account It is navigable even in the upper part by canoes. After frequent petitioning Congress passed a law permitting the entrance of merchandise by the river free of all duty, with the result that some portion of the imports came by way of the Atlantic, were carried 2,000 miles up the Amazon by steamer, and thence by launch and canoe until they reached their market, within 300 miles, as the crow flies, of the Pacific ocean. Messrs. Reyes were the first to engage in this enterprise, and, by treating the Indians well along the route, have been establishing a very fair trade, exporting ivory, nuts, india rubber, vanilla, cascarilla, sarsaparilla, and other raw products in return for the goods brought in by them. Their success induced a young merchant of Barbacoas, named Portes, to engage in the same enterprise, and in company with some friends he established himself on the banks of the Putumayo, among the virgin forests which there cover every foot of ground. They had erected a house, made a small clearing, and already saw their way to a profitable business, when they were visited by a number of Jevenetos Indians, who came ostensibly to trade. They were received well, and were apparently satisfied, but suddenly they attacked and killed the Colombians, and afterward cooked and ate them. The Indians have never visited the Putumayo before, and no one has ever fallen in with them on the Amazon. Other tribes have also made their appearance in different places, and it is believed that some other powerful tribes are driving the weaker ones from the heart of the unknown forest regions, or that they are voluntary emigrants who will murder and plunder whenever opportunity offers. Residents on the frontier also suggest that they may have been driven from their homes, wherever these may be, by the slavers, whose vessels ascended several of the tributaries of the Amazon a few months ago in search of slaves and produce. This supposition will appear exaggerated to all who are not aware that Indians are captured on all the interior rivers and carried off to different out-of-the-way regions, where they are compelled to work on the plantations which have been established far away from anything bearing even a semblance to civilization. It is probable the death of Senor Portes and his friends will attract the attention of the Colombian government to those long neglected regions of the Republic.

The Shah's Lesson.

A young French painter was showing the Shah of Persia his picture of Herodias bringing in the head of John the Baptist. The Shah asked him how many minutes were supposed to have passed since the head was cut off. "Two minutes," said the painter. The Shah then told him that the lips ought to be wide open and of an ashy white. As the artist was unwilling to be convinced, the Shah clapped his hands and, a slave appearing, drew his sword, and with one tremendous sweep severed his head from his body. He then pulled out his watch and two minutes after stooped down, picked up the bleeding head, and, walking to the picture, held the real head by the side of the painted one, and said to the Frenchman: "Monsieur, you can see for yourself that the lips ought to be ashy white and wide apart, and you will learn to believe the Shah in future." Then he tossed away the head and firmly walked out, leaving the painter more dead than alive to take himself and his unfortunate picture back to his own apartments. The shock was so severe to the painter's nerves that he became hysterical and remained so for months, unable to do any work. The Shah conferred decorations and titles upon him, which cost nothing, and, giving him just enough money to take him home, allowed him to leave Persia, and he now occupies a studio in the Palais Royal in Paris.

A Novelty Fur.

A novelty in fur garments is a cape especially designed to protect the chest. It fastens at the back instead of in front, and the opening is so arranged as to be imperceptible. For sleighing it is especially suitable, as there is no chance for a cold blast to strike the chest as the wind blows open the cape. Besides its recommendation of comfort, it has that of being very becoming to the average figure and being a style of garment now fashionable.

The reason why some of the street lamps burn all night is because the light is so small it is afraid to go out alone in the dark.

The Dakota town of Pierre has a new jail, and some people wonder because a local newspaper man praises it as "a substantial wooden structure." Even a pine jail ought to hold a man until the neighbors can get a rope.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

INTERESTING ITEMS GATHERED FROM OUR EXCHANGES AND OTHERWISE FOR THE READERS OF THE "STANDARD."

Flesherton.

W. J. Bates has bought out the Flesherton Mattress Factory from Mr. Addison.

John Whitten is building another dwelling house.

Trimble & Baskerville sold a spring calf to Jas. Myles which weighed 700 lbs.

A public meeting of the Cheese Factory patrons will be held on the 2nd December, at 2 p. m., in the town hall to wind up business for the year

Marble works are likely to be established here.

John Whitten is going to run the skating rink.

A valuable cow belonging to W. W. Trimble had its leg broken last week.

The first entertainment of the musical and literary society was a success.

Mr Tester, 3rd line of Euphrasia, had a horse stolen recently.

Fine winter weather, good sleighing, and farm produce coming in fast.

The sidewalk is being extended on Collingwood street.

Chatsworth.

Steps are being taken to have opposition in gram buying.

The fire brigade expect a big time on Friday evening at their supper.

C. H. Mathews is making great improvements in his hotel, and is already very popular.

John McDonald is doing quite a business in selling marriage licenses, and don't you forget it young man.

The Markdale STANDARD is anxiously looked for weekly here.

Dundalk.

Mr. W. Rundle has been engaged as teacher of Dundalk school for 1883 at a salary of $450.

Chas. McConnell shot another deer last week.

Dr. McWilliams has opened a drug store.

W. L. Marshall sold his real estate for $2,000 cash to Mr. Guest of Toronto, Douglas & Telford have opened a grocery store.

Mr. Denny has opened a new store in the Lousia block.

J. J. Middleton will open a general store shortly in Hewetson's stand.

Durham.

The Chronicle is greatly improved under its new management. Mr. Bingham (late of the Wiarton Echo) is foreman.

The Review is hard to beat as a local paper

Wood is scare at the Chronicle office. Did you ever see a printing office where it was plentiful, or anything else, except pi.

Wm. Rose, veterinary surgeon. is moving to Ayr.

St. Andrew's Society will have their annual supper at McAllister's hotel this evening, (30th Nov.)

Owen Sound.

County Council meets December 6th.

The City af Owen Sound is in port for the winter.

S. J. Moffatt has assumed the management of Lang Bros.' drug store.

Adam Gladstone disappeared on the 11th inst. and his body was found a week later in the bay.

About 1,500 packages of fish were brought down by the Africa.

The I. O. O. F. concert on Tuesday evening last was a grand success.

The Railway Company are about to enlarge the capacity of the grain elevator to 250,000 bushels.

Meaford.

A few enterprising business men have put their heads together and purpose having a boat built this winter at a cost of $15,000 to run between this place and Providence Bay, calling at ports on the south side of Manitoulin Island.

The Bible Society is flourishing.

The Ontario Stock Co. with a capital of $260,000, with headquariers in Toronto, are endeavoring to locate their stock farm near this place.

Messrs. Harvey & Co. shipped last week 250 tons pressed hay, 1,000 bushels of potatoes, and 200 tubs butter by boat to Spanish River.

The first of a series of penny readings was given in Christ Church on the evening of the 21st and proved successful.

MARKDALE.—This week we visited this thriving and enterprising village. We got somewhat better acquainted with many of the inhabitants, and found them a genial, social and large-hearted people. Of course we saw our popular member, Dr. Sproule, who is held in high repute and is constantly wanted in his professional capacity. We likewise came across Mr. G. S. Brown, who is very popular in Markdale and deservedly so. We, too, were highly pleased to meet Mr. C. W. Speers, Mr. A. McIntyre, Mr. Rae, Mr. W. F. Reid, of Flesherton, and others, and last but not least Mr. Sproule of the Revere House. Markdale has some enterprising citizens, and those named are not behind the age in business matters.—Mirror,

Robt. S. Rae.

TAILOR,

SYDENHAM STREET,

MARKDALE.

J. W. FORD

IS GIVING SPLENDID SATISFACTION

IN GRISTING,

By the New Process at the

MARKDALE FLOUR & GRIST MILL

SPECIAL ATTENTION

TO PARTIES FROM A DISTANCE,

So they may have their Grist home the same day.

AN IMMENSE STOCK OF

BOOTS & SHOES

JUST ARRIVED AT THE

TORONTO HOUSE

BEST QUALITY AND LOWEST PRICE.

STOCK COMPLETE IN

Dry Goods and Groceries!

PRICES ALWAYS RIGHT.

OUR THIRTY CENT TEA

Is the wonder of the day A trial solicited.

Markdale, Oct. 11th, 1882. WM. BROWN.

GROCERIES. GROCERIES.

A. M'INTYRE

TEA! TEA! TEA!

A. M'INTYRE

Flour, Flour, Flour.

McINTYRE'S LIQUORS! LIQUORS

McINTYRE'S Cigars, Cigars.

McINTYRE'S Coffee, Coffee.

McINTYRE'S MEAL! MEAL! MEAL!

McINTYRE'S Pork, Pork, Pork.

McINTYRE'S Teas, Teas.

And everything kept in a first-class Grocery and Liquor Store. always on hand, CHEAP FOR CASH.

MARKDALE

Sash and Door Factory

SASH, DOORS,
BLINDS
MOULDINGS,
HOLLOW BATTONS,
FRAMES

Lumber, Lath and Shingles,

Always on Hand. Orders Promptly Filled.

The Subscriber wishes to return thanks to the people of Markdale and vicinity, for the very liberal patronage they have given him in the past, and hopes by close attention to business to merit a continuance of the same.

I have now extended my business, and will in future keep a full Stock of

PINE LUMBER.

Direct from the North Shore.

ALL SIZES, DRESSED AND UNDRESSED.

All Kinds of Plain and Fancy Turning

Done in a first class manner.

THOS. McNEA.

Markdale May 27th, 1881. 37-tf

W. BULMER,

The People's Photograph

FLESHERTON.

Continues to take Pictures,
Do Copying and Enlarging in good st

FRAMES and FRAME FIXING

in great variety and latest designs at desperate low prices.

W. BULMER

ARTEMESIA WAREHOUS

FLESHERTON STATION.

Dry Goods, Hardware, Crockery, Boots and Sh

Groceries, Provisions, &c. Stock kept full and well assorted with n goods received every week.

Cash paid for all kinds of Grain at the Statio

MY BRANCH STORE AT EUGENIA

replenished with new goods every week. For sale cheap for cash or pr

My Saw Mill, Shingle Factoty, and Lime K

AT LITTLE FALLS, ARE IN OPERATION.

All kinds Saw Logs bought at the Mill or sawn on sha

Lumber, Lath, Broom Handles, Shingles and Lime for sal

WM. HOGG

November 7th, 1882.

TORONTO HOUSE

FLESHERTON.

Stock Fully Complete. Unusually Lar

VERY ATTRACTIVE, AND

CHEAPER THAN THE CHEAPEST

EVERY DEPARTMENT SPECIALLY ATTRACTIV

Variety and Value Unsurpassed.

DRY GOODS DEPARMENT

Is this season very complete with a very large stock of Dress Goods, co prising in part Cashmeres in all colors. Worsted Wool Goods in endless variety.

Boot and Shoe Department.

Would call special attention of close buyers as my stock is unusually lar from the best manufacturers and at rock bottom prices.

ORDERED CLOTHING.

Has been exceedingly brisk this season, on account of which I have laid the largest and best stock of Tweeds, Coatings, Trowserings, and Overco ings in this section of country. As I have always led the trade in this partment buyers will find it to their advantage to call before purchas elsewhere.

Millinery Department.

Under the able management of a first-class milliner, with plenty of ass ance, will be found unusually attractive with the prettiest and most fashi able, and cheapest stock to be found in the county. Ladies, it would you good to call and look at the stock.

Hardware and Grocery Department.

Is always fully assorted and complete with the best goods, at the lowest sible price.

☞ I am the only constant and reliable buyer of Grain and Farm Pr duce in Flesherton, and for which I will pay the highest price in cash any quantity of good dry, sound grain, which I would specially ask farm to clean well. A call solicited.

R. J. SPROULE.

Flesherton, Oct. 3rd, 1882.

Markdale PUMP Factory

J. G. IRVING,

MAKER OF ALL KINDS OF PUMPS,

DROP VALVE PUMPS, CYLINDER PUMPS, CISTERN PUMPS, FORCE PUMPS,

Also, ALL KINDS OF IRON PUMPS SUPPLIED.

Satisfaction guaranteed on all my work; the proof of it is found in the fact that I am doing a larger business now than ever was done in Markdale in the Pump business. Remember the stand, 1 door north of Rutledge's Ho

Sydenham Street, Markdale.

[illegible]

Norma.—We [illegible] that we do not [illegible] the opinions [illegible] correspondents

To the Editor of [illegible]

Sir,—Some men by their advanced thought and deep insight into the mysteries of their own day and age have given the impression that they had been sent as heralds of the advance of human progress, or as having been born a generation before their time; while others living in the light and liberty of our day shut their eyes to its good and sighing for the so-called good old times certainly give the impression that it would have been as well for the world, and more comfortable for themselves, if they had been born a couple of centuries ago and had peacefully passed away into the oblivion of the past. This thought is suggested while reading the letter signed by J. Ward in your issue of the 16th. Without attempting a rebuttal or explanation of the charges made by a former correspondent he tells your readers in what the Church of England prides herself, and speaks of divisions among christians as being as unchristianed as falsehood or dishonesty; and then by inference gives his dictum that all professing christians cut off from the Church of England and not in her communion represent that spirit of division and are therefore no more real christians than if they were dishonest or untruthful. If his church and faith is, as he styles it, that established by Christ and his apostles we may reasonably expect to find a strong bond of unity within her pale. But Mr. Ward knows as well as your readers that the unity of the Church of England is a mere figment, an empty name split up into differing parties of High Church, Low Church, Evangelical, Ritualistic and Broad Church, with faith, doctrines and practices as widely differing as the various Prodestant churches, indeed more widely differing than many of them. What more right has Mr. Ward or his church to the claim of Apostolical succession than the latest congregation of believers who have bound themselves to each other in the bonds of christian fellowship and communion be it only yesterday. If he wants to claim it by succession of church prelates and ordination, any Catholic school boy can make out a far better and more consistant claim for the Roman Catholic Church on this score than Mr. Ward can for his Church. He is learned in Church History and would have us take for granted his statement that the Church of England fought for and obtained civil and religious liberty for us all, and that in gratitude for benefits obtained we should contribute to her perpetuity now she is in her nonage, and he sighs for the good old days when men could be compelled to attend her services under penalty of fine, imprisonment or torture, and to contribute to the support of her parsons whether they could support their own fami- [illegible] and decency or [illegible] old days for the [illegible] good old times. [illegible] Holland done for non- [illegible] for Presbyterians [illegible] liberties has she [illegible] entail such [illegible] gratitude. Other [illegible] and in- [illegible] thy hand to not [illegible] their read- [illegible] Bishop Burnett [illegible] know that the [illegible] enjoy have [illegible] said, but in the [illegible] intolerant [illegible] of this assumed Apostolic Church, [illegible] in England to this day the battle is [illegible] won. But the day of perfect [illegible] from the thraldom of priestcraft is coming and in its glorious freedom churches and state religious will be [illegible] the past and the good old days of the thumb screws will never, never come. What does Mr. Ward mean by the [illegible] "It must be a very enlightened age [illegible] can make religions and churches themselves?" Leaving the little boys [illegible] lyze the grammar of this sentence I ask who made the church of England [illegible] rate church in Christendom? Are [illegible] like Knox, Calvin, Whitefield and the [illegible] leys as fit men to be leaders of their [illegible] men into new fields of religious light liberty as the infamous Henry the [illegible] who is the acknowledged first head [illegible] church to which we are so eternally in- Mr. Ward may sneer, as he does in [illegible] "the improved religion of the masses enlightened age" and call it an India [illegible] system." It is too elastic ever to put on the time-worn fetters of thought which church would impose. They have [illegible] that devotion to a church creed may [illegible] identical to devotion to truth, but in fact bids it outside of its own well defined [illegible] that Godliness which is in its true sense heartfelt desire to serve humanity on [illegible] and any place of man's complex being, more intensely it burns within the less [illegible] brook to be fettered without by an organization founded and built up upon once [illegible] but now antiquated and worn-out forms. They feel that the world moves and they [illegible] to be moved with it, and such men as Ward can no more stay the movement liberty of thought, of action, and of science even in his own congregation, [illegible] he can stay the action of the tides.

LIBERTY.

MUNICIPAL MATTERS.

In Glenelg, we understand quite a push will be made for Deputy Reeve Messrs. Binnie, Davis, Gleocross and the present Deputy, Mullarky. We hear nothing of any opposition to the Reeve. In Euphrasia, it is said that Gilray will be a candidate for Reeve and that D. R. Ellis and Mr. Erskine are in the field for Deputy. Osprey and Artemesia not heard from. In Holland important changes will take and a stirring time is expected owing to the present Reeve having decided on removing to the North West.

Markdale Standard

Vol. 3.--No. 13. MARKDALE, ONT., DEC. 7, 1882. No. 117.

The Markdale Standard

IS PUBLISHED

EVERY THURSDAY EVENING,

at Markdale, Ontario.

At the Office, Main Street.

TERMS: $2 if not paid till six months, $2 50 if not paid till the end of the year. No paper discontinued until all arrears are paid up, except at the option of the publisher. Any parties refusing to take their papers will be held responsible for subscriptions until they give notice to discontinue.

ADVERTISING:

One inch, one year	$50 00
Half inch, one year	27 50
Quarter inch, one year	15 00
One inch, six months	8 00
One inch, three months	4 00
Each subsequent insertion per line	8
Each line under 1 month	3

Yearly advertisements to be reckoned by the space and charged by a scale of solid measurement. Advertisements without specific directions will be published till forbid and charged accordingly. All transitory advertisements must be in the office of publication on the Wednesday proceed publication.

JOB PRINTING

of every description executed with neatness and despatch at the Office of the STANDARD, Markdale.

C. W. RUTLEDGE.

Editor & Proprietor.

PROFESSIONAL AND BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

Drs. Sproule & Armstrong,

Physicians, Surgeons, Accoucheur &c.

Office: Medical Hall; residence at the House.

Sproule, M.D., M.R.C.P. & S., O. Physician and Surgeon, Priceville, Graduate of University, Viet. College. " New York, and " of the same. " Ardath Medical Institute. " Opthalmic Hospital, N.Y. Member Com. Physicians & Surgeons, O. 104

Dental Card.

Cameron & Knight,

DENTAL SURGEONS,

Office over D. A. Cameron and Co's Drug Store, Bolsett St., OWEN SOUND.

Special attention given to the preservation of natural teeth. Artificial Dentures mounted on Gold, Celluloid, and Rubber bases.

Will be at Markdale the last Tuesday in each month,

D. Cameron, M.D., & C.M., Edin. & F.P. & S. Glasgow, Licentiate Royal College Phys. & Surg. Ont. C. F. Knight, L.D.S. Medalist Royal College Den. Sur., Ont

Legal.

Frost & Frost,

BARRISTERS, AND ATTORNEYS-AT Law, Solicitors in Chancery, Conveyancers, &c., Owen Sound, have resumed at Markdale, Office open every Thursday, as before.

Geo. Frost, J. W. Frost, LL. B. Counsel for Crown Attorney. 1

J. MASSON,

BARRISTER, MASTER AND DEP. REG in Chancery, Notary Public, Conveyancer, &c.

MONEY TO LEND AT SIX PER CENT.

Offices—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block Bolsett St., and in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week. 57-1y

Morrison & Morrison,

BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, CONVEYANCERS, &c. &c.,

Offices in Owen Sound, Dufferin Block, over W. F. Wolf's Store and in over W. J. McFarland's Store on Thursday of each Friday of each week.

MARKDALE;

Funds to lend on reasonable terms.

D. CREASOR, Q.C. DUNCAN MORISON

Markdale, March 15, 1882. 79-1y

Alexander Brown.

ISSUER of Marriage Licenses, Fire and Life Insurance Agent. Commissioner B. R. &c. Conveyancer and Licensed Auctioneer for the County of Grey. Farmers, Peasants, and Land Sales, Punctually attended to and charges made very moderate.

Priceville, Sept. 17, 1880. 1-y

Hotels.

REVERE HOTEL,

MARKDALE.

SPROULE, - Proprietor.

THIS popular Hotel has had a large addition added to it, thoroughly refitted, and is now second to none in the county. Good stabling and attentive ostler. First-class accommodation for commercial travel at $1 per day. Barber's shop in connection. 17-1y

Markdale Hotel.

Good Accommodation for Travellers. 'Bus to and from all trains. Charges moderate.

Markdale. A. RUTLEDGE, PROP.

COMMERCIAL HOTEL.

PRICEVILLE, Ont.

Large and commodious Sample Rooms Good Bed Rooms, &c. The Bar and larde well supplied with the best the market affords; good Stabling and attentive Hostler's

THOS. ATKINSON, Proprietor

CHATSWORTH HOUSE

(LATE MORROW HOUSE,)

CHATSWORTH, Ont.

THE undersigned having purchased the above property has had it thoroughly renovated and refurnished throughout beside making other new improvements, which will greatly add to the comfort and convenience of his guests, would respectfully solicit the patronage of the public generally. The best brands of liquors and cigars always in stock. Good meal and comfortable rooms guaranteed. Good stabling and attentive hostler.

—C. H. MATHEWS, Prop. 114.

Miscellaneous.

John McDonald,

CHATSWORTH,

DIVISION Court Clerk, Issuer of Marriage Licenses, Commissioner in B.R., Conveyancer, &c. Deeds, Mortgages, Wills, &c. attended to promptly, accurately, neatly, and cheaply. Private funds to lend in small sums on easy terms. Notes discounted

MISS LAMB,

DRESS-MAKER. UP-STAIRS IN Douglas' Block. Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges moderate.

Markdale, Nov. 15th, 1882. 114-3m.

R. M. Galbraith,

AUCTIONEER AND GENERAL LAND Agent, Williamsford Station. Auction Sales attended in all parts of the County. Goods sold on commission. Rates moderate. Pianos, Organs, and Sewing Machines; also Fruit and Ornamental Trees, Vines, Agricultural Implemennts, and Machinery of all kinds on sale.

Williamsford, Jan. 27, 1881.

T. E. DAVIS,

BUILDER & CONTRACTOR, (Stone and Brick). After completing 13 buildings his season is still on the track and is still prepared to do all kinds of stone and brick work, plastering and tuck pointing. Those who contemplate building will find it to their advantage to give him a call.

Residence corner of Brown and Sproule Stetes. MARKDALE. 16-v

MISS WELSH,

Dress & Mantlemaker. Charges moderate. Satisfaction guaranteed. Hill's Block, Sydenham street.

Markdale, Nov. 6th, 1882. 113-126

Wm. Brown,

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.

Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.

N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate security.

Joseph Gibson,

PLAIN & ORNAMENTAL

PLASTERER,

WHITEWASHING—CALSOMINING

in Shades and Colors.

All work guaranteed. Charges moderate.

Markdale P.O.

LOYAL MARKDALE LODGE,

Of C. O. O. F. No. 78, will meet in their hall on Monday evening, Nov. 27th, at eight o'clock p. m.

108 W. L. YOUNG, Sec'y.

EUGENIA

Grist, Saw and Lath Mills

Having made extensive improvements in my Grist Mill I feel confident I can give good satisfaction.

GOOD FLOUR ALWAYS ON HAND.

Chopping Done Every Day.

Custom Sawing and Bills Filled on the shortest notice.

LUMBER AND LATH ALWAYS ON HAND.

Cherry, Butternut, White Ash, Black Ash Basswood, Pine and Hemlock Logs wanted

69ly. M. AKITT, Eugenia.

$2 Watches, stem winders $2.50. White metal Hunting Case $5. Imitation gold $6. Solid gold $12. Cheapest and best for your own use or speculative purposes. Valuable catalogue free. THOMPSON & Co., 126 Nassau St., New York.

ROBT. ASKIN,

MARKDALE,

Has opened out a First-Class

Furniture !

—AND—

UNDERTKING ESTABLISHMENT,

And therefore has supplied a want long felt, especially in the Undertaking Line.

COFFINS,

CASKETS,

SHROUDS,

and all

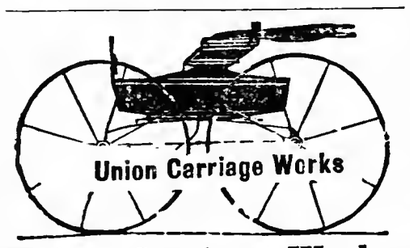
FUNERAL FURNISHINGS,

supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse

for hire at moderate rates.

FURNITURE!



From the Common to the

Best and Latest Styles,

in everything in the line.

Call and see for yourselves.

ROBT. ASKIN.

Union Carriage Works

Union Carriage Works.

All work manufactured from

FIRST CLASS MATERIAL

In the Lateat and Best Improved Style, and finished with English Varnish.

Painting & Trimming Rigs

will receive prompt attention.

All Repairs executed in the shortest possible time consistent with good workmanship.

GOOD WORK A SPECIALITY.

Remember the Shop, opposite the Cheapside

D. J. SHANAHAN,

Proprietor.

Markdale, Dec. 2nd, 1881. 64.

HAIR CUTTING AND SHAVING

By T. D. Smith,

Razors, Straps, and Shaving Brushes for sale. Razors sharpened.

☞ Orders filled for Tomb Stones.

STARTLING DISCOVERY!

LOST MANHOOD RESTORED.

A victim of youthful imprudence causing Premature Decay, Nervous Debility, Lost Manhood, etc., having tried in vain every known remedy, has discovered a simple self cure, which he will send FREE to his fellow-sufferers, address J. H. REEVES, 43 Chatham St., N. Y.

$66 a week in your own town; $5 outfit free. No risk. Everything new. Capital not required. We will furnish you everything. Many are making fortunes. Ladies make as much as men, and boys and girls make great pay. Reader, if you want a business at which you can make great pay all the time you work, write for particulars to H. HALLETT & Co., Portland, Maine. 71-126

TEACHER WANTED.

MARRIED OR SINGLE—MARRIED man preferred—for School Section No, 4, Glenelg, holding second-class certificate. Duties to commence first of the new year. Apply stating salary, to

THOMAS TOWNSEND,

Glascott P. O.

Glascott, Nov. 1st 1882, 112-4t

WARNING!

There is great danger of taking cold from wet feet If you want to Guard Against Sickness!

Keep your feet dry and warm by procuring your

BOOTS!

—FROM—

KAY & THOMAS.

Satisfaction Guaranteed. Medicated Cork Soles, all sizes, kept on hand. Remember the place opposite the new STANDARD Office. 49

Best business now before the public. You can make money faster at work for us than at anything else. Capitsl not needed. We will start you. $12 a day and upwards made at home by the industrious. Men, women, boys and girls wanted everywhere to work for us. Now is the time. You can work in spare time only or give your whole time to the business. You can live at home and do the work. No other business will pay you nearly as well. No one can fail to make enormous pay by engaging at once. Costly outfit and terms free. Money made fast, easily and honorably. Address TRUE & Co., Augusta, Maine. 71-126

REST AND COMFORT TO THE SUFFERING

Brown's Household Panacea

has no equal for relieving pain, both internal and external. It cures pain in the Side, Back or Bowels, Sore Throat, Rheumatism, Toothache, Lumbago and any kind of a Pain or Ache. "It will most surely quicken the Blood and heal, as its acting power is wonderful." "Brown's Household Panacea," being acknowledged as the great Pain Reliever, and of double the strength of any other Elixer or Liniment in the world, should be in every family handy for use when wanted "as it really is the best remedy in the world for Cramps in the Stomach, and Pains and Aches of all kinds," and is for sale by all Druggists at 25 cents a bottle. 75-127

EARS FOR THE MILLION

KOO CHOO'S BALSAM OF SHARK'S OIL positively Restores the Hearing, and is the Only Absolute Cure for Deafness known. This Oil is abstracted from peculiar species of small White Shark, caught in the Yellow Sea, known as CARCHARODON RONDELETII. Every Chinese fisherman knows it. Its virtues as a restorative of hearing were discovered by a Buddhist Priest were discovered about the year 1410. Its cures were so numerous, and many so seemingly miraculous, that the remedy was officially proclaimed over the entire Empire. Its use became so universal, that for over 300 years no Deafness has existed among the Chinese people. Sent, charges prepaid, to any address at $1.00 per bottle.

Hear what the Deaf say:

It has performed a miracle in my case.

I have no unearthly noises in my head, and hear much better.

I have been greatly benefited.

My deafness helped a great deal—think another bottle will cure me.

Its virtues are unquestionable and its curative character absolute, as the writer can personally testify, both from experience and observation. Write at once to Haylock and Jenney, 7 Dey Street, New York, enclosing $1 and you will receive by return a remedy that will enable you to hear like anybody else, and whose curative effects will be permanent. You will never regret doing so."—EDITOR OF MERCANTILE REVIEW.

☞To avoid loss in the mails, please send money by Registered Letter.

Only imported by HAYLOCK & JENNEY, late Haylock & Co.,

Sole Agents for America. 7 DEY ST NEW YORK 93-145.

Wm. Lucas & Co.,

BANKERS,

Money Loaned

IN large or small amounts, at all times, on good endorsed notes, or on collateral security.

INTEREST AT 6 PER CENT.

Allowed on Savings Deposits.

☞Drafts issued and Collections made on points, at lowest rates.

W.M. LUCAS, Manager.

September 23, 1880. 2-ly

JOHN NOBLE,

MARKDALE,

GENER'L BLACKSMITH

HORSE SHOEING

A SPECIALTY.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

INTERESTING ITEMS GATHERED FROM OUR EXCHANGES AND OTHERWISE FOR THE READERS OF THE "STANDARD."

Flesherton.

The L. O. L. is growing in membership.

The Methodist S. S. Anniversary will take place on New Year's day.

The Presbyterians are preparing to build a fine brick church next summer.

John Whitton, builder and contractor, has secured some valuable contracts for the coming season.

ACCIDENT.—We regret very much to learn that our esteemed citizen Mr. Wm. Hooper met with rather a severe accident this morning. It appears that Mr. Hooper and Mr. Geo. Keefer were taking out tie timber in a bush near Nelson's saw mill. Mr. Hooper was hewing a tie, when the axe he was using slipped and struck him on the foot severing the cords completely. He was at once brought to his home in this village where he will receive the best of care and attention.—Advance.

Dundalk.

Next Tuesday is fair day.

Proton Council meets at Cedarville on the 13th.

Mr. Steinhoff is making the skating rink comfortable.

On Wednesday evening a brakesman named Jones, on the mixed train, had his thumb and forefinger smashed as he was coupling a car at Corbetton station. He was brought on to Dundalk and Dr. McWilliams amputated the thumb and finger.—Herald.

SAD ACCIDENT AT HOPEVILLE.—We regret to hear that a sad accident occurred on 10th con. Proton, to a nephew of Mr. Chas. Jack. The boy is 13 years of age and was struck on the head by the limb of a tree. It is possible the accident may terminate fatally as there is very little hope of his recovery.—Herald.

On Wednesday a serious acsident happened to Mr. Jones of this village. He was sinking a well for Mr. W. H. Steinhoff at the skating rink. It was getting dark and a lantern had been lowered into the well by means of the bucket. The bucket was being drawn up and when near the top became detached from the hook falling about thirteen feet and striking Mr. Jones on the head inflicting a severe cut. He was taken home and attended by Dr. Griffin. At last accounts he is improving. We are glad that the accident was not even more serious than it was.—Herald.

Owen Sound.

W. R. Armstrong, Esq., Clerk of the Peace, passed a successful examination and was called as a barrister recently.

CLOSE OF NAVIGATION.—Navigation is now practically closed, and the following steamers and schooners are now being laid up for the winter in the river here:—The Campana, City of Owen Sound, Frances Smith, Africa, Atlanta, Emerald, Lilly Hamilton, Lady McDonald, Otonabee, Peerless, Restless, Annie Foster, Kincardine, Georgina, Geo. Mayhams, Kendrick, two dredges and the tug Norcross. The Enterprise is still out but will be laid up on her arrival.—Advertiser.

Osprey.

Plenty of snow now.

A splendid tea-meeting was held last Friday evening in the Presbyterian church, Feversham. After ample justice had been done to the abundance of good things provided by the ladies, the evening's entertainment commenced. Rev. John Chisholm occupied the chair. The programme consisted of vocal and instrumental music, speeches, readings, and recitations, which were well received by a large and appreciative audience. Proceeds in the neighbourhood of $45.00, to be expended on church improvements.

BUCKLEN'S ARNICA SALVE.

The best salve in the world for Cuts, Bruises, Sores, Ulcers, Salt Rheum, Fever Sores, Tetter, Chapped Hands, Chilblains, Corns, and all Skin Eruptins, and Positively cures Piles. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by A. Turner & Co.

Mr. Arch. Speers, jr., arrived from Winnipeg last week.

The Berkeley Sabbath School will hold a tea-meeting in the Orange Hall on Friday the 15th Dec., in aid of the Sabbath School. See bills.

CANADIAN RANCHERS.

FORTY THOUSAND HEAD AT THE FOOT OF THE ROCKIES.

Valued At Two Millions—The Wonders Accomplished Within Fifteen Months —Bow River vs. Mountains— Cattle to be Shipped from the Rockies to Winnipeg Within Four Days.

Mr. J. E. Chipman of the Halifax cattle ranching company, is in the city. In conversation with a Sun reporter, he said: "When the suitability of the Bow river district for cattle ranching was established, a few of us in Halifax concluded that it would never do to let the Ontario and you Northwest people have everything your own way, so we determined to take a hand in and share in the benefits. We organized a company, and I started out to see the country and select a stock range. I was one f

THE FAMOUS COCHRANE PARTY.

You know all about that. Well, we got out on the Bow River early in July, 1881, and stayed there six or seven weeks. I selected 100,000 acres on the Kootanie river, near Fort McLeod. It is just at the foot of the Mountains. The Kootanie valley is famous as one of the richest stock-grazing districts yet found north of the Union Pacific. I got back to Halifax, and afterwards completed arrangements with the Government for the lease of the land. We were one of the eight companies, you will remember, who got in under the first regulations. After completing all the preliminary arrangements I again left last April to purchase a supply of stock and take them through to the range. I visited

THE GRAZING CENTRES OF NEBRASKA,

Wyoming, Utah, Idaho and Montana, purchased a herd of 1,100 head of cattle and 120 horses in Idaho and drove them through myself to the Bow River, a distance of 500 miles, reaching the range on the 8th of September, and making the journey in exactly two months. The herd went through in splendid condition."

"What breeds were they?"

"The large majority were graded shorthorns, and let me tell you that they were much finer cattle than could be obtained in the east. We bought native horses to be crossed by Norman Percheron stallions purchased in Chicago. These produce the best class of horses known for general all work. When four years old they are worth from two hundred to three hundred dollars each, and the demand is unlimited. The cost of raising these animals ranges from $5 to $10, per head per annum according to the number raised on a range. The larger the number raised the smaller the cost."

THE BEST BREED OF CATTLE.

"Do you consider the graded shorthorns the best class of cattle for this country?"

"I am not quite prepared to go into that question. The graded shorthorns are the only class of cattle I have seen in those stock-raising states and they are so good that I think it would be difficult to improve on them, hence I purchased very largely of that breed. But Senator Cochrane, a man of unsurpassed experience in Canadian stock raising, thinks that the Herefords and Polled Angus will be equal, if not superior, to the shorthorns. The largest proportion of his imported bulls is of these breeds. He also has a number of shorthorns. I have also some Hereford bulls as an experiment, and shall be well pleased if they equal or excel the shorthorns. The great aim is the production of beef, and the shorthorns in my opinion yield more of that article than any other breed that I have seen. The grass-fed cattle I purchased on the plains of Idaho were superior to the grass fed cattle of the famous Cornwallis valley, or of any that I ever saw in any part of Ontario, and were superior to many stall-fed Christmas cattle I have seen from those places. The ages of a herd of cattle range from one to three years. The increase in the production of cattle in the States I have named has been enormous during the past few years. They may almost be said to supply the continent. But in Montana, at any rate, ranching appears to have reached its climax, as far as the raising of cattle is concerned. But it has a great future as a sheep raising state. All the ranchers down there are well-to-do, most of them are wealthy and many are "cattle kings."

THE AVERAGE COST of raising cattle down there is $4 a head per annum. They sell at an average of $25. I know of one rancher who paid $25 a head for 1,000. There is a strong upward tendency. The ranchers say that the price will be $30 next season. The price has doubled within the last three years."

"Why?"

"There are various reasons. One is that the demand has increased wonderfully. The demand from the English market drains the maritime provinces, Ontario, Quebec and the eastern states. Those markets again have to be supplied from the west. The population is increasing rapidly, and people are eating more beef. And notwithstanding the enormous production, the general demand is far greater than the supply."

BOW RIVER VERSUS MONTANA.

How does the Canadian grazing ground compare with the stock raising American states and territories?"

"I wanted to purchase a superior herd, and therefore went to the best stock raising states in the union. I met several Canadian ranchers there, among them, Stimpson, managing director of Sir Hugh Allan's company, Captain Stewart of the Stewart ranche company, Ottawa, and young Jones, son of D. F. Jones, ex M. P for Leeds and Grenville. We had no ranches to buy or sell there, and were not interested in exaggerating in the slightest degree. We were unanimous in coming to the conclusion that one acre in the Bow river country would feed more stock than five acres in the most famous of the American districts. But when we again returned to our own ranches, with the grass in many places up to the horses' girths, and nowhere below their knees, we were convinced that one of our acres was fully equal to ten of theirs. And any disinterested Americans after seeing the both countries, would frankly admit that."

"How many acres to each animal is supposed to be sufficient in the States?"

"About fifty."

"And in the Bow river district?"

"The government calculation is ten acres; but in most of the districts it will require more than one animal to eat all the rich grass found on three acres."

FORTY THOUSAND CATTLE AT THE FOOT OF THE ROCKIES.

"What number of cattle do you estimate are in the Bow river country now?"

"When I went there just fifteen months ago there were less than 1,000 head all told. There was then no ranch in existence. These 1,000 head were owned by squatters. Now there are fully 40,000 head, and the whole country from beyond Fort Calgary on the north to the boundary line on the south, a distance of about 200 miles, and from the foot of the Rockies fully 100 miles east, is now taken up. And I am told that cattle can be grazed all the year round as far east as the Cypress Hills, over 250 miles from the Rockies. These 40,000 cattle represent a value of $2,000,000. And all this has been accomplished within the last fifteen months. Besides the cattle, there are over 1000 horses up there, worth $150,000."

"If you have accomplished this within fifteen months, what will the next three years show?"

"Nobody can even guess. Look at the progress of Winnipeg within the last three years. Just think what the last fifteen months has accomplished in cattle-ranching. There is not one-twentieth of the ranches yet stocked. Ten thousand head will be raised this year from the cattle now there. The men who brought in 40,000 head this year will bring in at least 30,000 head next year. That means at least 250,000 head at the end of three years."

THE DEMAND UNLIMITED.

"Won't the thing be overdone?"

"As far as I can see the demand is and will continue to be unlimited. There are now ten buyers to one seller. Thirty thousand Indians have to be fed, and in future they will be supplied with beef of our own raising. There is an unprecedented immigration, and every immigrant is a purchaser of both cattle and horses. Then we have the whole North-west to supply."

"How far will you be from the railway?"

"Our ranche is 110 miles from Calgary. The trains will be running there next summer. Calgarry is 900 miles from Winnepeg. This time next year we will be able to ship a train load of cattle from Calgary to Winnipeg within four days. But at the present time buyers are on the range three months in advance of the time cattle are ready for the market."

"If the Canadian district is so much better than the American, you will, of course, be able to raise cattle a good deal cheaper?"

"Not at present, on account of high wages, high cost of living, and the difficulty of getting in supplies, which now have to come in via Fort Benton—1,250 miles up the Missouri river, and then 260 miles across the prairie by ox train. But the opening of the C. P. R to Calgarry will remedy this."

The Story of Mdme. Tussaud.

The career of that wonderful old lady, Madame Tussaud, who used herself nightly to receive the money she made by her famous wax-work exhibition, was one of the most singular. It is said that the Duke of Wellington frequently enjoyed a gossip with Madame Tussaud; and it is not to be wondered at, for she was one of the few people who lived late into the first half of this century who could distinctly remember the great Revolution of "'93," and who knew intimately almost every personage who figured in it, from the King and Queen, down to Robespierre and the infamous Marat. By birth a member of one of the most illustrious houses of Germany, and the granddaughter of the famous Field-Marshal von Gresholtz, Madame Tussaud had exceptional opportunities for studying the various characters of her time. She was born at Berne, but, losing her parents when quite a child, was taken by an uncle to Paris, and placed under M. Curtius, her mother's brother, one of the leading spirits of the day. He was originally a medical man, but his fame rested chiefly upon his merits as a modeler in wax. In those days it was not permitted for students in the hospitals to mutilate the dead for anatomical purposes, and waxen images of the various parts of the human body were fabricated in order to facilitate their studies. These Curtius made to perfection; and later on he opened a museum in the Rue St. Honore. Curtius was a brilliant conversationalist, and many writers on the French Revolution are inclined to believe that at his hospitable table, at which Voltaire, Rosseau, Franklin, and Lafayette were wont to assemble, the great scheme of the mightiest of social revolutions was planned. His house was a kind of political club, and here his celebrated niece formed relationship with all the famous people of her time. She lived until 1891, being over ninety years of age when she died. To the last she was active, and her memory never failed her. Her character was a very singular one, and she was a brilliant conversationalist. As an artist in wax-modeling she was most skillful. But it is not only as a modeler that she deserves fame; she also painted exquisitely in miniature. Her models are superb; and perhaps the best portraits of the leading men and women of the Revolution are those blackened wax masks which hang in the Chamber of Horrors, most of which were taken from life by her and deserve to be carefully reproduced. The model of Marat in the bath, taken immediately after assassination, is from her hand, as is also the original cast of Voltaire.

A Little Draft.

"My father," said Gilhooly, solemnly, "was more sensitive to colds than anybody I ever knew. The slighest exposure gave him a cold." "That must have been very disagreeable." "Indeed it was. He could never sit near a draft for a minute without catching cold. I remember on one occasion he was sitting in the office of a friend, when all at once my father began to sneeze. He insisted that there was a draft in the room. Every effort was made to discover where the draft was, but in vain. The doors and windows were closed and there was no fire place, but my father kept on sneezing and insisted there must be a draft in the room, and so there was." "Where was it?" "In an envelope on the table, and it was only a little draft for three dollars and forty cents."—Texas Siftings.

THE STORY OF THE REFUGEES.

How the Cuban Insurgents were Brought to Spain and Escaped to Gibraltar—Political Prisoners Illegally Given up by the British Police.

Numerous references have been made in the British Parliament to the case of some political prisoners, who escaped from Spain to Gibraltar and were at once given up by the police to the Spanish authorities. The circumstances of the case are made clear, by despatches published in the Daily News, whose Gibraltar correspondent says: A court of Inquiry is now sitting to investigate the circumstances connected with the surrender of the Cuban refugees. The facts are as follows: On landing at the Waterport Wharf the police demanded their passports. Having none they were taken to the police office, further questioned, and told they must quit Gibraltar. Senor Maceo protested, and requested an interview with the authorities, or legal assistance to explain his case, but with his companions he was taken by the police to the British lines neutral ground, and delivered to the Spanish police, who were waiting there.

The Madrid correspondent of the same journal telegraphs that he is assured by the West India members of the Spanish Parliament that the following is the exact account of the affair of the fugitives:—

Maceo, brother of the famous Cuban insurgent chief surrendered in 1878 at Guantonoma, with other Cuban chiefs, to the general commanding the Royal forces in the province of Santiago de Cuba, on the understanding that they would be free to go abroad. Nevertheless, they were arrested on board the steamer, and conveyed to Porto Rico in a Spanish gunboat, and embarked on the mail steamer for Spain, in virtue of the then existing extraordinary powers of the Governor-General of Cuba, which authorized him to transport and detain suspicious persons. Maceo was shipped from that post to the Chaffarinas Islands, a penal station on the coast of Morocco. After several years detention Maceo's friends in Madrid pointed out that the Constitution of the Monarchy having been promulgated in the West Indies, he and other political prisoners were illegally detained, and had the right to return to their homes, no tribunal having given a decision against them, and no trial or procedure having been opened. The Madrid Government, in presence of the frequent representations of the Cuban member, Senor Alivay, replied that the Captain General of Cuba still insisted on the detention under police surveilance of all the Cuban insurgents in the Spanish prisons. The West Indian members vainly protested, and only obtained the transfer of Maceo and his aide, Senor Rodriguez, with a Venezuelan to Ceuta. They were taken to Spain first, and whilst waiting at Cadiz for a vessel to go to Ceuta, effected their escape to Tangiers on August 15th. After five days to prepare for flight to America, they crossed in the steamer "Hercules" to Gibraltar on August 20th. On landing they intimated to the Gibraltar police that their object was reach America as political refugees. They reported to their friends that the Gibraltar police, without granting them a hearing, ordered them to be led, not back to their steamer, but across the British territory to the Spanish lines, where gendarmes were in waiting to seize and conduct them to Algesiras gaol with the wife, children, and sister-in-law of Maceo.

On the same authority I am told the Spanish Consul in Gibraltar, directly the escape of the political prisoners from Cadiz was known, advised the police authorities of Gibraltar that probably three men who had escaped from the Chaffarinas penal settlement would present themselves in the British harbor without documents. The Spanish Colonial Office also requested the authorities to arrest the fugitives pending their extradition. Spain and England, before the extradition Treaty of 1879, always surrendered each other's criminals, and the Gibraltar police seemed to have waved all extradition formalities by an immediate surrender when the Spanish Consul stated that they were the men he wanted. The police at Gibraltar pretended that they had expelled the fugitives because the strict regulations prohibited the admittance of suspicious characters.

After the recapture of the fugitives the other political prisoners in the African stations of Spain were treated with greater rigor, locked up, only allowed to get rations from the canteens, and otherwise maltreated. Maceo and his fellow fugitives are in this position at Ceuta.

The total number of the Cuban prisoners is 200 in Fernando Po, 300 in Moorish coast stations, about 100 in the Spanish fortresses or garrison towns, and 50 or so on parole. In Madrid and the large towns most are in a state of destitution, living on an allowance of fifteen pence daily. Their detention is held by the Cuban members of the Spanish Parliament to be a violation of the Constitution, and it adds fuel to the colonial disaffection.

The affair does not excite much interest in Spain. People mostly believe that the refugees were retaken on Spanish soil, and it is generally considered a practical joke to have profited by the blunder or involuntary mistake of the British police. Spaniards so thoroughly abominate the movement that nearly wrested from them the last of their American colonies that no pity is felt for the hundreds of men, black and white, pining without trial in the State prisons. In this circumstance, Spaniards generally show distrust of the British protest against the violation of the Extradition Treaty, which expressly bound both the contracting Powers never to ask for political extradition under any other pretexts. An investigation on the part of both Governments must establish if the British Colonial Office or the Gibraltar Police were asked to arrest the three Cuban fugitives as other than political prisoners who, as such, had been transported to the Peninsula by order of the Captain-General of Cuba.

A party of Engineers and surveyors are now engaged at Port Nelson taking soundings and determining when the harbor opens and closes. Preliminary surveys are being made, and it is stated that by August, 1883, the Winnipeg and Hudson Bay Railway will be located for a distance of 300 miles.

The Detroit authorities have refused to allow the sale of tickets for a Canadian lottery in that city.

ODDITIES.

A dead-lock—The fastening of a cemetery gate.

A modern philosopher thinks that early rising is well enough as far as bread is concerned.

Children are like boils. Everybody knows how to take of those that belong to other people.

Herbert Spencer's version of the popular phrase, "Give us a rest"—"It is time to preach the gospel of relaxation."

There are twenty-four systems of shorthand, but the short-handedest man nowadays is the Republican who paid his bets.

Upon a writer exclaiming that his works contained much "food for thought," a friend remarked: "That may be so; but it is wretchedly cooked."

A juryman was asked if the judge had charged him. "Faith," said he, "the man lectured us a good deal, but I don't believe he meant to charge for it."

England has satistics showing that out of 139,143 of her people engaged in literary pursuits, only 12 became lunatics. We persume the others were given the benefit of a doubt and called poets.

A Newport snob recently went rowing with a small poodle. The boat was capsized, the snob was drowned, and the poodle swam ashore, and an inquirer wants to know if this is a case of the survival of the fittest.

A little 3-year old girl, while her mother was trying to get her to sleep, became intsrested in some outside noise. She was told that it was caused by a cricket, when she sagely observed: "Mamma, I think he ought to be oiled."

A bright little girl noticing among the company at her father's residence on a certain occasion a gentleman whose face was considerably pockmarked, seemed much struck with his appearance, and after the rompany retired inquired who the "mother-eaten gentleman" was.

"Can you help me a little?" said a tramp, poking his head into a country shop. "Why dont you help yourself?" said the proprietor, angrily. "Thank you, I will," said the tramp, as he picked up a Dutch cheese and two loaves of bread and disappeared like a streak of lightning, followed by half a dozen lumps of coal.

"Then you are thinking of building a residence next season?" suggested Flub to one of our heavy pockets. "Yes, I thought I should get up something in that line." "What style of architecture—Gothic, or Doric, or Corinthian, or——?" "Oh, a little of everything. My wife inclines to the Mary Ann style; but I guess I'll put up a genuine Betsy Jane cottage, with a pizarro all around it. That'll suit me well enough."

A teacher in a suburban school was giving her class an object lesson a few days ago, and drew a cat upon the blackboard for its inspection. She then asked what was on the cat, and the unanimous reply was, "hair." "What else?" she queried. There was a long pause of consideration, but finally the hand of a bright-eyed little 5-year-old shot up, and almost simultaneously came her triumphant answer, "Fleas!"

A delightful instance of mixed metaphors, almost too good to be true, is given in a law manual recently published by a gentleman in Japan for the use of the Japanese students. Learned consel: "This man, gentleman of the jury, walks into court like a motionless statue with the cloak of hypocrisy in his mouth, and is attempting to screw three large oaks out of my client's pockets."

While Mrs. Siddons was playing one night an obstinate man in the crowded pit insisted upon standing up. A disturbance took place which threatened to become a row. It was, however, arrested by the witty Henry Erskine. Coming to the front of his box, he quietly said, yet so as to be heard by all: "Pray excuse the gentleman; don't you see it is only a tailor resting himself." The effect was magical. A burst of laughter put everyone in a good humor, and the obstinate man, abashed, took his seat.

A western man has been telling some Philadelphians how western cities grow. He says he went into the mountains hunting, and night coming on, he went to sleep in a tree to be out of the reach of wolves. He was awakened the next morning by some workmen, who told him to get down and finish his nap on the court house steps, as they wanted to turn the tree into a flag-pole for the hotel cross the way. He got down, and when rubbing his eyes was nearly run over by a street-car, and got his feet tangled in an electric-light wire.

He Couldn't See.

A reverend gentleman in Aberdeenshire, having been summoned before the presbytery for tippling, one of his elders the constant participator of his orgies, was summoned to appear as a witness against him.

"Weel, John," said a member of the reverend court, "did you ever see the accused the worse of drink?"

"Weel, I wat, no," answered John; "I've mony a time seen him the better o't, but never seen him the waur o't."

"But did you ever see him drunk?"

"That's what I never see," replied the elder, "for lang before he's half-sickened, I'm ave blind fou."

A very fashionable church in Germantown, Pa., announces a festival, a leading feature in which is to be a most excellent supper. It is understood that there will be no charge of admission, and that the proceeds will be for the benefit of the chapel building fund. The proceeds are to come from voluntary contributions, the provision being that every gentlemen to whom a ticket is handed for himself and lady is to hand over a "voluntary contribution" of $5. The young men much dislike this voluntary style of contribution, and say that they would sooner pay fifty cents in the regular way for a ticket than "voluntarily contribute" $5 in the new fashion. The promoters of this festival enterprise reply that it is more blessed to give than to receive. The intimation is that the young man who pays $5 for himself and his girl will give a great deal more than both together are likely to receive back in the way of supper. The young men wonder whether in such case the blessedness of giving will extend to the girls they take with them, or go no further than to their own sinful hearts.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN

The most successful R

ever discovered, as it is certain in and does not blister. READ PROOF

Kendall's Spavin

HAMILTON, Mo., June

B. J. KENDALL & Co.,—Gents: to certify that I have used Kendall's Cure, and have found it to be all recommended to be and in fact more I have removed by using the above: Bone Spavins, Ring-bone, Splints, cheerfully testify and recommend the best thing for any bony substance ever used, and have tried many made that my study for years.

Respectfully yours,
P. V.

FROM

Col. T. L. Fos

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, May

DR B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents: very valuable Hambletonian colt that very highly, he had a large bone spa one joint and a small one on the oth made him very lame; I had him charge of two veterinary surgeons who ed to cure him. I was one day rea advertisement of Kendall's Spavin the Chicago Express. I determined to try it, and got our druggist here for it, they ordered three bottles; I h all and thought I would give it a tri al, I used it according to direction for arth day the colt ceased to be the lumps have disappeared. I used bottle and the colt's limbs are as fr lumps and as smooth as any horse state. He is entirely cured. The so remarkable that I let two of my n have the remaining two bottles who using it.

Very respectfully,
L. T. FOS

Kendall's Spavin C

WINGHAM, Ont., Jan.

DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co. Gents: to certify that I have used Kendall's Cure, bought from C. E Williams, Wingham, Ont., and do without h pronounce it to be an invaluable re the cure of Spavins, Ringbones, or C used it on a bone spavin of seve growth which it completely remove can safely say it will remove any Curb or Ringbone it properly used also recommended friends to use it done so with perfect success. I ga this public, and will answer any que letters sent me.

Yours &c.
GEORGE BR

Kendall's Spavin C

ON HUMAN FLESH.

WEST ENOSBURGH, Vt., Feb.

DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents:— months ago I injured my knee joint caused an enlargement to grow the a walnut and caused me very severe the time for four or five weeks, when to use Kendall's Spavin Cure with satisfactory results. It has entirely ed the enlargement and stopped the and pain. I have long known it to be lent for horses but now I know it to best liniment for human flesh that quainted with.

Yours truly,
T. P. LAWRE

ST. JOHN, P Q Oct.

DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents:— used your Spavin Cure with great s spavins, curbs and splints. I know a good remedy for ringbones, bone cuts, galls and all kinds of lameness difficulties about the horse. One of sprained his ankle very badly. I Kendall's Spavin Cure and I never thing work like it. he was well in a f I know it to be good for man as well I procured one of your Treatise on the by mail for 25cts. and I think it means of saving me $100 on one ho I treated according to the directions your book for displaced stifle.

Yours truly.
WM. J. PEAR

Send address for Illustrated Circular we think gives positive proof of its No remedy has ever met with such ma ed success to our knowledge, for beast as man.

Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles All druggists have it or can get it or it will be sent to any address on re price by the proprietors. DR. B. J. K & Co., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

Sold by all Druggis

LYMAN, SONS & CO., Montreal, Wholesale Agents

GEORGE NOBLE,

INSURANCE AND LAND AG

LICENSED AUCTIONE

For the County of Grey.

AGENT for the following reliable Com CITIZENS', of Montreal,

AGRICULTURAL, of Waterto

TRADE & COMMERCE, of Toronto.

A number of Choice Farms for Village Lots.

Auction Sales conducted in Town or try on Shortest Notice. Charges m Bills, Blank Notes, and Stamps pro

GEO. NOB

S SACRIFICE:

OR,

For Love of Her.

CHAPTER V.

are few people who can speak light-carelessly of their past lives. If the of what has been and what has gone does not bring with it actual pain, it fail to bring at least a feeling of sad-ful vague regret. No matter how and free from sorrow a person's life grief and pain, more or less intense, some time found their way into it; how many dear friends one may there were others once just as dear—dearer—over whose dead hearts the is growing. One speaks half sadly even days that have been—if a person has sorrow or grief which at the time of currence seemed too great, too terrible borne, then it is utterly impossible for person to speak or think of his pass without a return to the old feel-passionate agony and bitter despair. Anthon's face showed that it was no light matter this that he had un-ken, of speaking even to his wife of his life.

never before seen the drawn about his mouth, the sorrow in his that there was as he began his story; felt instinctively that a half-buried in his heart was rising out of its grave, asserting all its former power.

have told you before, Muriel, that I born in Maryland. My father was de-from one of the early English gover-he was a very proud man, perhaps so, for throughout the State there was name more honored and respected than a family whose reputation was purer. mother was of Grecian extraction, and time was considered the most beauti-man in Baltimore; my father worship-she had not a wish that he did not He was very wealthy, one of those whose hands everything seemed to gold. Year after year he increased fortune which had been left him by his he lived in an almost princely fa-denying himself no luxury that money procure; he bought an island in Ches-Bay, made of it a perfect garden, a beautiful house on it, and there the part of my childhood was spent.

had several brothers and sisters, some some younger than I was: but one another they died of various childish ses, until only we were left—my twin ther Arundel and I."

paused a moment and passed one hand his eyes as if to hide the look of sud-pain that had leaped into them at the tion of the name, then continued:

In appearance we resembled each other closely that when we were children we scarcely be told apart, even in after when we had both grown to manhood, likeness between us was so strong that times I have been taken for him and me.

But though in face and figure we were much alike, in disposition, temperament tastes, we were totally different. I was reserve, quiet, reserved, seeming older I was, caring but little for society, pre-ring a few trusted friends to a large circle acquaintances; he was just the opposite, merry making friends wherever he unanimously voted a leader in society. when he was a child there was that him which fascinated young and old, he grew older that wonderful power strength grew stronger. I have met many in my life, never one who possessed to a marvellous extent the charm of per-fascination. How proud my father mother were of him, what hopes they upon him; he was so bright and tal-learning without any apparent effort, to grasp at the meaning of things. I blamed them because in his boyhood early manhood he was a little nearer hearts than I was; I never thought of him, for I too was so proud of him, he was so dear to me, I loved him so—Arundel, Arundel!'

The old agony was fast rising within him, found a voice in the words uttered with passionate longing, "Oh, Arundel, Ar-del!'

"Muriel, I know that few men love their others as I loved him; there was between stronger on my side because of my na-—that bond which generally exists be-twin twins; yet, though I loved him so dearly, I could not close my eyes to his faults. Passionate, hot-tempered, self-indulgent, he was also weak, reckless, and self-so far as his own pleasures was concern-these were the faults which grew in strength, until at last they over-balanced all his many fine and noble qualities, and ruin-him.

"After we had finished with our tutor, I, having no taste nor inclination for a collegi-ate course, begged my father to find me a place in a bank in Baltimore, of which he was the president: and at his own request Ar-del was sent to one of the oldest and best-known northern colleges. That was the be-ginning of the end. His college life was one long, bitter disappointment and pain to us all; he made friends of men who had no other thought than the gratification of their own desires; he spent money like water, neglecting his natural talents and genius lie un-cared for and unimproved. It was just at the close of the second college year that word came to us that he had fled the coun-try, was supposed to have gone to some part of Europe. Why?" and a deep flush settled on Russel Anthon's face as he met his wife's questioning gaze, "because, Muriel, he had used the power God had given him, the power of winning love and confidencee, to accomplish a base and ignoble purpose; he had brought shame and sorrow upon an in-nocent, trusting girl, whose only fault had been that she had loved him too dearly.

"My father could forgive him for keep-ing bad company, and spending money, could and did excuse him, saying, 'the boy is young, the hot blood will cool as he grows older;' but he could neither forgive nor ex-cuse Arundel's sin. That a son of his should so dishonor himself as to bring shame and misery upon the head of a frail, help-less girl, and then instead of standing by her, should have fled in cowardly fear of the consequences of his own act, leaving her, the weaker one, to bear all alone the sorrow and disgrace, seemed to him, with his high code of honor and his chivalrous regard for all women, something too monstrous to ever pardon.

"After awhile we heard from Arundel. He was in Russia; and father wrote him a few lines, saying he would allow him so much a year to live on, so that he would not be forced to steal—that is the name by which he designated gambling—and so bring more dishonor upon the name he had already blackened.

"Three years went by; then early one fall Arundel came back, sick, miserable, a shadow only of his former self. He was very repentant, promised to redeem his character, and for mother's sake—she had mourned deeply for her boy—father gave him back the old place in his home, but never again the old place in his heart. Still he was kind to him, mother wept glad tears over him, and I—how could I help it, when I loved him so dearly? I almost forgave him.

"For about six months all went very well. We were beginning to take hope again that Arundel would make a noble, talented man, when to my great dismay I found he was, in a small way, beginning to slip back into his old ways. He seemed to have forgotten the past, with its sorrow and shame, and was almost as gay and merry as he had ever been. Society chose to forget the story of his misdeeds—it generally does when the wrong-doer is young and hand-some, rich and accomplished—and wel-comed him as warmly as it had ever done. He joined a club in Baltimore composed of young men who, though they belonged to the wealthiest and most aristocratic families in Maryland, were none the less reckless and immoral.

"Vainly I pleaded with him. He only laughed, and said, half seriously, half in jest, 'I am no boy now, Russel; I can tell right from wrong. Don't you worry about me.'

"Oh, Muriel, how can I tell you!"

With a groan Russel Anthon rose to his feet and paced up and down the room, his face working strangely, his hands clasped tightly together; once, twice, three times he walked the length of the room, then stopped, leaned one arm upon the marble mantel-piece, and with his face half turned from his wife, went on speaking in a low, hollow, monotonous voice, out of which hope and joy, and almost life itself, seemed to have died.

"It was very little over a year after he had come home that it happened. Only God really knows how it came about. No one would have ever known any of the cir-cumstances connected with it had it not been that Arundel wrote me, telling me, in as few words as possible, how it transpired; and I think, I have always believed, that the boy told me the truth.

"He was spending the evening with an intimate friends of his—a young married man, whose father and mine were distantly related, and had been warm and dear friends since their boyhood. The two were playing cards alone in the library, and one of them proposed that they should put up a small amount of money just to make the game more interesting. It grew late and later; every one else in the house retired; it was after midnight; and still those two men sat playing, smoking, and drinking brandy and water, growing more excited, doubling the stakes at every game. Arundel was the successful one—he was always lucky at cards—and he won game after game until, heated with liquor, excited, angry, scarcely know-ing what he was saying, his friend accused him of winning by unfair means.

"Muriel, the boy wrote me that he had played fairly and squarely, and I believed him—that is, if there can be any fairness and squareness in a game where men play for each other's money. However it was, Ar-undel fiercely resented the accusation; hot words passed between the two, until, beside himself with passion, his blood boiling, his brain on fire, my brother struck him—struck the man who had been his friend for years, the man who was the son of his father's best friend. My God, think of it!

"Totally unprepared for the sudden and severe blow, he fell heavily forward; his head struck the fender in front of the fire-place, and a sharp-pointed steel spike—part of the ornamental work—was driven with terrible force into his left temple. Even be-fore Arundel could raise him in his arms he was dead."

With a low, frightened cry Muriel started to her feet, her face perfectly colorless, her eyes wide with horror.

"Dead!" she repeated, with pale, trem-bling lips; "do you mean, Russel, that your brother was a murderer?"

On Russel Anthon's forehead great drops of icy sweat was standing.

"Yes," the answer came through his clenched teeth, "my brother Arundel An-thon was a murderer."

His great agony went to her heart. Go-ing quickly to his side, she threw her arms, with a sudden impulse, about him, looking pityingly up into his haggard face.

"Hush!" she whispered, caressingly, al-most as she would have spoken to a child, "it was not your fault, you know; neither God nor man hold you responsible for your brother's sin."

At any other time the wife's caress would have thrilled him with happiness; as it was he scarcely heeded it. Every nerve and fibre in his whole body was quivering with anguish. There was no room in his heart for any feelings save those of misery.

"Russel," said Muriel, suddenly lifting her head from his breast, "what was his name, the poor young gentleman who was —who died?"

He hesitated for a moment, seeming uncertain what answer he should make her.

"I do not know whether it is best that you should know, Muriel," he said, at last, slowly and wearily, "yet, who can tell? It might at some time make a difference. I hardly know what to do. I never thought that I should tell you, still now I feel im-pelled to do so, and perhaps, after all, you should know, for we cannot tell what the future holds for us—what the coming year may bring. Yes, I will tell you, Muriel, it was Evringham—Percy Evringham."

So Muriel heard the name for the first time which she was to hear again under such vastly different circumstances.

CHAPTER VI.

"Percy Evringham," Muriel murmured. "It is a pretty name," she continued, un-consciously speaking her thoughts aloud; "and it died with him—poor Percy Evring-ham!"

But low as the words were whispered they did not escape her husband's ears, and he shivered as he said,

"No, no, Muriel, it did not die with him, for six months after he was buried, his child was born, a little boy, whom they named for his dead father; so there is another Percy Evringham."

"And the mother?" said Muriel, in a low voice.

"She died shortly after the child was born," Russel answered, still speaking slow-ly and wearily as thought every word cost him bitter pain, as God knows it did. "How it all comes back to me—as plainly as though it had happened weeks instead of years ago. Five years ago, Muriel; and Percy Evring-ham's child—the boy of whom he would have been so proud—is five years old."

He paused abruptly, looking straight be-fore him with eyes that were dark with pas-sionate regret. He had forgotten his wife's presence, forgotten that he had left unfinish-ed the story of his erring brother's life; back over five years his thought were wan-dering, he was living over again all the sor-row and pain those years held.

And Muriel too was silent; she had drift-ed into a mournful reverie; her mind was filled with thoughts of the poor young wife who had been so cruelly bereft of her hus-band, and of the little baby boy who was fatherless and motherless. Then suddenly a new thought came to her, and she said quickly.

"Russel, what of Arundel—what became of him?"

With a start he came back to the pres-ent.

"Yes, I had almost forgotten," he said: "yet, that part of his life of which I have not yet spoken, was uppermost in my thoughts to-night when I began to tell you about him. But, Muriel, my darling"—a look of tenderness lighting up his sad face as he spoke—"why are you standing here? you will be tired dear, come, sit down," and leading her to a chair he seated himself in one near her, and then took up the broken thread of the story. "Holding Percy Ev-ringham's dead body in his arms, realizing that life had gone forever out of the still form, the horrible truth swept over Arundel that he had killed his friend, killed him un-intentionally—God and the angels know there had been no thought of murder in his heart when he had struck that fatal blow—yet, nevertheless, in the eyes of men and the law he would be a murderer.

"And what did the law do with murder-derers? It arrested, threw into prison, tried, sentenced, hanged them. That last determined him. He had already brought dishonor upon the proud old Anthon name, but it should never be said, because of him, that an Anthon of Maryland was hanged; for the sake of the family name and the family honor he resolved to elude the iron grasp of justice.

Silently, unobserved, he went out of the house—by morning he was miles away from Baltimore.

"Within twelve hours after that terrible deed was done that letter came to me which told me all. It was post-marked Baltimore; he had written it on the out-going train, and meeting at some small station, a gentleman —a stranger—who was going into the city, had given it to him to mail on his arrival there. He had no wish to deny the crime, or to let it fall possibly on some one else; so far as he was personally concerned, I know he would have been willing to have suffered the consequences of his sin, im-prisonment for life, or death, whichever it might have been; it was for our sakes that he desired to escape the punishment of the law.

"How he did it I do not know, but es-cape he did. It was as though the earth had opened and taken him in, leaving not the slightest trace of him behind; after a time all search for him was given up; of what use was it to search for a man who seemed to have disappeared from the face of the earth? no use, and before a year had gone by, even those who had known him best, spoke of Arundel Anthon as people speak of the dead.

"Muriel, the blow did not fall more crush-ingly upon the Evringhams than it did upon us. I thought my father would lose his reason; for days he shut himself up in his library, refusing to see any one, neither eat-ing nor sleeping. From that time he was a changed man. My mother never recovered from the shock; she fell senseless to the floor when the news first came to her, and for hours she remained unconscious. She never complained, she did not moan nor cry, but day after day she grew paler, thinner, weak-er. We knew she was going, yet we could do nothing. Just a few weeks before Percy Evringham's boy was born she died: almost her last words to me were: 'If the time should ever come that you could ever do anything for Arundel—help him in any way—I want you to do it, Russel, for my sake; for, though he has sinned so terribly, I have always loved him—my poor, erring boy—how dearly no one will ever know.' And I promised, Muriel—I promised my dying mother that if ever I could do aught for Ar-undel, for her sake I would do it.

"The night after she died, my father came to me, and together we went into the room where she was lying—all that was mortal of her. For a few moments he stood in silence, looking down at the face so beautiful even in death; then he turned to me, and his voice was clear and cold as ice. 'Russel,' he said, 'but for your brother she would not be lying here to-night, cold and dead; he killed her just as much as if he had taken a revolver and shot her through the heart. From this time forward I have no son but you. Stand-ing here beside the dead form of the only woman I ever loved, I disown him—that other one—forever. He is no longer a son of mine; I never want to look upon his face again, neither in this world nor the next.'

"Without another word he left the room; he never spoke to me again of Arundel but once, that was the day little Percy Evring-ham was born. As soon as he heard of the child's birth, he made over a hundred thou-sand dollars to it. When he told me what he had done, he said, quietly, 'That money was to have been your brother's; it is only just and proper that it should go to the child whom he robbed of its father.'

"It may seem strange, but the friendship which had always existed between our family and the Evringhams remained the same—it was as though Arundel had been a stranger to us both. Howard Evringham, Percy's father, was still my father's best and truest friend. The two men tried to comfort each other in their great mutual sorrow—both had lost a son, had seen their brightest hopes go down in darkness. My father's misery was by far the deeper and more lasting of the two; rather a thousand times would he have laid Arundel in an honored grave than to have known he was living a dishonored life.

"It was not very long after mother's death that he sold our beautiful home, as well as all the real estate he owned in Baltimore, and having settled up his business affairs we went abroad. A strange restlessness came upon him, he wanted to be constantly travel-ing, he could not remain long in any place; he seemed most content when we were flying along as fast as steam could carry us. I re-member one time—we were in England, go-ing somewhere, I forget exactly where, and the express train was speeding along over the iron rails, he had not spoken a word for some time; when suddenly he turned to me, and said, 'Russel, I would like to go this way to the end.'

"'I never want to go back to America alive,' he said, simply, when I spoke once of returning; 'take me back when I am dead, and lay me beside your mother.'

"He died in Florence about a year before I first met you, Muriel; though in losing him I seemed to lose all I had, though life without him was very lonely, yet I could not wish him back, for I know death quieted the feverish unrest, hushed the crying of the heart which had known so much of sorrow and cruel pain. I brought his dead body home—his grave is close to my mother's, so in death they are not separated—in heaven I know they are together.

"I was preparing to go back to London to attend to some business there which father had not settled, when the news came to me that Arundel too was dead—had died in Australia. I had no reason to doubt it; I had proofs that it was so, and the convic-tion grew upon me that my brother Ar-rundel was sleeping in a lonely, far-off grave.

"Muriel, a short time after you became acquainted with me, you said one day, in your childish way—you were only a child then—'Why do you always look so sad, Mr. Anthon?' You do not wonder now, do you, darling?

"Thinking that my brother was dead, I looked upon myself as the last one of the family that had once been such a happy one. Did you ever think what it was, Muriel, to be the last one—all the others gone; noth-ing left but bitterly-sweet memories and grass-covered graves? There is nothing in all the world more sad, So I have thought I was the last one, until—to-day."

He drew from his pocket the soiled, crum-pled letter he had that afternoon received—the letter with the Mexican post-mark, and laid it in Muriel's hand.

"That letter is from Arundel," he said, slowly.

"From Arundel!" Her eyes went from his face to the letter in her hand, then back again, meeting his with a bewildered look. "Then, after all, he did not die; it was a mistake?"

"Yes, all a mistake. He was in Austra-lia, but he did not die. Oh, Muriel, what a miserable, wretched life he has led. God knows he has suffered for his sins; sick, weary, friendless, alone, he has wandered from place to place like a hunted animal. He is in Mexico now; he has been ill for a long time; they tell him he has not long to live, and he wants me to come to him; he longs to see my face again before he dies. He knows the rest are gone, that only he and I are left. While he was in the city of Mex-ico he heard that I was in New York; he knows nothing further of my life, he has no idea that I am married; he addressed my letter to the general post-office here in the city, with only a vague hope that it would reach me.

"Ah, Muriel, it is such a pitiful letter, even if I had not always loved him, it would have touched my heart. 'For the sake of the love you once bore me, come to me, Russel, before I die!' he writes. 'I have lived five long terrible years alone, yet now at the end it seems as though I could not die alone. Oh, my, brother, if I could only see your face again!'"

Over Muriel's face the tears were falling like rain. Clasping her little trembling hands about her husband's arm she raised her eyes, golden now with great sympathy and pity to his.

"Oh Russel!" she pleaded, "be pitiful, go to him, your poor brother; tell him you love him still, that you forgive him. He did sin, ah, terribly, but surely if suffering can atone for sin, he has atoned for his; for think what he must have suffered in these five miserable years—they must have seem-ed like five centuries to him. And he is dying now in a strange land among strangers, with no loving hand to wipe away the death-sweat from his forehead, no voice to pray for him. Remember the promise you made to your dying mother—the mother who loved him so—that if the time should ever come when you could do aught for him, you would do it; the time has come, Russel, the time is here."

The voice broken, and choked with sobs, ceased, and with a fresh burst of tears Muriel laid her head on her husband's knee.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Getting Even With Blumenthal.

Mr. Isaacs and Mr. Blumenthal kept rival clothing stores on the Bowery, within a few doors of each other. Mr. Isaacs was always to be found with his head out of the door soliciting custom from the verdant passer-by. Mr. Blumenthal objected to this shoddy manner of doing business, having found that the watchful Isaacs had captured several of his customers, and one day he went up to Mr. Isaacs and said: "Look here, Mr. Isaacs, vy don't you keep your ugly face inside? You might petter get a jackass to stand py de door. He would pe a big improvement." "Vy," said Isaacs, "I did try dat vonce, und all de people as dey pass py say to him: 'Good day, Mr. Blumentha; I see you've moved.'"

A Level Headed Porter.

An Indian Rajah had a poor porter at his gate who resembled him in person. He one day put his royal robes and crown on him, seated him on the throne, and then put on his own head the porter's cap and stood in in the gate and laughed to see his ministers deceived and bowing down before the porter. But the porter said: "Who is that fellow laughing at me in the gate? Off with his head!" They decapitated the rajah, and the porter reigned in his stead.

A ROMANCER's ROMANCE.

A Romance From the Life of the Fiction-Writer, Miss Edgeworth, Related by Herself.

Miss Edgeworth's keen delights and vivid descriptions of all the new things, faces, voices, ideas, are all to be read, says a writer in the Cornhill Magazine, in some long and most charming letters to Ireland, which also contain the account of a most eventful crisis which this Paris journey brought about. The letter is dated March, 1803, and it concludes as follows: "Here, my dear aunt, I was in-terrupted in a manner that will surprise you as much as it surprised me—by the com-ing of M. Edelcrantz, a Swedish gentleman whom we have mentioned to you, of superior understanding and mild manners. He came to offer me his hand and heart. My heart, you may suppose, can not return his attach-ment, for I have seen but very little of him, and have not had time to have formed any judgment, except that I think nothing could tempt me to leave my own dear friends and my own country to live in Sweden." Maria Edgeworth was now about 30 years of age, at a time of life when people are apt to re-alize, perhaps almost more deeply than in early youth, the influence of feeling, its im-portance, and strange power over events. Hitherto there are no records in her memoirs of any sensational episodes, but it does not follow that a young lady has not had her own phase of experience because she does not write it out at length to her various aunts and correspondents. Miss Edgeworth was not a sentimental person. She was warmly devoted to her own family, and she seems to have had a strong idea of her own want of beauty; perhaps her admiration for her love-ly young sisters may have caused this feel-ing to be exaggerated by her. But no ro-mantic, lovely heroine could have inspired a deeper or more touching admiration than this one which M. Edelcrantz felt for his English friend; the mild and superior Swede seems to have been thoroughly in earnest. So indeed was Miss Edgeworth, but she was not carried away by the natural impulses of the moment. She realized the many diffi-culties and dangers of the unknown; she looked to the future; she looked to her own home, and with an affection all the more felt because of the trial to which it was now exposed. The many lessons of self-control and self-restraint which she had learned re-turned with instinctive force. Sometimes it happens that people miss what is the best for the sake of the next best, and we see con-venience and old habit and expediency, and a hundred small and insignificant circum-stances, gathering like some avalanche to divide hearts that might give and receive very much from each. But sentiment is not the only thing in life. Other duties, ties, and realities there are, and it is difficult to judge for others in such matters. Sincerity of heart and truth to themselves are pretty sure in the end to lead people in the right direction for their own and for other people's happiness. Only, in the experience of many women, there is the danger that fixed ideas and other people's opinion, and the force of custom, may limit lives which might have been complete in greater things, though per-haps less perfect in the lesser. People in the abstract are sincere enough in wishing fullness of experience and happiness to those dearest and nearest to them, but we are only human beings, and when the time comes and the horrible necessity for parting approaches, our courage goes, our hearts fail, and we think we are preaching reason and good sense, while it is only a most natural instinct which leads us to cling to that to which we are used and to those we love. Mr. Edgeworth did not attempt to influence Maria, Mrs. Edgeworth evidently had some misgivings, and certainly much sympathy for the chevalier and for her friend and step-daughter. She says: "Maria was mistaken as to her own feelings. She re-fused M. Edelcrantz, but she felt much more for him than esteem and admiration; she was extremely in love with him. Mr. Edgeworth left her to decide for herself, but she saw too plainly what it would be to us to lose her and what she would feel at part-ing with us. She decided rightly for her own future happpiness and for that of her family, but she suffered much at the time and long afterward. While we were at Paris I remember that in a shop, where Charlotte and I were making purchases, Maria sat apart absorbed in thought, and so deep in reverie that when her father came in and stood opposite to her she did not see him till he spoke to her, when she started and burst into tears. * * * I do not think she repented of her refusal, or regret-ed her decision. She was well aware that she could not have made M. Edel-crantz happy, that she would not have suit-ed his position at the court of Stockholm, and that her want of beauty might have diminished his attachment. It was perhaps better she should think so, for it calmed her mind; but from what I saw of M. Edel-crantz, I think he was a man capable of really valuing her. I believe he was much attached to her, and deeply mortified at her refusal. He continued to reside in Sweden after the abdication of his master, and was always distinguished for his high character and great abilities. He never married. He was, except for his very fine eyes, remark-ably plain." So ends the romance of the romancer. There are, however, many hap-pinesses in life, as there are many troubles.

Istory of A Will.

One has heard of wills written on bed-posts, concealed in hay-lofts and flower-pots, and other possible and impossible places, but probably no will has ever passed through more vicissitudes than one admitted to probate by Sir James Hannon. The test-ator was an engineer on board a channel steamer and made his will giving everything to his wife, and gave the will to her. Some time afterward they had a quarrel, during which she tore the will up and threw the pieces into the fire. The husband picked up the pieces and put them into an envelope labelled "Poison," but said he would make a new one. However, several years after-ward he died of smallpox on his steamer, and on his clothes being searched, before burning, the envelope with the pieces of the will inside it was luckily found and given to his wife. This brand plucked from the burning has now been pieced together and will be deposited at Somerset house; a lesson to all time to wives not to lose their tempers too far if they do not wish also to lose their husband's property, or to save it only by a lawsuit.—Pall Mall Gazette.

The Standard.

MARKDALE, DEC. 7TH, 1882.

THE T. G. & B. RAILWAY.

A year ago last Saturday the guage of the Toronto Grey & Bruce Railway was changed from that of 2 feet 6 inches to the present standard guage of 4 feet 8½ inches. The grand improvements which our highway has undergone during the past year are well worthy of note. The bridges which were all wooden have been replaced with substantial stone and iron structures, the track ballasted, new ties put in and steel railed throughout, new rolling stock provided, the stations remoddled and re-painted, additional sidings laid down, snow and wire fences erected, besides many minor improvements, making the road one of the best now in Canada. The majority of the train officials and station agents hold their old positions with credit to themselves and no doubt satisfaction to the company, and are noted for being courteous and obliging. The road is now an independent line, but what changes may take place e'er another twelve months roll round time will only tell.

STRAY CATTLE.

A subscriber writes to us requesting information concerning stray cattle. As we are frequently in receipt of similar requests, we propose to give a summary of the law relating to these matters. Properly speaking all stray animals should be taken to the nearest pound-keeper, but stray horses, bulls, oxen, cows, sheep, goats, pigs or other cattle, may be retained by any person, providing no claim for damages is made, and due notice of their detention is given. The owner, if known, must be notified in writing. If unknown, the Clerk of the municipality must be supplied with a written notice, containing a description of the animal. The clerk is required to enter the notice in a book to be kept for the purpose, and to post a notice in conspicuous place, on or near the door of his office, for one week. If the animal is worth more than $10 the distrainor must also publish a notice in a county newspaper once a week for three weeks. The distrainor must feed the animal, and can recover value for the same, as well as for time, trouble and attendance. If the 'stray' is not claimed within the time mentioned in the notices, an affidavit to that affect must be made before the Justice of the Peace, and notices of sale given. The sale can be conducted by any pound-keeper, but not by private individuals, and the animal must be sold by auction. Notices of sale for pigs, goats or sheep, may be given one month after the animal is taken up; though for horses and other cattle the notices may not be issued until after two months. All charges are deducted from the amount realized by the sale, and the surplus, if any, must be paid over to the Treasurer of the municipality. If the charges of the distrainor are disputed, any three fence-viewers are empowered to act as arbitrators.—Collingwood Enterprise.

Correspondence.

NOTICE.—We wish it distinctly understood that we do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions expressed by our correspondents

To the Editor of the STANDARD.

DEAR SIR,—I wish through the medium of your paper to call the attention of our citizens and community at large to a matter in which all who take any part in the prosperity and advancement of our village both morally, intellectually and commercially should feel interested. It was with regret I heard a few days since a billiard saloon was about to be opened in one of our business places in this village. Now, sir, from all I have heard and learned about such places of amusement they are the most dangerous and hurtful to the morals of our youth that could be established. While it is pretended that only amusement of an innocent sort is engaged in, it is here where the temptation to drink and gamble is presented, and the unwary youth is thus lead from one to another in vice. I should think we had plenty of temptations at present in our midst calculated to lead the young of our rising town and country astray without the establishing and licensing of a billiard saloon. I hope and trust that the heads of families for the sake of their families, for the sake of their boys, in whom their brightest hopes are centered, will refrain from patronizing anything of the sort. Remember on your shoulders will rest the responsibility if you fail to guard your boys and warn them to shun such places of amusement. The late unhappy stabbing affray which has scandalized our village was the result of a quarrel at the billiard or bagatelle table. Our village has become a byword throughout the country on account of the acts of violence and violation of law in our midst. Liquor is being sold with impunity without license. Licensed houses who nominally close their bar at 7 o'clock on Saturday evening are found selling at all hours after that, and even the sacredness of the Sabbath is violated by the selling of liquor. Now, Mr. Editor, what is the use of a license inspector, or what are they paid for doing, when such a state of affairs is in our midst? I really hope the people of this village who wish to see the village prosper and law and order maintained will unite as one man and compel the observance of the law in this respect, or petition the withdrawal of licenses from those who thus persist in the violation thereof. If a man commits murder or steals he is breaking the law. Think you, could he repeat that week after week and not be brought to justice? Trusting I have not intruded too much on your space,

I am, yours, &c.,

ZENOPHEN.

A VEXED CLERGYMAN.

Even the patience of Job would become exhausted were he a preacher and endeavoring to interest his audience while they were keeping up an incessant coughing, making it impossible for him to be heard. Yet, how very easy can all this be avoided by simply using Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. Trial Bottles given away at A Turner & Co's Drug Store.

BIRTHS.

PALLISTER—In Proton, on the 15th Nov., the wife of Mr. Wm. Edmund Pallister, of a son.

SMITH—In Proton, on the 15th Nov., the wife of Mr. John J. Smith, of a daughter.

MCLEOD—In Markdale, on the 3rd inst., the wife of Mr. Donald McLeod, jr., (shoemaker) of a son.

LARGE—In Markdale, on the 18th ult., the wife of Mr. Edward C. Large, (builder and contractor) of a daughter.

MARRIAGES.

FOSTER—RORKE—In Markdale, on the 5th. inst., by Rev. N. A. McDiarmid, Mr. Henry Foster (merchant) to Miss Annie Amelia Rorke, all of Markdale.

MCGINNIS—MCDONLD—At the Presbyterian Manse, Priceville, on the 26th ult., by Rev. D. McLeod, Mr. Hugh McGinnis to Miss Annie McDonald, both of Glenelg.

BOYD—DODSON—At Markdale, on Wednesday, Nov. 22nd, 1882, by Rev. J. S. Corcoran, Mr. Joseph R. Boyd, of Euphrasia, to Miss Eliza, eldest daughter of J. J. Dodson, Esq., Rocklyn.

WATSON—MCNALLY—On the 21st Nov., by the Rev. D. C. McDowell, Mr. J. Watson, of Artemesia, to Miss Margaret McNally of Glenelg.

MALTBY—TROTTER—In Owen Sound, on the 23rd inst., by the Rev. A. H. Scott, M. A., Mr. Samuel Maltby, of Dundalk, to Miss Jemima Trotter, of Owen Sound.

DIED.

DOW—On Tuesday 28th inst., the wife of Mr. Andrew Dow, of the 16th con. Proton.

MARTIN.—In Euphrasia, on the 2nd inst., J. Martin, aged 29 years.

Land for Sale.

100 ACRES; about 30 of which is cleared, being composed of the E. half of Lot 10, in the 8th concession of the Township of Euphrasia. Apply at this office, or to ROBERT DUNLOP, Township Clerk of Euphrasia, Griersville P. O. 117-tf.

JNO. MONTGOMERY,

BAKER,

Begs to tender his thanks to the inhabitants of Markdale and surrounding country for past patronage, and to intimate to them that he is prepared to supply the public with either plain or iced and ornamented. Also Brides' Cakes got up in the best style that can be done this side of Toronto.

Fruit, Pound and Plum Cake

Bread, Buns and Cakes!

in great variety. All these are manufactured on his own premises by himself, besides Biscuit of every description from the best manufacturers in Ontario.

CHOICEST CONFECTIONERY

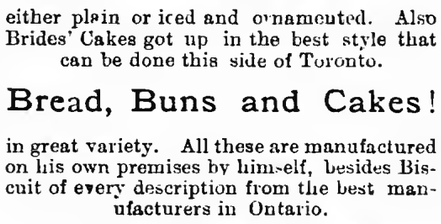
in great variety. Tea Meetings, Socials, and other parties supplied on the shortest notice and on the most reasonable terms.

JOHN MONTGOMERY.

Markdale, Nov. 22nd, 1882. 115-3m

Teacher Wanted.

FOR SCHOOL SECTION No. 6, ARTEMESIA, holding Second or Third Class Certificate. Duties to commence on the second day of January, 1883. Apply, stating salary, to



JOHN HAZARD,
Sec. & Treas. to Trustees,
Flesherton P. O

114-117*

A CARD.

To all who are suffering from the errors and indiscretions of youth, nervous weakness, early decay, loss of manhood, &c., I will send a receipe that will cure you, FREE OF CHARGE. This great Remedy was discovered by a missionary in South America. Send a self-addressed envelope to REV. JOSEPH T. INMAN, Station D, New York City.

Health is Wealth!

DR. E. C. WEST'S NEEVE AND BRAIN TREATMENT, a guaranteed specific for Hysteria, Dizziness, Convulsions, Fits, Nervous Neuralgia, Headache, Nervous Prostration caused by the use of alcohol or tobacco, Wakefulness, Mental Depression, Softening of the Brain, resulting in Insanity and leading to misery, decay and death, Premature Old Age, Barrenness, Loss of Power in either sex, Involuntary losses and Spermatorrhœa, caused by over-exertion of the brain, self-abuse or over-indulgence. One box will cure recent cases. Each box contains one month's treatment. One dollar a box, or six boxes for five dollars; sent by mail prepaid on receipt of price. We guarantee six boxes to cure any case. With each order received by us for six boxes, accompanied with five dollars, we will send the purchaser a written guarantee to refund the money if the treatment does not effect a cure. Guarantees issued only by A. Turner & Co., sole authorized Agent for Markdale Ont. John C. West & Co. sole proprietor, Toronto, Ont.

O

BANKRUPT

STOCKS

At the great dry goods sale of D. Arnott & Co., in Toronto, last week, amounting to $135,000, we purchased more goods than any two merchants in the County. In addition to this we bought the bankrupt stock of Hutcheson & Sons, of Hamilton, at 28 cents on the dollar. These two stocks we will offer for sale at prices that have never yet been heard of.

THEY MUST BE SOLD.

LOOK OUT FOR THE Great Slaughter!

FOR THE

Next 30 Days

We show special lines of new goods in

Ready-made Clothing.

Your choice of 100 pairs of Tweed Pants for $1.75, worth from $3.50 to $5. Your choice of 150 Coats for $3.50, worth from $5 to $7.50. Men's good Tweed Vests at $1, worth $2.50. Boys' good Tweed Vests at 75 cents. Overcoats are down, down, down. We will sell off the balance of our stock at a great reduction.

A lot of good

Black Lustres

from 10 cents a yard and upwards. Also a lot of BLACK SILKS at 45 cents per yard, just opened.

$1,000 WORTH OF

HATS AND CAPS

just arrived. Good Felt Hats at 25 cents and upwards.

Furs, Furs, Furs.

Beautiful setts of Furs from 50 cents and upwards, Good Muffs from 50 cents. A large stock of Men and Women's Furs at low prices, far below wholesale, Scarlet Yarns Cheap.

YOUR CHOICE OF

1000 Boxes Collars

for 4. 18 yards of Velvet for 4 cts. Thousands of Children's Winter Gloves, 4c, and everything else in proportion. In short we invite you to come with the crowd and see for yourself the largest, neatest, and best arranged stock north of Toronto, and every article (not special lines) sold at hard pan prices.

DON'T BE DECEIVED.

We cannot and will not be uddersold.

Trimble & Wright

Dealers in Bankrut Stock,

MARKDALE, Ont.

O

Christmas

Headquarters of Santa Claus.

In returning thanks to our numerous customers and the public generally for the liberal patronage bestowed upon us in the past, we desire to announce the opening of our annual stock of Christmas goods which is extensive and well assorted, comprising

Christmas Cards, English and Canadian, China Cups and Saucers, Moustache Cups, Shaving Mugs, Bohemian Vases, Toilet Sets, Albums, a very large assortment, Card Cases, Work Boxes, Shell Boxes, Writing Desks, Tin Toys, Books, Poems, Bibles, Prayer Books, Book Marks, Picture Books, Dolls,

and a great number of other articles suitable for Christmas and New Year's presents. Wishing you the compliments of the season, we respectfully solicit a continuance of your favors.

Markdale, Dec. 5th, 1882. A. TURNER & CO.

T. C. & B. RAILWAY.

TIME TABLE.

Change of Time.

On and after Monday, Nov. 20th, 1882, trains will run as follows:

GOING N'TH.			GOING SOUTH
Read Down.			Read Up.
A.M.	P.M.		A.M.	P.M.
7 30	4 25	TORONTO	10 45	9 10
9 05	6 00	CARDWELL JUNC.	9 05	7 31
9 55	6 45	ORANGEVILLE...	8 27	6 50
12 20	8 44	MOUNT FOREST..	6 30	4 30
12 55	9 12	HARRISTON.....	6 05	4 00
2 25	10 15	TEESWATER	5 00	2 45
11 50	8 30	FLESHERTON	6 43	4 47
1 30	9 55	OWEN SOUND....	5 15	3 10
P.M.	P.M.		A.M.	P.M.

A Mixed Train will also run between Toronto and Owen Sound. See Time Table.

D. MCNICOLL, Gen. Pass. Agt. EDMUND WRAGGE, General Manager.

W. H. CAMPAIGNE,

LICENSED Auctioneer for the County of Grey. Sales attended in town or country on the shortest notice. Charges reasonable.

Orders left at the STANDARD office will receive prompt attention. 117-3m

ESTRAY.

CAME into the premises of the undersigned, early in September, a Heifer rising two years old. The owner may have it by proving property and paying expenses

JOHN MERCER,
Lots 109 & 110, E. T. & S. Road.

Artemesia, Dec. 5th, 1882. 117-4t*

STRAYED

FROM THE PREMISES OF THE SUBSCRIBER, Lot 20, Con. 8, Euphrasia, about the 1st Sept., one steer, red, and 2 heifers, spotted red and white, all rising three years old. Information that will lead to their recovery will be thankfully received. Any person harboring them after this date will be dealt with according to law.

W. J. & R. WARD,
Rocklyn P. O., Nov. 17th, 1882. 115 3w

Just Arrived!

A LARGE STOCK OF

NEW AND FASHIONABTE

DRY GOODS,

Boots and Shoes,

NEW GROCERIES,

At prices which will astonish you. Call and see.

Highest price paid for Butter and Eggs or any kind of Fowl at the CHEAP STORE.

JOHN DOUPE,
Flesherton Station.

Nov. 15th, 1882. 114-3m.

J. L. BROWNE

—IS—

Better than Ever!

—IN—

PHOTOS!

Cabinet, Card or Tablet.

A LARGE STOCK OF

FRAMES

NEWEST DESIGNS, CHEAP.

MARKDALE MARKETS.

Fall Wheat, $0.80 to $0.83; Spring to $0.93; Barley, 45c; Peas, 65t; Oats Butter, 20c; Eggs, 22c; Potatoes, 40c; $10.00; Pork, 7.25 to 7.50.

FLESHERTON MARKETS.

Fall Wheat, $0.80 to $0.84; Spring to $0.90; Barley, 55c; Peas, 66c; Oats Butter, 20c; Eggs, 22c; Potatoes, 40c; $9.00; Pork, $7.00 to $7 50

TORONTO MARKETS.

Fall Wheat, $0.90 to $0.94; Spring to $0.68; Barley 56c to 72c; Oats, 41c to Peas, 70c to 7 Hogs, $7.50 to $.750; Potatoes, per bag, 75c to 80c; Butter, dairy, to 20c; eggs, 23c to 24c.

A. HILL

TAILOR.

Over McFarland's Store

MARKDALE.

☞ Special attention to Cutting.

If you want a Perfect Fit leave your Order with.

A. HILL.

September 20th 1882. 106.

BILLIARD ROOM

D. M. HOGAN, PROPRIETOR.

First-class tables. Cigars and temperance drinks to be had. 116-ly.

WARNING.

I HEREBY GIVE NOTICE THAT I WILL not be responsible for any debts contracted by my family or any one else; also, all moneys due me must be paid to myself.

WILSON BENSON.

Markdale, Nov. 29th, 1882. 116-3

NOTE LOST.

A NOTE DRAWN IN FAVOR OF JOHN McKenna, Markdale, by Edmund Steer, Harkaway P. O., for $160. Any person finding or having the same in their possession will please return it to the undersigned as payment has been made.

EDMUND STEER,
Harkaway P. O.

November 28th, 1882. 116-4t*

STRAYED

FROM THE PREMISES OF THE UNdersigned Lot 3, Con. 7, Euphrasia, about the last of Augnat, one Steer and one Heifer, all rising two years old. Any person giving such information as will lead to their recovery will be suitably rewarded.

JOHN HUTCHINSON,
Vandeleur P. O.

115-3w*

TO SELL OR RENT.

LOT 15, CON. 12, HOLLAND, 123 acres, 100 cleared, good buildings thereon. Terms easy. Apply to James Logan, Postmaster, near the premises, or to

M. S. KELLOW, Tara P. O.

November 14th, 1882. 114-tf.

ESTRAY.

CAME INTO THE PREMISES OF D. McMillan, Lot 10, Concession 3, S. D. Road, Artemesia, about the 1st of August, a Shearling Ram. The owner is requested to prove property, pay expenses and take him away.

DONALD McMILLAN.

Artemesia, Nov. 10th, 1882. 114-11?

Teacher Wanted

FOR S. S. No. 3, Holland and Euphrasia. Duties to commence the 2nd day of January, 1883 Apply, stating salary, to 115-4w.

ALEX. MURDOCK, Sec'y,
Harkway P. O.

ETTER!

—THAN—

NKRUPT STOCKS.

—o—

—THE—

500 SALE

—OF—

ES, EWELEERY,
CLOCKS,

AND ELECTRO-PLATED WARE,
Sets Cruets, Cake Baskter Coolers, Fruit Dishes,
etc., etc., etc.,

S, ONERTINAS,
MAS TOYS, &c., &c., &c.

ded to leave Markdale about the pany to go into the wholesale ness in Toronto, and will com-ring Sale on 1st Dec.

FOR 30 DAYS.

e Goods will be sold at and under is a genuine sale as I am obliged to reduce my stock.

engaged the services of a practical ser to take charge of the business
1st of January.

W. F. DOLL.

ted Immediately!

—FOR—

Bros.' New Elevator,

bushels Wheat,
40,000 bushels Barley,
30,000 bushels Oats,
25,000 bushels Peas,
the highest market prices will be 111-tf.

Local Items.

ter the A. O. U. W. entertainment evening.

Lot for sale cheap by W. J. Rowe at ead Mills.

Walker sold two beautiful dressed s Thursday on the market which 63 pounds.

m Henry has purchased a quarter-from Mr. G. S. Brown and is pre-ing a dwelling thereon.

e troubled with dandruff don't the brush but have a few applica-Smith's (the barber,) shampoo.

ings, Clocks, Chains, Silver-ies, Violins, &c., are now being at W. F. Doll's great discount days.

—Good accommodation. Hot
Ac. Skating on Tuesday and evenings and Saturday afternoon
—W. F. DOLL, Prop.

Farmers are grumbling about the they are getting for their wheat and but they all say that the goods they at McFarland's are so cheap that it makes up their loss and we be-em.

ons on behalf of the Methodist Mis-Society will be preached in the Church here next Sabbath by V. Lake, of Chatsworth. The an-meeting will be held on Monday at 7:30. Addresses by Revs. John and C. V. Lake. Special collections the Missionary Fund at each ser-

Bowes, W. H. McDougall, A. Mc-
John Richards, S. Smith, Albert
Albert Richardson, Miss Rorke,
Beard, Miss S. Baird, and the
Mr. McFarland, with coats off sleeves are all, as we go to press, pump doing their level best to hundreds of customers that crowd
's popular store, while the correct Bigger is paying out hundreds for grain and produce purchased by Mullarkey and weighed by light-Things are booming at Mc's happy.

November examination of junior second department of Markdale Marks obtainable, 600. Minnie Peter Thibaudeau, 435; Ben.
417; Harry Large, 403; Minnie
Herbert Hull, 347; Bella Ben-
Frank Bryden, 323; Willie Math-
Mabel Mathews, 294; Willie Leslie,
Reynolds, 277; Bessie Moffat, 266;
Lucas, 239; Lottie Munshaw, 234;
Rutledge, 226; Martha Noble, 224
Abee, 198; Jennie Rae, 178; Tom
Bella Benson highest marks in 50; Harry Large highest in spell-composition; Peter Thibaudeau reading and arithmetic; Minnie highest in grammar and geography.
THIBAUDEAU, Teacher.

Grain is coming in fast.

Not much doing in wood this season.

The competition in grain buying is keen on our market.

Mr. Wm. Lucas (banker) returned from Brigden on Saturday.

Who is going to run for Police Trustees? Don't all speak at once.

A great number of telegraph poles are being taken out to this station.

Mr. Smith, barber, will be at his shop in Flesherton on Fair Day, Dec. 11th.

Santa Claus at the Medical Hall. See advertisement.—A. TURNER & Co.

Mr. Geo. Beatty is still improving, and and is now able to walk around his room daily.

A grand concert will be given by the celebrated Scottish Concert Company in Dufferin Hall this Thursday evening. Admission 25c.

We had a call from Mr. W. R. Walker, late of this place. He is carrying on business in Cookstown and doing a good trade.

CHRISTMAS FRUITS.—Sugars, Teas, &c., in original packages at wholesale prices at M. Richardson's, Flesherton, get his quotations.

As will be seen by card in another column W. H. Campaigne is prepared to attend auction sales on short notice. He is a good auctioneer.

German Mink Fur Sets, complete, $1.50, at Richardson's Flesherton. He is clearing out this month at very low prices all kinds of fur goods.

A tea-meeting will be held in the Methodist church, Williamsford on the 21st December. Tea served from 5 to 7 p. m., tickets 25 cts.

W. F. Doll has announced by posters an extensive auction sale of jewellery to take place in Campbell's Hall, Chatsworth, on Monday, 18th December.

ROBBERY.—The Grand Trunk station a Chesley was entered on the 8th ult., while the agent was away to tea, and robbed of $110. It certainly was very bold to attempt such a thing in daylight.

Trimble & Wright will hold a grand auction sale of Dry Goods, Groceries, Boots and Shoes, Ready-made Clothing, &c., &c., at Maxwell on the 12th Dec., and four following days.

M. Richardson, Flesherton, is opening this week piles of new dry goods purchased at D. Arnett's sale, new clothing, hats, caps, &c., and gents fur overcoats.

We would refer our readers to A. Turner & Co's advertisement in another column. Mr. Turner has an exceedingly large and attractive stock of fancy goods for the holidays. They are far two numerous to give in detail, but call and see for yourselves.

The widow of the late A. Duncan, of Hamilton, drowned off the Asia, has been presented with an address. and will receive $1,000 from the Commercial Travellers' Association, of which her husband was a member.

ACCEPTED THE CALL.—Rev. W. S. Rainsford yesterday afternoon received a telegram from St. George's church, New York, and has now finally decided to accept the call to that church. He is as yet unable to say when he will leave Toronto.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—Wm. Donkin, a young man from Melancthon. happened with an accident on Saturday last, in Ogilvie's Flour Mills at Seaforth. from the effects of which he died on Monday. His body was brought by train to Shelburne on Tuesday.

FIRE AT TEESWATER.—About 3 o'clock on Sunday morning the tannery owned by Mr. Robert Douglas of Teaswater was burned to the ground, and a large quantity of finished and three vats of unfinished were destroyed. The loss is estimated at about $2,000; insured in Gore District Mutual for $600. The cause of the fire is unknown.—Hanover Post.

Our Catholic friends have been greatly afflicted of late by the loss of some of their prominent dignitaries. The other week the well-known apostle of temperance, Father Stafford. died at Lindsay, to the regret of the people of Canada at large, and on Saturday, Bishop Crinnon, of Hamilton, a most estimable man and prelate, died at Jacksonville, Florida, where he had gone to recuperate after his arduous labour.

HYMENEAL.—Mr. Henry Foster (merchant) and Miss A. A. Rorke. two of the most respected young people of our village, have entered into partnership "for better for worse." The union was effected at the residence of the bride's grandmother, on Tuesday, the 5th inst., Rev. N. A. McDiarmid officiating. The presents were numerous and valuable. The happy pair took the evening train for Toronto. We wish them a smoothe and prosperous journey through life.

DYSPEPSIA & LIVER COMPLAINT.

Is it not worth the small price of 75 cents to free yourself of every symptom of these distressing complaints, if you think so call at our store and get a bottle of Shiloh's Vitalizer, every bottle has a printed guarantee on it, use according'y and if it does you no good it will cost you nothing. Sold at Wm. Brown's General Store, Markdale.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.

The advertiser, having been permanently cured of that dread disease, Consumption, by a simple remedy, is anxious to make known to his fellow sufferers the means of cure. To all who desire it, he will send a copy of the prescription used, (free of charge,) with he directions for prepairing and using the same which they will find a SURE CURE for CONSUMPTION, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, &c.

Parties wishing the Prescription, will please address, Rev. E. A, Wilson, 149 Penn st., Williamsburgh, N. Y. 75-127

AGENTS WANTED.—Big pay.—Light Werk. Steady Employment. Samples free. Address, M. L. BYRN, 46 Naussau stree New York. 20

VALUABLE PROPERTY

FOR SALE

IN THE TOWN OF DURHAM, IN THE COUNTY OF GREY.

THE following valuable town properties will be sold on reasonable terms or will be rented for a term of years, or exchange for farm propeoty.

1st,

Lot No. 1 on the west side of Gaiafraxa street and south of Hunter street, opposite Mr. J. H. Hunter's store house, well fenced and first class frame buildings, good cellars, hard and soft water, a most conveniant residence and would make a good business stand.

2nd,

That most desirable property being park lots nos. 2 and 3 on the north side of George st., 8 acres more or less, well fenced, front fenced with pickets, one and a half acres of a thriving young orchard and very convenient to the railway station.

The east half of the west half on lot 18 on the west side of countess street with a new frame house and kitchen, good stable and wood shed, well fenced, front fence painted white, hard and soft water on the premises.

4th,

Park Lot No. 8, Wm. Hunter's, Survey.

5th

Lots 1 and 2, Presbyterian Survey.

6th,

Lot No 15 on the North side of Mill street in the village of Markdale close to the railway station. with good frame house thereon. If the above properties are sold the very best title will be given free from all encumbrances.

—Also the—

Following Farming Properties.

will be sold on reasonable terms of payment.

7th,

Lot No. 22, Con. 9 Glenelg, 100 acres more or less, 3½ miles from the T. G. & B. R. at Markdale, 75 acres cleared, a new frame house and two log barns.

8th

Lot No. 93 in the 3rd Con. W. T. & S. R., Glenelg. 50 acres, about 45 acres cleared and good log buildings. about 2½ miles from Markdale station T. G. & B. R.

9th,

The west half lot 17, Con. 4. N. D. R, Glenelg. 50 acres 40 acres cleared, good rough cast house and orchard on the premises. The house and one acre will be reserved during the life of the occupants who are now between 80 and 85 years of age.

10th

East part lot No. 1. con 2 Normanby, 63 acres, about 50 acres cleared, situation about 2 miles from the town of Durham. For further particulars apply to

FINLEY MACRAE, Durham.

Dated 15th August. 1882. tf 104,

Mothers! Mothers! Mothers!

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the excruciating pain of cutting teeth! If so, go at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately—depend upon it; there is no mistake about it. There is not a mother upon earth who has ever used it, who will not tell you at once that it will regulate the bowels, and give rest to the mother, and relief and health to the child, operating like magic. It is perfectly safe to use in all cases, and pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States, Sold everywhere at 25 cents a bottle. 75-127

Re-Fresh-ing

In the cool assertion of some people that they can sell below cost, &c, it may not be amiss to let the public of Markdale and surrounding country know that

Wilson Benson,

of the "BELFAST HOUSE." MARKDALE, can sell "cheaper than the cheapest," and "better than the best," all kinds of

Groceries, Liquors, &c.

Consisting of

TEAS, TOBACCOS, SPICES, CANNED FISH, ETC.,

And for those wishing pure Wine for sacramental purposes, will find a brand that will equal anything on this side the Atlantic.

Other Liquors equally pure.

SPECIAL! Pure Holland Gin.

Cheese from the best manufactories.

Our Whiskies are from the firm of Gooderham & Worts, Toronto, and the public may rely on receiving them as they are sent.

FLOUR, POTATOES, and everything in the household line kept constantly on hand.

Henceforth my Store will be supplied with Fruits of all kinds, such as

APPLES. PEARS. PLUMS, &c.

FRUIT CAKES of all kinds always kept on hand.

Essences, Hair Oils, and Perfumery of the choicest nectars.

TOILET & FANCY SOAPS, better than the best.

CANADIAN & WESTERN PORK, of first quality.

Everything in the Grocery Line kept on a fuller and more complete scale than at any other place in Markdale.

WILSON BENSON.

PIMPLES.

I will mail (Free) the recipe for a simple VEGETABLE BALM that will remove TAN-FRECKLES, PIMPLES and BLOTCHES, leaving the skin soft, clear and beautiful; also instructions for producing a luxuriant growth of hair on a bald head or smooth face. Address, enclosing a 3c. stamp, Ben. Vandelf & Co., 5 Beekman st., N. Y. 75-127

ERRORS OF YOUTH.

A GENTLEMAN who suffered for years from NERVOUS DEBILITY, PREMATURE DECAY, and all the effects of youthful indiscretion will, for the sake of suffering humanity, send free to all who need it, the recipe and directions for making the simple remedy by which he was cured. Sufferers wishing to profit by the advertiser's experience can do so by addressing in perfect confidence, JOHN B. OGDEN, 75-127 42 Cedar St., New York.

Gold. Great chance to make money. Those who always take advantage of the good chances for making money that are offered, generally become wealthy, while those who do not improve such chances remain in poverty. We want many men, women, boys and girls to work for us right in their own localities. Any one can do the work properly from the first start. The business will pay more than ten times ordinary wages. Expensive outfit furnished free. No one who engages fails to make money rapidly You can devote your whole time in the work, or only your spare moments. Full information and all that is needed sent free. Addres. STINSON & Co., Portland Maine. 71-126

MANHOOD

HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED

SEAL We have recently published a new edition of Dr. CULVERWELL'S CELEBRATED ESSAY on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, &c., resulting from excesses.

☞ Price, in sealed envelope, only 6 cents, or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

☞ This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Address

The Culverwell Medical Co,.

P.O. box 450 41 Ann St., New York

$500 Reward!

We will pay the above reward for any case of Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Indigestion, Constipation or Costiveness we cannot cure with West's Vegetable Liver Pills, when the directions are strictly complied with. They are purely Vegetable, and never fail to give satisfaction. Sugar Coated, Large Boxes, containing 30 Pills, 25 cts. For sale by all Druggists. Beware of counterfeits and immitations. The genuine manufactured only by JOHN C. WEST & CO., "The Pill Makers," 81 & 83 King St. East, Toronto, Ont. Free trial package sent by mail prepaid on receipt of a 3 cent stamp. For sale at Turner &Co. Drug Store.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from active practice having had placed in his hands by an East Indiana Missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma, and all Throat and Lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for General Debility and all nervous complaints, after having thoroughly tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, feels it is his duty to make it known to his fellows. The recipe, with full particulars, directions for preparation and use, and all necessary advice and instructions for successful treatment at your own home, will be received by you by return mail, free of charge, by addressing with stamp or stamped, self-addressed, envelope to

DR. J. C. RAYMOND.

164 Washington Street, Brooklyn, N.Y.

110-62

MARKDALE
Meat Market.

A constant supply of

Fresh Meats!

on hand, at the

Lowest Living Prices.

Orders solicited, and delivered free to all parts of the Town.

Farmers having fat stock to dispose of, will please leave their addresses.

TERMS, STRICTLY CASH.

FRED. SARJEANT.

Markdale, March 23, 1882. 80-ly

SEEING IS BELIEVING.

GENTLEMEN,—

If you want a first-class

Buggie or Wagon

call at

MCKENNA & MASON'S

CARRIAGE WORKS

MARKDALE.

They can supply you with anything from a

Lumber Wagon

up to

Extension Top Phæton.

To buy from them is to

SAVE MONEY!

They are both practical workmen, and employ none but

PRACTICAL WORKMEN

They guarantee their work Second to none for Lightness of Draught and Superiority of Finish.

They use nothing but First-class White Oak for Wagons, and thrice Extra Second Growth Hickory for light work.

The immense amount of work turned out of McKenna & Mason's shop is sufficien proof of the wide reputation they enjoy for doing good work.

THE BEST IS THE CHEAPEST IN THE END

Poor cheap work we positively will not take.

Special attention given to Re-Trimming and Repainting all classes of Carriage Work.

Satisfaction guaranteed (or No Pay) in

HORSESHOEING

SHOP—On Mill Street opposite to Sproule's Hotel.

McKENNA & MASON.

THOS. MATHEWS,

HarneS EstablishmenT!

MARKDALE.

EVERYTHING IN OUR LINE KEPT ON HAND OR MADE TO ORDER ON SHORT NOTICE.

LIVERY!

IN CONNECTION.

GEORGE WILSON,

Wholesale and Retail

{BUTCHER!}

BEEF, PORK OR MUTTON SUPPLIED. from a single pound to a whole carcass, at the lowest market prices.

FISH & FOWL IN THEIR SEASON

Farmers having Fat Cattie, Sheep, or Pigs to dispose of will do well to call at No. 3 Burns' Block, opposite the new Union Block.

Markdale, Oct. 25th, 1881

Nothing Like Leather.

M. M. M'LEOD,

MARKDALE,

NOT TO BE BEATEN!

All those who may have had the misfortune to have been born barefooted will bear in mind that we have just received the largest and best stock of leather ever before brought into Markdale, consisting of Spanish Sole, French Kip and Calf, and are now prepared to manufacture Ladies, Gents, Youths and Misses boots and shoes, from the stoga to the finest kid and prunella.

Sewed Work a Specialty.

All work warranted. Invisible patching also done here.

M. M. McLEOD,

Markdale, Sept. 19th. 1881,

NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

Five Minutes Select Reading.

Summary of Foreign, Domestic and Other Items—Concise, Pithy and Pointed.

DOMESTIC.

Sir John A. Macdonald has returned to his residence, Stadacona hall.

The Grand Trunk Railway foundry at Hamilton is to be enlarged immediately.

A direct steamship line will be established between Montreal and Germany next season.

The lasters' strike in Montreal is in st at quo, with no effort in progress on either side to settle matters.

The Dominion Government has granted a bonus to the Montreal Harbor Police of ten dollars per man.

A man named Louis Layden was recently run over by a Canadian Pacific railway locomotive at Point Douglas.

Mayor Logan is again in the field for the Winnipeg mayoralty. The only other candidate is Ald. McMicken.

The schooner Tecumseh, of Owen Sound, ran ashore the other day on the east side of Cove Island on a flat rock.

Sheppard Pike, of Roffenston, Maine, brother of the Hon. A. F. Pike, dropped dead in Young's hotel at Calais.

A private telegram has been received from the Hon. Dr. Schultz, containing the information of his rapid recovery.

Sir Hector Langevin will be feted in Montreal next month by the merchants' clerks of the city, connected with the early closing movement.

The Rev. C. G. Glass, an eminent retired Presbyterian minister, died at Montreal the other day. He founded the presbytery of York, N. B.

An action has been entered for $10,000, on behalf of the Allan Steamship line, against the steamer Clandon, which recently ran into the Polynesian at Halifax.

C. L. Estabrooks, of St. Mary's, N. B., has been postmaster there for a number of years. Some one forged his name to a resignation which was sent to Ottawa and accepted.

The lobster factory and meat packing establishment at Forest & Sherar, at Cape Sharps, eight miles from Georgetown, P. E. I., was totally consumed by fire the other morning.

Sheriff's officers who attempted to enforce an injunction preventing the working of the Salmon River Gold Mine, N. S., were driven off by a large force of miners, who threw them into the river.

A lad entered the woods in the Gatineau district hunting for deer, and ran against a gun-trap, which had been set by another hunter, contrary to law, discharging the gun with fatal results.

The wife and six children, the eldest only eleven years, belonging to a late clerk in the Montreal post-office, who died a week ago, were found in a state of absolute destitution. The father served the Government twenty-one years.

UNITED STATES.

Maude Granger, the actress, is seriously ill at Brockton, Mass.

There is an epidemic of scarlet fever at the imbecile asylum at Columbus, Ohio.

Frank James has been indicted for complicity in the Musselshoals robbery.

Most of the Creek Indians, who fought for the Union during the rebellion, are asking the Government for pensions.

At Louisville, Capt. May, of Hardin County, aged 101, has procured a license to marry a girl of nineteen.

Charles Peckham, one of the leading lights of the spiritualistic circles in New England, dropped dead in a store at Newport, R. I., recently.

James Smith was arrested recently at New York for offering a jeweller in payment for goods two $10 bills of the defunct Consolidated Bank of Canada.

At Frankfork, Mich., the other day, Mr. Anderson, a Scotchman, 90 years old, committed suicide by cutting his throat from ear to ear with a penknife.

A two year old child of Mr. Cogswell's, of Warren, Pa., playing on the carpet, was burned so badly from a fire caused by a fallen lamp that it died about six hours later.

Samuel Brummel, an employee of the Cornell Mining Company, surrendered himself on Saturday to the Deputy-Sheriff and confessed he was the man who shot John Lind in Menominee.

A gang of cow-boys boarded a train at Sweet Water Grove recently, drove the passengers at the point of the revolver, and bound the engineer and conductor back to back.

It was supposed that all the scientific records of the Jeannette expedition were lost, but engineer Melville states that a complete copy of Chipp's auroral and magnetic observations were found among the official papers of Capt. DeLong, and is now in custody of the Secretary of the Navy.

GENERAL.

Prince Ghika has been re-elected President of the Roumanian Senate.

The other day the physician stated he expected Gambetta to be convalescent in four days.

The Paris Municipal Council recently presented a medal of honor to M. de Brazza.

Earl Granville has directed the gun-vessel Seagull to proceed to Madagascar to protect British interests there.

Ex-Premier Zankoff, of Bulgaria, who was arrested for the second time on Wednesday, has been released.

The British barque Wm. Weyght, at Gorston, from St. John's, Nfld., lost her deck load on the passage.

The City of Dublin presents its usual appearance each night, notwithstanding the proclamation placing it under Curfew law.

Seven Italian anarchists have been arrested at Marseilles. Compromising documents have been discovered in their possession.

Rassegena says the visit of De Giers proves that Russia will support the pacific policy of Germany and Austria, to which Italy gives explicit adhesion.

In Committee of the French Senate recently, Duclerc confirmed the fact of a new treaty with Tunis abrogating the capitulations and providing for the redemption of the Tunisian debt.

The rupture provoked by the proceedings of the Queen of Madagascar will not, according to the Paris Temps, affect the excellent relations which France desires to maintain with England.

The Paris Temps reports that two warlike tribes in Madagascar have resolved to no longer bear the intolerable yoke of the ruling tribes. Le Temps regards the agitation as wholly superficial.

A schooner from the south seas reports that when recruiting for islanders the boats were frequently fired upon, and a number of returned natives were seized, murdered, and eaten by the inhabitants of Pasma and Apy Tonoi.

The Freeman's Journal, in commenting on the action of the Privy Council in proclaiming the city under the Curfew section of the Repression Act, says it believes this step will intensify the evils already existing, and will injure credit, weaken confidence, and paralyze trade.

Dangerous American Fortunes.

There is evidence forthcoming from America that fortunes may be accumulated on a scale of which Englishmen have little conception, and that when they have been accumulated their increase may be sought from a motive which is never quite satiated, the thirst for direct and indirect influence on affairs. Europeans, even those who study the subject, underrate American fortunes, first, because they think the rich must spend largely, and, secondly, because they assume, what is quite false, that great wealth must be invested at about 4 per cent. It may, as American example shows, be invested by millionaires who do not care for rest in work which yields from three times to ten times that rate. Now, the governing financial fact about the Vanderbilt railways is that they are managed to yield, a steady 10 per cent.; and Mr. Vanderbilt ought, therefore, to be in possession of an income of £2,000,000 a year. It is not, probably, so much, because part of his fortune must have been estimated for probate duty on shares above par; but taking it at only a million and a half, Mr. Vanderbilt, who does not spend unproductively the interest of his dividends, might easily at 70 own £50,000,000, yielding an average of 8 per cent. None of his known rivals, perhaps, could do this; but their sons might, and it is quite on the cards than in 1920 the American Union may possess a dozen capitalists each with fifty millions solidly invested, yielding incomes of from three to four millions a year. Be it observed, we do not include any fresh making of money by the millionaires, though they make it every day; or any calculation about compound interest, though there is such a force in movement in their favor. We assume only that they live on the interest of their interest—in Mr. Vanderbilt's case £60,000 a year—and invest the remainder in the new railways, telegraphs and steam lines which they construct or regulate. The temptation so to accumulate, in a country where lazy wealth brings so little enjoyment, while working wealth brings power, status, and celebrity, is great, and the drawbacks, to a man not afraid of occasional threats, are not many. Railway managers are easily found, other stockholders take much work off the millionaire's hands, and as against ordinary accident, so vast an investment forms its own best insurance. If an Englishman could own 51 per cent. of the Midland and Great Northern, and appoint any director he pleased, his wealth would be fairly secure, much more secure than if he owned a wheat-growing country in East Anglia. Is the existence of a fortune of this kind, in the hands of a man whose business in life is the acquisition of power, safe for the community? We cannot but feel a doubt of it.—London Spectator.

Etiquette.

Etiquette is not as strict as it once was—as when, if a courtier sat on a red-hot stove by mistake, the had to roost there—and it is good form to compliment your hostess when she gives you a nice dinner. The Chinese, who think we are uncivilized, and that their table demeanor is perfect—claiming all things, as they do, will probably claim they have taught us this. It is simply what the Kansas folk call "dead common sense." In China no conversation is allowed except remarks upon the food—complimentary, of course—as, for example, to the host:

"Oh, Beaming Sun, essence of gentility, deign to allow the miserable worm at your feet to remark (casually) that this chow-chow is prime!" or words to that effect.

In China all plunge chop-sticks, after a flourish in the air, at once, and it is horrid form to finish before anyone else does.

In India, especially in Lucknow, they are excruciatingly polite. Two natives, once upon a time, fell into a ditch. You think they floundered out in a twinkling? They didn't anything of the kind. Politeness interferred; one said:

"When your honor rises then I may get up."

"No, your honor must get up first," said the second.

"How can I take precedence of your honor? Never!"

Neither would consent to violate the laws of good breeding, and I fear they are lying there yet.

People who ask you to take part in amateur theatricals are not troubled in this way; they sometimes act as if missionary work were needed among them—they ask you to take a part and then make a "super" of you. —Quiz.

DOMESTIC.

Twenty miles of Winnipeg and Hudson Bay railroad from Norway House have been located by next August, which will enable the company to commence the work of construction by June, 1884.

Major-General Luard has received a telegram from Cairo, announcing the death of Major Herbert, on the 1st of November. Major Herbert, it will be remembered, was a Canadian officer, who had the privilege of active service in Egypt.

Two Styles.

We all admire the business man who is terse and to the point, and we dislike the man who hangs on to the door knob as though life was a never-ending summer dream, and refuses to say good-by. It's so with correspondence.

For instance, here is a line which tells the story in brief, without wearing out your eyes and days by ponderous phrases and useless verbiage. "Useless verbiage and frothy surplusage" is a synonym which we discovered in '75, while excavating for the purpose of laying the foundations of our imposing residence up the gulch. Persons using the same will please fork over ten per cent. of the gross receipts:

BANGOR, Me., 11-10-82.

"Find 10c., for which send sample copy Boomerang to above address. Yours, &c.
THOMAS BILLINGS."

Some would have said "please" find enclosed ten cents. This is not absolutely necessary. If you put ten cents in the letter that covers all seeming lack of politeness, and it's all right.

Here's another style, which evinces a peculiarity we do not admire. It bespeaks the man who thinks that life and its associations are given us in order to wear out the time, waiting patiently, meantime, for Gabriel to render his little overture.

It occurs to us that life is real, life is earnest. We cannot sit here in the gathering gloom and read four pages of a letter, which only expresses what ought to have been expressed in four lines. We feel that we are here to do the greatest good to the greatest number, and we dislike the correspondent who hangs on to the literary door knob, so to speak, and absorbs our time, which is worth $5,35 per hour.

Here we go:

NEW CENTREVILLE, Wis., Nov. 3, 1882.

Mr. William Nye, Esq, Laramie City, Wyoming:

DEAR SIR:—I have often saw in your home papers little pieces cut out of your paper the Larmy Bomerang, yet I never saw the paper itself. I hardly pick up a paper from the Fireside Friend to the Christian at Work that I do not see something or another from your faseshus pen and credited to The Bomerang. I have asked our bookstore for a copy of the paper, and he said go to grass, there wasn't no such perioddickle in existence. He is a liar, but I did not tell him so because I am just recovering from a case of that kind now, which swelled both eyes shet and placed me under the doctor's care.

It was the result of a campaign lie, and at that moment I do not remember whether it was the other man or me which told it. Things got confused, and I am not clear on the matter now.

I send 10 cents in postage stamps, hoping you will favor me with a specimen copy of the Boomerang, and I may subscribe. I send postage stamps because they are more convenient to me, and I suppose that you can use them all right, as you must have a good deal of writing to do. I intend to read the paper thorrow and give my folks the benefit also. I love to read humerrus pieces to my children and my wife and hear their gurgly laugh well up like a bobbllink's. I now take a Western paper which is gloomy in its tendencies and I call it the Morg. It looks at the dark side of life and costs $3 a year and postage.

So send the speciment if you please and I will probably subscribe for the Boomerang. I have saw a good many extrax from it in our papers here and I have not as yet saw your paper. So good-by.

Yours truly,
JAMES LETSON.

The Madagascar War Cloud.

In reference to a report that two American had been murdered on the west coast of Madagascar it is learned that one was killed and one seriously wounded. The name of the former was Emerson, the latter Hallett. One native attendant and a European interpreter were killed. An expedition had been ordered to punish the tribes who committed the murder, but it was prevented from sailing by the French Consul at Tamatoiva. The American Consular Agent at Mosindra states that although he warned Emerson and Hallett against the part of the country they intended to visit, he had no reason to fear any personal danger to them.

In consequence of the disturbances in Madagascar, the British Admiralty has directed the gun-vessel "Sea-gull" to call at Madagascar to protect British interests; also to assist in obtaining information in respect to the proceedings of the French representative. The commander of the East Indian station has been directed to render further assistance if necessary.

The Paris Temps reports that two warlike tribes in Madagascar have resolved no longer to bear the intolerable yoke of the ruling tribe. The Temps regards the agitation in England regarding Madagascar as wholly superficial. The rupture provoked by the proceedings of the Queen of Madagascar will not, it says, affect the excellent relations which France desires to maintain with England.

A Risky Present.

A Frenchmen of some note made a present to a young lady, recently, which was considered a rather sarcastic one. It was a ball of cotton having a gold band around it, upon which were these words: "Employ me diligently, and you will obtain a brilliant success." The cotton was rather scornfully flung on one side, till having occasion to tie up a large bunch of flowers, the young lady nearly used up the thread, and then to her surprise, saw something shining in the centre. She was industriously quick in unwinding that which hid the secret, and was rewarded for her labor by a most splendid emerald ring. The giver made a very hazardous experiment; there was scarcely enough in the advice to to be diligent, to excite the desire, or to arouse female curiosity to the point of wishing to know the meaning of the riddle.

It is stated in London that the Madagascar embassy have received a number of applications from Americans for letters of marque in the event of hostilities with France. The American consul in Madagascar believes the United States Minister at Paris has been instructed to make friendly representations to France against the proposed aggression.

Young and Old Soldiers.

The characteristics of young soldiers are to play a winning game; to attack with dash where success seems probable; or even to stand up to superior forces when courage has not been damped by previous reverses, and faith in their leader remains unimpaired. Under such conditions they may even surpass their older comrades. But in times of danger and panic, when the bugle sounds to retire, when everything seems to be going against us, and when total rout can only be avoided by order and presence of mind, then it is that the old soldier element becomes of incalculable value. Without it a commander would be indeed badly off. Let any of my readers think of themselves at twenty, and then, if they have advanced so far in life, see in what respect their character has changed at thirty. Most will probably allow that, if in dash and daring they made no progress in the intervening years, at thirty they can at least face misfortune with greater equanimity. A mishap which reduces a youth to the verge of despair hardly disturbs the man who has seen something of the world. The same feelings which actuate us in ordinary life continue to do so in warfare, and although moral and physical courage do not invariably go together, it is the combination of the two which carries an army through all vicissitudes. The great Duke has such a bad time of it lately at the hands of some of our reformers, that one almost hesitates to quote an opinion of his. In case, however, there should still exist any one who believes in that once trusted leader's knowledge of what constitutes a soldier, I give the following extract from a speech made by him in the House of Lords when the Ten years' Enlistment Act was brought forward. After explaining that the efficiency of an army depends quite as much upon the experience and soldierly habits of the men as upon the talents of the officers, and after describing the night attack of the Eighteth Regiment at Sobraon on some Sikh guns, which were plunging shot among them in their bivouac, he said: "I ask you, my lords, whether such a feat could have been performed, under such circumstances, except by old soldiers. It would have been impossible. Bear in mind the conduct of the Emperor Napoleon with respect to old soldiers; remember the manner in which he employed them. Recollect, too, how much they are prized by every power all over the world, and then I will once more entreat your lordships never to consent to any measure which will deprive her Majesty's service of old and experienced men, and thus pave the way for disasters which assuredly will follow when the army should come to be employed in war." Some people have even gone the length of arguing in favor of boy battalions, because, forsooth, the battle of Waterloo was fought by an army which contained a large proportion of young soldiers. This was undoubtedly the case, but not from any choice of the Duke of Wellington, who always referred to this army as the worst he had ever commanded, and surely a General of such vast experience may be given credit for knowing the quality of his troops, especially as he could have no earthly object in running down the men who had gained for him the greatest victory in his exceptionally eventful career. On June 13th, 1815, his Grace wrote as follows to Lord Stewart; "I have got an infamous army, very weak and ill-equipped, and a very inexperienced staff." Seven days after the battle he writes to Lord Bathurst: "I really believe that, with the exception of my old Spanish infantry, I have got not only the worst troops, but the worst equipped army, with the worst staff that was ever brought together." Another soldier of almost equal renown, but whose laurels have been more recently won, Field Marshal Graf von Moltke, when asked what he considered a model battalion—as regards the age of the men in the ranks—replied as follows: "I could not desire anything better than what is represented by a German battalion when mobilized, for it has sufficient age for stamina, that is to say, from twenty-one to twenty-seven years."—Major General Roberts, in the Nineteenth Century.

The Peerless Lurline.

Night in St. Louis.

Seated in the parlor of her father's magnificent residence, Lurline Loosehair allowed her taper fingers to wander idly over the keys of the piano, and, obedient to her delicate touch, there floated forth upon the air the strains of that beautiful miserere, "Since Papa Tore His Pants." And as she sat there, absorbed in the sad reflections to which the music gave rise, the door opened softly, and Berwyck Hetherington entered the room. Lurline, all the senses of her passionate nature absorbed in the music, continued to play, not knowing that the man she loved, and to win whose pocketbook in return she would have hustled around with dread earnestness, was standing by her side. But at last Berwyck placed his hand gently on her shoulder, and by that indefinable sense that tells us of a human presence, although we see it not, she knew that somebody was around. Turning quickly, she saw Mr. Hetherington.

"I did not know that you were here," she said, a blush flooding the face that such a little time ago was pale and calm, "or I should not have played so confidently."

"Can you not favor me with something more?" he asked.

The blush grows deeper and more vivid now, and the drooping eyes are moist with tears. "I cannot play any other piece," she says, half sadly, and half defiantly.

"Are you sure of this, Lurline?" Berwyck asks, bending over her in a loving way. "Think well before you speak," he continues, "for on your answer may depend the future happiness of two young lives."

"I am quite sure," she says.

"Then you must be my wife." And as he speaks these words Berwyck Hetherington's face lights up with a rapturous, Shuyler Colfax smile.

"You will come again to-morrow evening?" she asks.

"Yes," he replies, "you may tie the dog at 8."

"And you will not regret your choice?"

"Never," he says, in clear, steady tones. "I have spent the best years of my life looking for a girl who could play only one tune on the piano."

Truth is the most powerful thing in the world; even fiction only pleases us by its resemblance to it.

GENERAL FOREIGN NEWS.

From France, Germany, Russia and Distant Countries.

GENERAL.

The West End Theatre, South [illegible] with all its contents, has been burned.

It is stated that the documents from the German mail bags were not important.

Eleven lives have been lost by the foundering of a steamer off Portreath, on the coast of Cornwall.

Sanders, arrested for sending a letter to Mr. Gladstone threatening to kill him, has been committed for trial.

The steamer "Cambronne," belonging to Nantes, was sunk in a collision in the Channel on Monday. Fourteen persons drowned.

M. Zancoff was re-arrested on Tuesday at his house at Rustchuk. One hundred Bulgarian partisans were also arrested. There is great excitement.

The Madrid Diario contradicts the report that Spain intends to liberate the Cuban refugees. It says no legal or friendly reason exists to induces such a course.

It is asserted in Vienna that the Powers have definitely agreed to appoint a commission to meet next spring to arrange the Montenegrin frontier difficulty.

An explosion, supposed to be caused by ether, destroyed Tyndale Chemical Works at Newcastle, on Sunday. A number of houses were damaged and many persons injured.

One hundred and eight students engaged in the recent demonstration in St. Petersburgh have been arrested. The troops charged into a crowd of Kazan University students, killing three.

Mr. Wilfred Blunt appeals to the British public for help to defray the cost of the defence of Arabi Pasha, as the trial, he says, has assumed the character of a great enquiry.

The Spanish Federal Republicans have resolved to maintain their principles, and have appointed a committee to draft a manifesto. Ministerial journals expect that the Government will have a majority of 160 on the question of confidence.

The eldest sister of the Marquis of Queensbury and [illegible] of Lady Florence Dixie, who has just completed her fortieth year, married a young baker of exactly half her age, who was taught his trade at a night school of which his present wife was principal.

The French Cabinet has decided to send a pacific expedition to survey the ceded territory on the Congo and report on its resources. The Senate has ratified the treaty with M. DeBrazza with the Congo Chief Makoko. The report of the Committee dwelt upon the pacific character of M. DeBrazza's mission. The Senate also passed a bill defining the powers of the commission to award compensation to the French and American citizens for damages sustained during the civil war in America and Franco-Prussian war.

THE FLOODS IN GERMANY.

The Town Council of Mayence has voted 10,000 marks in addition to the 18,000 already granted to relieve the sufferers by the inundation. The railway embankment at the lower end of the town has given way. Sappers and miners are keeping communication open.

The waters of the Rhine have reached 10 metres, but have ceased rising. The wreck of boats was washed away at Coblentz has landed above here. The greatest danger is now past.

In the Prussian Diet on Tuesday Herr Putlkmer read a telegram from the press at Coblentz, stating that the flood was forcing its way from all sides into the Castle Garden and half the boat bridge had been torn away. It was impossible to see what the end would be. Herr Von Bennigsen said he would seek an audience of the Emperor and ask if he thought it necessary he should proceed to the scene of danger. At Bonn the lower stories of houses are submerged. The river is still rising at Frankfort.

THE MADAGASCAR TROUBLES.

There is much speculation in Parisian reception the Malgassy envoys will receive in London. The Telegraphe, referring to the proposed visit of the envoys to Lord Granville, says: "Much good may it do them!"

The Malgassy embassy are accredited to Paris, London, Berlin and Washington.

THE REPUBLIC OF FRANCE.

Count Montebello, the only surviving son of Marshal Lanners, is dead.

Three persons have been arrested on suspicion of being concerned in the robbery at the cathedral of St. Denis.

Guesde, editor of the Paris Egalite, has been arrested for being connected with the Socialist movement in Central France.

The Madagascar Ambassadors have received the ultimatum requiring Madagascar to recognize the protectorate. The Ambassadors started for London.

It is said in London that the Madagascar envoys were informed that the French commander at Zanzibar will be ordered to commence war immediately.

PAID IN THEIR OWN COIN.—A [illegible] seller at Shubenacadie, Colchester [illegible] baulked his trial under the Scott Act by serving the magistrate with a writ of certiorari, removing the case to the Supreme Court. In about two weeks the Provincial Chief Justice granted a rule to quash the writ aforesaid, and a city constable immediately went to Shubenacadie armed with the Supreme Court's order for the trial to proceed before the magistrate. Upon the attorney's arrival the trial was brought on with so much haste that the defendant could not find his witnesses in time and had to conduct his own case. Judgment was given against the defendant and an execution at once issued.

The Telegraph System.

The growth of the country and the extension of its business make constantly increasing demands upon the facilities of communication, by rail and water, by post telegraph, and we should now add by telephone. No other of these systems, it is safe to say, is of greater importance to the business man than the telegraph, which has now reached so great a development as to be indispensable to commerce; and the speeding of means by which telegrams can be promptly sent and answered is a matter of constant concern to the manufacturer, the merchant and the shipper. We look with interest therefore, upon any move made which has for its object the enlargement of the facilities for rapid inter-communication.

In connection the information given at the recent meeting of the Great North Western Telegraph Company has an important significance. Canada has been well known in the matter of telegraphs, and it is pleasing to find that we are moving with the times in all that relates to modern mechanical discovery and invention. The changes during the year of the company evidence a determination to be up to the requirements of the growing traffic. The lines of wire leased from the Montreal and Dominion Companies have, it appears, required what repairers term a "thorough overhaul." As an instance of this, the report made by the General Manager at the meeting describes a journey made, by one of the telegraph inspectors, of 1,400 miles by sleigh-board, through Quebec, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, in the course of which some 200 officers were visited, the poles renewed or renewed, insulators replaced, the lines remodelled, the instruments, batteries and connections at these re-arranged, especial attention having been given to the through wires over the business of the Eastern provinces and the cable business of the Dominion transmitted. All this has resulted in the use of the lines of that district in a condition of efficiency to which they had for years been strangers.

In the Ottawa and in Northern Ontario, the policy of supervision and re-construction has, we find been pursued, notably at Kingston, Lindsay, and other important points where a large number of wires converge, or at repeating points at which observation is a prime requisite. In the matter of increased accomodation, both with new offices and wires, have been found necessary, and successful efforts have been made to furnish it. Not only in Toronto, where the remodelling of the head office of the company has given increased room to the staff and much greater convenience to the public, but at Montreal, London and other points improvements have been made. Plans are now drawn, we learn, for enlarging and remodelling the office in Quebec, and various alterations are in progress at other points.

The important subject of insulation has received attention at the hands of the company's electricians. The Pond composite system, largely introduced a few years ago, is in process of the lines, not proving satisfactory, are being replaced by glass or other insulators for the newest and improved English pattern having been found the most reliable boxes provided with proper protective of waste of current, and in many cases replaced. Aerial cables have been introduced where a large number of wires is put and unwieldy pole-line, and various contrivances for their object the perfection of the service and the economy of battery power are being gradually but steadily worked in a word, modern ideas appear to have in the Company's administration, the newest and most serviceable appliances brought for the placing of its system in the most complete state of efficiency.

We are glad to find that the Great North-Western Telegraph wires constantly working, between Montreal, Halifax, St. John, Portland and New York, viâ intermediate points, also Chicago. It has duplex working between Montreal and St. John, N.B.; Montreal and Quebec; Quebec and St. John; Montreal and New York; Montreal Ottawa; Toronto and Ottawa; Toronto and London; Toronto and Toledo; Toronto and Hamilton; Toronto and Buffalo. There are quadruplex instruments in operation Montreal and Toronto, and Montreal and Toronto. The erection of new offices in Brandon, Rapid City, Minnedosa, Manitoba, the rebuilding of those at St. Vincent and Portage la Prairie, Winnipeg, and the other work done or in progress in the North-West are important items in the year's operations.

The business of the company, upon the whole, appears to be well maintained, and the changes in which telegraphic correspondence is conducted, while satisfactory to the public, reflects credit upon the gentlemen who are responsible for the administration.—Monetary Times.

Bugler of the 18th Royal Irish Regiment at Tel-el-Kebir.

A youngster, a mere lad, was breast to breast with Major Hart at the head of the storming forces at Tel-el-Kebir. Turning suddenly up the face of the works he scrambled, a hostile rifle butt struck him, and he tumbled back into the ditch. He recovered to his feet, picked up his bugle and followed the red wave which had swept onward during his disaster. He got to the front while the rank and file were attacking the enemy with the bayonet. Here he raised a brazen note, but in the midst of it he was bayoneted in the shoulder by a Russian. The lad had lost his sword in his fall, but he had his bugle and his fist; and these he joined battle with the Arabist, as he put down in no time with what is known in Ireland "a hand and a foot." Then, standing over the prostrate captive, he blew a triumphant blast. The drollery of the performance set the soldiers laughing even amid the carnage.

A Big Load.—A man named Paquette, who lives seven miles on the other side of Chester Lake, the other day carried with a single tote the following exceedingly heavy load from the lakes to his own home:—100 lbs. of flour 50 lbs. of codfish, 2 lbs. of tea, and 2 lbs. of tobacco, making in all 154 lbs.—Pontiac Advance.

The quieting, rest-procuring qualities, as well as the far-reaching and powerful curative effects of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral render it the very best remedy known for lung diseases.

Dr. R. V. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" cures every kind of humor, from the common pimple or eruption to the worst scrofula.

Four to six bottles cure salt-rheum or tetter.

One to five bottles cure the worst kind of pimples on the face.

Two to four bottles clear the system of boils, carbuncles, and sores.

Five to eight bottles cure corrupt or running ulcers and the worst scrofula.

By druggists, and in half-dozen and dozen lots at great discount.

Cattle Shipments.—The Hon. M. H. Cochrane recently shipped 14 cars of cattle from Compton to Chicago fair. One enormous fat ox was shipped weighing nearly 3,000 pounds.

Weak lungs, spitting of blood, consumption, and kindred affections, cured without physician. Address for treatise, with two stamps, World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N Y.

Heavy Hogs.—At Barnston, Mr. Peter Gooley killed a seven months pig a few days ago which weighed (dressed) 335 lbs., and Mr. Silas Hill killed a 6½ months one which turned the scales (dressed) at 346 lbs.

"A Drop of Joy in Every Word."

Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.: Three months ago I was broken out with large ulcers and sores on my body, limbs and face. I procured your "Golden Medical Discovery" and "Purgative Pellets" and have taken six bottles, and to-day I am in good health, all those ugly ulcers having healed and left my skin in a natural, healthy condition. I thought at one time that I could not be cured. Although I can but poorly express my gratitude to you, yet there is a drop of joy in every word I write.

Yours truly, JAMES O. BELLIS, Flemington, N. J. "Discovery" sold by druggists.

Lightly Taxed.—The total rate this year in Shelbourne for municipal purposes is only ten mills in the dollar, notwithstanding the additional expenditure incurred by the building of the town hall.

What is beautiful? Why, Carboline, a deodorized extract of petroleum, as now improved and perfected. Clear as spring water, delightfully perfumed and will not soil the finest linen fabric—a perfect toilet preparation and absolutely makes the hair grow on bald heads.

Burned in Soft Soap.—One day last week Mr. R. Little's boy, a child of three summers, accidentally fell into a tub of soft soap. The little fellow fell in head first, and would soon have been smothered had he not twisted himself into a sitting posture. As it was his eyes were badly burned.—Mt. Forest Advocate.

Enterprising.—The St Catherines General and Marine Hospital is out of debt, and has something of a surplus. A hard struggle has been the experience of the past.—The trustees of St. Andrew's church, Windsor, have decided to erect a new edifice to cost not more than $9,000, commencing work in the spring.—Belleville stands in a fair way to be possessed shortly of an excellent museum. The Murchison Club has decided to take the matter in hand, and the Albert College authorities, already owning quite a valuable collection, have offered to provide the required rooms.

Davy & Clark, Druggists, Renfrew, date of June 3rd, write," Burdock Blood Bitters though comparatively a new preparation, has taken the lead in this locality as a blood purifier, our sales of it being equal to that of all other medicines used for the purpose during the last year." 18.

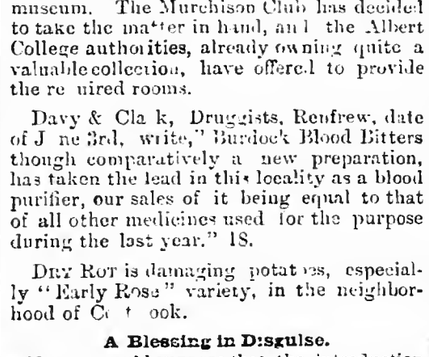
Dry Rot is damaging potatoes, especially "Early Rose" variety, in the neighborhood of Cookstown.

A Blessing in Disguise.

No one would suppose that the introduction into a family of a bottle of Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor would be the means of restoring peace and prosperity. Corns are painful, and the constant consciousness of this upon even the best natured produces nervous depression, ill temper, recklessness, leading to a desire to spend their time away from the bosom to their family. In order to avoid the evils above mentioned always keep a bottle of Putnam's Corn Extractor on hand. Sold everywhere.

Four Hundred Shad were caught the other day by three gentlemen of Philipsburg.

An Admonition.



To neglect a cough or cold, is but to invite consumption, that destroyer of the human race. Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam will cure the cough and allay all irritation of the bronchial tubes and lungs, and effectually remedy all pulmonary complaints, such as Asthma, Bronchitis, Whooping Cough, &c. 17.

A Large Saw-Mill has been built by Messrs. Buck & Stevens at Bolton Centre.

Indispensable.—There are some simple remedies indispensable in every family. Among these, the experience of years assures us, should be recorded Briggs' Electric Oil. For both internal and external application we have found it of great value; especially can we recommend it for colds, rheumatism or nervous complaints.

A Chess Club is talked of at Waterloo.

"A. P." 102

THE GREAT GERMAN REMEDY FOR PAIN.
CURES
Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica,
Lumbago, Backache, Headache, Toothache,
Sore Throat, Swellings, Sprains, Bruises, Burns, Scalds, Frost Bites,
AND ALL OTHER BODILY PAINS AND ACHES.
Sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhere. Fifty Cents a bottle.
Directions in 11 Languages.
THE CHARLES A. VOGELER CO.
(Successors to A. VOGELER & CO.) Baltimore, Md., U. S. A.

A Big Investment.

G. M. Everest, of Forest, states that Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam still holds its own amongst the many cough medicines in the market. He says that he has sold it for nearly sixteen years, and the sales are steadily increasing. One family has purchased over 50 bottles for various members and friends. 13

A Fast Run.—A fast run was made over the Great Western Railway division from Hamilton to Suspension Bridge by No. 502 special—the second section of No. 3 express—last Tuesday week. The distance of 43½ miles was accomplished in 55 minutes, including one stop.

Undoubtedly the best medicine to keep on hand for Colds, Coughs, Asthma Bronchitis and Pulmonary troubles generally, is Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam. It will not cure Consumption, but it will cure those troublesome conditions leading thereto. 16.

Scalded to Death.—Mr. John Cousins, of Bolton Glen, had a child two and a half years of age, so badly scalded the other day, by sitting down in a bucket of boiling water, that it lived only about thirty-six hours afterward.

A Secret.

The secret of beauty lies in pure blood and good health, without the one the other is impossible. Burdock Blood Bitters is the grand key that unlocks all the secretions, opens the avenue to health by purifying and regulating all the organs to a proper action. It curesall Scrofulous Diseases, acts on the Blood, Liver, Kidneys, Skin and Bowels, and brings the bloom of health to the pallid cheek. 14

A Mutual Improvement Society has been formed at Coaticook. Rightly conducted it may become a power for good.

Vegetine

Five Doctors Did Not Cure.

Clinton Street,
Toronto, Ont., Sept 18, 1879.

Mr. H. R. Stevens:

Dear Sir,—I hereby certify that I have been sick for three years, unable to get any relief whatever. I have been under the care of five of the best physicians, each one giving my illness a different name. The first said General Debility; the second, Female Debility and impoverished blood; the third, Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia; the fourth said I was in Consumption; the fifth said, Neuralgia on the lungs, and was certain I would never enjoy good health, so I concluded to give up doctors and commenced taking Patent Medicines. At this time I was very weak. I had pain in my side, back and chest, slept very little, and the food I ate caused me pain. I was a burden to myself and friends. I was persuaded to try Vegetine. A friend gave me a bottle to try, not thinking it would do me any good, as I had no hope of ever getting any better. After using the first bottle my head was better, and I could sleep better. The next two my appetite came, and I was able to enjoy my food. I have now taken five bottles. I have a good appetite and sleep well, have no pain, and am able to do most of my own work. I pronounce your Medicine far ahead of any other, and can cheerfully recommend it to any one in need of such a medicine.

Yours respectfully,
MRS. E. ALLEN.

Rheumatism Cured.

Toronto, March 29, 1879.

Mr. H. R. Stevens:

Dear Sir,—I was troubled with Rheumatism in my knee and hip joints for nearly a year. I tried a number of medicines to effect a cure, but none gave me any relief. A friend recommended me to try your Vegetine, which I did, and after taking two bottles of it I found relief. I took four more bottles, and the pains completely left me. I feel satisfied it is a cure for Rheumatism.

Yours respectfully,
M. ALLEN,
6 Rossin House Block, Toronto, Ont.

Vegetine.—For eradicating all impurities of the blood from the system, it has no equal. It has never failed to effect a cure, giving tone and strength to the system debilitated by disease.

Vegetine
PREPARED BY
H. R. STEVENS, Toronto, Ont.

Vegetine is Sold by All Druggists.

Chris. Sheppard, Manufr of Masonic and other Society Jewels, 151 King E., Toronto.

$5 per day can be made by agents, male or female. C. W. Dennis, Toronto.

Watches repaired. Trade work a specialty. A. Ballarby, 8 King St. E., Toronto

Rubber Stamps.—Address R. H. Cox 4 King St. East, Toronto. Agents wanted.

Toronto.—Mr. J. H. Mayne Campbell, Barrister, Solicitor, Etc., 9 Victoria-st

Watches. Send for free illustrated catalogue to Ryrie, the Jeweler, 13 Yonge Street. Toronto.

Guns Rifles and Ammunition. Fall price list ready; sent free on application. W McDowall, cor. King and George sts. Toronto

Hand Stamps, Seals, etc., of every description and for all uses. Kenyon, Tingley & Stewart Mfg Co., Toronto.

Price Tickets, Show Cards, Window Shades. Newest designs. Send for price list. F. Williams 4 King E., Toronto.

Cards Christmas, New Year, Birthday and other Cards, at H. J. Mathews & Bros. art depot. Toronto

Agents wanted everywhere for our Family Bibles and popular subscription books. Send for circulars. C. R. Parish & Co., Toronto.

School Desks—the latest, cheapest, and best; trustees should send for my catalogue and price list. W. Stahlschmidt, Preston, Ont.

Tags. Patent eyelet, smooth surface, heavy and very tough. Send for new price list. J. G. Woodland & Co., Printers, Toronto.

Shipwrights.—Wanted forty—at the Owen Sound dry dock. Steady employment until spring. Wages two dollars.

Ontario Veterinary College, Toronto. Students can enter from October until January. Prof. Smith, V. S. Edin. Principal. Fees, fifty dollars.

Briggs' Genuine Electric Oil.

Electricity feeds the brain and muscles; in a word, it is Nature's food.

The Electric Oil possesses all the qualities that it is possible to combine in a medicine, thereby giving it wide range of application as an internal and external remedy for man and beast. The happiest results follow its use, and in Nervous Diseases, Such as rheumatism, Neuralgia and kindred diseases, it has no equal. For Throat and Lung Diseases, Bowel Complaints, etc., it is truly a marvel. The Oil, besides exciting appetite, promoting digestion, and checking fermentation on the stomach, antidotes or counteracts the effect of the acid, which produces rheumatism by destroying the oxolate and phosphate of lime in the bones, and the membranes enclosing the joints. Price 25 cents per bottle. Sold by all druggists, G. C. Briggs' & Sons, Hamilton, Ont. And C. M. Briggs & Bro. Buffalo, N.Y. Proprietors. (Eclectric is not Electric.)

BUSINESS CHANCES.

Those wishing to dispose of or purchase a business of any description in the city or elsewhere should call or send particulars to C. J. Palin, 53 and 55 King-street East. Business Agent and Valuer.

Subscribers wanted for stock in Manufacturing Company established four years, to extend the business; have been unable to supply the demand; big profit on goods. Address Manufacturer, 35 Adelaide Street West, Toronto.

$5.000.000 worth of farming and other property in Ontario for sale by the Canada West Land Agency Company, 14 Adelaide-st East, Toronto. Send for list

Agricultural foundry for sale in flourishing town of 4,000 population; Buildings of stone; machinery and tools very complete. Present lessee would take half interest if desired. Price $7,500, convenient terms. Mackintosh & Peters, Toronto.

Farm for sale—being lot 106 Gwillimbury, adjoining town of Holland Landing 212 acres. Northern R. R. Station situated on corner of this Lot, the land is high rolling clay loam Brick house frame Bank Barn. J. W. G Whitney, Estate Agent-25 Toronto-st. Toronto.

A good investment in the city of Brandon—new store and dwelling above, for sale; excellent business stand; central between freight and new passenger depot, two blocks from either; also four lots in block; most desirable spot in city for residences. Address Box 218, Brandon Manitoba.

Choice farm—194 acres—48 cleared 20 more could be ready for spring crop and stumped; clay loam; no stone; nearly level; well watered; large frame barn with granary, log stable; log house; all in first-class condition; best cattle and grain farm in the district; school store, post-office about one mile; immediate possession; also 212 acres; 17½ cleared, large frame house with outbuildings, stone cellar and foundations; new barn with loft and shed; all above built 1881-2, situated on lake shore, hardwood bush. The two parcels will be sold as one farm or the former only. Box 3, Port Sydney, Ont.

Wanted parties owning a portable Saw Mill to tender for sawing the lumber off 200 acres of bush land. For particulars address, Authors & Cox, Manufacturers of Artificial Limbs, 91 Church street. Toronto.

Wm. Ashall, watchmaker and Jeweler, 262 Yonge St., Toronto, has enlarged his premises, and greatly increased his stock of gold and silver jewelry, plated ware, cutlery, clocks, watches, etc. Fine stock of jet and garnet jewelry. Goods imported direct. Every kind of jewelry repaired promptly, neatly, and cheaply.

Ladies! Beware of fraudulent corsets. "Coraline" corsets will not break, or lose their shape. Wear corsets made by Crompton Corset Co. Toronto.

E. E. Knott's Speculators' Mart, 48 Adelaide St. East, Toronto. All kinds of real estate sold or exchanged on commission. Money loaned on all kinds of real estate at lowest rates of interest. Applications for money from farmers a specialty. Rents collected and estates managed in town or country. N.B.—Best of references on application.

Christmas & New Year's Cards
In assorted lots, specially selected, for 25c, 50c, 75c, $1 and upwards. Free by mail on receipt of price.
The Newest Styles in Birthday Cards.
Selby & Co.,
Booksellers & Stationers, 311 Yonge-st. Toronto.

Cheapest Music in the World.
Full size sheet, best print and good paper. Send 5 cents for sample copy and catalogue of 600 pieces of latest instrumental and vocal music.
S. C. Bigford,
23 King Street West, Toronto
Dealer in picture frames and fancy goods.

"Wait Till the Clouds Roll By."
The latest New York sensation.
Everybody is Singing It.
Send five cents for copy in full size sheet music form.
S. Frank Wilson,
Publisher, 33 Adelaide St. West, Toronto

Xmas & New Year
CARDS.
Largest and Choicest Selection
In the Dominion.
Assorted lots sent free by mail on receipt of $1 or upwards.
Lyon & Alexander,
110, 112, and 114 Bay Street,
TORONTO, ONT

XMAS PRESENTS.

Our New Catalogue for 1883 is now ready It contains over 600 illustrations of Ladies' and Gentlemen's Gold and Silver Watches, Gold Guards, and Vest Chains, Plain, Band, Engraved, Gem, and Diamond Gold Rings. An elegant selection of English and American Solid Gold Sets. New and beautiful designs of triple-plated Silverware, etc.

In our new Catalogue will be found something to suit every intending purchaser, suitable for Xmas presents.

We guarantee all our goods to be of the quality represented. Send six cents for our catalogue, it is worth ten times its cost, and it will help you to make a judicious selection and give you its actual value and save your money.

Annexed are a few selected articles:—

Gents' solid Gold Watches, with genuine American movements, $30, and upwards.

Gents' solid Coin Silver Watch, with genuine American movements, $13, and upwards.

Ladies' solid Gold Watches, $15, and upwards.

Ladies' solid English Gold Guards, $12, and upwards.

Gents' solid English Gold Vests, $7 50, and upwards.

Solid English 15-karat Gem sets $12 50, and upwards.

Solid 15-karat, 3-stone genuine Diamond Rings $7 50, and upwards.

Chas. Stark, 52 Church-street, Toronto

Old and young should use "Trabbery," Then your laugh may be quite merry Fragrant Breath shall pass your lips, And your Teeth shall pearls eclipse.

Brace up—Your system for work. Zopesa, the new Dyspepsia and Liver Remedy, attends strictly to business in correcting the Stomach, Liver, and Kidneys. Sample bottles 10 cents; large bottles 75 cents.

SPECIAL HOLIDAY NOTICE!

NOW READY. Our three Mammoth Catalogues and Price Lists, with full description of the largest Stock of Xmas Goods, Cards, Albums, Xmas Tree Ornaments, Scrap Pictures, &c., &c. Sent free to any address by applying to BENNET & CO., Wholesale Stationers, and direct importers of Novelties. All goods sent same day by mail, 453 St. Paul-street, Montreal.

HAY BALE TIES!

We are now manufacturing four kinds of these Ties, the Duck Bill, the Cross Head, the Adjustable and the Double Eye, from the best steel wire specially imported for the purpose. We can also supply the wire in coils, or cut to length if derired.

Send for circulars.

COOPER, FAIRMAN & CO.,
44 Foundling Street, Montreal.
Western Depot.—11 Front Street East, Toronto.

FREEMAN'S WORM POWDERS.
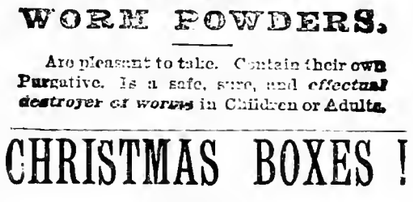
Are pleasant to take. Contain their own Purgative. Is a safe, sure, and effectual destroyer of worms in Children or Adults.



CHRISTMAS BOXES!

Nothing is more appropriate for a Christmas present than a five lb. Caddy Pure Tea from

Lawsons

Remember, we send Tea to your own home without extra charge. Send for Price List and then order Tea to be shipped to your Express office.

LAWSON'S
VICTORIA TEA WAREHOUSE
93 King Street, East, Toronto.

WILL CURE OR RELIEVE

BILIOUSNESS,	DIZZINESS,
DYSPEPSIA,	DROPSY,
INDIGESTION,	FLUTTERING
JAUNDICE.	OF THE HEART,
ERYSIPELAS,	ACIDITY OF
SALT RHEUM,	THE STOMACH,
HEARTBURN,	DRYNESS
HEADACHE,	OF THE SKIN,

And every species of disease arising from disordered LIVER, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS OR BLOOD,

T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, TORONTO.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,
For Purifying the Blood.

This compound of the vegetable alteratives, Sarsaparilla Dock, Stillingia, and Mandrake, with the Iodides of Potash and Iron, makes a most effectual cure of a series of complaints which are very prevalent and afflicting. It purifies the blood, purges out the lurking humors in the system, that undermine health and settle into troublesome disorders. Eruptions of the skin are the appearance on the surface of humors that should be expelled from the blood. Internal derangements are the determination of these same humors to some internal organ, or organs, whose action they derange, and whose substance they disease and destroy. Ayer's Sarsaparilla expels these humors from the blood. When they are gone, the disorders they produce disappear, such as Ulcerations of the Liver, Stomach, Kidneys, Lungs, Eruptions and Eruptive Diseases of the skin, St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Ulcers and Sores, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Pain in the Bones, Side and Head, Female Weakness, Sterility, Leucorrhœa arising from internal ulceration and uterine diseases, Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Emaciation and General Debility. With their departure health returns

PREPARED BY 2

DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.,
Practical and Analytical Chemists.
SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS AND DEALERS IN MEDICINE.

ARTEMESIA COUNCIL.

Council met in the Town Hall on the 6th Nov.

Present—Messrs. Christoe, Wright, Elliott and Pedlar.

Minutes of October session read and approved.

Communications as follows presented and read:—H. Hooper re drains in Flesherton; the Clerk of Osprey re town line; Clerk of Euphrasia re deviation on town line; Reeve of Melancthon re drains, &c.

Accounts as follows presented:—William Strain, road scraper, $70; S. Kingston, work on Boyles' hill, $13.62; A. Elliott, ex pending special grant on 'town line Glenelg, and services on committee, $8; Sparling Bros., repairing bridge, $1.50 Selectors of Jurors, $13; George Radely, repairing road, 50c.; A. R. Fawcett, printing, $8. Payment ordered.

Report of committee on deviation on town line Euphrasia, presented and read.

By-law No. 347 introduced by Mr. Webster, and read a requisite number of times and passed.

That the report of committee on town line deviation, Artemesia and Euphrasia, as presented be adopted.

That Mr. Pedlar be appointed on behalf of this Council, to meet the Reeve of Euphrasia, and to co-operate with him in the matter of town line deviation.

That Alexander Neilson be appointed arbitrator for Artemesia, in the matter of certain drains heading into Artemesia, from the township of Melancthon.

That Sparling Bros. be paid $1 for repairing bridge over Saugeen, near their mill on 12th con., and that John Rowe be paid $4 for removing stones from 12th con. But it shall be distinctly understood, that this Council will hereafter refuse to pay all, or any accounts, presented by any person or persons, except those authorized by the officers of the township having power to do so.

That James Neilson be paid $20, amount apropriated to town line Artemesia & Proton.

That Oswald Walker be paid $7, being half cost of covering Saugeen bridge, between Artemesia and Glenelg.

Council adjourned.

W J. BELLAMY,
Tp. Clerk.

FATAL ACCIDENT.

A EUPHRASIA MAN KILLED AT GRIERSVILLE.

A sad and fatal accident occurred at Griersville on Tuesday afternoon or evening. Mr. John Bigham, who lived in the Township of Euphrasia neer Rocklyn, was employed by Mr. Mitchell, of Griersville, to deepen an old roothouse. Mr. Mitchell and family were away from home during the afternoon when the accident happened and did not arrive home till evening. Mr. Mitchell after his arrival home, missed the old man, and went down to the roothonse to see if he were not coming to supper. He was horrified to find that the roothouse had collapsed and burried Mr. Bigham beneath the ruins. At once work was commenced to dig him out. The victim was found on one knee, with a rafter across the back of his neck. It is surmised that his neck was broken, for there was a breathing place leading directly from him to the outside, and he bad not the appearance of a man who had been smothered. He was quite dead. Of course, no person can tell exactly just how the accident occurred, but it is conjectured that Mr. Bi ham loosened the foundation in digging, with the above result. The weight on the roof, as those who know what an old-style roothouse is like will imagine, was considerable; on this one there was about 22 inches of earth. Mr. Bigham leaves two sons old enough to do for themselves, and a widow, who lives in Toronto. He was much respected by his neighbours, and was highly spoken of. He was aged 63 years.

Coroner Albery was notified of the accident, but. after consulting with Dr. Maclean, did not consider there was any necessity to hold an inquest.—Mirror.

WOMAN'S TRUE FRIEND.

A friend in need is a friend in deed. This none can deny, especially when assistance is rendered when one is sorely afflicted with diseases, more particularly those complaints and weakness so common to our female population. Every woman should know that Electric Bitters are Woman's true friend, and will positively restore her to health, even when all other remedies fail. A single trial always proves our assertion. They are pleasant to the taste, and only cost fifty cents a bottle Sold by A. Turner & Co.

The snow is about 15 inches deep and sleighing is excellent.

We have a speedy and positive cure, for Catarah, Diphtheria, Canker mouth and Head Ache, in SHHILOH'S CATARRH REMEDY. A nasal Injector free with each bottle Use it if you desire health and sweet breath. Price 50 cents. Sold at Wm. Brown's General Store, Markdale.

Mr. Thos. Ellis' team brought 51 bushels. 50 lbs. of wheat up the new Kimberly 6 and 7 side road on Wednesday last. Markdale is drawing a good trade from Kimberly farmers, and we don't regret having assisted to improve the above road.

OH, WHAT A COUGH!

Will you heed the warning. The signal perhaps of the sure approach of that more terrible disease consumption. Ask yourselves if you can afford for the sake of 50cts., to run the risk and do nothing for it. We know from experience that Shiloh's Cure will cure your Cough. It never fails. This explains why more than a Million Bottles were sold the past year. It relieves Croup, and Whooping Cough, at once. Mothers do not be without it. For Lame Back, Side, or Chest, use Shiloh's Porous plaster. Sold at Wm. Brown's General Store, Markdale.

It becomes our painful duty this week to chronicle the death of Dr. McGregor, late of Chatsworth. The Dr. went to Winnipeg last spring where he followed his profession until last Saturday, when he was taken ill and died in fifteen hours. Congestion of the lungs, pleurisy, and heart disease precipitated his death. His family still resides in Chatsworth. The Dr. was widely known in this county and universally respected.

Robt. S. Rae.

TAILOR,

SYDENHAM STREET,

MARKDALE.

AN IMMENSE STOCK OF
BOOTS & SHOES

JUST ARRIVED AT THE

TORONTO HOUSE

BEST QUALITY AND LOWEST PRICE.

STOCK COMPLETE IN

Dry Goods and Groceries!

PRICES ALWAYS RIGHT.

OUR THIRTY CENT TEA

Is the wonder of the day. A trial solicited.

WM. BROWN.

Markdale, Oct. 11th, 1882.

GROCERIES

A. M'INTYRE

TEA! TEA! TEA!

A. M'INTYRE

Flour, Flour, Flour.

McINTYRE'S
LIQUORS! LIQUORS
McINTYRE'S
Cigars, Cigars.
McINTYRE'S
Coffee, Coffee.

McINTYRE'S
MEAL! MEAL! MEAL!
McINTYRE'S
Pork, Pork, Pork.
McINTYRE'S
Teas, Teas.

And ever ythin g kept n in a first-class Grocery and Liquor Store. always on hand, CHEAP FOR CASH.

GROCERIES

MARKDALE

Sash and Door Factory

SASH, DOORS,
BLINDS
MOULDINGS,
HOLLOW BATTONS,
FRAMES

Lumber, Lath and Shingles,

Always on Hand. Orders Promptly Filled.

The Subscriber wishes to return thanks to the people of Markdale and vicinity, for the very liberal patronage they have given him in the past, and hopes by close attention to business to merit a continuance of the same.

I have now extended my business, and will in future keep a full Stock of

PINE LUMBER.

Direct from the North Shore.

ALL SIZES, DRESSED AND UNDRESSED,

All Kinds of Plain and Fancy Turning

Done in a first-class manner.

THOS. McNEA.

Markdale May 27th. 1881. 37-tf

GENERAL

Blacksmithing

Flesherton Station.

The subscriber begs to announce to the inhabitants of Flesherton, Markdale and Priceville, and surrounding country, that he has commenced business at Flesherton Station, where he hopes by satisfactory work and moderate rates to secure a share of public patronage.

HORSE-SHOEING A SPECIALTY.

And guaranteed that in a case of interfereing horses he will cure the defect in two shoeings or no charge will be made for the second shoeing.

A TRIAL SOLICITED.

HENRY WHITE.

Flesherton Station, Oct. 17, 1882. 110

NOTICE TO FARMERS.

BUSINESS STILL INCREASING WITH

W. J. ROWE

—AT THE—

Barrhead Mill

UNDER THE OLD PROCESS.

Gristing and Chopping done every working day. Farmers from a distance can have their stuff home with them the same day.

All orders for Flour and Feed promptly filled.

W. J. ROWE, "Barrhead Mills."

October 28th 1882. 113-126

W. BULMER,

The People's Photograph

FLESHERTON.

Continues to take Pictures,
Do Copying and Enlarging in good

FRAMES and FRAME FIXI

in great variety and latest designs at desperate low prices.

W. BULME

ARTEMESIA WAREHOU

FLESHERTON STATION.

Dry Goods, Hardware, Crockery, Boots and S

Groceries, Provisions, &c. Stock kept full and well assorted with goods received every week.

Cash paid for all kinds of Grain at the Stat

MY BRANCH STORE AT EUGENIA

replenished with new goods every week. For sale cheap for cash or p

My Saw Mill, Shingle Factoty, and Lime

AT LITTLE FALLS, ARE IN OPERATION.

All kinds Saw Logs bought at the Mill or sawn on s

Lumber, Lath, Broom Handles, Shingles and Lime for

WM. HOG

November 7th, 1882.

TORONTO HOUS

FLESHERTON.

Stock Fully Complete. Unusually L

VERY ATTRACTIVE, AND

CHEAPER THAN THE CHEAPE

EVERY DEPARTMENT SPECIALLY ATTRACT

Variety and Value Unsurpassed.

DRY GOODS DEPARMENT

Is this season very complete with a very large stock of Dress Goods, prising in part Cashmeres in all colors. Worsted Wool Goods in endless variety.

Boot and Shoe Department.

Would call special attention of close buyers as my stock is unusually from the best manufacturers and at rock bottom prices.

ORDERED CLOTHING.

Has been exceedingly brisk this season, on account of which I have the largest and best stock of Tweeds, Coatings, Trowserings, and Ov ings in this section of country. As I have always led the trade in th partment buyers will find it to their advantage to call before purch elsewhere.

Millinery Department.

Under the able management of a first-class milliner, with plenty of ances, will be found unusually attractive with the prettiest and most able, and cheapest stock to be found in the county. Ladies, it wou you good to call and look at the stock.

Hardware and Grocery Department.

Is always fully assorted and complete with the best goods, at the lowest sible price.

I am the only constant and reliable buyer of Grain and Farm duce in Flesherton, and for which I will pay the highest price in any quantity of good dry, sound grain, which I would specially ask to clean well. A call solicited.

R. J. SPROULE.

Flesherton, Oct. 3rd, 1882.

Markdale PUMP Factor

J. G. IRVING,

MAKER OF ALL KINDS OF PUMPS,

DROP VALVE PUMPS, CYLINDER PUMPS, CISTERN PUMPS, FORCE PUMPS,

Also, ALL KINDS OF IRON PUMPS SUPPLIED.

Satisfaction guaranteed on all my work; the proof of it is found in fact that I am doing a larger business now than ever was done in Markdale the Pump business. Remember the stand, 1 door north of Rutledge's Ho

Sydenham Street, Markdale.

Markdale Standard

VOL. 3.--No. 14. MARKDALE, ONT., DEC. 14, 1882. No. 118.

The Markdale Standard

IS PUBLISHED

EVERY THURSDAY EVENING,

At Markdale, Ontario.

$1 Per Annum

IN ADVANCE.

If not paid in three months, $2 if not paid till the end of the year. No paper discontinued until all arrears are paid up, except at the option of the publisher, and parties ceasing to take it without having up will be held responsible for the years subscriptions until they comply with the rules.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING:

One column one year	$50 00
Half do. do.	27 50
Quarter do. do.	15 00
One-eighth do. do.	8 00
One-sixteenth do. do.	4 00
Ten lines, first insertion per line	8
Each subsequent insertion	3

The number of lines to be reckoned by the space occupied measured by a scale of solid nonpareil. Advertisements without specific directions will be published till forbid and charged accordingly. All transitory advertisements must be in the office of publication by 10 o'clock on the wednesday preceding their publication.

JOB PRINTING

Of every description executed with neatness and despatch at the Office of the STANDARD, Markdale.

C. W. RUTLEDGE.

Editor & Proprietor.

PROFESSIONAL AND BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

Drs. Sproule & Armstrong,

Physicians, Surgeons, Accoucheurs &c.

OFFICE Medical Hall; residence at Markdale House.

Ghent, M.D., M.R.C.P. & S., O. Physician and Surgeon, Priceville, Graduate of Univ. city, Vict. College.

" " New York, and " Graduate, of the same,

" " Asylum Medical Institute.

" " Opthalmic Hospital, N.Y.

Member Coll. Physicians & Surgeons, O. 104

Dental Card.

Cameron & Knight,

DENTAL SURGEONS,

Office over D. A. Cameron and Co's Drug Store, Poulett St., OWEN SOUND.

Every attention given to the preservation of the natural teeth. Artificial Dentures mounted on Gold, Celluloid, and Rubber Bases.

Will be at Markdale the last Tuesday in each month,

D. Cameron, M.D., & L.F.P. & S. Glasgow, L.D.S., Ont. C. F. Knight, L.D.S. Medalist Royal College Den. Sur., Ont

---

Legal.

Frost & Frost,

BARRISTERS, AND ATTORNEYS-AT Law, Solicitors in Chancery, Conveyancers, &c. Owen Sound, have resumed at Markdale, Office open every Thursday, as heretofore.

Owen Frost. J. W. Frost, LL. B. County Crown Attorney. 1

J. MASSON,

BARRISTER, MASTER AND DEP. REG in Chancery, Notary Public, Conveyancer, &c.

MONEY TO LEND AT SIX PER CENT.

Offices—Owen Sound, in Vicar's Block Poulett St.; and in Markdale, over Meek and Hall's Store on Friday and Saturday every week. 57-1y

---

Creasor & Morrison,

BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, CONVEYancers, &c. &c.

Offices in Owen Sound, Dutton Block, over W. F. Wolff's Store; and in

MARKDALE;

over W. J. McFarland's Store on Thursday and Friday of each week.

Funds to lend on reasonable terms.

JOHN CREASOR Q.C. DUNCAN MORRISON

Markdale, March 15, 1882. 79-1y

Alexander Brown.

ISSUER of Marriage Licenses, Fire and Life Insurance Agent. Commissioner in B. R. &c. Conveyancer and Licensed Auctioneer for the County of Grey. Farmers, Merchants, and Land Sales, Punctually attended to and charges made very moderate.

Priceville, Sept. 17, 1880. 1-y

Hotels.

REVERE HOTEL,

MARKDALE.

T. SPROULE, - Proprietor.

THIS popular Hotel has had a large addition added to it, thoroughly refitted, and is now second to none in the county. Good stabling and attentive ostler. First-class accommodation for commercial travelers. $1 per day. Barber's shop in connection.

Markdale Hotel.

Good Accommodation for Travellers. Bus to and from all trains. Charges moderate. Markdale. A. LUXMOORE, Prop.

COMMERCIAL HOTEL.

PRICEVILLE, Ont.

Large and commodious Sample Rooms Good Bed Rooms, &c. The Bar and Larder well supplied with the best the markets afford; good Stabling and attentive Hostlers

THOS. ATKINSON, Proprietor

CHATSWORTH HOUSE

(LATE MORROW HOUSE,)

CHATSWORTH, Ont.

THE undersigned having purchased the above property has had it thoroughly renovated and refurnished throughout beside making other new improvements, which will greatly add to the comfort and convenience of his guests, would respectfully solicit the patronage of the public generally. The best brands of liquors and cigars always in stock. Good meal and comfortable rooms guaranteed. Good stabling and attentive hostler.

—C. H. MATHEWS, Prop. 114.

Miscellaneous.

John McDonald.

CHATSWORTH,

DIVISION Court Clerk. Issuer of Marriage Licenses, Commissioner in B.R., Conveyancer, &c. Deeds, Mortgages, Wills, &c. attended to promptly, accurately, neatly, and cheaply. Private funds to lend in small sums on easy terms. Notes discounted

---

MISS LAMB,

DRESS-MAKER. UP-STAIRS IN Douglas' Block. Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges moderate.

Markdale, Nov. 15th, 1882. 114-3m.

E. M. Galbraith,

AUCTIONEER AND GENERAL LAND Agent, Williamsford Station. Auction Sales attended in all parts of the County. Goods sold on commission. Rates moderate. Pianos, Organs, and Sewing Machines; also Fruit and Ornamental Trees, Vines, Agricultural Implements, and Machinery of all kinds on sale.

Williamsford, Jan. 27, 1881.

T. E. DAVIS.

BUILDER & CONTRACTOR. (Stone and Brick). After completing 13 buildings his season is still on the track and is still prepared to do all kinds of stone and brick work, plastering and tuck pointing. Those who contemplate building will find it to their advantage to give him a call.

Residence corner of Brown and Sproule Stetes. MARKDALE. 16-y

MISS WELSH,

Dress & Mantlemaker. Charges moderate. Satisfaction guaranteed. Hill's Block, Sydenham street.

Markdale, Nov. 6th, 1882. 113-126

Wm. Brown,

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.

Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.

N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate at current.

LOYAL MARKDALE LODGE,

Of I. O. O. F. No. 73, will meet in their hall on Monday evening, Dec. 25th, at eight o clock p. m.

103 W. L. YOUNG, Secy.

EUGENIA

Grist, Saw and Lath Mills

Having made extensive improvements in my Grist Mill I feel confident I can give good satisfaction.

GOOD FLOUR ALWAYS ON HAND.

Chopping Done Every Day.

Custom Sawing and Bills Filled on the shortest notice.

LUMBER AND LATH ALWAYS ON HAND.

Cherry, Butternut, White Ash, Black Ash Basswood, Pine and Hemlock Logs wanted

691y. M. AKITT, Eugenia.

$66 a week in your own town. $5 outfit free. No risk. Everything new. Capital not required. We will furnish you everything. Many are making fortunes. Ladies make as much as men, and boys and girls make great pay. Reader, if you want a business at which you can make great pay all the time you work, write for particulars to H. HALLETT & Co., Portland, Maine. 71-126

$2 Watches, worth $10.00. White metal Hunting Case $5. Imitation gold $6. Solid gold $15. Cheapest and best for your own use or speculative purposes. Kidder's catalogue free. THEODORE & Co. 208 Fulton St., New York.

ROBT. ASKIN,

MARKDALE,

Has opened out a First-Class

Furniture !

—AND—

UNDERTKING ESTABLISHMENT,

And therefore has supplied a want long felt, especially in the Undertaking Line.

COFFINS,

CASKETS,

SHROUDS,

and all

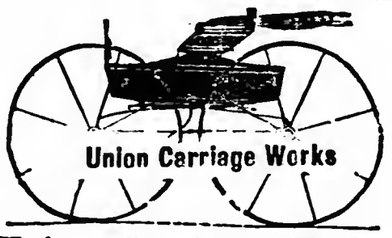
FUNERAL FURNISHINGS,

supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse

for hire at moderate rates.

FURNITURE!



From the Common to the

Best and Latest Styles,

in everything in the line.

Call and see for yourselves.

ROBT. ASKIN.

Union Carriage Works.

All work manufactured from

FIRST CLASS MATERIAL

In the Lateat and Best Improved Style, and finished with English Varnish.

Painting & Trimming Rigs

will receive prompt attention.

All Repairs executed in the shortest possible time consistent with good workmanship.

GOOD WORK A SPECIALITY.

Remember the Shop, opposite the Cheapside

D. J. SHANAHAN,

Proprietor.

Markdale. Dec. 2nd. 1881. 64.

HAIR CUTTING AND SHAVING

By T. D. Smith,

Razors, Strops, and Shaving Basons for sale. Razors sharpened.

Orders filled for Tomb Stones.

STARTLING DISCOVERY!

LOST MANHOOD RESTORED.

A victim of youthful imprudence causing Premature Decay, Nervous Debility, Lost Manhood, etc., having tried in vain every known remedy, has discovered a simple self cure, which he will send FREE to his fellow-sufferers, address J. M. REEVES, 43 Chatham St., N. Y.

WARNING!

There is great danger of taking cold from wet feet. If you want to Guard Against Sickness!

Keep your feet dry and warm by procuring your

BOOTS!

—FROM—

KAY & THOMAS.

Satisfaction Guaranteed. Medicated Cork Soles. all sizes, kept on hand. Remember the place opposite the new STANDARD Office. 49

Best business now before the public. You can make money faster at work for us than at anything else. Capital not needed. We will start you. $12 a day and upwards made at home by the industrious. Men, women, boys and girls wanted everywhere to work for us. Now is the time. You can work in spare time only or give your whole time to the business. You can live at home and do the work. No other business will pay you nearly as well. No one can fail to make enormous pay by engaging at once. Costly outfit and terms free. Money made fast, easily and honorably. Address TRUE & Co., Augusta, Maine. 71-126

RESTAND COMFORT TO THE SUFFERING

Brown's Household Panacea

has no equal for relieving pain, both internal and external. It cures pain in the Side, Back or Bowels, Sore Throat, Rheumatism, Toothache, Lumbago and any kind of a Pain or Ache. "It will most surely quicken the Blood and heal, as its acting power is wonderful." "Brown's Household Panacea," being acknowledged as the great Pain Reliever, and of double the strength of any other Elixer or Liniment in the world, should be in every family handy for use when wanted "as it really is the best remedy in the world for Cramps in the Stomach, and Pains and Aches of all kinds," and is for sale by all Druggists at 25 cents a bottle. 75-127

EARS FOR THE MILLION

FOO CHOO'S BALSAM OF SHARK'S OIL positively Restores the Hearing, and is the Only Absolute Cure for Deafness known This Oil is abstracted from peculiar species of small White Shark, caught in the Yellow Sea, known as CARCHARODON RONDELETII. Every Chinese fisherman knows it. Its virtues as a restorative of hearing were discovered by a Buddhist Priest were discovered about the year 1410. Its cures were so numerous, and many so seemingly miraculous, that the remedy was officially proclaimed over the entire Empire. Its use became so universal, that for over 300 years no Deafness has existed among the Chinese people. Sent, charges prepaid, to any address at $1.00 per bottle.

Hear what the Deaf say:

It has performed a miracle in my case.

I have no unearthly noises in my head, and hear much better.

I have been greatly benefited.

My deafness helped a great deal—think another bottle will cure me.

Its virtues are unquestionable and its curative character absolute, as the writer can personally testify, both from experience and observation. Write at once to Haylock and Jenney, 7 Dey Street, New York, enclosing $1 and you will receive by return a remedy that will enable you to hear like anybody else, and whose curative effects will be permanent. You will never regret doing so."—EDITOR OF MERCANTILE REVIEW.

To avoid loss in the mails, please send money by Registered Letter.

Only imported by HAYLOCK & JENNEY, late Haylock & Co.,

Sole Agents for America. 7 DEY ST. NEW YORK 92-145.

Wm. Lucas & Co.,

BANKERS,

Money Loaned

IN large or small amounts, at all times, on good endorsed notes, or on collateral security.

INTEREST AT 6 PER CENT.

Allowed on Savings Deposits.

Drafts issued and Collections made on points, at lowest rates.

W.M. LUCAS, Manager.

September 23, 1880. 2-ly

JOHN NOBLE,

MARKDALE.

GENER'L BLACKSMITH

HORSE SHOEING

A SPECIALTY.

Teacher Wanted.

FOR SCHOOL SECTION No. 6, ARTEMESIA, holding Second or Third Class Certificate. Duties to commence on the second day of January, 1883. Apply, stating salary, to

JOHN HAZARD, Sec. & Treas. to Trustees, Flesherton P. O

114-117*

A CARD.

To all who are suffering from the errors and indiscretions of youth, nervous weakness, early decay, loss of manhood, &c., I will send a receipt that will cure you, FREE OF CHARGE. This great Remedy was discovered by a missionary in South America. Send a self-addressed envelope to REV. JOSEPH T. INMAN, Station D, New York City.

EUPHRASIA COUNCIL.

A meeting of the township council of the Township of Euphrasia was held pursuant to adjournment on 1st Dec., 1882.

Members all present.

Minutes of last session of council read and confirmed.

The amount of $4.00 charged to John Hunter for statute labour struck off the Collectors Roll, as the labour had been performed, the amount of $2.00 charged to William Gilroy for statute labour was remitted on account of old age.

The compliance with request from parties in Kimberley, the Reeve and Mr. Ellis were appointed to examine the old given road between lots 4 and 5, in the 5th concession, and to ascertain what amount would open said road and bridge the river, and also to ascertain what necessity exists for this expenditure, and report at next meeting of council. The clerk was ordered to call upon J. G. Sing, Esq., to survey side line 21 and 22 in the 11th and 12th concessions with a view of finding proper place for locating the road.

The time for the Collector's to return their rolls for the current year was extended.

The Treasurer was ordered to remit to J. Rutherford, Esq., Owen Sound, $37.15 being amount of his account for printing Voter's lists and Collectors receipts and notices up to date.

The Treasurer was instructed to remit to J. Farewell, Esq., Thornbury, the sum of $23 88 being amount of his account for different kinds of printing up to date.

Mr. Ellis was instructed to expend $5.00 in purchasing flour, &c., for old Mrs. Gray, an indigent.

The Reeve's orders were issued on the Treasurer to pay as follows, viz: to Andrew Clark, $5.00, for care of culvert on 9th line, at Mr. Patterson's creek; Thomas Abercrombie, $50.00, amount granted to agricultural society; Andrew Grier, $5.00, services in connection with S. S. No. 15; G. Reekie, 50 cents, repairing road scrapers; William Charters, $1.00, work on 18 and 19 line; T. Jordan, $8.00, for labour on 18 and 19 side line, John Neil being contractor in this case; James McClung, $7.50, for road work; T. Burns, $7.50, for road work; W. Londry, $6.25, for road work; J. Burns $6.00, for road work; J. McDonald, $3.75, for road work; J. Neil, $13.25, for road work; W. Cornfield, $5.00, labour on side road; J. Howe, $6.50, labour on 5th line; J. Neil, $1.13, labour 18 and 19 side line; W. White, $3.50, labour on 21 and 22 side line; John Millor, $10.00, labour on blind line 1st and 2nd concessions; W. Yeaddell, $60.40, labour on 11th line on lot 27; B. Smith, $31.15, labour at Cornfield's hill; Mrs. Sinclair, $25.00, land for deviation road; J. Hawken, $53.20, labour on 12 and 13 side line, con. 10; A. Melville, $16.50, labour on town line Collingwood; John Teeter, $4.00, statute labour performed in error.

On motion made and seconded council adjourned until Thursday the 21st Dec.

ROBERT DUNLOP, Tp. Clerk.

Dundalk.

Strenuous efforts are being made to quash the drainage By-Law No. 254 by R. J. Doyle and others. They are sanguine of success. The Court of Revision adjourned till December 20th, 1882, that the Reeve may get legal advice respecting validity of the By-Law.—Herald.

BENJAMIN AND ANNIE.

A clergyman who had united in marriage a couple whose names were Benjamin and Annie on being asked by a mutual friend how they appeared during the cermony replied "that they appeared Annie-mated and Ben-efitted. The same may be said of the hundreds of customers who daily throng McFarland's mammoth store in quest of Flannels, Blankets, Tweeds, Winceys, Furs, Dress Goods, Hats, Mantles, and other supplies, that they are all animated by one desire, viz., to be benefitted by purchasing goods from McFarland.

A VEXED CLERGYMAN.

Even the patience of Job would become exhausted were he a preacher and endeavoring to interest his audience while they were keeping up an incessant coughing, making it impossible for him to be heard. Yet, how very easy can all this be avoided by simply using Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. Trial Bottles given away at A. Turner & Co's Drug Store.

Oranges of first-class quality, and Oysters of the best brands at Montgomery's bakery.

SHILOH'S CATARRH REMEDY.

A marvelous cure for Catarrh Diphtheria, Canker mouth, and Head Ache. With each bottle there is an ingenious nasal Injector for the more successful treatment of these complaints without extra charge. Price 50c. Sold by Wm. Brown's General Store Markdale.

W. F. Doll is selling solid Gold and Silver Watches at astonishing low prices. Jewellery almost given away. Call and see for yourselves.

Bachelor Brindle's Christmas.

BY HATTIE WHITNEY.

"Be merry now, be merry now
With joy bring in the holly bough;
With song and feast and smiling brow——."

Bachelor Brindle gives the half-burned log in the fire-place a kick that sends the red sparks flying, and wonders crustily where that bit of rhyme strung on a half-forgotten fragment of melody, comes from, and how it happens to chant itself to him so persistently to-night. It is a dismal night. Outside, a high east wind shrieks and squeals, skirmishes around corners and echoes away dolefully in every stray cavernous retreat and nook. Within bursts of tawny and scarlet flame light up bachelor Brindle's favorite apartment, big, low-ceiled, and comfortable, yet wearing the air of careless disorder peculiar to a bachelor's apartments.

And bachelor Brindle, listening to the wind's boisterous whistlings and plaintive minor chords, became cross-grained, and even misanthropical.

"Song and feast," he mutters grumbly, "holly, etc! Humph! Gammon! Where's any holly, and who'd go draggling round in this slush and sleet to bring it in? What's set me to thinking——."

"Christmas eve," chants the tea-kettle swinging briskly over the blaze.

"Crickey!" is bachelor Brindle's reprehensible exclamation, "so it is. I like to have forgot it."

As if sprinkled with some subtle, magic powder, the firelight, flickering, quivering, dancing, suddenly lights a path across the floor, through the cottage walls, beyond the mirk and mist, far into the past, where a cheery Christmas fire is burning; there are busy hands and hurrying feet and merry voices; there is an intoxicating flavor of holiday cheer; there is song and gladness; there are bright eyed cousins, troops of relatives and friends, and radiant among all, a romping, black-eyed girl with a turned up nose, who wore a scarlet jacket——

"And had a temper enough for two," remarks bachelor Brindle. There is a dim spot in the path of light. "Half your fault," sings the tea-kettle cheerfully. "More than half," snorts the wind belligerently, coming in a puff down the chimney to baulk the tea-kettle. "'Twas, 'twas, 'twas!"

A momentary lulling of the aggressive wind and a soft sputtering in the red coals brings bachelor Brindle's mind back to his present lot.

"Snow," he mutters with a shudder. "Time was when the idea had brought only foolishly bright visions of sleigh rides with her, of frolics and fun, and—oh, what's the use? They're all gone, she among the rest, and I'm a forlorn old soul with no one to so much as cook a Christmas dinner for me—unless I can coax Aunt Nancy over. Christmas eve! bless us. What an old wretch I was to forget it!"

Bachelor Brindle gives the fore stick a discontented poke, and turns to light the tall lamp on the shelf, and then brings forth his old-fashioned brown Bible, and once more follows the sweet story of the beautiful Babe and the first Christmas morning, while without, the wind tosses and whirls its fleecy white burden about at its own erratic will.

* * * * *

"Ugh! what a depressingly un-Christian evening, Christmas eve!"

Mab Lacy caught her breath, and clutched at her veil with both hands, as the rampant gale charged with millions of sleety needles swooped around a corner and nearly blew her off the steps of the grim, tall, narrow-chested house with its gray-green shutters, the bit of white paper tacked against the door bearing the faded notice "Furnished Rooms for Rent," revealing its nature and characteristics.

"Shelter is shelter, such a night as this, if it is the waste and desert gloom of Malone's establishment with its smoke-reel-scented halls and roachy corners," she continued, plunging into the shadows of the long, dim hall and feeling in the dark for her door-knob; "with all its faults it is a haven of refuge from——Mercy, Peggy! What are you tumbling my furniture about and slopping up my oil-cloth for? And whose is this big barn or a trunk?"

The stout maid-of-all-work, on her knees by the desolate little box-stove, arose with a red flannel floor-cloth in one hand, and a bar of yellow soap in the other, eyed Mab doubtfully, tried to scratch her eye with her elbow, and failing, gave her broom like head a random rub with the soap, and answered:

"New feller comin' to-morrow; and Miss Malone sayed as how you hadn' paid yer rent this week, an' bein' gentlemen preferred—'cause they don't muss t ings up acookin' in their rooms, an' not wantin' to lose a shore payin' roomer, an'—an'——."

"But, Peggy, to-morrow's Christmas!" Mab sat down on the strange trunk, clasping her damp, gloved hands in helpless bewilderment.

"That's what I know," said Peggy rubbing her ear with the soap. "But Miss Malone she says how the rent 'aint paid an' ——"

"But I was going to pay it next week, and would have last week if I had'nt been sick and not able to work, as I told her."

"That's so. But I reckon the' ain't no use in raisin' a fuss," said Peggy, philosophically, "he's done paid her a month's rent, and she's tuck it. She sayed anyhow, she reckoned you was more of a lady'n to want to stay whar' you weren't wanted. But he won't come till mornin', you can stay to night."

"But what am I going to do then?"

"Room-rentin' agency down yander," said Peggy, indicating the direction by a flirt of the floor-cloth.

Mab opened her flat little pocket book and shook its contents into her lap. "Peggy," said she, "how many rooms could I rent for a dollar and a half?"

"Dunno," answered Peggy, with easy vagueness as she picked up her bucket of suds and departed.

"Nor care," added Mab to herself, leaning her head against the cold white wall of her little bed room, "neither does any one else in the world. How different from the old Christmas-eves in the country, when royal fires roared on every hearth, and everybody was in kin to everybody else, before so many of them died, or left the dear, peaceful, stupid old Hollow—and I among them. And now there is scarcely one left who would know me—only Aunt Nancy Dawson, who would have been my aunt really now, if Ben and I could have kept our tempers till the wedding-day. Ah, well he has forgotten me, but Aunt Nancy might be glad to see me, and—yes, a dollar and a half will take me to the Hollow. I'll go. The room is mine to-night, and sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof. I will trust in the Father of the fatherless, who leads us on by paths we know not of."

* * * * *

"Aunt Nancy—Aunt Na-an-cy!"

"Dear sakes! don't shriek a body all in pieces, you Ben Brindle; what are you after?"

The door of the little deep-eved kitchen flew open, letting out a scent of boiling coffee into the clear December air; a blue linsey skirt cleared open the passage-way, and Aunt Nancy Dawson popped into the sitting-room, armed with a broom which she at once proceeded to devote to the obliteration of the string of powdery tracks left by the nephew across the striped rag carpet. "Knowed there'd be tracks whe ever ther' was a man," observed the little woman, whisking away briskly, "what y' out so early for?"

"We-el!" said the old bachelor rather dolorously, "you see the long and short of it is, I'm lonesome, Aunt Nancy—awful lonesome."

"Jest what you orto be," returned Aunt Nancy, with blunt candor, "y' own fault. I've told you to get married forty times' ain't I?"

"But—there ain't any one left to marry round here as I know of."

"Fiddle! ain't ther' the wider Barley?"

"Y-es, there's the wider Barley," said Mr. Brindle, doubtfully, "but you know she does weigh most three hundred, and is kinf of curious and cross-grained like."

"There's Milissy Hicks; a lovely housekeeper—couldn't get a better."

"N-o; she's too good. A feller could never get a bit of rest long as she could find a straw or a ravelling to fuss about. Wants everything in straight rows and no crooks nowheres. She'd put strings to all the young ones she could find and run 'em up on poles like butter beans if she could. Anyhow, Aunt Nancy, I don't reckon I could get married right off to day, and I would kind of like some one to cook a Christmas dinner for me. Not that a fellow can't pack the spirit of Christmas round in his heart without any dinner, but it would make it seem like old Christmases, and I want you to jump right into my sleigh and go home with me, Aunt Nancy, and stay all day. Hey?"

"I shan't," said Aunt Nancy, with no waste of empty apology; "I'm going to Jim Dawson's folkses, across the Branch—promised 'em a month ago, an' it's saved me cookin' a lot of truck. Old Pepper's hitched now, 'n I'm goin' to start in just the time it takes me to get my shawl an' green woosted sun bonnet on. You kin go along too if you like."

"No—I don't like," returned bachelor Brindle. "They'll fish out all their kinfolks from six counties and have 'em there, and I don't know half of 'em, and don't seem to want any crowd to-day—only just them I know. I'll go home and roast a sweet potato in the ashes and cook a spare-rib before the fire-place; that'll be good enough, only the gravy'll be full of cinders."

Bachelor Brindle drove slowly homeward, his spirits rather depressed in spite of the beauty of the day, bright with a glad glory of sunshine pouring down goldenly over the flawless white fleece of the night's bestowing, yet already beginning to grow damp and heavy under the warm glow, when turning the corner of a fence, where the drifts had blown up like blocks of marble, his horse gave a startled spring and stopped at sight of a small, dark figure trudging along on foot, a picture unusual enough to scare any horse in the country where not a farmer's daughter, in however moderate circumstances, will undertake a mile journey at any season of the year unless provided with some shape or form of a "nag." Mr. Brindle gazed down with a wonder that grew intense at sight of the fair little face with its dark eyes and slightly upturned nose raised toward him.

"Mab Lacy," he cried, "is it Mab Lacy, or a Christmas vision?"

"It is Mab Lacy," she answered, with a little, fluttering laugh, "I've come back to see Aunt Nancy."

"Then you've come on as much of a wild-goose-chase as I have," he returned, ruefully. "She's gone—gone plum to the Branch. Her old Pepper beats my Floss woefully, and I saw the gable end of her sleigh shy round the corner before I got to the end of the lane."

"Oh, then what—what shall I do?" cried Mab, overcome with the sudden desperate appearance of her position, and sitting recklessly down upon the wayside stump, whose white cap of snow was gradually shrinking away and oozing in drops down its sides.

"Don't do that!" cried Mr. Brindle, with alarmed sharpness; "You musn't sit on that wet stump and catch a cold just because Aunt Nancy took a notion to go burning around for a Christmas lark. Jump in my sleigh like a sensible girl, and we'll see."

"What's the use?" wailed Mab, trying to stop a small rill of tears that was slipping down her cheek with a corner of her gray veil. "I can't go home with you, and there's nowhere to go. Oh, Mr. Brindle—Ben, what shall I do?"

"Do just what I tell you," sighed Mr. Brindle. "First give me your hand, and you jump in here back of this robe. Now we'll have a talk. So you're alone, Mab?"

"All alone, Ben," sighed Mab.

"Well, look here. I'm the same old Ben you always knew—and hated."

"I didn't," said Mab. "I—I—you know, Ben——"

"You're the same Mab Lacy I always knew?"

"Yes; I'm tempted to wish I was someone else just now."

"Well I aint. If you're alone we're both alone, Mab, for I am; and its rather rough, in my opinion. Now, why couldn't we drop overboard this big slice of time that's separated us so long, and go back to where we left off before we flew out at each other?"

"How could we?" asked Mab.

"Look through yonder," said Ben, pointing to a little yellow cottage at the end of a lane branching off the road. "Our new minister lives there, Mab."

"Does he?" Mab's tone expressed nothing whatever, but bachelor Brindle's solemn gray eyes caught the flicker of a blush in her cheek.

"Yes he does," he answered. "Mab, I've got ten dollars in my pocket. I expect the minister is needing about ten dollars awful bad."

"Hadn't you better make him a present of it," asked Mab, sweetly smiling off at the lace-work of the snow-dappled tree branches in the winter-blue distance. Ben looked a little disconcerted, then rallied.

"But, Mab," he said, "he's kind of proud. I would't dare to offer it to him without giving him a chance to earn it. Mab—Mab, you haven't lost your tormenting ways, but the bargain we made back yonder at the stump was that I would help you out of your trouble if you'd do as I said. There's no one to find fault with what we do—nothing to keep us apart. Now, Mab, we're going straight to the minister's cottage, and you know what for."

So Mr. Brindle had a wife to cook his Christmas dinner, after all. There was merry bustling, there was laughter and gladness in the hitherto lonely bachelor quarters. And there was, too, a sweetly solemn hour in the tender gray Christmas twilight, wherein Ben and Mab, with the big Bible between them, bent low in grateful acknowledgement of the loving care of the One who, through trial and sorrow, ever and always leads us on.—Demorest's Monthly.

A Story of the Crimean War.

During the night which followed the engagement fought at the bridge of Traktir, the commanding officer of the Russian engineers employed on this service passed on foot along the French and Turkish lines, with all the plans which had been drawn by his subalterns, comparing them, as he proceeded, with the appearance of the positions. He trusted that the faint starlight, which sufficed for his purpose, would not be bright enough to enable the advanced sentries to see him. When he reached the Sardinian lines, however, he was seen by the retired officer of English Dragoons, who was standing sentry in front of an out lying picket. He did not challenge, but, after laying down his rifle, he advanced slowly and stealthily with only his sword-bayonet in his hand. On coming near the small mound on which the Russian colonel stood examining the plans, he crept on his hand and knees, then suddenly started up and ran at him, placing his bayonet on the officer's breast, and calling upon him, in such French as he was master of, to surrender. The Russian tried to draw his sword, but was prevented by the Irishman. He refused, however, to surrender but seized his adversary round the waist, vainly trying to throw him to the ground. They were both strong and active men, and, neither of them being in the least wanting in courage, a fierce struggle ensued. The dawn was beginning to break, but they were not near enough to attract the notice of the Sardinian guard, who slept in full reliance on their sentry. Many hard blows were dealt on both sides, but still the Russian kept hold of the bayonet with his left hand, and did not succumb. At last the Irishman wrenched the bayonet from the Russian's grasp, and flung it away, contriving at the same time to get his adversary's head under his left arm, when he pommelled it so lustily with his right fist, that the punishment soon became too severe for the officer's further endurance. He surrendered, and gave his word of honor not to attempt to escape, while he handed his sword to his conqueror. They walked to the outpost, the Irishman talking all the time in his broken French, and laughing very heartily as he spoke of their morning's adventure, which he treated as an excellent joke. The officer in command of the outlying picket sent the Russian colonel under a strong escort to General Durando, with the Irishman to tell his own story. The plans were found to be most accurate and complete, and the service rendered in intercepting them was so much thought of that General de la Marmora got an officer's commission for the young Irishman, and took him on the staff as an aide-de-camp. An attempt was made to treat the Russian engineer as a spy; but his captor came forward and saved his life by declaring that he had never entered the Sardinian lines, and that he had been attacked and made prisoner at a distance of more than two hundred yards from them. His evidence was accepted as conclusive, and the colonel was accordingly sent to Constantinople as a prisoner of war. He bore no ill-will for his capture, which he attributed solely to the Irishman's superior knowledge of the British science of boxing; and he spoke in the highest terms of his opponent's chivalrous conduct in throwing away his sword-bayonet when he might have stabbed him to the heart with it, so helpless was he with his head in so awkward a predicament. He also praised the Irishman for relying on his parole instead of binding his arms ignominiously, and for preventing his being shot as a spy.—Temple Bar.

The Love of the Eagles.

The largest birds of the eagle species are found in the Wood River mountains. They have often been known to omit devouring weakly rabbits and squirrels, and to have shown almost human kindness. An event which occurred some days since at Foster's ranch, above Hartley, fully establishes the trait of the Wood River variety. One of the ranchers saw a huge eagle flutter over the barnyard, interested in a fat turkey, and immediately secured his rifle. The first shot broke the eagle's wing, and in its crippled condition it wobbled and flopped around uttering screams of pain. The man was watching the result before firing again, when he discovered another eagle coming from a distance. It was evidently a mate of the first one. Like an arrow it flew to the rescue, and, examining the wound and seeing its mate could not escape, it took hold of it by its claws and beak and flew to the mountain side where it laid down the victim of the sportive hunter. During the past seven days the men on Foster's ranch have noticed, each day, that the mate carried food to the wounded bird regularly, and is yet feeding it upon squirrels, rabbits, birds, and mice. Mr. Foster could kill the birds any day, but has refrained on account of the affection displayed between them. A small American flag will be fastened about the wounded bird, and when it again flies it will carry the emblem of freedom with it to the highest mountain peaks.—From the Wood River Times.

NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

Five Minutes' Select Reading.

Summary of Foreign, Domestic and War Items—Concise, Pithy and Pointed.

DOMESTIC.

The investigation at Halifax into the wreck of the Cedar Grove is still continued.

Nearly five hundred deer have been shot in the northern townships of Hastings this year.

It is estimated that every brick in a building at Winnipeg, now in progress, will cost ten cents.

A chore woman named Bedard died suddenly in St. Sauveur recently under very mysterious circumstances.

Sergeant-Major Lake has been commissioned to raise 100 recruits in Ontario and Quebec for the Mounted Police.

The Common Council of St. John, N. B., has voted $5,000 to the Dominion Exhibition to be held there next year.

No action will be taken by the friends of the late Mr. Tackaberry, whose body was stolen from the cemetery at Elgin.

All lasters who leave the union at Montreal are being encouraged by the employers, who give them work immediately.

The North-west Mounted Police numbers 500, and it is reported to be the intention of the Government to make it 1,000.

A movement is on foot among the aldermen of Montreal, to offer the Canada Pacific a new site on Gosford street for the railway depot.

At Kingston, at one time when the sun was covered by a thin white cloud, Venus could be observed plainly with the naked eye.

While John Considine was hunting near St. Thomas recently, a cartridge which he was removing from the gun exploded and inflicted a severe wound on his forehead.

J. J. Joplin, teller of the St. John, N. B., agency of the Halifax banking company, recently obtained leave of absence to visit friends in Boston. During his absence his books were inspected and a deficit of $700 discovered. Joplin has not returned.

The Rock Lake Herald, published by Mr. W. T. Hill at Crystal City, is the latest yet in Manitoba. The first number has just reached us. It is full of bright, fresh locals, pertaining to the locality, and looks as if it would succeed.

Burlington, Shoal Lake, has caused quite an attraction to the Province speculators. Lots in that new laid out town have been exchanging hands at $100 advance. It is situated on the Portage and North-Western Railway, 33 miles west of Minnedosa, immediately at the south end of Shoal Lake, and where the leading road crosses going to the Big Saskatchewan.

UNITED STATES.

There are seventy-five bodies at the morgue in New York waiting to be claimed.

At Lacrosse, Wis., it was 25° below on Thursday morning and 10° below at noon.

Recent advices indicate that China and Japan desire a ratification of the Stufeldt Treaty.

Joe Coburn, the pugilist, was released from Sing Sing recently. He had been sentenced for ten years.

Lloyd's agency has ordered all steamers for New York to pass Cape Race at a distance of at least one hundred miles.

The trial of Dr. Pynchon for having procured an abortion on Buddie McCrea, with fatal results, is in process at Buffalo.

At a Mexican wedding feast recently at Saballo, Francisco Natan, a drunken guest shot and killed two brothers named Ravall.

Lieutenant Newcomb of the Life Saving Service, has been ordered to investigate the causes of the recent wrecks on Lake Michigan.

A divorce has been granted to Mary Harvey, of Brooklyn, who is aged sixteen, and has just discovered that her husband, William Harvey, is a thief.

At Moorhead, Minnesota, it was 30° below zero recently. At Chicago, Bloomington, Freeport and Rockford, Ill., the thermometer indicated from 15 to 20° below zero.

The New York State canvassers recently declared the vote at the recent election as follows:—Cleveland, 835,318; Folger, 342,463; Howe, 111,975; Hopkins, 25,783.

It is stated that the evidence taken by the commission appointed by the New York Legislature in respect to the condition of the Onondaga Indians reveals a revolting state of affairs.

Charles Decker, proprietor of a grist mill at Deckerville, Mich., was caught in the shaft Wednesday night and killed, being horribly mangled. He was a Canadian, and his friends live near London, Ontario.

GENERAL.

Prince Bismark is suffering from neuralgia.

The Emperor William has returned to Berlin.

More fighting is imminent with the Caffres in Basutoland.

The Khedive has refused to accept the resignation of Riaz Pasha.

A vessel has foundered at Tynemouth. All on board were drowned.

Dillon has abandoned his proposed visit to Colorado, and will go to Malta.

The Kurdish Rheik Obeidullah has arrived at Mossu with his wives and children.

Great disappointment was expressed in the Bundesrath at the absence of Bismarck.

British Trade returns for November show an increase in imports and a decrease in exports.

Fifty per cent. of the men, and nearly 45 per cent. of the women of Ireland are unmarried.

Madrid despatches lead to the belief that the success of Marshall Serrano's policy is impossible at present.

M. Zancoff, ex-Premier of Bulgaria, will be tried on a charge of inciting the [illegible] against the Government.

The transit of Venus was successfully observed at Melbourne, and thirty-three photographs were obtained.

At Plymouth, England, the Harveyside Creosote Works are burned. The conflagration was immense.

Mme. Sardou, the mother of the well-known dramatic author and academician, has just expired at Nice.

The Glasgow Corporation conferred the freedom of the city on Mr. Forster, late Chief Secretary for Ireland.

Eight persons arrested in connection with the riots in the suburbs of Vienna have been sentenced to imprisonment.

Mr. Forster, in a speech at Bradford explained the circumstances of his resignation of the office of Chief Secretary of Ireland.

The French Government is awaiting proposals from England regarding the settlement of the Egyptian question before giving definite reply.

The four men awaiting execution for the Myles Joyce for the Maamtrasna murders have petitioned the Lord Lieutenant to reprieve Joyce on the ground of mistaken identity.

The Spanish newspapers express surprise at the severe action of the English Government against the officials at Gibraltar in connection with the case of the Cuban fugees.

Capt. Norman, Commander [illegible] Danish Admiralty to gather information regarding the "Dijmphna" Arctic expedition, had an audience with the Emperor of Russia on Tuesday.

The Parliamentary situation and the Egyptian question were subjects of discussion in the interview between Prince Bismarck and the Emperor William on Monday. The Emperor expressed satisfaction with Prince Bismarck's policy.

The Official Gazette of Cettinje, states that measures of defence being taken by Montenegro are in view of a possible [illegible] the Principality. The difficult situation which Montenegro is left by the treaty compels her to maintain her efficiency.

M. DeGiers, the Russian diplomatist, had an audience with the Pope and Russian interview resulting in a satisfactory arrangement of the questions between Russia and the Vatican, especially the one relating to the reconsecration of bishops to the Polish Sees.

MINING MATTERS.

Operations in Keewatin—A Canadian California.

Gold mining operations in the district of Keewatin are in progress to an extent with a success not generally known. It is especially the case regarding the country in the vicinity of the Lake of the Woods which promises to be a Canadian [illegible] fornia.

The strides made in mining business during the past summer has been far above the most sanguine expectations. Companies have been formed, work hurried forward, shafts sunk and mills erected. As a consequence, an immense amount of supplies have to be shipped to the seat of operations. These supplies, have to lay on the wharves days exposed to the weather, besides running the risk of being stolen. A large warehouse built close to the water would recoup this, and be a safe investment.

About twenty-five different parties are showing gold in their vein matter, claiming have a mine, but of those some will be appointed, as that portion of the precious metal for the area of the Lake of the Woods would exceed the usual allotment of territory. There have been several companies started among which are the Keewatin Mining Company, the Manitoba Consolidated, the Winnipeg Consolidated and the Argyle Company.

Extensive prospecting has also been done with good results, and other companies will in all probability be formed in consequence. Houses have been built by the Winnipeg Consolidated and the Argyle Company, and experienced Colorado miners have been brought over and are prosecuting exploration, with the encouraging yield of $350 per ton of ore. The other companies have been for a long time "going to start" but have not yet regularly begun.

The opening up of railway communication to the east and west has given an impetus to mining enterprise which before to-day would have been considered level headed if he had ventured to predict it, and a most encouraging feature in this new condition is found in the fact that the adventurous spirits are not of the wild cat speculative progeny, but are actually at work, delving and digging and bringing forth the solid metal. Nothing is so calculated to fill with health tone and impart a robust faith in mining operations in Canada than the condition now being pursued in the mineral districts. Instead of ballooning uncertain stock, the worth of which depends upon the gullibility or dullness of the imagination, our people have started the drill, and the pick and shovel, and are daily producing actual value, as every true value is created, namely, by the result of labor.

It will be well, for what is destined to be a great industry in Canada, if we steer clear of the rocks upon which the mining interests of the United States are so long stranded.

Up to five years ago the great among ninety per cent. of those connected with mining, was to float upon the market some bloated stock of a high sounding location upon which not a hole had been drilled, or an atom of quartz dislodged. The consequence was that hundreds made blind ventures in mining stocks with disastrous results, and fell into the belief that they had thus sounded the mining business, and that there was no good nor profit in it. Thus it was that for years the production of the precious metals did not increase, and capitalists at the mere mention of such enterprises. History repeats itself, and the experience of our neighbors will be ours, too, if we indulge in the fascinations of mining stock gambling instead of the actual output of bullion. Canada is but young at the business, but already the reputation of mining has suffered from stock operations, which have been foisted upon the country by ignorant or designing men.—Thunder Bay Sentinel.

A Princess' Domestic Life.

Princess Louise started in married life, the London Truth, with the determination not to be theirval, on their own ground, aristocrats' wives. There was to be comfort as well as elegance in her establishment, with no ostentation. At Rideau Hall, her Canadian official abode, she affects more state. Once a week, when the legislature is in session, she gives a formal banquet. A night or two after there is an informal dinner, what Canadians term the "scrap feast," to be asked to it is thought a marked favor. She is dressed in Campbell plaid is in attendance, and performs at dessert on his favorite instrument. On Sundays English visitors in Ottawa are asked in quite an unceremonious way to partake of a family dinner, which is simple and well served, and enlivened by the cheery humor and rattle of Lady Agnes McNamara, who is more reserved when Canadians are present. The Marquis is said to be the kick. It was a disadvantage to have to arrive at Ottawa immediately after Lord Dufferin had gone away. His predecessor was decidedly popular, but the Marquis is highly cultured, but the product of a poor soil. He has had one too much and too little of the world.

An Age of Suspicion.

This is an age of suspicion. Never before, Capt. P. M. Howes of the steamer Boston Crane, Merchants' & Miners' Transportation Line between Boston and Baltimore, who suffered severely from rheumatism, induced by the exposure incident to his profession, was cured by St. Jacobs Oil. This is an age of suspicion.—Boston Globe.

Dr. E. M. D. Archibald advocates the use of the meteorological observation. They are, he shows, better mere toys but philosophical instruments—capable of ascending to great heights, remaining steady in currents varying velocity, and of being manipulated by the observer with ease and rapidity.

SCROFULOUS HUMORS.—The VEGETINE has cured many cases of Scrofula of five, ten, and twenty years' standing, where the patient has had many physicians, tried many of the well known remedies; and, after trying the VEGETINE, the common remark is, "It acts differently, works differently, from any medicine I have ever taken." VEGETINE will cleanse scrofula from the system. Try it.

Though not much of a conversationalist, a mute might get along very nicely in a spoke concern.

The Source of Much Ill Temper.

When your husband comes home in bad humor, jerks off his boots, and appears to be generally miserable, do not attribute it to business cares or hard times, but to its real cause—those terrible corns which are constantly annoying him. Aword to the wise will be sufficient—buy a bottle of ALLEN'S PAINLESS CORN EXTRACTOR. His corns will be quickly and painlessly removed, and his gratitude will be unbounded. Allen's Painless Corn Extractor sold everywhere.

The earliest money struck in Ireland was in the latter part of the tenth century, in the reign of the Hiberno-Danish Sitric III., King of Dublin, a contemporary of Æthelred, the monarch of Saxon England, whose coins he imitated by the Dublin King.

Poisonous drugs enter into the composition of Carboline, a deodorized extract of petroleum, the natural hair restorer and dressing as now improved and perfected. It is the perfection of the chemist's art, and will, beyond a peradventure restore the most baldheads.

Four is selling at Calgary at $17.50 per thousand.

Notice.

Each bottle of BRIGGS' ELECTRIC OIL will hereafter be accompanied by a corkscrew, as it is important that the cork should be preserved and the bottle well corked when in use to retain the strength of the medicine. It cures Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Liver and Kidney complaints or of the Urinary Organs; cures complaints arising from colds, such as Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Diphtheria, Cough, Asthma, and Difficult Breathing.

The owl has become an ornament to society, and the vulture may bid his time.

Keep it in your family. The best remedy for accidents and emergencies, for Burns, Scalds, Bruises, Soreness, Sore Throat, Lame Back, Rheumatism, Chilblains, and Pain or Soreness of all kinds, is that marvellous healing remedy, Hagyard's Yellow Oil. 19.

A cable despatch that "a mine was discovered in a street in Moscow, Russia," was followed by an innocent journalist headlines "A Bonanza in Moscow."

A Cure for Croup. There is no better remedy for Croup than Hagyard's Yellow Oil taken internally and applied according to special directions. this is the great household panacea for Rheumatism, Stiff Joints, Pain Inflammation &c. 23.

"You see, my child, this turtle—one of the wonders of creation—he furnishes the best combs that are made, and yet cannot use one, as he hasn't a single hair on comb."

Mother Shipton's prophecy is supposed to be about four hundred years old, and every theory has been fulfilled except the last—the end of the world in 1881. Buy your Carboline, a deodorized extract of petroleum, the great natural hair restorer, before the cold comes to an end.

"Still a miserable little Cincinnati boy, who had just received a scolding from his father: "Ma, I wish I'd never been born." "Why, Charley?" "Well, I think I'd be a nicer boy."

Daughters, Wives, Mothers, look to your health! The many painful and weakening diseases from which you suffer, despairing of cure, can be remedied by that unfailing regulator and purifying tonic, Burdock Blood Bitters. Ask your druggist for proof. 20.

A boy lately attempted to tie a knot in a mule's tail. He was a good boy, but he has gone to meet his grandmother.

A Sure Thing.

In the treatment of Chronic disease with that great system renovator and restorative, Burdock Blood Bitters, there is no uncertainty as to its action, its curative powers are speedily manifest by its marked effect upon the Liver, the Bowels and the Kidneys. Every dose performing its work in a perceptible manner. 24.

If bilious, or suffering from impurity of blood, or weak lungs and fear consumption (scrofulous disease of the lungs), take Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" and it will cure you. By druggists.

It is a wise bank cashier who takes no vacation.

Favorittism

is a bad thing, but Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" deserves its name. It is a certain cure for those painful maladies and weaknesses which embitter the lives of so many women. Of druggists.

When a Russian is too lazy to scratch for a living he has himself arrested for a Nihilist.

Being entirely vegetable, no particular care is required while using Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets." They operate without disturbance to the constitution, diet, or occupation. For sick headache, constipation, impure blood, dizziness, sour eructations from the stomach, bad taste in mouth, bilious attacks, pain in region of kidney, internal fever, bloated feeling about stomach, rush of blood to head, take Dr. Pierce's "pellets." By druggists.

Mince-pie season is here, and those who can afford it will now dream of elephants with four trunks and mules with illuminated heads.

Robert A. Wilson, Dispensing Chemist, Brockville, says, under date of June 5th, '82, "I have not the slighest hesitation in saying that Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry has given my customers more satisfaction than any medicine in my store for the cure of Summer Complaints, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Pain in the Stomach Sea Sickness, Piles, etc, You can use my name, etc."

The Captain-General of the Philippines reports that, after a severe hurricane, the cholera, which was of a bad type, nearly disappeared from Manila.

A Wise Maxim.

"A stitch in time saves nine," not only in making garments, but also in mending health. If Hagyard's Pectorial Balsam were used in the earlier stages of Colds and Coughs, many a "stitch in the side" and many a case of torn lungs might be avoided, that neglected, rapidly develope into irreparable Consumption. 21.

A.P. 103

St. Jacobs Oil

THE GREAT GERMAN REMEDY FOR PAIN.
Relieves and cures
RHEUMATISM,
Neuralgia,
Sciatica, Lumbago,
BACKACHE,
HEADACHE, TOOTHACHE,
SORE THROAT,
QUINSY, SWELLINGS,
SPRAINS,
Soreness, Cuts, Bruises,
FROSTBITES,
BURNS, SCALDS,
And all other bodily aches and pains.
FIFTY CENTS A BOTTLE.
Sold by all Druggists and Dealers. Directions in 11 languages.
The Charles A. Vogeler Co.
(Successors to A. VOGELER & CO.)
Baltimore, Md., U. S. A.

RUBBER STAMPS.—ADDRESS R. H. COX, 4 King St. East, Toronto. Agents wanted.

WATCHES repaired. Trade work a specialty. A. BALLABEY, 8 King St. E., Toronto.

CHRIS. SHEPPARD, Manuf'r of Masonic and other Society Jewels, 151 King E., Toronto.

$5 PER DAY can be made by agents, male or female. C. W. DENNIS, Toronto.

TORONTO.—Mr. J. M. Mayne Campbell Barrister, Solicitor, Etc., 9 Victoria-st

WATCHES. Send for free illustrated catalogue to RYRIE, the Jeweler, 113 Yonge Street, Toronto.

SHIPWRIGHTS.—WANTED FORTY—At the Owen Sound dry dock. Steady employment until spring. Wages two dollars.

HAND STAMPS, SEALS, &c., of every description and for all uses. KENYON TINGLEY & STEWART Mf'g Co., Toronto.

GUNS Rifles, Ammunition, Fishing Tackle and all kinds of Sporting Goods. W. McDOWALL, cor. King & George sts., Toronto

CARDS Christmas, New Year, Birthday and other Cards, at H. J. MATTHEWS & BROS. art depot, Toronto.

AGENTS WANTED EVERYWHERE FOR our Family Bibles and popular subscription books. Send for circulars. C. R. PARISH & Co., Toronto.

ONTARIO VETERINARY COLLEGE, TORONTO. Students can enter from October until January. PROF. SMITH, S.,V. Edin., Principal. Fees, fifty dollars.

PRICE TICKETS, SHOW CARDS, WINDOW SHADES. Newest designs. Send for price list. F. WILLIAMS, 4 King E., Toronto.

AGENTS WANTED—EITHER SEX light, honourable and steady employment; no book; for circular and particulars address Box 70, Sharon, Ont.

TAGS. Patent eyelet, smooth surface, heavy and very tough. Send for new price list. J. G. WOODLAND & CO.; Printers, Toronto.

PUPILS IN PHONOGRAPHY—INSTRUCTION given by mail; good situations procured all pupils when competent. Address W. G. CHAFFEE, Oswego, N. Y.

$5,000,000 WORTH OF FARMING and other property in Ontario for sale by the CANADA WEST LAND AGENCY COMPANY, 14 Adelaide-st. East, Toronto. Send for list.

CANADIAN MUTUAL AID ASSOCIATION. Co-operative Life Assurance. Great inducement to provide for families in case of death, at small cost. W. PEMBERTON PAGE, Sec., 87 King St. West, Toronto. Agents wanted.

WM. ASHALL, WATCHMAKER AND Jeweler, 262 Yonge St., Toronto, has enlargrd his premises, and greatly increased his stock of gold and silver jewelry, plated ware, cutlery, clocks, watches, etc. Fine stock of jet and garnet jewelry. Goods imported direct. Every kind of jewelry repaired promptly, neatly, and cheaply.

"For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish but have everlasting life." John 3—16.

Young Men's Christian Association, Toronto.

We extend to you a hearty invitation. Reading Rooms open .ose from 8 a. m. to 10 p. m. every week day. Don't forget when you are in Toronto. You will be welcome. "For the Lord is a great God, and a great King above all gods. In His hand are the deep places of the earth; the strength of the hills is His also; the sea is His and He made it and His hand formed the dry land. O, come let us worship and bow down, let us kneel before the Lord our Maker." Psalm 95—3 to 6.

If your hair is coming out, do not murmur over a misfortune you can so easily avert. Ayer's Hair Vigor will remove the cause of your grief by restoring your hair to its natural color, and therewith your good looks and good nature.

"Why did you hide, Johnny?" said one boy to another. "I hide to save my hide," replied the other, as he hied away to a secure spot.

W. T. Bray, Pharmacist, Wingham, Ont., writes that the sale of Burdock Blood Bitters has very largely increased in that locality, and adds that he hears very favorable opinions expressed regarding it, and, if time permited, could send many names of benefitted parties, 22.

Among the recent arrivals in Philadelphia is a gorilla preserved in alcohol. Although dead, the animal is in excellent spirits.

A Word of Caution.

Beware of Opiates and powerful astringent drugs in the treatment of Bowel Complaints, they may lull the pain and check Diarrhœa, etc., but are liable to produce inflammation. Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry is guaranteed safe and reliable, even for Infants, and is a specifice for Cholera Morbus, Dysentery, Colic, Acute or Chronic Diarrhœa and Summer Complaints generally.

Vegetine

Purifies the Blood, Renovates and Invigorates the whole system.

ITS MEDICINAL PROPERTIES ARE

Alterative, Tonic, Solvent & Diuretic:

Vegetine is made exclusively from the juices of carefully selected barks, roots and herbs, and so strongly concentrated that it will effectually eradicate from the system every taint of Scrofula, Scrofulous Humors, Tumors, Cancer, Cancerous Humor, Erysipelas, Salt Rheum, Syphilitic Diseases, Canker, Faintness at the Stomach, and all diseases that arise from impure blood. Sciatica, Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Gout and Spinal Complaints, can only be effectually cured through the blood.

For Ulcers and Eruptive Diseases of the Skin, Pustules, Pimples, Blotches, Boils, Tetter, Scaldhead and Ringworm, VEGETINE has never failed to effect a permanent cure.

For Pains in the Back, Kidney Complaints, Dropsy, Female Weakness, Leucorrhœa, arising from internal ulceration, and uterine diseases and General Debility, Vegetine acts directly upon the causes of these complaints. It invigorates and strengthens the whole system, acts upon the secretive organs, allays inflammation, cures ulceration and regulates the bowels.

For Catarrh, Dyspepsia, Habitual Costiveness, Palpitation of the Heart, Headache, Piles, Nervousness, and General Prostration of the Nervous System, no medicine has ever given such perfect satisfaction as the Vegetine. It purifies the blood, cleanses all of the organs and possesses a controlling power over the nervous system.

The remarkable cures effected by Vegetine have induced many physicians and apothecaries whom we know, to prescribe and use it in their own families.

In fact, Vegetine is the best remedy yet discovered for the above diseases, and is the only reliable Blood Purifier yet placed before the public.

Vegetine
Prepared by
H. R. STEVENS, Toronto, Ont.

Vegetine is Sold by All Druggists.

BUSINESS CHANCES.

WANTED PARTIES OWNING A PORTABLE Saw Mill to tender for sawing the lumber off 200 acres of bush land. For particulars address, AUTHORS & COX, Manufacturers of Artificial Limbs, 91 Church street, Toronto.

A GOOD INVESTMENT IN THE CITY OF Brandon—new store and dwelling above, for sale; excellent business stand; central between freight and new passenger depot, two blocks from either; also four lots in block; most desirable spot in city for residences. Address Box 218, Brandon, Manitoba.

THOSE WISHING TO DISPOSE OF OR purchase a business of any description in the city or elsewhere should call or send particulars to C. J. PALIN, 53 and 55 King-street East, Business Agent and Valuer.

OWNERS OF FARM LANDS, CITY AND Town Properties, desiring to realize, will find purchasers by sending me full descriptions, lowest prices, and terms of payment. J. W. G. WHITNEY, Estate Agent, 25 Toronto street, Toronto.

CHOICE FARM—191 ACRES—48 CLEARED 20 more could be ready for spring crop and stumped; clay loam; no stone; nearly level; well watered; large frame barn with granary; log stable; log house; all in first class condition; best cattle and grain farm in the district; school, store, post office about one mile; immediate possession; also 212 acres; 17½ cleared, large frame house with outbuildings, stone cellar and foundations; new barn with loft and shed; all above built 1881-2, situated on lake shore; hardwood bush. The two parcels will be sold as one farm or the former only. Box 3 Port Sydney, Ont.

CHRISTMAS & NEW YEAR'S CARDS

In assorted lots, specially selected, for 25c, 50c, 75c, $1 and upwards. Free by mail on receipt of price.

The Newest Styles in Birthday Cards.

SELBY & CO.,
Booksellers & Stationers, 344 Yonge-st, Toronto.

SPECIAL HOLIDAY NOTICE!

NOW READY. Our three Mammoth Catalogues and Price Lists, with full description of the largest Stock of Xmas Goods, Cards, Albums, Xmas Tree Ornaments, Scrap Pictures &c. &c. Sent free to any address by applying to BENNET & Co., Wholesale Stationers and direct importers of Novelties. All goods sent same day by mail, 152 St. Paul-street, Montreal.

XMAS GIFTS!

If visiting Toronto during the holidays, don't leave the city without visiting

BRUCE'S ART STUDIO,
118 King street West, and secure an artistic and lifelike portrait of yourself, than which you can offer no more acceptable Xmas Gift.

CARD OF THANKS.

L. CHEYNE, Agent Mutual Aid Association, Brampton: I acknowledge receipt of claim against company, caused by the death of Wm. Clark, who held certificate No. 1178, and I must thank the association and its officers for the prompt and liberal settlement and the courteous mode they have in dealing with beneficiaries, having raised no quibble, the certificate only being issued on July 11, 1882, and death occurred on July 20, 1882, or 9 days afterwards, must certainly be a guarantee that its benefits are certain and should be taken advantage of by all classes. ANN CLARK.
Brampton, Nov. 23, 1882.

Smith & Fudger,

(Successors to the late R. Wilkes,)

Corner Yonge & Wellington Sts., Toronto.

TO THE TRADE:

Watchmakers and Jewelers, Fancy Goods Dealers, Tobacconists, Druggists, Hardware Merchants, General Storekeepers and Others, will find our stock of HOLIDAY GOODS unrivalled in the Dominion. In all Departments we have SPECIALTIES FOR XMAS PRESENTS. Note the following:

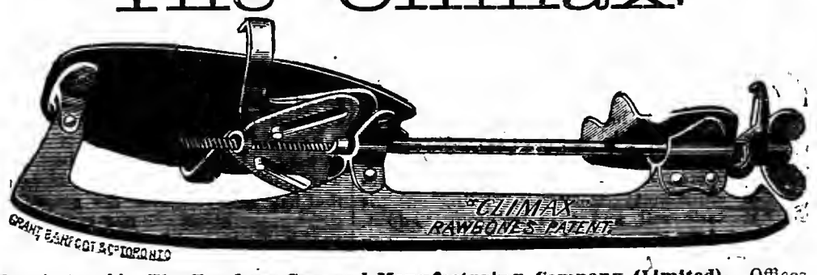
WATCHES AND CLOCKS.—Fine Gold Watches, Ladies' and Gent's Waltham Watches, Fancy Wood, Gilt and Marble Clocks.
JEWELRY DEPARTMENT.—Diamond Lockets and Sets, Neck Chains, Guards and Vest Chains, Diamond Rings and Sundries
ELECTRO PLATE.—Table Ware, including Tea Sets, Epergnes, Fruit Stands, Dessert Sets, Toilet Sets and Fancy Goods.
FANCY GOODS.—Card Cases, Opera Glasses, Albums, including new Upright Album, Richly Embossed Covers, Meerschaum and Fancy Pipes. Vases, Toilet Sets and Cases.
CABINET GOODS.—Wood and Leather Work Boxes, Desks, Jewel Cases, Secretaries, Stationery Cabinets, Best London Goods.
MUSICAL GOODS.—Violins, Accordeons, Concertinas, Harmonicas, Musical Boxes, Musical Albums.

Orders by Mail or Wire Promptly Executed. Catalogues on Application.

SMITH & FUDGER.

Christmas Goods!

JOS. ROGERS & SONS, GEO. WOSTENHOLM & SONS, LOCKWOOD BROS'.



PEN, POCKET & TABLE CUTLERY,
Ladies' Cutlery Sets, Razors and Scissors in Cases,
ACME AND BARNY & BERRY'S SKATES, & EXTRA PARTS, HOLLY & DEMAS' SCROLL SAW AND LATHE, SAWS, BOOK OF PATTERNS, DRILLS, ETC.

RICE LEWIS & SON,

Hardware and Iron Merchants, Toronto.

CANADA'S GREAT SKATE!

"The Climax."

Manufactured by The Rawbone Gun and Manufacturing Company (Limited). Offices and Warehouse, 81 Yonge street. Factory, Yonge Street Court. Thousands Selling. Particulars and illustrated circular on application.

CORALINE!
CORSETS unequalled for health, comfort and drability. Manufactured by the CROMPTON CORSET CO., Toronto.

THE SILVER LINE,
Wait Till the Clouds Roll By.
Pertty Little Darling I Love You.

The latest popular songs in full size sheet music form. Price only five cents per copy, or tue three for ten cents.

S. FRANK WILSON
PUBLISHER
33 & 35 Adelaide street West

CHRISTMAS BOXES!

Nothing is more appropriate for a Christmas present than a 5 lb. Caddy Pure Tea from

Lawson's

Remember, we send Tea to your own home without extra charge. Send for Price List and then order Tea to be shipped to your express office.

LAWSON'S
VICTORIA TEA WAREHOUSE
33 King Street East, Toronto.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR,

For Restoring Gray Hair
To its Natural Vitality and Color.

Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and either of them incline it to shed prematurely.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately; often renews the growth; and always surely restores its color, when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thus, brashy, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; lost hair regrows with lively expression, falling hair is checked and stablished; thin hair thickens; and faded or gray hairs resume their original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—under which conditions, diseases of the scalp are impossible.

As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is praised for its grateful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

PREPARED BY

DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.,
Practical and Analytical Chemists.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS AND DEALERS IN MEDICINE.

Old and young should use "TEABERRY," Then your laugh may be quite merry; Fragrant breath shall pass your lips, And your Teeth shall pearls eclipse.

BRACE UP—Your system for work. ZOPESA, the new Dyspepsia and Liver remedy, Attends strictly to business in correcting the Stomach, Liver, and Kidneys. Sample bottles, 10 cents; large bottles, 75 cents.

The Toronto General Trusts Co.,
27 and 29 Wellington St., Toronto.

HON. ED. BLAKE, Q.C., M.P., - President.
E. A. MEREDITH, Esq., LL.D., Vice President.
J. W. LANGMUIR, - - - Manager

This Company, which has been approved of by the High Court of Justice and the Lieutenant Governor in Council, accepts trusts of every description, and acts as executor, administrator, &c., and also as agent of existing trustees, executors, &c. $300,000 of Trust Funds to loan upon real estate and mortgages. For further information apply to
J. W. LANGMUIR, Manager

WHAT IS CATARRH?

Catarrh is a muco-purulent discharge caused by the presence and development of the vegetable parasite amœba in the internal lining membrane of the nose. This parasite is only developed under favorable circumstances, and these are: morbid state of the blood, as the blighted corpuscle of tubercle, the germ poison of syphilis, mercury, toxæmea, from retention of the effeted matter of the skin, suppressed perspiration, badly ventilated sleeping apartments, and other poisons that are germinated in the blood. These poisons keep the internal lining membrane of the nose in a constant state of irritation, ever ready for the deposit of the seeds of these germs, which spread up the nostrils and down the fauces or back part of the month causing ulceration of the throat; up the eustachian tubes, causing deafness; burrowing in the vocal cords, causing hoarseness, usurping the proper structure of the bronchial tubes ending in pulmonary consumption and death.

To effect a cure the parasite must be removed or destroyed, hence inhalants and snuffs are worthless.

Some time since a well known physician of 40 years standing, after much experimenting, succeeded in discovering the necessary combination of ingredients, which never fails in absolutely and permanently eradicating this horrible disease whether standing for one year or forty years. Sufferers should, without delay communicate with the business manager, Mr. A. H. Dixon, 307 King St. West, Toronto, and get treatise free by enclosing stamp. Ask your druggist for it

The Standard.

MARKDALE, DEC. 14TH, 1882.

Correspondence.

NOTICE.—We wish it distinctly understood that we do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions expressed by our correspondents

To the Editor of the STANDARD.

DEAR SIR,—Although as a rule it is well to take no notice of those who have not the courage of their opinions—who are either ashamed or afraid to write over their own signatures, yet since some may be led astray by their statements, in the interest of truth it is incumbent upon me to make a reply.

It is said that a number of professing christians assembled for worship constitutes a church, and in support of this statement we are referred to I Cor. xvi, 19 "Aquilla and Priscilla salute you, &c.," "with the church that is in their home." Your correspondent ought to know that in the very earliest times the christians had no buildings set apart for public worship, but assembled in one another's houses. "The church" means—the congregation accustomed to worship in the house of A. and P. salute you. Of churches as distinct and separate organizations as they exist to-day the early christians knew nothing. Our Blessed Lord never spoke of my churches, but always my church, thereby intimating its unity, which unity He so earnestly prayed for during His agony in the garden. Prayed He "that they may be one as we are." And again, "neither pray I for these alone, but for all them also who shall believe on me through their word; that they all may be one as Thou Father art in me and I in them," &c., St. John xvii. What Christ prayed for so earnestly at such a very solemn time we may rest assured He taught His apostles to observe and teach, which they certainly did, for we find it stated concerning the first Christians that "they continued steadfastly in the apostles doctrine and fellowship," Acts ii, 32. This happy state of things the evil one hated to see, and was soon busy sowing seeds of discord, which the apostles detecting spoke loudly and clearly against. See I Cor. i, 10, and Rom. xvi, 17.

In the face of such texts can we say any other than "divisions among professing christians is contrary to the spirit of christianity?" (Your correspondent misrepresented me on this point.) But it may be said this unity is a spiritual and not an outward unity. It is both, for it is impossible to have spiritual unity without the outward unity also. What would be said of a political party who on the eve of an election split themselves up into little sections, each working independently of the other? Would it not be said that they were a disunited body? Certainly, and their disunion would cause them to suffer loss. Your correspondent offers to discuss the matter. It is not a matter left open for discussion, but rather a matter of simple obedience. Surely the essence of christianity consists in finding out the Master's will, and then faithfully to do it, and there is no uncertainty about His will on that point. Had not our Blessed Lord revealed His will in regard to this matter I, as his ambassador, would have cared nothing about it, but having made known His mind so clearly it would be a dishonor to Him to be indifferent to it. Moreover, the division among christian people is more detrimental to the religion of Christ than all the force of Agnostics, Sceptics and Infidels put together. It is said that the Church of England is divided in itself into High, Low and Broad Church. In the Church of England are three schools of thought known by the above names, and they differ somewhat on some of the more subtle points of christian truth, but they are not factions, rent off. All three schools of thought are fairly represented among the clergy in our own country, and during the past two years clergymen of each school have officiated and preached in our village church, and I do not think that any one knew which was which, or that there was any difference between them. The Church of England is not as a cottage in a very narrow valley, where the field of vision is very limited, but a grand palace on high ground where a broad view of things can be obtained. She does not try to make her children like so many peas, fac simile of its fellow; on the contrary she leaves them to develop their imaginations and opinions, only requiring them to hold fast the clear teachings of the Holy Scripture. Nor is she in her nonage as stated by one of your correspondents, but is growing more active and strong year by year, gradually drawing to herself the more enlightened and earnest of all communities, both ministers and people. She has more missionaries at work, spends more money in extending the Saviour's kingdom, and prints more bibles and other books of more useful knowledge than all the denominations put together. If your correspondents could ascend each one out of his narrrow valley and take a good look at things from a Church of England standpoint I am sure they would go into ecstacies of delight.

It is said that the liberties we enjoy were obtained in spite of the opposition of the Church of England, and therefore no gratitude is due to it. That the great civil and religious liberty has been fought and won we all admit. By whom then? By the denominations mentioned by your correspondent? That could not well be seeing that they did not exist at the time the conflict was going on. There is no other claimant for the honor, save and except the grand old English church; and although King Henry VIII had a hand in obtaining liberty for the captive church, yet he was not for that reason the maker of it, for it existed 1500 years before his time, and wicked man that he was God condescended to use him as a tool in His hand to bring about His purposes. Nor was it as a leader of religious thought that King Henry VIII acted the part he did, but merely to spite the Pope because he denied the King the divorce he was so anxious to have. Moreover what could Henry VIII have done had not the church been willing, yea, waiting to regain their old liberties. I grant that the Church was severe in those days with some, but it was only with those who strived to stretch liberty into lawlessness and revolution. There were not wanting those whom having had no liberty, when they got it would run into excess. These unruly children it was the duty of the Church to restrain, and when they persevered in their seditious movements and writings, it was necessary for the well-being of the nation to punish them as they deserved. Now, in order to see what these unruly ones were aiming at it is only necessary to take a look at them, when they unfortunately got the upper hand (in Cromwell's time.) Ther overturned the Government, murdered the King, tried to force their peculiar views upon the Clergy, and three thousand of them refusing they were expelled from their livings on one-fifth of their maintenance. The use of the Prayer Book was prohibited under severe penalties, and a "Directory for Public Worship" put in its place, from which were excluded the Apostles Creed, the Lords Prayer, and the Ten Commandments. And this your correspondent calls liberty and sympathizes with it. Is it not enough. Mr. Editor, to make every loyal heart in the village to "up and at him" if they could find his hiding place. Popery was never more tyranical; and even now the descendents of these people are not over loyal, having no special prayer for the Queen. No wonder the Church teaches her children to pray God "that we may be godly and quietly governed," and "that being hurt by no persecutions we may ever give thanks to Thee in Thy Holy Church."

Your correspondent asks "was not Wesley as fit to be a leader of religious thought as King Henry VIII?" Indeed he was and more too. See what the good old man says when writing to his sister in his 76th year.

LONDON, Oct. 18th, 1778.

MY DEAR SISTER.—I am not unwilling to write to you, even upon a tender subject, because you will weigh the matter fairly. And if you have a little pre-possession (which who has not?) yet you are willing to give it up to reason.

"The original Methodists were all of the Church of England; and the more awakened they were the more zealous they adhered to it in every point, both of doctrine and discipline. Hence we inserted in the very first rules of our Society, "They that who leave the Church leave us," and this we did not as a point of prudence, but a point of conscience. We believed it unlawful to separate from the Church unless sinful terms of communion were imposed.

But you say "the ministers of it do not preach the gospel." Neither do some of the Independents or Anabaptist ministers. Calvinism is not the gospel. Nay, it is further from it than most of the sermons I heard at the church. Few of the Methodists are in danger of imbibing error from the church ministers; but they are in danger of imbibing the grand terror—Calvinism—from some of the Dissenting ministers. Perhaps thousands have done it already; most of whom have drawn back to perdition. I see more of this than any one can do; and on this ground also exhort all who would keep to the Methodists and from Calvinism to go to the church and not to the meeting. But to speak freely, I myself find more life in the church prayers than in any formal extempore prayers of dissenters. Nay, I find more profit in sermons on either good tempers or good works, than in what are vaguely called gospel sermons. The term has now become a cant word. Let but a pert self-sufficient animal, that has neither sense nor grace, bawl out something about Christ and His blood or justification by faith, and his hearers cry out, "what a fine gospel sermon!"

"Although there are many disagreeable circumstances, yet I advise all our friends to keep to the church. God has surely raised us up for the church chiefly that a little leaven may leaven the whole lump. I wish you would seriously consider the tract "Reasons against a Separation from the Church of England." Those reasons were never yet answered, and I believe they never will."

I am, dear sister, yours very affectionately,

J. WESLEY.

Let your correspondents be led by their chosen champions. "Libertas" makes light of apostolic succession, saying the Romanist can make out as good a case. Of course he can. Apostolic succession is one of the hoops of truth that holds the Roman barrel together so long. There is nothing to be gained by denying or holding away truths. Had not the Church of Rome been apostolic in the orders of her priesthood, she would have been gone to decay long ago. Every denomination holds the theory of a succession in the sacred ministry. That is, the people believe that they cannot ordain one another at their pleasure—that the sacred office must be derived from one who holds it himself. Two laymen cannot ordain one another. Where then ought the claim of succession to hang? Where, but upon the apostles, and then the first link would be on the Lord Jesus Himself. The difference in this matter between the Church of England and the religious denominations outside her is—she is from the beginning with apostolic succession; they, the oldest of them, from say 300 years ago without apostolic succession.

Your last week's correspondent pounces down like a fly on a sore place, upon what he took to be a serious grammatical blunder, when it was only a misprint of the word "we" for "men," a mistake easily made, and considering that (being away from home) I saw no proof the letter was singularly free from mistakes. His own letter contains similar errors.

Your previous correspondent complains of me as a disturber of the public peace. If I have given expression to unpleasant truths, it has only been when challenged by such men as himself. He proclaims himself as a man of peace, and then scatters far and wide through the public press the very things he says is calculated to destroy peace. How consistent! How sincere he must be as a peace-maker. There was no need for him to ask his questions in the way he did. I do not think I am so very difficult to approach.

Yours very truly

J. WARD.

SHILOH'S CONSUMPTION CURE.

This is beyond question the most successful Cough Medicine we have ever sold, a few doses invariably cure the worst cases of Cough, Croup, and Bronchitis, while its wonderful success in the cure of Consumption is without a parallel in the history of medicine. Since its first discovery it has been sold on a guarantee, a test which no other medicine can stand. If you have a Cough we earnestly ask you to try it. Price 10cts, 50 cts. and $1.00. If your Lungs are sore, Chest, or Back, Lame, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Sold by Wm. Brown's General Store Markdale.

Blacksmith's Coal now kept by W. J. McFarland. Price low.

There is now about two and a half feet of snow, and everybody is expecting a thaw.

Sir Hugh Allen died in Edinburgh, Scotland, on Saturday, the 9th inst.

ANSWER THIS QUESTION.

Why do so many people we see around us, seem to prefer to suffer and be made miserable by Indigestion, Constipation, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, Coming up of the Food, Yellow Skin, when for 75 cts., we will sell them Shiloh's Vitalizer, guaranteed to cure them. Sold by Wm. Brown's General Store Markdale.

Even the sleigh bells chime "to Doll's for watches and jewellery," and the very winds cry out "he sells cheap."

Messrs. Rowe and Ross have leased Mr. E. Davis' saw mill, (Meaford Road,) and will be prepared in a few days to saw any quantity of logs on shares or by the thousand. They will employ a first-class sawyer, and are determined to do good work and give satisfaction.

A good organ for sale, at a bargain. Apply at this office.

Mr. Arch Speers, jr., of Winnipeg, and Miss Ettie, second daughter of Wm. Dundas, Esq., (Commercial Traveller,) were joined in the holy bands of matrimony yesterday, the 13th. The marriage took place in Christ Church, Rev. J. Ward officiating. There were a large number of friends and well wishers present. The affair throughout was conducted with eclat.

Wm. Lucas & Co, bankers, Markdale have $200,000.00 to loan on real estate. Straight loan system. No fines. Low interest; moderate charges.

Moffat Bros'.

MARKDALE

Foundry!

—AND—

MACHINE WORKS,

MANUFACTURERS OF

MILL MACHINERY,

Steam Engines,

SHAFTING, HANGERS,

Pulleys, &c. Land Rollers,

PLOWS!

And Plow Points

MACHINERY REPAIRING

Done in a practical manner.

We also introduce our new

FAMILY MANGLE!

to the public. This new machine will mangle Linen, Cotton, and Woollen Goods, giving them a beautiful smooth and glossy appearance. It also improves the clothes, whereas hot irons injure them. We also manufacture of various designs for Buildings, Verandahs, &c. Ornamental Cast iron Chains, Pall Pillars, Fencing, Ventilators, Columns, Iron Beams, Gratings for Cellar Windows, &c.

ORNAMENTAL CRESTING

IRON & BRASS CASTINGS

Of Every Description Made to Order.

MOFFAT BROS.

J. W. FORD.

MARKDALE

FLOUR MILLS

Christmas

Headquarters of Santa Claus.

In returning thanks to our numerous customers and the public generally for the liberal patronage bestowed upon us in the past, we desire to announce the opening of our annual stock of Christmas goods which is extensive and well assorted, comprising

Christmas Cards, English and Canadian, China Cups and Saucers, Moustache Cups, Shaving Mugs, Bohemian Vases, Table Sets, Albums, a very large assortment, Card Cases, Work Boxes, Shell Boxes, Writing Desks, Tin Toys, Books, Poems, Bibles, Prayer Books, Book Marks, Picture Books, Dolls,

and a great number of other articles suitable for Christmas and New Year's presents. Wishing you the compliments of the season, we respectfully solicit a continuance of your favors.

Markdale, Dec. 5th, 1882. A. TURNER & CO.

JNO. MONTGOMERY,

BAKER,

Begs to tender his thanks to the inhabitants of Markdale and surrounding country for past patronage, and to intimate to them that he is prepared to supply the public with either plain or iced and ornamented. Also Brides' Cakes got up in the best style that can be done this side of Toronto.

Fruit, Pound and Plum Cake

Bread, Buns and Cakes!

in great variety. All these are manufactured on his own premises by himself, besides Biscuit of every description from the best manufacturers in Ontario.

CHOICEST CONFECTIONERY

in great variety. Tea Meetings, Socials, and other parties supplied on the shortest notice and on the most reasonable terms.

JOHN MONTGOMERY.

Markdale, Nov. 22nd, 1882. 115-3m

W. H. CAMPAIGNE,

LICENSED Auctioneer for the County of Grey. Sales attended in town or country on the shortest notice. Charges reasonable.

Orders left at the STANDARD office will receive prompt attention. 117-3m

ESTRAY.

CAME into the premises of the undersigned, early in September, a Heifer rising two years old. The owner may have it by proving property and paying expenses.

JOHN MERCER,

Lots 109 & 110, E. T. & S. Road.

Artemesia, Dec. 5th, 1882. 117-4t*

Land for Sale.

100 ACRES; about 30 of which is cleared, being composed of the E. half of Lot 10, in the 8th concession of the Township of Euphrasia. Apply at this office, or to ROBERT DUNLOP, Township Clerk of Euphrasia, Griersville P. O. 117-tf.

Just Arrived!

A LARGE STOCK OF

NEW AND FASHIONABTE

DRY GOODS,

Boots and Shoes,

NEW GROCERIES,

At prices which will astonish you. Call and see.

Highest price paid for Butter and Eggs or any kind of Fowl at the CHEAP STORE.

JOHN DOUPE,

Flesherton Station.

Nov. 15th, 1882. 114-3m.

CABINETS

$3 per Dozen.

PANELS

$4 per Doz.

For the Holidays Only

—AT—

J. L. BROWNE'S,

OVER THE STANDARD OFFICE.

MARKDALE MARKETS.

Fall Wheat, $0.83 to $0.85; Spring to $0.93; Barley, 55c; Peas, 69c; Oats, Butter, 20c; Eggs, 22c; Potatoes, 40c; $9.00; Pork, 7.30 to 7.55.

FLESHERTON MARKETS.

Fall Wheat, $0.80 to $0.84; Spring to $0.90; Barley, 55c; Peas, 66c; Oats, Butter, 17c; Eggs, 18c; Potatoes, 40c; $9.00; Pork, $7.00 to $7.50

TORONTO MARKETS.

Fall Wheat, $0.90 to $0.94; Spring, to $0.98; Barley, 56c to 72c; Oats, 41c to Peas, 70c to 74c; Hogs, $7.50 to $7.60; toes, per bag, 75c to 80c; Butter, dairy, to 20c; eggs 23c to 24c.

A. HILL

TAILOR.

Over McFarland's Store

MARKDALE.

Special attention to Cutting.

If you want a Perfect Fit leave your Order with.

A. HILL.

September 20th 1882, 106.

BILLIARD ROOM

D. M. HOGAN, PROPRIETOR.

First class tables. Cigars and temperance drinks to be had. 116-tf.

NOTE LOST.

A NOTE DRAWN IN FAVOR OF JOHN McKenna, Markdale, by Edmund Steer, Harkaway P. O., for $160. Any person having or having the same in their possession will please return it to the undersigned as payment has been made.

EDMUND STEER,

Harkaway P.

November 28th, 1882. 116-4t*

TO SELL OR RENT.

LOT 15, CON. 12, HOLLAND, 4 acres, 100 cleared, good buildings on. Terms easy. Apply to James Lang, Postmaster, near the premises, or to

M. S. KELLOW, Tara P. O.

November 14th, 1882. 11

Health is Wealth

Dr. E. C. WEST'S NERVE AND BRAIN TREATMENT, a guaranteed specific for Hysteria, Dizziness, Convulsions, Fits, Nervous Neuralgia, Headache, Nervous Prostration caused by the use of alcohol or tobacco, Wakefulness, Mental Depression, Softening of the Brain, resulting in Insanity and leading to misery, decay and death, Premature Old Age, Barrenness, Loss of Power in either sex, Involuntary losses and Spermatorrhœa caused by over-exertion of the brain, self-abuse or over-indulgence. One box will cure recent cases. Each box contains one month's treatment. One dollar a box, or six boxes for five dollars; sent by mail prepaid on receipt of price. We guarantee six boxes to cure any case. With each order received by us for six boxes, accompanied with five dollars, we will send the purchaser our written guarantee to refund the money if the treatment does not effect a cure. Guarantees issued only by A. Turner & Co., authorized Agent for Markdale Ont. Jno. C. West & Co. sole proprietor, Toronto, Ont.

ETTER !

—THAN—

NKRUPT STOCKS.

—THE—

,500 SALE

—OF—

CHES, JEWELEERY,
CLOCKS,

ER AND
ELECTRO-PLATED WARE,
Tea Setts, Cruets, Cake Basks, Butter Coolers, Fruit Dishes,
etc., etc., etc.,

INS, ONCERTINAS,
XMAS TOYS, &c.. &c.. &c.

e decided to leave Markdale about the January to go into the wholesale business in Toronto, and will com-

ring Sale on 1st Dec.

FOR 30 DAYS.

ese Goods will be sold at and under This is a genuine sale as I am obliged to reduce my stock.

e engaged the services of a practical aker to take charge of the business
1st of January.

W. F. DOLL.

Local Items

F. Knight, dentist surgeon, will Markdale the last Tuesday in ry; will not be here in Decemkdale Presbyterian Sabbath ol Anniversary will take place in rn Hall, on Wednesday, the ere is an abundance of snow now.

parties who promised to bring od in payment of their subscrips soon as their was sleighing, lease put in an appearance.

RKSHIRE BOAR.—Mr. C. Little-
, living two miles south of Mark-has a fine bred Berkshire boar rnce on his farm this season. 75 ash, $1 if not so paid. 118-122

ve you a friend in some distant who you know would like to see cal paper weekly? If so send TANDARD as a "Christmas box."
ill forward it to the end of 1883
r address for $1, free of postage.
is what many are now doing.

EFUL AND ORNAMENTAL.—Our es-ed townsman Mr. Wm. Lucas a beautiful wire railing erected on ounter in his bank here last week.
two feet high and of a handsome n, and adds very much to the arance of the interior of the bank. s manufactured by E. T. Bar-Detroit, Mich.

r. J. L. Brown, our Artist, has tly executed some fine specimens inting in scenery, which may be in his gallery over the STANDARD
e. He has also purchased a new e at a cost of $150 and is now in sition to take photographs life
We bespeak for Mr. Brown the ss which his energy and skill de-
.

r. John Hutchinson, of the 7th Euphrasia, had three head of e, three years old, which strayed about the 1st September—a steer heifer, dark grey, and a white
r. Any party harbouring them ut giving the necessary notice be prosecuted according to law.
is advertisement in another col-of this paper.

E LOCAL PAPER FOR CHILDREN.— al districts where literature is e, there is perhaps nothing that give the youth a taste for reading adily as the local newspaper.
ers say that children who have l paper at their homes are more igent and make advancement readily than those who are del of such help. Mr. Thibaudeau n of more than ordinary common e and clear intelect) says that the paper is worth half as much to mily as the public school. He l not have his family without it should cost $20.00 per year, t there are families who do not a local paper.

BUCKLEN'S ARNICA SALVE.

e best salve in the world for Cuts,
s, Sores, Ulcers, Salt Rheum, Fever
, Tetter, Chapped Hands, Chilblains, and all Skin Eruptins, and Positively Piles. It is guaranteed to give perfect ction, or money refunded. Price 25 per box. For sale by A. Turner & Co.

Doll's Xmas Cards are selling fast.

Bargains in Tweeds at R. J. Sproule's, Flesherton.

Markdale Methodist tea-meeting in the church on Christmas Day.

A fine stock of Felt Overshoes just arrived at R. J. Sproule's, Flesherton.

R. J. Sproule, Flesherton. has a fine display of Holiday Goods. See them.

Mr. James Lauder, of Glenelg, has purchased a valuable thoroughbred bull.

Christ Church S. S. Christmas tree in Dufferin Hall, on Wednesday, the 27th.

Fresh arrivals of nuts and candies, of the best quality and great variety, at Montgomery's bakery.

A Tea-meeting will be held in the Methodist church, Williamsford, on Friday evening, the 15th.

Presbyterian Church opening on Sunday, the 31st Tea-meeting on Monday,(New Year's Day.)

A GREAT TREAT.—To see W. F. Doll's immense stock of silver and electro-plated ware in tea sets, cake baskets,just arrived Anniversary sermons in the Walter's Falls Methodist Church, on Sunday the 24th, and tea-meeting the following day, Christmas.

Loyal Markdale Lodge of C.O.O.F. No. 78. will meet in their hall on Tuesday evening, Dec. 26th, at eight o'clock, when business of importance will be transacted. A full attendance of members is requested.—WM. L. YOUNG, Sec.

DIED IN MANITOBA.—We regret to announce the death of Samuel Allen, son of Mr. James Allen, of Glenelg. The deceased was in Brandon and his father has telegraphed to have the body sent home for interment.—Durham Chronicle.

We have lost a good citizen in the person of Mr. Hall, he having removed last week to Dundalk. He will be very greatly missed in the various departments of church work, being a valuable and consistent member of the Methodist Church. We sincerely wish he may abundantly succeed in his new enterprise—editor and proprietor of the Dunkalk HERALD.

There is as yet little said in regard to municipal affairs in Glenelg. Our respected Reeve will no doubt be re-elected by acclamation. Our esteemed and highly respected citizen Mr. Mullarkey wil likely have opposition, but the chances of defeating him are (we think) exceedingly slim; he defeated the strongest man in the Township last year, and is even more popular now. Many names are mentioned as candidates for councillor. Mr. Neil will no doubt be one of the victors.

FREE OF CHARGE.

All persons suffering from Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis Loss of Voice or any affection of the Throat and Lungs, are requested to call at A. Turner & Co's Drug Store and get a Trial Bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, free of charge, which will convince them of its wonderful Merits and show what a regular dollar-size bottle will do. Call early.

THE A. O. U. W. CONCERT.—Where there is a will there is a way. Notwithstanding the blizzard which raged on Thursday and Friday blocking up streets and roads and making it almost impossible to move out, there was a good attendence at the concert on Friday evening. The Scottish Concert troup, (who gave an entertainment the evening previous and which was a partial failure owing to the storm) joined the Workmen's concert and rendered valuable assistance. Several of the parties from a distance whose names appeared on the list were unable to attend; however a rich and well sustained programme was gone through with. Mr. Sawers is a beautiful singer, and his efforts were highly appreciated. W. J. Speers arrived late in the evening and his very appearance arroused the mirthful propensities of the entire audience; neither were they disappointed in their expectations, as he brought down the house every time he appeared on the platform in Irish and Dutch characters. The various performers acquited themselves creditably, and all appeared highly pleased with the entertainment.

DO NOT BE DECEIVED.

In these times of quack medicine advertisements everywhere, it is truly gratifying to find one remedy that is worthy of praise and which really does as recommended. Electric Bitters we will do as recommended. They invariably cure Stomach and Liver Complaints. Diseases of the Kidneys and Urinary difficulties. We know whereof we speak, and can readily say, give them a trial. Sold at fifty cents a bottle, by A. Turner & Co.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.

The advertiser, having been permanently cured of that dread disease, Consumption, by a simple remedy, is anxious to make known to his fellow sufferers the means of cure. To all who desire it, he will send a copy of the prescription used, (free of charge,) with he directions for prepairing and using the same which they will find a SURE CURE for CONSUMPTION, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, &c.

Parties wishing the Prescription, will please address, Rev. E. A, Wilson, 149 Penn at.. Williamsburgh, N. Y. 75-127

AGENTS WANTED.—Big pay.—Light Work. Steady Employment. Samples free. Address, M. L. BYRN, 46 Nassau stree New York. 20

VALUABLE PROPERTY

FOR SALE

IN THE TOWN OF DURHAM, IN THE COUNTY OF GREY.

THE following valuable town properties will be sold on reasonable terms or will be rented for a term of years, or exchange for farm propeoty.

1st,

Lot No. 1 on the west side of Garafraxa street and south of Hunter street, opposite Mr. J. H. Hunter's store house, well fenced and first class frame buildings, good cellars, hard and soft water, a most conveniant residence and would make a good business stand.

2nd,

That most desirable property being park lots Nos. 2 and 3 on the north side of George st., 8 acres more or less, well fenced, front fenced with pickets, one and a half acres of a thriving young orchard and very convenient to the railway station.

The east half of the west half on lot 18 on the west side of countess street with a new frame house and kitchen, good stable and wood shed, well fenced, front fence painted white, hard and soft water on the premises.

4th,

Park Lot No. 8, Wm. Hunter's, Survey.

5th

Lots 1 and 2, Presbyterian Survey.

6th,

Lot No 15 on the North side of Mill street in the village of Markdale close to the railway station, with good frame house thereon. If the above properties are sold the very best title will be given free from all encumbrances.

—Also the—

Following Farming Properties.

will be sold on reasonable terms of payment.

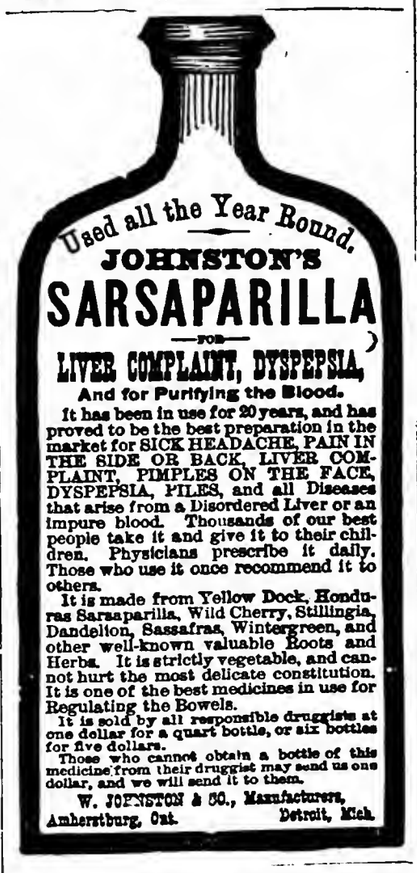
7th,

Lot No. 22, Con. 9 Glenelg, 100 acres more or less, 3½ miles from the T. G. & B. R. at Markdale, 75 acres cleared, a new frame house and two log barns.

8th

Lot No. 93 in the 3rd Con. W. T. & S. R., Glenelg. 50 acres, about 45 acres cleared and good log buildings, about 2½ miles from Markdale station T. G. & B. R.

9th,



The west half lot 17, Con. 4. N. D. R., Glenelg. 50 acres 40 acres cleared, good rough cast house and orchard on the premises. The house and one acre will be reserved during the life of the occupants who are now between 80 and 85 years of age.

10th

East part lot No. 1. con 2 Normanby, 63 acres, about 50 acres cleared, situation about 2 miles from the town of Durham. For further particulars apply to

FINLEY MACRAE, Durham.

Dated 15th August. 1882. tf 104,

Mothers! Mothers! Mothers!

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the excruciating pain of cutting teeth! If so go at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately—depend upon it; there is no mistake about it. There is not a mother upon earth who has ever used it, who will not tell you at once that it will regulate the bowels, and give rest to the mother, and relief and health to the child, operating like magic. It is perfectly safe to use in all cases, and pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Sold everywhere at 25 cents a bottle. 75-127

Re-Fresh-ing

In the cool assertion of some people that they can sell below cost, &c, it may not be amiss to let the public of Markdale and surrounding country know that

Wilson Benson,

of the "BELFAST HOUSE." MARKDALE, can sell "cheaper than the cheapest," and "better than the best," all kinds of

Groceries, Liquors, &c.

Consisting of

TEAS, TOBACCOS, SPICES, CANNED FISH, ETC.,

And for those wishing pure Wine for sacramental purposes, will find a brand that will equal anything on this side the Atlantic.

Other Liquors equally pure.

SPECIAL! Pure Holland Gin.

Cheese from the best manufactories.

Our Whiskies are from the firm of Gooderham & Worts, Toronto, and the public may rely on receiving them as they are sent.

FLOUR, POTATOES, and everything in the household line kept constantly on hand.

Henceforth my Store will be supplied with Fruits of all kinds, such as

APPLES. PEARS, PLUMS, &c.

FRUIT CAKES of all kinds always kept on hand.

Essences, Hair Oils, and Perfumery of the choicest nectars.

TOILET & FANCY SOAPS, better than the best.

CANADIAN & WESTERN PORK, of first quality.

Everything in the Grocery Line kept on a fuller and more complete scale than at any other place in Markdale.

WILSON BENSON.

PIMPLES.

I will mail (Free) the recipe for a simple VEGETABLE BALM that will remove TAN-FRECKLES, PIMPLES and BLOTCHES, leaving the skin soft, clear and beautiful; also instructions for producing a luxuriant growth of hair on a bald head or smooth face. Address, enclosing a 3c. stamp, Ben. Vandelf & Co., 5 Beekman st.. N. Y. 75-127

ERRORS OF YOUTH.

A GENTLEMAN who suffered for years from NERVOUS DEBILITY, PREMATURE DECAY, and all the effects of youthful indiscretion will, for the sake of suffering humanity, send free to all who need it, the recipe and directions for making the simple remedy by which he was cured. Sufferers wishing to profit by the advertiser's experience can do so by addressing in perfect confidence, JOHN B. OGDEN,
75-127 42 Cedar St.. New York.

Gold Great chance to make money. Those who always take advantage of the good chances for making money that are offered, generally become wealthy, while those who do not improve such chances remain in poverty. We want many men, women, boys and girls to work for us right in their own localities. Any one can do the work properly from the first start. The business will pay more than ten times ordinary wages. Expensive outfit furnished free. No one who engages fails to make money rapidly You can devote your whole time in the work, or only your spare moments. Full information and all that is needed sent free. Addres, STINSON & Co., Portland Maine. 71-126

MANHOOD

HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED

SEAL We have recently published a new edition of Dr. CULVERWELL'S CELEBRATED ESSAY on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, &c., resulting from excesses.

☞ Price, in sealed envelope, only 6 cents, or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

☞ This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Address

The Culverwell Medical Co,.

P.O. box 450 41 Ann St., New York

$500 Reward !

We will pay the above reward for any case of Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Indigestion. Constipation or Costiveness we cannot cure with West's Vegetable Liver Pills, when the directions are strictly complied with. They are purely Vegetable, and never fail to give satisfaction. Sugar Coated, Large Boxes, containing 30 Pills, 25 cts. For sale by all Druggists. Beware of counterfeits and immitations. The genuine manufactured only by JOHN C. WEST & CO., "The Pill Makers," 81 & 83 King St. East, Toronto. Ont. Free trial package sent by mail prepaid on receipt of a 3 cent stamp. For sale at Turner &Co. Drug Store.

STRAYED

FROM THE PREMISES OF THE UNdersigned Lot 3, Con. 7, Euphrasia, about the last of August, one Steer and one Heifer, dark grey, and one Heifer white, all rising two years old. Any person giving such information as will lead to their recovery will be suitably rewarded.

JOHN HUTCHINSON,
118-3w* Vandeleur P. O.

Teacher Wanted

FOR S. S. No. 3, Holland and Euphrasia. Duties to commence the 2nd day of January, 1883 Apply, stating salary, to ALEX. MURDOCK, Sec'y.

115-4w. Harkway P. O.

MARKDALE Meat Market.

A constant supply of

Fresh Meats !

on hand, at the

Lowest Living Prices.

Orders solicited, and delivered free to all parts of the Town.

Farmers having fat stock to dispose of, will please leave their addresses.

TERMS, STRICTLY CASH.

FRED. SARJEANT.

Markdale, March 23, 1882. 80-ly

SEEING IS BELIEVING.

GENTLEMEN,—

If you want a first-class

Buggie or Wagon

call at

MCKENNA & MASON'S

CARRIAGE WORKS MARKDALE.

They can supply you with anything from a

Lumber Wagon

up to

Extension Top Phæton.

To buy from them is to

SAVE MONEY!

They are both practical workmen, and employ none but

PRACTICAL WORKMEN.

They guarantee their work Second to none for Lightness of Draught and Superiority of Finish.

They use nothing but First-class White Oak for Wagons, and thrice Extra Second Growth Hickory for light work.

The immense amount of work turned out of McKenna & Mason's shop is sufficient proof of the wide reputation they enjoy for doing good work.

THE BEST IS THE CHEAPEST IN THE END

Poor cheap work we positively will not take.

Special attention given to Re-Trimming and Repainting all classes of Carriage Work.

Satisfaction guaranteed (or No Pay) in

HORSESHOEING

SHOP—On Mill Street opposite to Sproule's Hotel.

McKENNA & MASON.

THOS. MATHEWS,

HarnesS EstabLishmenT !

MARKDALE.

EVERYTHING IN OUR LINE KEPT ON HAND OR MADE TO ORDER ON SHORT NOTICE.

LIVERY!

IN CONNECTION.

GEORGE WILSON,

Wholesale and Retail

BUTCHER!

BEEF, PORK OR MUTTON SUPPLIED, from a single pound to a whole carcass, at the lowest market prices.

FISH & FOWL IN THEIR SEASON

Farmers having Fat Cattle, Sheep, or Pigs to dispose of will do well to call at No. 3 Burns' Block, opposite the new Union Block.

Markdale, Oct. 25th, 1881

Nothing Like Leather..

M. M. M'LEOD,

MARKDALE.

NOT TO BE BEATEN !!

All those who may have had the misfortune to have been born barefooted will bear in mind that we have just received the largest and best stock of leather ever before brought into Markdale, consisting of Spanish Sole, French Kip and Calf, and are now prepared to manufacture Ladies, Gents, Youths and Misses boots and shoes, from the stoga to the finest kid and pruncila.

Sewed Work a Specialty.

All work warranted. Invisible patching also done here.

M. M. M'LEOD.

Markdale, Sept. 19th, 1881.

Her Majesty and the Troops.

Distribution of Egyptian Medals at Windsor Castle—Speech by the Queen.

Striking Scenes Within the Famous Quadrangle.

A broad gleam of wintry sunshine flooded all parts of the quadrangle in the upper ward of Windsor castle, except that side on which are the Queen's private apartments, so that the tent or porch-like pavilion, erected in the south east corner, just below the projecting window of her Majesty's breakfast-room was left in cold shadow throughout the impressive and memorable ceremony, which lasted from half-past twelve o'clock till twenty minutes past one on the 21st ult., says the London Telegraph. Some little time before the hour of noon had sounded the spacious enclosure began to fill with a gradually increasing throng, three-fourths of whom at least were in uniform. This part of the castle pertains to the site added by Edward III., and it is surrounded by the rooms, whether of State or of private habitation, occupied by royalty. Sir Jeffrey Wyattville's handiwork, which has altered so much of Windsor castle, not even excluding its ancient keep, is seen nobly in the the worthy knight having remodelled this together with the whole exterior of the buildings in the Upper Ward, raising them a storey higher, and bringing them into a palatial uniformity of character. Though not open to the public the quadrangle may be very well seen from the passage at the western end, behind the equestrian statue of Charles II. This mediocre piece of sculpture was presented to the sovereign whom it commemorates by Toby Rustate, a page of the back stairs, who is described by Evelyn as "a very simple, ignorant, but honest and loyal creature," and who gave a thousand pounds for the work to Josias Ibach Stada. "The man and horse," says Walpole, "may serve for a sign to draw the passenger's eye to the pedestal." This, indeed, is an exquisite piece of floral carving, by the famous Grinling Gibbons. On the north side of the quadrangle is the State entrance, with its boldly projecting carriage-porch, beneath which, till called upon to join in yesterday's ceremony, stood the native officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of the Indian contingent. The guard chamber is over this portico, and at the windows were gathered many spectators of the scene. It was on this side of the ground that all spectators admitted by card were stationed on the broad-flagged footway. Opposite, on the south side, near George IV.'s gateway, which, flanked on either hand by the York and Lancaster towers, commands a full view of the Long Walk from end to end, were placed the bands of the Household brigades, the cavalry being dismounted. Across the ground, from north to south, a guard of honor, composed of three companies of the 1st Battalion Coldstream Guards, under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Bertie, with Captain Fortescue and Lieutenant Sir H. Mulder, stood in open order, having the band on their right.

QUASI-GOTHIC ARCHITECTURE OF THE QUADRANGLE.

Preparations for the ceremony which was soon to come were thus far complete while yet the greater number of those who were to take prominent part in it were in the midst of their journey from town. The half-past ten train was divided into two parts, one ordinary and the other special. This last conveyed the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, Sir Garnet Wolseley, and about eighty or ninety officers, whose assembly on the main down-platform had been watched with keen interest by a crowd of ladies and gentlemen admitted within the barriers, and by a much larger gathering who looked on from a more removed situation. Among the who exchanged greetings and chatted in groups before entering the train were Sir John Adye, who was accompanied by his son; General Willis, Macpherson, Sir Edward Hamley, Sir Evelyn Wood, and Sir John Carstairs McNeil, Admirals Sir Anthony Hoskins, Sir W. Dowell, and Sir Baldwin Sullivan; Captain Rawson, R. N., and Captain D'Arcy Irvine, R. N. A figure in plain clothes, who attracted much notice, was the imprisoned mid-shipman, Mr. De Cosse, whose sufferings and anxieties in captivity have left no traces of baneful effect on his constitution. The special train, having started punctually, made a rapid run to Windsor, and the brilliant company of travellers on alighting found a large crowd assembled in the station yard to greet their arrival. The town was gaily decorated, and in the bright sunshine looked as smilingly as on any of the eventful occasions which from time to time enliven the Royal borough. Additional brightness of color had been given to the streets by the many uniforms brought down by earlier trains; and the popularity of the Blues, the 2nd Life Guards, and the Brigade of Foot Guards, was agreeably demonstrated by the welcome which was everywhere accorded to the men as they passed through the crowded thoroughfares. Even more enthusiastic, perhaps, because the occasion was less familiar, were the cheers that broke forth as the squads of Blue-jackets marched up the hill. About eleven o'clock the Duke and Duchess of Albany, who had travelled on the South-Western line, entered Windsor, and were loudly cheered as they drove in an open carriage to the castle followed by the Duke and Duchess of Teck. Immediately after came the Indian Contingent, in private omnibuses and carriages. The Duke of Albany wore his full uniform of Colonel of the Seaforth Highlanders; while the Duke of Teck was in the uniform of the 1st Surrey Volunteers.

MOST READILY RECOGNIZABLE OFFICERS

Half-past twelve had chimed when the Royal Pavilion began to fill with the Princes and Princesses of the Royal family and their several suites, her Majesty soon afterwards appearing in front, with the Prince and Princess of Wales on her left hand. Mr. Childers, Secretary of State for War; the Earl of Northbrook, First Lord of the Admiralty; and the Marquis of Hartington, Secretary of State for the Indian Department, stood on the right hand of the dias, and bowed low as the Queen approached.

HER MAJESTY,

who looked remarkably well, wore over a black dress, which, besides the orders and decorations, was ornamented with a bow of white ribbon, a long black velvet mantle, trimmed with fur. In the pavilion, besides the Prince and Princess of Wales, were the Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh, the Duke of Albany, Princess Beatrice, the Duke of Cambridge, the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, the Grand Duke Louis of Hesse, and Prince and Princess Christian. The suite in attendance included General Sir H. F. Ponsonby, the Dowager Duchess of Roxburghe, the Dowager Marchioness of Ely, Major-General Du Plat, Sir John Cowell, Captain Bigge, Colonel Sir J. C. McNeill, Colonel Ellis, Colonel Gordon, Major Egerton, General Sir Dighton Probyn, and the Hon. A. Yorke. As the Queen came forward, the guard of honor, having advanced nearer towards the dais, saluted, and the band played "God Save the Queen."

HER MAJESTY THEN ADDRESSED THE TROOPS

in a voice so clearly audible and so perfectly modulated that some of the words were heard on the opposite side of the ground, and in particular the sentence, "I am proud of my soldiers and sailors," fell on the listening ears of some who could not have expected, at so great a distance, to distinguish a single syllable of the Royal address, which was as follows:—"I have summoned you here today to confer upon you the well-earned medals commemorative of the short and brilliant, although arduous, campaign, in which all have done their duty well and with courageous and unceasing devotion. Tell your comrades that I thank them heartily for the gallant services they have rendered to their Queen and country, and that I am proud of my soldiers and sailors, who have added fresh glories to the victories won by their predecessors."

The three lines of officers and men retired at the close of this gracious and earnest address; and wheeling to the right, and leaving her Majest facing only the commander of the expeditionary force, they stood in order to file before the pavilion, the band of the 2nd Life Guards playing "See the Conquering Hero Comes," as an appropriate prelude to the ceremony. Handel's march of honor was still resounding through the wide space, and bearing to many hearers beyond its boundary a signal of the chief incident, when the first medal of the day was pinned to the breast of adding fresh lustre to a long row of similar honors. A moment or two afterwards came Vice-Admiral Sir W. Dowell, leading the Blue-jackets. Other naval officers at the head of the Naval Brigade were; Admiral Sir Francis Sullivan, Admiral Sir A. Hoskins, Capt. Rawson, Capt. D'Arcy Irvine, and Mr. de Chair. The Marines brought up the naval division, whose members were introduced severally by Admiral Hoskings, while Lord Northbrook handed the medals. Some of these her Majesty pinned on the breasts of the recipients, this process being relieved of its former tedious difficulty by an ingenious though simple appliance which quickly attaches the ribbon to the cloth. But only in the case of those who have received the clasp for Tel-el-Kebir did the Queen affix the medal. Some five or six to one took it simply from her Majesty's hand—this being a great, though not the greatest honor—and afterwards attached it on their breasts.

SIR GARNET WOLSELEY,

THE DECORATION,

which is suspended by a ribbon striped vertically with alternate white and blue, bears her Majesty's profile in frosted silver, with the folds of a veil drooping from a diadem over the back of the head. On the obverse of the medal is a sphinx, the emblem of Egypt. When the small contingent of the Naval Brigade had gone by, and the turn of the army had come, Mr. Childers was the introducer, while Sir Garnet Wolseley took up the task of handing the medals to her Majesty from a small table in front of the dais. Sir John Adye was first to present himself; and when the Queen had affixed the medal, the Prince of Wales, who wore the uniform of a general with the blue ribbon of the Garter, heartily shook hands with the distinguished chief of the staff. This act, accompanied with fitting congratulations, his Royal Highness repeated in several cases during the ceremony. Generals Willis and Sir E. Hamley, commanders of the First and Second Division of Infantry in Egypt, followed Sir John Adye. Then came the Duke of Connaught; and when he had stepped up to the dais, and had saluted his Royal mother in military form, the Queen, in pinning the medal to his breast, leaned forward and

AFFECTIONATELY KISSED HIM.

The moment must have been a proud and happy one on either part; and as a tender episode in a ceremony graciously formal in its general character, the action had a deep interest for all beholders. The Duke of Connaught was followed by three heroes of the Victoria Cross, Major-General Macpherson, Major-General Sir Evelyn Wood, and Sir John Carstairs McNeill, the last named of whom, like the Duke of Teck, who followed a few minutes later, had the honour of kissing hands with the Queen. The succeeding group of officers included Colonel Butler, Sir Oriel Tanner—who wore the green tunic and red pantaloons of the Belooches—Major FitzGeorge, and Colonel Tulloch. This officer will be remembered as having performed the gallant act of swimming ashore with the party at Alexandria to spike the guns, and is the only man in the army with the clasps both for bombardment and for the battle of Tel-el-Kebir.

THE INDIAN CONTINGENT, who had remained under the porch of the State entrance till the ceremony had begun, but who had now joined the body came last, being led by Colonel Pennington and Captain M'Bay. Each of the Orientals, whose appearance on this memorable scene confirmed the favourable opinion of their soldierly bearing, was in turn presented by the Marquis of Hartington; and her Majesty fastened on the medal in every case, touching the hilt of each native officer's sword before the salute was given. The order in which the Indian warriors came forward to receive from the Empress of India the reward of their loyal services were as follows:—2nd Bengal Lancers, 7th Bengal Infantry, 10th Punjaub, and 29th Belooches. It was noticed as a concluding incident of the day's interesting ceremony, that the first officer of the Indian Contingent came forward to receive his medal as the first gun of the Royal salute was fired. At the close of the distribution to the British troops Baron von Hagenan, the Prussian military attache to the expeditionary force, had the honour of an introduction to the Queen, and was decorated with the medal. With the conclusion of the interesting ceremony, her Majesty, with the Royal Princes and Princesses, retired from the Quadrangle, the band again playing the National Anthem, and everyone saluting.

The Pestered Man of Earth.

As if the actual suffering of mankind from the various diseases common to the lot of all was not sufficient, the Hahnemannian Monthly, of Philadelphia, enumerates the following possible cause for many mysterious complaints which baffle the skill of the most experienced physicians to cure, and enough in number to frighten a well person into a nervous fever: Commencing at the mouth, the virulence of human saliva seems to have been proved. It is supposed to be due to micrococci. The human mouth is a culture chamber, which is maintained at a constant temperature, and is furnished with a constant supply of pabulum, namely, saliva. These circumstances are highly favorable to the sustenance and multiplication of the micrococcus. If, now, it is asked why every man does not suffer from auto-inoculation, it may be answered that micrococci may kill an herbivorous animal, a rabbit, for instance but cannot destroy a carnivorous or omnivorous animal as man. (See Philadelphia Medical Times September 9, 1882.) Most earnestly do we urge vegeterians to take timely warning! But what is to become of the genus homo, anyhow? Vibriones tickle his nose into hay fever, the Bacillus typhosus gnaws at his bowels, the micrococcus diphtheria swells up his throat or clogs his larynx with fatal croup, sarcinæ invade his stomach and micrococcus envenom his saliva. If he eats a bunch of grapes, he must needs crunch the parasitic saccharomyces adhering to the skins; and if he inadvertently exposes the contents of his pantry to the open air, a blue green mould from the Penicillium glaucum spreads itself over the best preserves; bubbles line the glass jars, and wriggling organisms and motionless forms looking like beads on a string, sour his milk. The greed of the yeast plant for oxygen is the cause of the raising of his bread, and the same craving on the part of the Mycoderma vini, supplies him with wine. But if he does not carefully watch these results of fermentation mould gathers on one, and the other falls a victim to the spores of the viscous ferment and becomes thick, ropy, and unpalatable.

If he indulges in pork, trichinæ nestle cosily in his tissues, or the Cysticercus cellulosus develops into twenty feet of tænia to the discomfort of his alimentary canal. In infancy and childhood, thread worms and lumbricoides disturb his sleep and torture him with colicky pains. Disease germs expose him to whooping cough and mumps, and threaten him with a long line of exanthemata; and when, the gauntlet run, he comes into youth, that fell destroyer consumption, fed, if Kock is to be believed, by bacilli, leaves him but six out of seven chances of ever reaching the period of maturity.

If, by good fortune, he escapes this danger, others meet him at every step. Through the parsimony and dishonesty of city officials, streets are filthy and sewers are imperfect. If he flies to the country, perchance a dry summer and an open winter permit the generation of miasmata. And even if he seeks the salubrious atmosphere of a sea resort, defective sanitation poisons his bedroom or permits the discharges from a drain to empty a few yards from his bathing place.

And finally, when he falls a victim to disease fungi, or, happily escaping them, dies of good old age, his mortal remains are no sooner consigned to the grave than a host of maggots and kindred scavengers complete the work of devastation, and thus does the man of earth become converted into the numerous bodies of his numerous destroyers.

The Home of Our Childhood.

Does anybody know what has become of the jolly old fashioned times that used to belong to our lives? They are missing, and we cannot find them. The days when the mention of Thank-giving meant joy, and gladness, and reunion, and merry feasting; when all the members of the family assembled around the pleasant board, and the great fire burned cheerfully in the great fireplace. How the brightly polished brass andirons caught the ruddy reflections of the blaze and danced around like gold fairies. Does anybody remember such a fireplace? The hearth was of freshly painted red brick, and the mantel was high beyond the reach of the children. The brass candlesticks turned up in a row, and the almanac hung at one end. The shovel and tongs had their separate corner, and there was a crane in the back of the fire-place, where the teakettle used sometimes to sing like a nightingale. Whey are they gone?

There was a pantry, too (have you seen it?) with a smell of cheese, mince pie, dough nuts, and a tempting display of jars tied up with white cloths. There was one not so tightly tied as the rest, and naughty hands would reach after the peach preserves sometimes. Anybody know where all those pantries have gone? There were two old rocking chairs with cushions pieced up from scraps of dresses. The paint was worn from the arms, and they tipped over if you rocked too far back, but we wish they could be found.

There was a kitchen, too. It went away with all the rest. A sweet kitchen, where there was always a smell of good dinners, a spicy and aromatic odor of garden herbs. No tea or coffee has ever been found since with such a delicious aroma. There are thousands of great residences, with every modern appliance for comfort, where they have state dinners with no end of pomp and show and style, where the china is costly and the epergnes are of cut glass and silver and the wines are costly.

They are splendid, but somehow, to-day, we want the old log house. There are echoes which come down from its smoky rafters, and they fall upon the heart with a mingled feeling of pleasure and pain. There are voices, and footsteps, and laughter, and songs, and the patter of baby feet all mingled in the echoes. Sounds that we shall never hear again save in the mystic hall of memory. Reader, you know of such a house, and you can tell why the mention of holidays brings a nameless longing to look once more into the old empty rooms once so thronging with life.

SCIENTIFIC GOSSIP.

Germany is to give $25,000 for scientific exploration in Africa and other countries during the financial year 1883-4.

This is the receipt for agate glass; Ten parts of broken glass are melted, and to it are added 15 part suboxide of chromium and of manganese, .02 part each of oxide of cobalt and nitrate of silver, .01 of uranium, .4 red argols, and .3 part bone-meal. Each oxide is added separately and at intervals of ten minutes. After heating the mixture for an hour .3 or .4 part of fine soot is put in.

Regarding the new ordnance which of late years has been introduced into Great Britain, a correspondent of Nature writes: "In the autumn of 1841 Sir H. Gough took the batteries of Chusan by a turning movement and thus spoiled the Chinese preparations. The force captured a large number of guns, some very fine bronze ones, but there were also a good many smaller iron ones, and as these were of no value they were ordered to be destroyed. The Royal Artillery tried to burst these without success at first, and only after sinking the muzzles in the ground did they succeed. It was then ascertained that the reason of the extreme strength of this kind of gun arose from the strange manufacture. It had an inner tube of wrought iron over which the gun was cast, anticipating by many years a somewhat similar plan of Palliser."

Dr. C. W. Siemens believes that the present contest between gas and electricity will end in the latter winning the day as the light of luxury; but that gas will nevertheless find an increasing application for the more humble purpose of society. He strongly argues again the use of gas as the cheapest form of fuel for towns, and of making a general supply of heating gas besides illuminating gas, by collecting each into separate holders while the process of distillation is going on. The result would, he says, be this: 1. Lighting gas would have a higher illuminating power. 2. There would be no coal to distribute or ashes to collect over town. 3. The smoke nuisance would be abated. 4. There would be a large increase of those valuable by-products—tar, coke, ammonia, &c.—the annual value of which already exceeds by nearly $15,000,000 that of the coal consumed in the gas-works.

Some correspondence has occurred in La Nature with regard to a statement by de Bronardeli that a girl, who lately committed suicide by jumping from one of the towers of Notre Dame, had probably died from asphyxia caused by the rapid fall. The criticisms have thus been summarized: M. Bontemps points out that the depth of fall having been 66 metres, the velocity required in the time (less than four seconds) cannot have been so great as that sometimes attained on railways; yet we never hear of the asphyxiation of engine-drivers and stokers. He considered it desirable that the idea in question should be exploded, as unhappy persons may be led to choose suicide by a fall from a height under a notion that they will die before reaching the ground. Again, M. Gossin mentions that a few years ago a man threw himself from the top of the Column of July and fell on an awning which sheltered workmen at the pedestal. He suffered only a few contusions. M. Reny says he had seen an Englishman leap from a height of 31 metres into a deep river uninjured; and he was shown, in 1852, in the Island of Oahu, by missionaries, a native who had fallen from a verified height of more than 200 metres, and his fall having been broken near the end by a growth of ferns and other plants, he had only a few wounds. When asked as to his sensation in falling, he said he only felt dazzled.

NEWS FROM THE ROCKIES.

Gold Found in the Kicking Horse Pass—Trouble Between the Blackfeet and Cree Indians—Calgarry Booming.

The saw mill at Calgarry has shut down for want of logs.

It is expected that provisions will be scarce during the winter.

The South Piegan Indians are killing cattle in the vicinity of the Marias.

Pincher Creek is much inconvenienced by the lack of a regular mail service and proper means for distributing at that point.

The Wood-Turner ranche on Willow Creek has been fenced with wire, and is now quite a respectable piece of property.

Sergt.-Major T. Lake, of the N. W. M. P. Calgarry, arrived with Mr. Williams. He is on his way to Canada to recruit men for the police.

A. P. Patrick sent thirty one head of horses up to his ranche on the Bow River; one of the horses was either lost or stolen from the band.

The snow is very deep still between High river and Calgarry, and probably will remain all winter. Travelling is good from High river to Macleod.

Joseph McFarland has about finished his threshing. He has 2,000 bushels of grain, of which 250 bushels is wheat. The number of acres sown was about eighty.

Calgarry is reported as booming. New houses spring up constantly. A man goes to bed at night and when he gets up in the morning, lo, a mansion, the creation of a night, stares him in the face.

It is reported that rich gold and silver bearing quartz has been struck in the Kicking-Horse pass, in the Selkirk range. Specimens have assayed $90 to the ton. Great excitement prevails at Kootenai.

The Blackfeet Indians at the Crossing have been set afoot by the Crees. The thieves dropped all the poor horses at the Pile of Stones (not bones). The Blackfeet intended to start on the trail of the Crees, and make a raid on their horses, as soon as Crowfoot returned from Macleod.

The police ball at Calgarry was a grand success. The wealth, beauty and fashion of the place were there. The barrack-room was handsomely decorated, one in particular being a motto formed of polished Winchester cartridges. Another pretty and appropriate one was a seven-pound gun with the union jack on one side and the stars and stripes on the other.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN

The most successful

ever discovered, as it is certain in and does not blister. READ PROOF

Kendall's Spavin

HAMILTON, Mo., June

B. J. KENDALL & Co.—Gents: to certify that I have used Kendall's Cure, and have found it to be all recommended to be and in fact I have removed by using the above Bone Spavins, Ring-bone, Splint cheerfully testify and recommend the best thing for any bony substance ever used, and have tried many made that my study for years.

Respectfully yours,
P. V.

FROM

Col. T. L. Fos

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, Mar

DR B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gent very valuable Hambletonian colt very highly, he had a large bone one joint and a small one on the o made him very lame; I had him charge of two veterinary surgeons ed to cure him. I was one day advertisement of Kendall's Spavin the Chicago Express. I determine to try it, and got our druggist for it, they ordered three bottles; all and thought I would give it a trial, I used it according to direction forth day the colt ceased to be the lumps have disappeared. I used bottle and the colt's limbs are as lumps and as smooth as any horse state. He is entirely cured. The so remarkable that I let two of my have the remaining two bottles using it.

Very respectfully,
L. T. FOS

Kendall's Spavin

WINGHAM, Ont., Jan. 1

DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents: to certify that I have used Kendall's Cure, bought from C. E. Williams, Wingham, Ont., and do without pronounce it to be an invaluable the cure of Spavins, Ringbones, or used it on a bone spavin of seven growth which it completely remov can safely say it will remove any Curb or Ringbone it properly used. also recommended friends to use done so with perfect success. I this public, and will answer any letters sent me.

Yours &c.
GEORGE

Kendall's Spavin

ON HUMAN FLESH

WEST ENOSBURGH, Vt., Feb.

DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents: months ago I injured my knee caused an enlargement to grow the size of a walnut and caused me very s the time for four or five weeks, when to use Kendall's Spavin Cure with satisfactory results. It has entirely ed the enlargement and stopped and pain. I have long known it to be lent for horses but now I know it to be best liniment for human flesh with quainted with.

Yours truly,
T. P. LAWRE

ST. JOHN, P Q Oct.

DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents: used your Spavin Cure with great spavins, curbs and splints. I find a good remedy for ringbone, hoe cuts, galls and all kinds of lameness difficulties about the horse. One sprained his ankle very bad, I used Kendall's Spavin Cure and I never thing work like it, he was well in a I know it to be good for man as well I procured one of your Treatises by mail for 25cts. and I think it the means of saving me $100 on this I treated according to the directions your book for displaced ankle.

Yours truly,
WM. J. PEARS

Send address for Illustrated Circular we think gives positive proof of its No remedy has ever met with such ed success to our knowledge for both as man.

Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles All druggists have it or can get it or it will be sent to any address on price by the proprietors. DR. B. J. & Co., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

Sold by all Druggists

LYMAN, SONS & CO., Montreal, Wholesale Agents

GEORGE NOBLE,
INSURANCE AND LAND AGE
LICENSED AUCTIONEER
For the County of Grey.

AGENT for the following reliable Compa
CITIZENS', of Montreal,
AGRICULTURAL, of Watertown,
TRADE & COMMERCE, (Mu of Toronto.

A number of Choice Farms for sale
Village Lots
Auction Sales conducted in Town or Co try on Shortest Notice. Charges mode Bills, Blank Notes, and Stamps provid

GEO. NOBLE

S SACRIFICE:

OR,

or Love of Her.

CHAPTER VII.

el Anthon had thought about it at ght have asked himself why it is erally bestow their sympathies upon the weak and erring ones ex, but he did not think about e, unselfish heart was filled with other thoughts of a sadder and ssing nature.

A sharp, knife-like pain darted m at Muriel's words; although he only dimly conscious of it, the had been in his mind that at first wife would not be able to think quietly of his leaving her, she to him, crying wildly, sobbing not let him go away from her; speech that he would be obliged to her, using gentle arguments and his until the wild crying should she would lie quietly in his arms and then a choking, strangling would tell so plainly that though she was trying so hard to be as none the less almost heart- the thought of being separated this thought of Russel Anthon's extravagant; such a course of ld be perfectly natural in, and almost any young, impulsive, Though Muriel's tears were her husband knew that they at the thought of his going they were shed out of deep ring man whose story she had the man whose recklessness and could have done. the pain that knowledge forced its way into Russel tenderly— speak of it, or touch — upon the his knee, he willing to have brother in know I might be detained not tell; and knowing perfectly willing to let

Muriel wished, at that her husband more than she did; have given anything, if she could have thrown and, in all sincerity, that she could not let him go, the agony of an inshe could not do it. by nature, too innoto attempt to feign that were not her own; that her mind; still she the truth—that with him did not bring to that though him, life without him would no, she could not and yet that was the truth; her restlessly about nervously twisting her heavy round and round on her finsomething to the effect as his brother was dying and him, and as long as he had that if he could ever Arundel he would do it, she wrong for her to say him to remain been very wrong under Russel knew that, and well, the thoughts wife's heart; he had wonsuffering—Heaven only severely they were tested. Just though his heartstrings were he said:

dear, then I will go."

murmured Muriel.

soon as I can, dear. I have some straightened out will take a day or two, per will you go first, Russel? How where to find him?"

tells me that, Muriel. I go to the city of Mexico; there I am a gentleman whose resident of the city, me information concerning the last five years he has been an assumed name; no one will I am his brother, nor does he know. 'There is no such man Anthon, Russel,' he wrote; 'the died, Arundel Anone but you Murthe real object of it is best that it should tell people as I will, that away on business."

will not be gone very long?" wistfully. "Only think how in the great house, all alone a day nor an hour absolutely necessary. Arunbe well before I can get there, or he shortly after."

said Muriel, earnestly, "suppose he should not die—suppose he should would you bring him home with his head sadly.

not come, dear; his own act exile from his own country. If come back, should be recognized who five years ago killed Percy you know what the result But if, as you say, he should shall see to, Muriel—that he has to live with peace and comfort until while the rain dashed against the and the wild March night wind about the house, Russel Anthon plans for his journey to Mexico. a change an apparently trifling thing sometimes make in a person's life! The brings a letter; hums lightly to as he waits at the door for some one it from him. Yet that innocent letter may have within it the deadof sweeping hope and happiness out of the life of the person to whom addressed. A message-boy goes running the street with a telegram in his whistling merrily as he goes; and telegram may bring life-long agony into heart. So the world goes; so it will always go, I suppose, for as long as there are human hearts there will be human agony.

Little did Russel Anthon think how that crumpled letter was to change the whole course of his future life.

It was very late that night—long past midnight—when Muriel entered her room. Late as it was, Russel had remained in the library to finish some writing, and she was alone in the large, quiet bed-chamber. Throwing herself down in a chair in front of the dressing-table, she began to unbraid and brush out her long sunshiny hair, thinking very deeply the while.

"I wonder if I ought to tell him before he goes," she said to herself at last, laying down the brush and sinking back in her chair, her bright hair falling in wavy masses about her face. "I suppose he ought to know; he surely has a right to know," a burning flush sweeping over her fair face, crimsoning even her white neck and the tips of her small ears, "yet I cannot bear to tell him. I am not at all certain about it myself: I cannot tell yet whether it is really so. No, I will not tell him before he goes; I will positively by the time he know comes home, then I will tell him, and that will be time enough."

So Muriel resolved to keep her secret a little longer from her husband. She should have told him before he went; she had no right to keep it from him. He ought to have known it—he, her husband—still she did not tell him. Ah! if she only had.

Swiftly the days went by; it seemed to Russel Anthon that days never went so swiftly before. Though he called himself weak and unmanly the thought of leaving Muriel was almost like death to him. He could not help it, he could not shake it off though he tried hard to do so, a vague fear of something, he knew not what settled upon him as the time for his departure drew near; in vain he reasoned with himself, told himself how foolish and childish it was, that vague, haunting fear remained the same,

The night before he was to start for Mexico, Mr. and Mrs. Trowbridge and a few other friends dined with him thinking, as did all his friends, that he was going away simply on business, they wished him good luck and a speedy return. After they had all gone Muriel and he sat for a long time in the pretty bright back parlor; Muriel of her own accord had gone to him and nestling in his arms, talked in her own animated way, telling her what he must bring her, what she should do while he was away, and how quickly the time would pass to him; and she sent messages to Arundel—little loving messages such as a sister might have sent.

The time slipped by so rapidly that they were both surprised when the clock struck one.

"I had no idea it was so late," said Muriel springing to her feet, "yet now that I think about it, I believe I am a little sleepy; come, Russel!"

Muriel's dog Leo had been quietly lying beside Russel's chair; he was still her pet and plaything just as he had been before she was married, and was allowed the full sweep of the house; raising himself now from his crouching position the beautiful animal fixed his expressive eyes upon his master's face.

"Good old Leo," Russel murmured, patting the dog's head, "you will miss me, wont you, old boy, and you won't forget me, will you, Leo?"

With a short, half bark, the dog put its fore paws upon his arm, wagging its tail, as if to tell his master he would never forget him.

It was only a trifling circumstance, yet the time came when with terrible, bitter distinctness, Russel Anthon remembered it.

Muriel could not quite understand her husband's grief when the next day he bade her good-bye.

"Why, Russel," she said, looking with wondering eyes at his pale haggerd face, "you must not feel so badly; we will only be parted a little while; you will soon be back again."

He folded his arms around her passionately, almost despairingly; he could not tell her it seemed to him as though they were parting forever.

"God bless you, my darling, my own dear love," he whispered. "God bless and keep you."

So he went away from her—his young wife whom he loved so deeply.

CHAPTER VIII.

It is two hours before sunset. Overhead the sky is of that deep, pure blue, only to be found within or near the tropics, and the sun hanging like a great golden ball midway between the zenith and the western horizon, pours down a flood of hot, yellow sunshine. Far as the eye can reach stretches a vast plain, and in the distance rise the mountains dim and shadowy.

The burnished lances of the sun-god struggle to pierce the thick, green foliage of a huge mimosa that shades the narrow doorway of a small hut—it is nothing more—which is the only habitation in sight; struggle, until half conquered, they fall in broken flecks of gold upon the bare baked earth which forms the door of the little cabin, and upon the bent head of Russel Anthon as he kneels beside a pallet of dried Mexican grass whereon a man is lying, raving and tossing in wild delirium.

Although the face of the sick man is flushed to a deep, purplish red, the lower part of it covered by a short, dark beard, so thick and heavy that it hides the expression and beauty of the mouth and chin, the resemblance between it and the one bending so anxiously about it, is more than striking, it is remarkable. There are the same straight, clear-cut features, the same broad, full forehead and dark, wavy hair, even the eyes of both are the same, though in one they are unnaturally large and bright with fever, in the other deep and dark with care and anxiety; no need to ask the relationship that exist between the two men; one glance tells plainly that the same blood flows in the veins of both—Russel Anthon has found his brother: the man tossing so restlessly upon his miserable bed is Arundel Anthon.

The sun in momentarily shut out of the little room, the doorway is darkened by a slender, little figure, and Russel Anthon raises his head as a boy about seventeen years of age, half Mexican, half Indian steps into the cabin, bearing a jug of water in his brown hands; having set it down upon the earthen floor, he goes to the side of the bed and stands looking earnestly down at its suffering occupant; a moment or two he stands there in silence, then shaking his head he turns away and begins to busy himself about the room.

Wistfully, eagerly, Russel Anthon had watched the boy's face; but seeing in it not the faintest sign of encouragement, he sighed heavily, wearily, as he proceeded to mix a portion of the contents of a bottle he took from his pocket with some of the fresh water the boy had just brought in. This done, he again bent over his brother, saying, in a low but clear and distinct voice.

"Arundel!"

The wild, fever-bright eyes met his, but there was no recognition in them. Thirstily the cool draught was swallowed; then, as the restless head fellback upon the pillow the hot lips began to mutter again as they had muttered all that day long.

"Oh, Russel, if you would only come to me! You would, if you knew how terribly I have suffered for my sin, how weary I am of living this life—a stranger amongst strangers. It is such a lonely life and such a sad one, if I could see your face again once more, my, brother, I would be willing—be glad to die."

Just as he had said so many times before Russel said now again.

"I am here, Arundel; Russel is here close beside you."

But it was to no purpose, and something very like despair rose within him, as with hands as gentle as a woman's he put back from the burning brow the rings of hair that had fallen there; then stepping to the door he leaned against the frame, his tired eyes wandering far across the plains until they rested on the distant mountains.

"He will never know me again this side of the grave," he said to himself; "he will die and never know that I answered his pitiful call—that I came to him. Oh, Arundel! my poor brother, what a misirable failure your life has been!"

Then Muriel crept into his thoughts, and a dreamy look came into the tired eyes as he stood there thinking of his young wife; and a little prayer rose in his heart that during his absence she might come to love him more than she had ever done before.

God help you, Russel Anthon, may God in mercy help you to bear what the future holds for you!

Arriving at the city of Mexico he had gone to the gentleman whose name Arundel had given him, and had received full information regarding his brother's movements.

Arundel Anthon had written that letter to Russel on the impulse of the moment. Sick, miserable, longing to see one of his own blood, he had sat down one night and almost recklessly written it, spurred on by that impulse which always impels men to make one last desperate effort when they feel that a crisis is at hand.

He had fully intended at the time to leave Guaymas where he was staying and to go down to the city of Mexico, there to wait until some word could come to him from his brother.

But after his letter had gone on its way a certain reaction of his feelings had set in; he felt that he had been weak, unmanly, foolish, to write as he had done; he blamed himself for doing it. In all probability that letter would never reach Russel, or even if it did, the chances were that he would throw it down in hot anger, not even reading it through when he discovered who the writer was. That thought born of his morbid brain grew upon him until it became a certainty in his mind that nothing would ever come of his appeal, that it had been not only weak and cowardly, but vain as well. "I will die as I have lived all these years—alone," he said to himself bitterly.

So instead of going to the city of Mexico he went to El Paso, thinking that he would cross the Rio Grande into Texas; there he fell in with a party of prospectors, who urged him to join them, and, grown utterly indifferent to life, reckless as to what became of him, he left El Paso with them. Before he went away from Guaymas, however, he wrote to his friend in the city of Mexico, telling him of his intention to go to El Paso; so it was that when Russel arrived in the city he gained a knowledge of his brother's whereabouts.

Whatever Russel Anthon attempted he generally carried out; having gone so far he resolved to go on until he found Arundel. He wrote to Muriel and to Mr. Trowbridge, giving the latter a brief account of what his business in Mexico really was, so that his long absence might be explained; then he started for El Paso, reaching there barely thirty hours after Arundel had, with the party of prospectors, left the town. Even then he was not daunted; taking the Mexican boy for a guide he hurried after them; he travelled rapidly night and day, following the same southerly course it was known they had taken, and at last reached the little hut where Arundel was lying very ill, for on the second day out Arundel Anthon had been attacked by the fever which had prostrated him at Guaymas.

Coming to the little deserted cabin, the prospectors had left him with one of their number to take care of him, and had gone on. As soon as the man who had remained behind with Arundel found his services were not actually needed, he hurried on to overtake his party, leaving Russel with his brother alone, with the exception of the Mexican boy who had served as guide. Thank Heaven, Russel had with him the very medicine which was most effectual in breaking up the fever which had seized Arundel in its deathly grasp, and no man ever worked harder to save a human life than he did to save the life of the brother whose face he had not seen in five long years.

The sun was sinking toward the west; already the sky was beginning to flush redly, when he turned from the doorway and went to Arundel's bedside. He was sleeping, a restless sleep, broken by moans and starts and hoarsely muttered words, yet his face was not so deeply flushed, his skin so hot and dry, his pulse so uneven, as it had been an hour before, and a sudden hope sprang to life in Russel's heart that his brother might live.

He was certainly better. All that night Russel watched him, and when the day dawned, Arundel was sleeping quietly, and there were drops of moisture upon his forehead under his wavy hair.

The Mexican boy had gone out to look after the horses, the room was close and hot, and seeing Arundel sleeping so quietly, Russel went outside to walk up and down in front of the cabin, thinking the fresh morning air would dissipate the faint feeling that was the result of the long night-watch.

He had scarcely left the room when slowly, wearily, the long lashed lids raised themselves over Arundel's eyes—eyes out of which the wild fire had all died. Slowly those dark, hollow eyes wandered about the room, resting first on one object, then on another, last of all upon a curiously wrought blanket which was thrown lightly over him.

Something dark red was lying near him, half hidden by the soft woollen folds, and an expression of wonderment came into his eyes, hitherto expressionless, as the thin hand reached out and grasped a small velvet case. The thin fingers trembled as with some difficulty they opened it, then the sick man started violently as a woman's pictured face smiled out at him from the case, a face which seemed to him the loveliest he had ever seen. That pictured face was Muriel's—the face of his brother's wife. It had been taken shortly after her marriage; it was painted on porcelain and was a perfect likeness; even the hair and eyes were Muriel's own. Since Russel had been away from her that picture had lain very near his heart, not a day that he had not looked at it with loving, tender eyes.

Once that previous night he had thrown himself, for a few moments, upon the bed beside Arundel, and the little case, which, because of the pictured face which it held, was his dearest treasure, had, unnoticed by him, slipped from his pocket; it had lain there undisturbed under a fold in the blanket until those dark, hollow eyes discovered it.

Tightly in his hand Arundel held it, his eyes fastened upon the lovely face with its soft eyes and smiling mouth; even under this small excitement the poor, sick brain was beginning to grow dizzy and reel again. Suddenly he pressed his lips to the picture; a crimson flush was setting upon his face, his eyes were growing wild and bright, his pulse throbbing fiercely.

"Who are you, my beautiful one?" he whispered passionately. "Only in my dreams have I seen faces lovely as yours—will yours fade away as they have done? will I awaken and find you gone? Ah, stay with me; do not leave me! Never have I seen your face before, yet your sweet eyes awaken new feelings within me."

And then with Muriel's face in his thoughts, he drifted back again upon that wild sea of delirium.

Then a few moments later Russel crept into the room, thinking to find Arundel still quietly sleeping; he found him sitting upright, muttering wildly tender words, pressing now and then to his lips something he held tightly in one burning hand. Was it prophetic? He did not stop to think, he was only half conscious of the swift, icy chill that went over him, as gently unclasping the thin fingers he took from his brother's hand his wife's picture.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

A Hungarian Orator.

In a description of the Hungarian parliament in the Nouvelle Revue, M. Nemenyi after regretting that eloquence has disappeared from that assembly with Francis Deak and Jules Andrassy, thus describes the most powerful man in Hungary at the present day, M. Tisza. A friend of Germany, who had accompanied me to the gallery of the Hungarian parliament, cried: "Why, it is a souf-caste master!" (One who teaches several village schools in turn, walking from one to the other.) A running schoolmaster ought to be extraordinarily well-booted, but does not usually strike you as prominently about the regions of the waistcoat. Here the comparison is exact enough. The orator's garments were not made to raise the authority of the wearer; the principal one is a very short gray coat, buttoned to the top. He is thin and dry looking. His face, ornamented with spectacles and surrounded by a gray beard, looks twenty years older than he really is. He stands as straight as an arrow, but looks as if the least touch would upset him. His eloquence accords admirably with his appearance. In spite of the silence which prevails directly he rises, it is almost impossible to hear him. His voice is stifled as if he were conversing without concerning himself about the effect of his words. Let us take the case of a stranger listening in the debate without knowing the language. Suddenly he sees one of these murmured phrases followed by a sudden thrill through the assembly. Three hundred members rise at once, gesticulating and manifesting the most opposed sentiments, these applauding with joyful acclamations, those by vehement declamations showing how disagreeably the orator's words have affected them. He meanwhile, is imperturbable; the flinging contradiction can not irritate him; he continues in the same stifled tone, and his auditors never cease listening to him with breathless attention. Members approach on tiptoe from the farthest corners of the hall to catch the words more distinctly which fall from his lips, for the interest in what he says is as great to his adversaries as to his friends. His self-command rarely deserts him; then he raises his voice and gesticulates a little. But his voice never fills the hall—it becomes hoarse and forced while his gestures are awkward; he seems to menace his opponent with the pencil which he holds in his hand, as if wishing to transfix him with that redoubtable weapon. Nevertheless, the stranger, whose surprise augments, allows that these phrases, pronounced in a disagreeable voice, and accompanied by gestures anything but elegant, make an impression on the chamber, and that at the end of the speech, generally very short, he produces what is called in France a mouvement prolonge, so prolonged, indeed, and so intense, that the debate is perforce suspended for several minutes. This orator—need I name him?—is Koloman Tisza, for ten years the all-powerful president of the council. In this country no other politician can boast of having been so vigorously hated in his time, no other has in an equal degree experienced the inconsistency of popular favor; and no other has shown, as he has done, perseverance under all difficulties in the hour of misfortune."

The Dominion Parliament will meet for the despatch of business on Thursday, February 8th.

Poisonous Snakes.

Statistics of the Numbers of Folk they Kill.

Venomous snakes are those which have two hollow teeth in the upper jaw through which they eject poison into the wound made by their bite. The great majority of snakes are not venomous, but nevertheless there are more venomous snakes in the world than most men really require.

There are two classes of venomous snakes—those whose bite is certain death, those whose bite can be cured. The only venomous snake inhabiting Europe is the viper, but its bite is seldom fatal. In the United States, with the possible exception of New Mexico and Arizona, there are only three venomous snakes—the rattlesnake, the copperhead, and the moccasin. All our other snakes are harmless. In some places the copperhead is known as the flat-headed adder, but the other species of snakes to which the name "adder" is often given by country people, are as harmless as the pretty little garter snake.

Central and South America have many venomous snakes whose bite is always fatal. Among these the best known are the coral snake, the tuboba, and the dama blanca. A British naval vessel, on its way up a South American River a few years ago, anchored for the night, and a number of the officers thought they would go ashore and sleep in a deserted shanty that stood on the bank, where they fancied that the air would be cooler than it was on board the vessel. When they reached the shanty one of them said he thought he would go back to the ship, and all the others, with one exception, said they would follow him. The officer who determined to stay swung his hammock from the beams of the roof, and was soon asleep. He woke early in the morning, and, to his horror, found that three snakes were sleeping on his body, and that others were hanging from the rafters or gliding over the floor. He recognized among them snakes whose bite meant death within an hour or two, and he did not dare to move a finger. He lay in his hammock until the sun grew warm and the snakes glided back to their holes. His companions had noticed that the place looked as if it was infested with snakes, but had cruelly refrained from warning him. The officer was one of the bravest men that ever lived, but he could never speak of his night among the snakes without a shudder.

In one of the West India Islands Martinique—there is a snake called the lance-headed viper, which is almost as deadly as the coral snake. The East Indias are full of venomous snakes, and in British India nearly 20,000 persons are killed every year by snake bites. Of the East India snakes whose bite is incurable the cobra is the most numerous, but the diamond snake, the tuboba, and the ophiaphagus are also the cause of a great many deaths. The British Government has offered a large reward for the discovery of an antidote to the poison of the cobra, but no one has yet been able to claim it.

Africa, like all tropical countries, has many species of venomous snakes. The horned cerastes is the snake from whose bite Cleopatra is said to have died, and from its small size and its habit of burying itself all but its head in the sand, it is peculiarly dreaded by the natives. The ugliest of these snakes is the great puff-adder, which often grows to the length of five or six feet and whose poison is used by the natives in making poisoned arrows.

It is a very curious fact that the poison of venomous snakes cannot be distinguished by the chemist from the white of an egg. And yet one kind of snake poison will produce an effect entirely unlike that produced by another kind. The blood of an animal bitten by a cobra is decomposed and turned into a thin, watery, straw-colored fluid, while the blood of an animal bitten by a coral snake is solidified, and looks very much like currant jelly. Nevertheless, the poison of the cobra and that of the coral snake seem to be precisely alike when analyzed by the chemist, and are apparently composed of the same substances in the same proportion as is the white of an egg.

Living in Winnipeg.

Two things at least must come down 50 per cent before people can live in the cities and towns of the Northwest in any degree of comfort. I mean rent and fuel. The rents in Winnipeg are simply outrageous. The most wretched houses—mere shells and as cold as Dante's Inferno—being about 40 per cent on the cost of house and lot. In spite of all the buildings put up this year the city is crowded, and on an average there are three persons in every house for the one there ought to be, on sanitary principles, and we have enough population already for a city of double the size of Winnipeg. Every parlor and spare room is sublet to men who board in hotels, and I know small, seven-roomed houses with no less than twenty people sleeping in them, with double windows and no ventilators.

Coal was $22 a ton last winter when the syndicate had things all their own way, but the contractors are running the Thunder Bay Branch this winter, and therefore it only costs from $14 to 16 now, which will save the people of Winnipeg over $150,000 in one year. If we had a competing line to Duluth, coal from Cleveland could be sold here retail at good profit for $10 to $12 a ton. Poor poplar wood is from $7 to $10 a cord. Many other things are equally dear. Bread of course is about as cheap as in the east, and it should be cheaper. By the way, the best bread in the wide world is made in Manitoba, as the wheat is by far the hardest and best that grows out of the ground. Our ordinary loaf bread would pass for Christmas cake in the east. But we have to pay for our luxuries, especially if they come over the C. P. R. and its step-brother, the St. Paul road, which is virtually a branch of it.

A Death Infested Steamer.

The steamship Gellert was twenty-nine days upon her passage from Hamburg to New York, having lost some of her propeller blades. During this time there were eleven deaths and five births on board, and upon the arrival of the ship four dead bodies were landed. Diphtheria and pneumonia were the principal causes of the mortality.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

INTERESTING ITEMS GATHERED FROM OUR EXCHANGES AND OTHERWISE FOR THE READERS OF THE "STANDARD."

Orangeville.

Mr. John Wilkims, high constable of Dufferin, has been appointed county constable for Peel.

The Advertiser says their correspondents are gentlemen. (Lady correspondents are scarce).

SMITH vs ORANGEVILLE.—A culvert was placed in a street in such a position as to run the water on Smith's property. Result—a freshet came, the water came in drowning 6 or 7 hogs in their pen; the damages claimed by Smith was $75. the council gave him $50.

Meaford Road.

ACCIDENT.—Mr. W. Buchanan, jr., met with an accident a short time ago by the upsetting of a load of hay. In attempting to jump from the load his feet caught in the hay throwing him on the front of the runner on his side breaking some of his ribs. He is getting around again all right.

Our present teacher, Miss Graham, is engaged for another year.

DEMISE.—Mr. G. Chadwick lost his only son last week; he had been ill only a few days.

Mr. W. Hernsworth, the young man who was disappointed in a love affair some time ago, is now in the asylum at Hamilton. His friends and himself have the sympathy of the entire neighborhood in their sad affliction. Very little, if any, sympathy is felt for the other parties, and most people think that they were served right by the young man's sister when they went to his mother's to try to clear themselves. They are not likely to try that game again after the manner in which they conducted themselves on their last visit. If they come back again they had better prepare themselves beforehand.

THRESHING.—There has been plenty of boasting about big threshing of late, but the Gilbert boys are still on the war-path and will make the largest season of the lot.

Mr. J. Sparling of the Eclipse Saw Mills is hard at work fitting up for his new engine and boiler.

FLESHERTON CHEESE FACTORY.—A meeting of the patrons was held in the town hall for the purpose of winding up the business for the present season. The following is a condensed statement of the business for 1882:—The factory was opened on the 22nd of May and closed on the 28th of October. The total amount of milk furnished by the patrons was 446,669 pounds, making 44,272 pounds of cheese, which was sold for $4,754.24, or about an average of 10¾ cents per pound. The total expenses for the season was $1,227.24, leaving $3,527 to be divided among the patrons, or about 8 cents per pounds for the cheese after all expenses were paid. Some of the patrons received over $25 per cow. This shows that cheese making is a paying business.—COM.

Flesherton.

Wright and Strain are making up a car load of poultry for Philadelphia.

Mr. Robt, Davis has accepted a situation as head book-keeper in a wholesale dry goods house in Atchison City, Kansas, and will enter upon his duties there early in January.

FINED.—A. S. Vandusen, medical prosecutor appointed by the Medical Association of Ontario, had a Mr. Snell, of Singhampton, before a tribunal composed of Reeve Kirkland, Mr. Jas. Russell and Dr. McAllister, on Friday last, at Duntroon, on a charge of practising medicine without a license. Snell was fined $25 and costs for his offence and was further fined $10 and costs for assuming the title of "Doctor" without being legally entitled to do so. These are the lowest fines allowed by law, and certainly such offences deserve punishment.

Chatsworth.

The Firemen's Hop and Supper in Matthew's Hall on Friday evening last was a splendid success. The Hall was beautifully decorated for the occasion, and after the first part of the programme was disposed of about thirty couples sat down to a supper, which for elegency of style and variety of viands would be hard to excel. Lemon's String Band furnished the music, which was of an unusually high order.—O. S. Advertiser.

Mr. R. Porteous has leased the grain warehouse and will commence buying grain at once.

Robt. S. Rae.

TAILOR,

SYDENHAM STREET,

MARKDALE.

AN IMMENSE STOCK OF BOOTS & SHOES

JUST ARRIVED AT THE

TORONTO HOUSE

BEST QUALITY AND LOWEST PRICE.

STOCK COMPLETE IN

Dry Goods and Groceries!

PRICES ALWAYS RIGHT.

OUR THIRTY CENT TEA

Is the wonder of the day A trial solicited.

WM. BROWN.

Markdale, Oct. 11th, 1882.

GROCERIES

A. M'INTYRE

TEA! TEA! TEA!

A. M'INTYRE

Flour, Flour, Flour.

McINTYRE'S LIQUORS! LIQUORS

McINTYRE'S Cigars, Cigars.

McINTYRE'S Coffee, Coffee.

McINTYRE'S MEAL! MEAL! MEAL!

McINTYRE'S Pork, Pork, Pork.

McINTYRE'S Teas, Teas.

And ever ythin g kept n in a first-class Grocery and Liquor Store. always on hand, CHEAP FOR CASH.

GROCERIES

MARKDALE

Sash and Door Factory

SASH, DOORS,
BLINDS
MOULDINGS,
HOLLOW BATTONS,
FRAMES

Lumber, Lath and Shingles,

Always on Hand. Orders Promptly Filled.

The Subscriber wishes to return thanks to the people of Markdale and vicinity, for the very liberal patronage they have given him in the past, and hopes by close attention to business to merit a continuance of the same.

I have now extended my business, and will in future keep a full Stock of

PINE LUMBER.

Direct from the North Shore.

ALL SIZES, DRESSED AND UNDRESSED,

All Kinds of Plain and Fancy Turning

Done in a first-class manner.

THOS. McNEA.

Markdale May 27th, 1881. 27-tf

GENERAL

Blacksmithing

Flesherton Station.

The subscriber begs to announce to the inhabitants of Flesherton, Markdale and Priceville, and surrounding country, that he has commenced business at Flesherton Station, where he hopes by satisfactory work and moderate rates to secure a share of public patronage.

HORSE-SHOEING A SPECIALTY.

And guaranteed that in a case of interfereing horses he will cure the defect in two shoeings or no charge will be made for the second shoeing.

A TRIAL SOLICITED.

HENRY WHITE.

Flesherton Station, Oct. 17, 1882. 110

NOTICE TO FARMERS.

BUSINESS STILL INCREASING WITH

W. J. ROWE

—AT THE—

Barrhead Mill

UNDER THE OLD PROCESS.

Gristing and Chopping done every working day. Farmers from a distance can have their stuff home with them the same day.

All orders for Flour and Feed promptly filled.

W. J. ROWE, "Barrhead Mills."

October 28th 1882. 213-126

W. BULMER,

The People's Photograph

FLESHERTON.

Continues to take Pictures,
Do Copying and Enlarging in good

FRAMES and FRAME FIXIN

in great variety and latest designs at desperate low prices.

W. BULME

ARTEMESIA WAREHOU

FLESHERTON STATION.

Dry Goods, Hardware, Crockery, Boots and S

Groceries, Provisions, &c. Stock kept full and well assorted with goods received every week.

Cash paid for all kinds of Grain at the Sta

MY BRANCH STORE AT EUGENIA

replenished with new goods every week. For sale cheap for cash or

My Saw Mill, Shingle Factoty, and Lime

AT LITTLE FALLS, ARE IN OPERATION.

All kinds Saw Logs bought at the Mill or sawn on s

Lumber, Lath, Broom Handles, Shingles and Lime for

WM. HOG

November 7th, 1882.

TORONTO HOUS

FLESHERTON.

Stock Fully Complete. Unusually L

VERY ATTRACTIVE, AND

CHEAPER THAN THE CHEAPE

EVERY DEPARTMENT SPECIALLY ATTRACT

Variety and Value Unsurpassed.

DRY GOODS DEPARMEN

Is this season very complete with a very large stock of Dress Good prising in part Cashmeres in all colors. Worsted Wool Goods endless variety.

Boot and Shoe Department.

Would call special attention of close buyers as my stock is unusually from the best manufacturers and at rock bottom prices.

ORDERED CLOTHING.

Has been exceedingly brisk this season, on account of which I have the largest and best stock of Tweeds, Coatings, Trowserings, and O ings in this section of country. As I have always led the trade in t partment buyers will find it to their advantage to call before pur elsewhere.

Millinery Department.

Under the able management of a first-class milliner, with plenty of ance, will be found unusually attractive with the prettiest and most able, and cheapest stock to be found in the county. Ladies, it you good to call and look at the stock.

Hardware and Grocery Department.

Is always fully assorted and complete with the best goods, at the low sible price.

☞ I am the only constant and reliable buyer of Grain and Fa duce in Flesherton, and for which I will pay the highest price in any quantity of good dry, sound grain, which I would specially ask to clean well. A call solicited.

R. J. SPROUL

Flesherton, Oct. 3rd, 1882.

Markdale PUMP Factor

J. G. IRVING,

MAKER OF ALL KINDS OF PUMPS,

DROP VALVE PUMPS, CYLINDER PUMPS, CISTERN PU FORCE PUMPS,

Also, ALL KINDS OF IRON PUMPS SUPPLIED.

Satisfaction guaranteed on all my work; the proof of it is found fact that I am doing a larger business now than ever was done in Mar the Pump business. Remember the stand, 1 door north of Rutledge's

Sydenham Street, Markdale.

Markdale Standard

Vol. 3.--No. 15. MARKDALE, ONT., DEC. 21, 1882. No. 119.

Markdale Standard

...EVENING,

...2 if not paid till ...per discontinued ...up, except at the ...parties refusing ...ied responsi- ...ons until they

...VERTISING:

.....	$50 00
.....	27 50
.....	15 00
.....	8 00
.....	4 00
...on per line	8
.....	3

...e reckoned by the ...by a scale of solid ...s without specific ...shall till forbid and ...transitory adver ...the office or bublica- ...wednesday proceed

...NTING

...executed with ...ch at the Office of ...dale.

G. W. RUTLEDGE.

...ITOR & PROPRIETOR.

PROFESSIONAL AND BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

...tle & Armstrong,

...on, Accoucheur ...

...Hall; residence at ...

...D., M.R.C.P. & S., O. ...Physician and Surgeon, Priceville, ...Graduate of University, Vict. College. ... New York, and ...Graduate, of the same, ... Asylum Medical Institute. ... Opthalmic Hospital, N.Y. ...Member Coll. Physicians & Surgeons, O. 104

Dental Card.

Cameron & Knight,

DENTAL SURGEONS,

Office over D. A. Cameron and Co's Drug Store, Poulett St., OWEN SOUND.

Every attention given to the preservation of the natural teeth. Artificial Dentures mounted on Gold, Celluloid, and Rubber bases.

Will be at Markdale the last Tuesday in each month,

A. Cameron, M.D., L.F.P.S. Glasgow, L.D.S., Ont. — C. F. Knight, L.D.S. Medalist Royal College Den. Sur., Ont

Legal.

Frost & Frost,

BARRISTERS, AND ATTORNEYS-AT Law, Solicitors in Chancery, Conveyancers, &c., Owen Sound, have resumed at Flesherton. Office open every Thursday, as heretofore.

ALFRED FROST, County Crown Attorney. J. W. FROST, LL. B. 1

J. ...SON,

BARRISTER, MASTER AND DEP. REG in Chancery, Notary Public, Conveyancer, &c.

MONEY TO LEND AT SIX PER CENT.

Offices—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block Poulett St.; and in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week. 57-1y

Creasor & Norrison,

BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, CONVEYANCERS, &c. &c.

OFFICES in Owen Sound, Dufferin Block, over W. F. Wolf's Store and in

MARKDALE;

Over W. J. McFarland's Store on Thursday and Friday of each week.

☞ Funds to lend on reasonable terms.

JOHN CREASOR, Q.C. DUNCAN MORISON

Markdale, March 15, 1882. 79-1v

Alexander Brown.

ISSUER of Marriage Licenses, Fire and Life Insurance Agent. Commissioner in B. R. &c. Conveyancer and Licensed Auctioneer for the County of Grey. Farmers, Merchants, and Land Sales, Punctually attended to and charges made very moderate.

Priceville, Sept. 17, 1880. 1-v

Hotels.

REVERE HOTEL,

MARKDALE.

T. SPROULE, - Proprietor.

THIS popular Hotel has had a large addition added to it, thoroughly refitted, and is now second to none in the county. Good stabling and attentive ostler. First-class accommodation for commercial travelers. $1 per day. Barber's shop in connection.

Markdale Hotel.

Good Accommodation for Travellers. 'Bus to and from all trains. Charges moderate.

Markdale. A. RUTLEDGE, PROP.

COMMERCIAL HOTEL.

PRICEVILLE, Ont.

Large and commodious Sample Rooms Good Bed Rooms, &c. The Bar and larde well supplied with the best the market affords; good Stabling and attentive Hostler's

THOS. ATKINSON, Proprietor

CHATSWORTH HOUSE

(LATE MORROW HOUSE,)

CHATSWORTH, Ont.

THE undersigned having purchased the above property has had it thoroughly renovated and refurnished throughout beside making other new improvements, which will greatly add to the comfort and convenience of his guests, would respectfully solicit the patronage of the public generally. The best brands of liquors and cigars always in stock. Good meal and comfortable rooms guaranteed. Good stabling and attentive hostler.

—C. H. MATHEWS, Prop. 114.

Miscellaneous.

John McDonald,

CHATSWORTH,

DIVISION Court Clerk, Issuer of Marriage Licenses, Commissioner in B.R., Conveyancer, &c. Deeds, Mortgages, Wills, &c. attended to promptly, accurately, neatly, and cheaply. Private funds to lend in small sums on easy terms. Notes discounted

MISS LAMB,

DRESS-MAKER. UP-STAIRS IN Douglas' Block. Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges moderate.

Markdale, Nov. 15th, 1882. 114-3m.

R. M. Galbraith,

AUCTIONEER AND GENERAL LAND Agent, Williamsford Station. Auction Sales attended in all parts of the County. Goods sold on commission. Rates moderate. Pianos, Organs, and Sewing Machines; also Fruit and Ornamental Trees. Vines, Agricultural Implements, and Machinery of all kinds on sale.

Williamsford, Jan. 27, 1881.

T. E. DAVIS,

BUILDER & CONTRACTOR, (Stone and Brick). After completing 13 buildings his season is still on the track and is still prepared to do all kinds of stone and brick work, plastering and tuck pointing. Those who contemplate building will find it to their advantage to give him a call.

Residence corner of Brown and Sproule Stetes. MARKDALE. 16-v

MISS WELSH,

Dress & Mantlemaker. Charges moderate. Satisfaction guaranteed. Hill's Block, Sydenham street.

Markdale, Nov. 6th, 1882. 113-126

Wm. Brown,

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.

Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.

N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate security.

LOYAL MARKDALE LODGE,

Of C. O. O. F. No. 78, will meet in their hall on Monday evening, Dec. 26th, at eight o'clock p. m.

108 W. L. YOUNG, Sec'y.

EUGENIA

Grist, Saw and Lath Mills

Having made eqtensive improvements in my Grist Mill I feel confident I can give good satisfaction.

GOOD FLOUR ALWAYS ON HAND.

Chopping Done Every Day.

Custom Sawing and Bills Filled on the shortest notice.

LUMBER AND LATH ALWAYS ON HAND.

Cherry, Butternut, White Ash, Black Ash Basswood, Pine and Hemlock Logs wanted

69ly. M. AKITT, Eugenia.

$66 a week in your own town: $5 outfit free. No risk. Everything new. Capital not required. We will furnish you everything. Many are making fortunes. Ladies make as much as men, and boys and girls make great pay. Reader, if you want a business at which you can make great pay all the time you work, write for particulars to H. HALLETT & Co., Portland, Maine. 71-126

$2 Watches, mem winders $3.50. White metal Hunting Case $5. Imitation gold $6. Solid gold $12. Cheapest and best for your own use or speculative purposes. Valuable catalogue free. THOMPSON & CO., 838 Broadway, New York.

ROBT. ASKIN,

MARKDALE,

Has opened out a First-Class

Furniture!

—AND—

UNDERTKING ESTABLISHMENT,

And therefore has supplied a want long felt, especially in the Undertaking Line.

COFFINS,

CASKETS,

SHROUDS,

and all

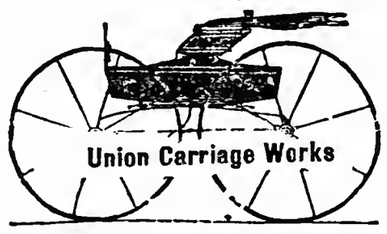
FUNERAL FURNISHINGS,

supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse

for hire at moderate rates.

FURNITURE!



From the Common to the

Best and Latest Styles,

in everything in the line.

Call and see for yourselves.

ROBT. ASKIN.

Union Carriage Works

Union Carriage Works.

All work manufactured from

FIRST CLASS MATERIAL

In the Latest and Best Improved Style, and finished with

English Varnish.

Painting & Trimming Rigs

will receive prompt attention.

All Repairs executed in the shortest possible time consistent with good workmanship.

GOOD WORK A SPECIALITY.

Remember the Shop, opposite the Cheapside

D. J. SHANAHAN,

Proprietor.

Markdale, Dec. 2nd, 1881. 64.

HAIR CUTTING AND SHAVING

By T. D. Smith,

Razors, Straps, and Shaving Brushes for sale. Razors sharpened.

☞ Orders filled for Tomb Stones.

STARTLING DISCOVERY!

LOST MANHOOD RESTORED.

A victim of youthful imprudence causing Premature Decay, Nervous Debility, Lost Manhood, etc., having tried in vain every known remedy, has discovered a simple self cure, which he will send FREE to his fellow-sufferers, address J. H. REEVES, 43 Chatham St., N. Y.

WARNING!

There is great danger of taking cold from wet feet. If you want to Guard Against Sickness!

Keep your feet dry and warm by procuring your

BOOTS!

—FROM—

KAY & THOMAS.

Satisfaction Guaranteed. Medicated Cork Soles, all sizes, kept on hand. Remember the place opposite the new STANDARD Office. 49

Best business now before the public. You can make money faster at work for us than at anything else. Capital not needed. We will start you. $12 a day and upwards made at home by the industrious. Men, women, boys and girls wanted everywhere to work for us. Now is the time. You can work in spare time only or give your whole time to the business. You can live at home and do the work. No other business will pay you nearly as well. No one can fail to make enormous pay by engaging at once. Costly outfit and terms free. Money made fast, easily and honorably. Address TRUE & Co., Augusta, Maine. 71-126

REST AND COMFORT TO THE SUFFERING

Brown's Household Panacea

has no equal for relieving pain, both internal and external. It cures pain in the Side, Back or Bowels, Sore Throat, Rheumatism, Toothache, Lumbago and any kind of a Pain or Ache. "It will most surely quicken the Blood and heal, as its acting power is wonderful." "Brown's Household Panacea," being acknowledged as the great Pain Reliever, and of double the strength of any other Elixer or Liniment in the world, should be in every family handy for use when wanted "as it really is the best remedy in the world for Cramps in the Stomach, and Pains and Aches of all kinds," and is for sale by all Druggists at 25 cents a bottle. 75-127

EARS FOR THE MILLION

HOO CHOO'S BALSAM OF SHARK'S OIL positively Restores the Hearing, and is the Only Absolute Cure for Deafness known. This Oil is abstracted from peculiar species of small White Shark, caught in the Yellow Sea, known as CARCHARODON RONDELETII. Every Chinese fisherman knows it. Its virtues as a restorative of hearing were discovered by a Buddhist Priest were discovered about the year 1410. Its cures were so numerous, and many so seemingly miraculous, that the remedy was officially proclaimed over the entire Empire. Its use became so universal, that for over 300 years no Deafness has existed among the Chinese people. Sent, charges prepaid, to any address at $1.00 per bottle.

Hear what the Deaf say:

It has performed a miracle in my case.
I have no unearthly noises in my head, and hear much better.
I have been greatly benefited.
My deafness helped a great deal—think another bottle will cure me.

Its virtues are unquestionable and its curative character absolute, as the writer can personally testify, both from experience and observation. Write at once to Haylock and Jenney, 7 Dey Street, New York, enclosing $1 and you will receive by return a remedy that will enable you to hear like anybody else, and whose curative effects will be permanent. You will never regret doing so."—EDITOR OF MERCANTILE REVIEW.

☞ To avoid loss in the mails, please send money by Registered Letter.

Only imported by HAYLOCK & JENNEY, late Haylock & Co.,

Sole Agents for America. 7 DEY ST NEW YORK 93-145.

Wm. Lucas & Co.,

BANKERS,

Money Loaned

IN large or small amounts, at all times, on good endorsed notes, or on collateral security.

INTEREST AT 6 PER CENT.

Allowed on Savings Deposits.

☞ Drafts issued and Collections made on points, at lowest rates.

W.M. LUCAS, Manager.

September 23, 1880. 2-ly

JOHN NOBLE,

MARKDALE.

GENER'L BLACKSMITH

HORSE SHOEING

A SPECIALTY.

Teacher Wanted.

FOR SCHOOL SECTION No. 6, ARTEMESIA, holding Second or Third Class Certificate. Duties to commence on the second day of January, 1883. Apply, stating salary, to

JOHN HAZARD.
Sec. & Treas to Trustees,
114-117* Flesherton P. O.

A CARD.

To all who are suffering from the errors and indiscretions of youth, nervous weakness, early decay, loss of manhood, &c., I will send a receipe that will cure you, FREE OF CHARGE. This great Remedy was discovered by a missionary in South America. Send a self-addressed envelope to REV. JOSEPH T. INMAN, Station D, New York City.

French Cashmeres, yard and quarter wide, all new shades, 35c. per yd., at M. Richardson's, Flesherton.

A GENERAL STAMPEDE.

Never was such a rush made for any Drug Store as is now at A. Turner & Co's for a Trial Bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. All persons affected with Asthma, Bronchitis, Hoarseness, Severe Coughs or any affection of the Throat and Lungs, can get a Trial Bottle of this great remedy free, by calling at above Drug Store.

Men's Lined Kid Gloves 50c. per pair. All wool fine Tweeds at 50c. per yd. at M. Richardson's, Flesherton.

TRUE TO HER TRUST.

Too much cannot be said of the ever faithful wife and mother, constantly watching and caring for her dear ones, never neglecting a single duty in their behalf. When they are assailed by disease, and the system should have a thorough cleaning, the stomach and bowels regulated, blood purified, a malarial poison exterminated, she must know that Electric Bitters are the only sure remedy. They are the best and purest medicine in the world and only cost fifty cents. Sold by A. Turner.

Clearing winter Millinery at Richardson's, Flesherton. 50c. Felt Hats for 10c. 75c. do. for 15c. $1 plush do. for 25c. $1.25 Imitation Beaver for 50c, and a lot of Winter Mantles —bargains.

MILLIONS GIVEN AWAY.

Millions of bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, have been given away as Trial Bottles of the large size. This enormous outlay would be disastrous to the proprietors, were it not for the rare merits possessed by the wonderful medicine. Call at A. Turner & Co's Drug Store and get a Trial Bottle free, and try for yourself. It never fails to cure.

All wool Scarlet Flannels 15 cents per yd Full width Heavy Flannels, 27c. per yd. Heavy Twill Flannels 30c. per yd. at M. Richardson's, Flesherton.

BUCKLEN'S ARNICA SALVE.

The best salve in the world for Cuts, Bruises, Sores, Ulcers, Salt Rheum, Fever Sores, Tetter, Chapped Hands, Chilblains, Corns, and all Skin Eruptins, and Positively cures Piles. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by A. Turner & Co.

Richardson's piles of Overcoats are being rapidly reduced. So are the prices. Assortment good yet.

Great Bargains in Ready-made Clothing for the next two weeks at Foster's.

A table of lovely glasware arranged by Mr. Bowes, Consisting of Syrup Jugs, Toy Sets, Cups and Sawcers. China Sets, Lamps, Crystal, Jugs, Butter and Pickled Dishes, &c., &c., for sale at McFarland's.

Wm. Lucas & Co, bankers, Markdale have $200,000.00 to loan on real estate. Straight loan system. No fines. Low interest; moderate charges.

M. Richardson, Flesherton, is selling a fair Japan Tea, (not tea dust,) for 15c. per lb., and fine full-flavored Tea at 30c.

Miss Lane and Miss Adelaide Dousley, of Owen Sound, have been visiting here for a week.

Mr. W. J. Speers left for Minnesota on Saturday last.

One case black and colored Silks, one case black Cashmere, all wool, 50cts., worth 70cts. Direct importations at McFarland's.

Ball and Supper at the Mansion House, Markdale, on Christmas evening. Suitable music will be provided.

$2 cash paid for dry maple and beech cordwood at Foster's.

Buy good useful Christmas presents. A warm Shawl, Mantles or set of Furs, at McFarland's; they are cheap.

AN EDITOR IN LUCK.

St Jacobs Oil cures rheumatism; of this I am convinced. For years I suffered with rheumatism in my left shoulder and rigth arm, and last fall I was incapable of attending to my duties, and lay many a night unable to sleep on account of terrible pains. A few weeks ago a severe attack of this trouble struck me, and this time I concluded to try the St. Jacobs Oil I must acknowledge, with but little confidence in its merits, I freely confess that the result has completely astonished me. The first application relieved the pain very materially, and the continued use of only two bottles has completely cured me of this chronic evil, and that, after the most eminent physicians and their prescriptions had been of no avail. I therefore consider it a duty to publish the above for the benefit of all sufferers with rheumatism and kindered complaints. G. A. HELMAN, editor Republican, Pittsburg, Pa.

Let Her Whistle,

What if a girl whistle?
'Twon't make your hair bristle
Or scratch like a thistle,
A whistling lassie
Need not to be sassy.
Or vulgar, or brassy.
No psalm or epistle
Has thrown the first missile
At women who whistle,
It's quite as becoming
As singing or humming,
Or playing or strumming.
Be just philosophic.
O men, on this tropic;
Not misogynistic
Nor grumpy nor mystic!

ESPECIALLY FOR THE LADIES

Sugestions for Those Who Laugh or Cry. —Home Toilets.—A Beautiful Woman.—Chit-Chat.

A Beautiful Duchess.

The best sketch of the "beautiful duchess of Devonshire" when she was in all the bloom of baauty, in 1791, is given by the vivacious Fanny Burney, whose admirable and lively and most dramatic scenes and portraits are scarcely appreciated as they deserve to be. She was paying a visit to Lady Spencer, then living in Bath, during the season:

"Presently followed two ladies. Lady Spencer, with a look and manner warmly announcing pleasure in what she was doing, then introduced me to the first of them, saying 'Duchess of Devonshire, Miss Burney.' She made me a very civil compliment upon hoping my health was recovering, and Lady Spencer then, slightly, as if unavoidably, said, 'Lady Elizabeth Forster.'

"I did not find so much beauty in her as I expected, notwithstanding the variations of accounts; but I found far more of manner, politeness, and gentle quiet. She seems by nature to possess the highest animal spirits, but she appeared to me not happy. I thought she looked oppressed and thin, though there was a native cheerfulness about her which I fancy scarce ever deserts her.

"She now conversed with me wholly, and in so soberly, sensible, and quiet a manner, as I had imagined incompatible with her powers. Too much and too little credit have variously been given her. We talked over my late tour, Bath waters, and the king's illness. This, which was led to by accident, was here a tender subject, considering her heading the regency squadron. I fancy that no one has just in the same way treated it with her grace before; however, she took all in good part, though to have found me retired in discontent had perhaps been more congenial to her."

The lady who was with her, and her bosom friend, was a person of no ordinary attractions. Indeed, she was so alluring that Mrs Gibbon declared that no man could withstand her; that she could make the Lord Chancellor come down from off his wool-sack. This lady was destined to take her place and to succeed her as Duchess of Devonshire.

The poor beauty was at one time drawn into a strange entanglement which had well-nigh produced the most serious family confusion. She had two little girls, and was eager for a son and heir, and it has been often repeated, and there seems little reason to doubt the story, that she arranged with her friend to exchange children, and the duchess to receive her friend's boy.

That some such story was connected with the late Duke of Devonshire is well known. It is public property that the perpetual celibacy of his grace was the result of an arrangement by which he was to wear the title by consent for his life, it then passing to his cousin, the rightful heir. Lady Charlotte Campbell learned: "The present Duke of Devonshire appeared for a length of time to have a strong aversion to his mother-in-law, the sometime Lady Dover, and one day, when she hung over him and kissed his forehead, the duke turned away as though he had been touched by a basilisk. But, subsequently, after his repeated visits to her when she resided chiefly at Rome, his manner entirely changed, and he evinced the utmost pleasure in her society and the greatest affection for her person. It was said that this change in his feeling toward her was wrought by the duchess having declared to him the secret of his birth, and his being her own child. It is also said that this great man can not marry. Rumor says the duke is only suffered by the rightful heir to enjoy the title and estates for his lifetime, in order not to disgrace the family by his disclosure of the truth. But possibly the whole of these suppositions are false, and perhaps the duke has never married because he would not be espoused for the sake of his great name and fortune. This romance in real life was once dramatized under the title of 'The False Friends,' and that by a friend of the Cavendish family; yet, strange to say, the authoress of the play did not incur their displeasure."

Home Toilets.

Special attention has this season been observed in the artistic construction of toilets intended for home wear and for the various social entertainments, such as luncheons, and teas, from which gentlemen are generally excluded While these dresses or gowns can be duplicated in inexpensive fabrics, the model garments are of very handsome materials, most elaborately garnished with rich laces, ribbons, and other decorative articles.

In a recently-completed home toilet the skirt is of turquoise blue silk and a fine woolen fabric. It is trimmed with three deep-plaited flounces and a deep gathered ruffle, headed by two deep puffings, the top of one being finished by tiny shirrings. The overgarment is of foulard silk, with rich cream ground, covered with bright hued, variegated flowers. It is made in the Watteau style, with full plait in the back, which forms the graceful drapery, while the front is slightly pointed. The collar is in coat-shape, turned down, and the sleeve is finished with a gauge and frilled cuff. This graceful overdress can also be made of satin or velvet, Rather more original is a dress of dark rich crimson velvet, combined with a soft brocaded silk in one of the mode tones, with illuminated floral figures in olive and crimson. The lower edge of the velvet is fluted, while the skirt above is arranged in box-plaits composed of the two materials. the brocade is raised out on the velvet and secured like a long puff about the eighth of a yard from the end of the silk, giving the plaited effect at the lower portion. The tunic also of the brocade is draped and raised high on the left side beneath a silver buckle. The velvet bodice is tight-fitting, pointed and short in the hips. The collar is turned down and a cravat of the brocaded silk is passed under it, arranged in full puffs over the bust, with the ends pointed and fastened down on the corsage beneath crimson roses with olive green leaves.

An elegant tea gown is a combination of copper-colored plush, salmon-pink satin, and cream lace. The drapery is short on one side, is caught up with a satin bow far back on one hip, letting the plush fall partly over the satin, while the satin falls over the lace; and on the other side the satin is arranged in perpendicular plaits, which meet the plain falling plush. The waistcoat of cream lace half conceals the satin and is caught together with satin bows. The petticoat front is of satin, covered with lace and trimmed with satin bows.

Most becoming is a simple morning gown of cuir-colored cashmere, trimmed with a deep ruching of blue-corded silk. This trimming is passed around the skirt and twice up the front. A broad sash of the blue silk, which is satin finished, is folded and so arranged that it shows across the right hip and front, then is hidden among drapery until it again appears as a large bow and ends on the right hip. Lace finish in neck and sleeves.

A Queen's Birthday Patty.

On the birthday of the queen of Portugal a ball took place at Lisbon, in a temporary ball-room, on a terrace fronting the sea. It was hung with red and white striped cloth, and decorated with suits of armor and banners. Baskets filled with flowers and vines hung from the cornices, and the walls were festooned with vines, interspersed with dahlias of every conceivable hue, while large vases of flowers were placed at intervals around the room. The prevailing flower was the dahlia, which in Portugal attains to a size, beauty, and perfection of colors unknown in colder climates. The queen wore a scarlet corsage and train, the latter over a petticoat of white watered silk, richly embroidered with silver. She wore a girdle of silver cord, finished with two large tassels. Her diamonds were of great size and beauty. The dress was made high, on account of her delicate health. Owing to this the ladies present all wore high-necked dresses. The ball did not break up till half-past 4, as the queen wished to see the comet, and no guests left till after their majesties. The ex-king was present. His second wife, and consequently the stepmother of the present king, is an American lady, formerly Miss Elise Henssler, of Boston, who made her debut as an opera singer some thirty years ago.

The Cigarette Young Ma Talks.

A cigarette young man writes to the Philadelphia Times about the girls: "As for their not kissing a fellow because he smokes cigarettes, let me give as my opinion that the girls are about as ready and eager to kiss a good-looking young man, cigarette or no cigarette, as the young men is to have them. If the young man would stop the kissing until allowed to smoke anything from a rank pipe to a first-class cigar, they would not have to wait very long until the girls would say: 'Smoke, do anything bad you choose, only kiss me.'"

CHIT CHAT.

The shorter the tunnel the sweeter the kiss.

"Time works wonders," as the woman said when she got married after a thirteen years' courtship.

A South end woman keeps only one servant to do her work instead of two. She says help is always leaving, and when you are left alone it's much easier to do the work of one servant than two.

"What kind of a picture would you prefer, miss?" inquired the photographer of a young lady customer. "Well," was the reply, "take me with an expression as if I were writing a poem on love."

"Julia, my little cherub, when does your sister Emma return?" Julia—"I don't know." "Didn't she say anything before she went away?" Julia—"She said, if you came to see her, that she'd be gone till doomsday."

A very pretty girl prevented a collision by waving her apron. Had she remained out of sight the result would have been the same, however, as then the engineers would have been watching the track instead of looking at the pretty girl.

From singing-school the lover comes.
His girl upon his arm,
And sitteth by her father's fire,
And waiteth to get warm,
A foot at half-past one is heard,
The swain doth quickly scoot,
For fear of being too well warmed
By her fond parent's boot.

When Mrs. M.—gave a package of patent French coffee to Bridget, the cook, she said: "Remember, Bridget, that two boils are necessary to make it right." Bridget retired to the kitchen, but came again within a few minutes to Mrs. M— in an apparent state of excitement. "Sure, mum," she said, "an'it's insulted I am! I never had a boil in my life, and I don't intend to have two ivry mornin,' jist bekase yees wants yer patent French coffee."

The Countess de C., who regrets her young days, conceals her age as much as possible. Not only does she have recourse to all the contrivances of art, but each winter she calls herself one year younger than the preceding year. She betrayed herself however, at the opera the other evening by one of those expressions which are so common. Meeting Mme. R. the countess said to her: "Ah, how are you? It is a century since I have seen you." "You see," said one of her friends to another in a low tone, "She acknowledges her age now."

Mr. Wake, engineer of the River Wear Commissioners, and Mr. Irish, manager of the Northern District Telephone Company, in England, have made some interesting experiments in the use of the telephone by divers. The length of the cable connecting the receiver in the diver's helmet with the transmitter above water was 600 yards. It was found that the diver could converse with ease, and ask for tools in any position in which his work might require him to place himself.

How to Mesmerise.

A recent writer on the mysteries of mesmerism says: "I lay it down as a matter which can be verified by all who are curious enough to try it, that the mesmeric conditions can be produced without the supposition of a subtile fluid, without the use of cabalistic passes of the mesmerist, without the bouquet, the magnetic rod, or any of the mysterious means employed by the professionals to heighten the effect of what would be too simple and too unattractive if performed straightforwardly. The directions are these: Place the person to be operated on naturally in a chair. With your left hand suspend by a string, about a foot from the eyes, some small object, a dark marble, or a bright steel ball, or a diamond—it matters not what, though something bright is, perhaps, preferable. Direct the subject to fasten his eyes and contentrate his attention on the object. Slowly raise your left hand until the object is as far above the eyes of the patient as is compatible with his gazing steadily at it. Watch his eyes. At first you will see the pupils contract, but after a few seconds they will expand rapidly. When they are at the point of greatest expansion, move the first two fingers of your right hand from the object directly toward the eyes, the fingers being separated, fork-like, to embrace both eyes. As the fingers approach the eyes will close, and the subject will be unable to open them. After a quarter of a minute the subject will be thoroughly under control so that the operator may make him believe whatever he tells him. Left quiet the subject will sink into a profound torpor, during which his ears may be pierced, his cheek sewed to his nose, and even a finger cut off without pain. To arouse him—and this is an important step—wind, either from a hand-bellows or a fan, should be directed against his eyes, or else his eyes should be tickled with a feather. The rationale of the method is simple. The fixed stare of the subject fatigues his retinal nerves, and, when the operator's fingers approach the eyelids close, as eyelids always do when the eyes are threatened. But the fatigue of the nerves has produced muscular fatigue as well, transient paralysis in the eyelids has resulted, and they cannot be opened. The eyes being then closed, the delicate frontal nerves being exhausted, and the mind made vacant by monotous attention to one subject, the patient is in a condition to fall asleep—and he does fall asleep. He is now ready to dream. The only thing remaining to do is to make him dream. But how is this to be effected? Dreaming, as has long been determined, is the result of external suggestion. Dr. Gregory, to illustrate, having been thinking of Vesuvius, went to bed with a jug of hot water at his feet and dreamed that he was climbing the sides of the burning mountain. Dr. Reid read a book on the Indians, put a blister to his head on retiring, and thought in his sleep that he was being scalped. Both of the dreams, as all others are, were caused by suggestions offered externally. These suggestions, being received while the directing power—the common sense of the mind—was in abeyance owing to sleep, were interpreted very erroneously, yet according to plain laws of association. The hot water in the one case called upon the previous subject of thought—Vesuvius; the stinging blister, in the other, the equally stinging scalping-knife. It is now easy to see how the sleeping subject may be made to accept as truth whatever he is told.

A Night's Adventure.

One cold, stormy night, about twenty-five years ago, a tremendous ringing was heard at the door of Dr. J., just as he had composed himself to sleep after an unusual busy and fatiguing day.

On opening the door, a man appeared outside evidently greatly agitated in his mind.

"Doctor," said he, "I want you to come to our house just as quick as you can. Our little gal is awful sick. I dunno but she'll die. She has swallowed a brass thimble, at least we think that is what is the matter. The thimble is lost and she is dreadful sick. You'll come right off, won't you doctor?"

"Where do you live?" queried Dr. J.

"Land! I s'posed you knew me," was the reply "I live over the hill beyond Squire Benton's. It's about four miles over there."

The kind doctor hastily dressed, and ordering his horse, prepared to face the storm. The road to Tim Jones' was a very bad one, and the horse, already tired, seemed little disposed to enter upon the journey with spirit. A dismal and tedious hour passed before the doctor, benumbed with cold and almost exhausted, drove into Tim Jones' dooryard. There was no friendly light at any of the windows. All was darkness and silence. With some difficulty the doctor succeeded in fastening his horse in a shed, and making his way to the door through the muddy dooryard, hoping to find a comfortable fire inside, by which he might prepare himself to endure the jaunt home.

"No answer was given to his knock, and while he waited in the blustering wind and sleet upon the door-step, he began to think there might be some mistake about the house, when suddenly a window opened over his head, and a voice said:

"Oh, doctor, is that you? Well, they found the thimble afore I got home, and the gal seems well enough now. She's asleep now and it's a pity to wake her. I guess she's all right. I s'pose there isn't no use in yer comin' in. The fire's out and we've all just gone to bed."

The doctor turned to unfasten his horse and take his weary way home. Just as he was driving from the yard the window opened again and Tim's voice was heard shouting; "Halloo, doctor, see here, you won't charge me nothin' will you, seein' yer didn't come in?".

The reflections of the doctor as he drove home may be imagined, for I am sorry to say, this is a true story.

The Western Editor.

A Western editor received a letter from an indignant subscriber, who said: "I don't want your paper any longer." To which the editor mildly replied; "That is all right. I wouldn't make it any longer if you did, because in that case I should have to buy a new press. The present length just suits me, and I am glad it suits you." It is to be hoped this "soft answered turned away wrath."

The Bridge on the Ythan.

The most appalling accident that has happened on the Great North of Scotland Railway since it was opened has occurred, says the London Telegraph, on the Macduff and Turiff branch of the line. The accident occurred at a point on the line two miles from Auchterless station, and about the same distance from Fyvie. The custom of this railway is to run mixed trains of waggons and passenger vehicles, and the train which left Macduff at twenty minutes past four, due in Aberdeen at six o'clock, was of this description; there being three waggons in front of the carriages. After leaving Auchterless the train passes through a level country for about a mile and a half. At this distance there is a level crossing called Gatehouse. From this crossing the line rises till it reaches a bridge over the Ythan, a river about thirty feet wide. A few hundred yards further on there is a bridge across the Tuiff turnpike road. It is an old structure built more than twenty years ago. It is made of iron, with wooden crossbeams, and there was no railing at the edges of it. The height is about eighteen feet from the level of the road, and its length about forty feet. The train came to grief at this point. Telegrams from the spot state that the engine of the train and the guard's van had passed over the bridge in safety, but when the three waggons were crossing the bridge gave way and the vehicles were precipitated on to the road beneath. The carriages, in which there was a considerable number of passengers, were pitched by the force of their motion into the chasm, amid a scene of confusion and terror which it is impossible to describe. The vehicles were piled in a heap. One third-class carriage remained for a considerable time on the brink, but ultimately fell on the top of the debris. The vehicles thus thrown on the road were two third-class carriages, a van and three waggons. The only first-class carriage in the train remained on the line, owing mainly to the fact that the vehicles in front had filled up the gap. The engine remained on the rails about two hundred yards forward from the bridge, but the force of the falling waggons had pulled the tender off the line. The scene of suffering and horror that was witnessed by the engineman and surviving passengers when, amid the confusion, they had sufficiently collected themselves, was heart-rending. Mangled bodies were seen among the debris, and the cries of the wounded for help were piteous to hear. The more so that succor was not at hand. The spot was in the midst of a rural district and only a few scattered houses were within a couple of miles. Information was at once wired to Aberdeen, and as speedily as possible a special train was sent out with medical men, the manager of the line and his assistants and a number of persons to attend to the wounded.

A California Tree.

There was recently felled in Sonoma County, California, a tree which cut up as follows. The Petaluma Argus says that the details can be relied upon. The standing height of the tree was 347 feet, and its diameter near the ground was 14 feet. In falling the top was broken off 200 feet distant from the stump, and up to the point of breaking the tree was perfectly sound. From the tree saw-logs were cut of the following lengths and diameters: 1st, 14 feet long, 9 feet diameter; 2nd. 12 feet long, 8 feet diameter; 3rd, 12 feet long, 7 feet 7 inches diameter; 4th, 14 feet long, 7 feet 6 inches diameter; 5th, 16 feet long, 7 feet diameter; 6th, 16 feet long, 6 feet 10 inches diameter; 7th, 16 feet long, 6 feet 6 inches diameter; 8th, 16 feet long, 6 feet 4 inches diameter; 9th, 16 feet long, 6 feet 3 inches diameter; 10th, 18 feet long, 6 feet diameter; 11th, 12 feet long, 5 feet 10 inches diameter; 12th, 18 feet long, 5 feet 6 inches diameter. It will thus be seen that 180 feet of this remarkable tree was converted into sawlogs.

Firing of a Gun Loaded with Rattlesnake.

Cosmus Eckenrode, who lives on the Blue Mountains, was out hunting on Monday last. As he was crossing a small clearing he laid down his gun for a while to gather some Blue Mountain tea. Shortly after he picked it up again and was startled to hear very close to his ear the peculiar whirring of a rattlesnake, and saw the tail of the snake protruding from the muzzle of his gun. He dropped the gun quickly, but instead of coming out his snakeship crawled into the barrel again. After fruitless efforts to dislodge him Mr. Eckenrode resolved to fire the gun, which was loaded with powder and shot. This plan was very successful, and the snake, after taking a trip in the air came down badly used up.

Matrimony.

The essence of matrimony of the period, according to Joaquin Miller is;

I love you, Love: I love you, Love;
But, Oh! you must have money.

This is pure cynicism—that is, for the lower lake region. There may be more truth than poetry in it for people neither very rich nor very poor, who are so unfortunate as to be obliged to live in New York City. But then, Joaquin Miller has had hard luck in matrimony himself, and is not a generous witness. Whatever the proportion of truth in his gibe, we don't like his bald way of putting it. "The Autocrat of the Breakfast Table" hit it off better when he made some body say; "Don't marry for money, my boy, but—be sure the girl you fall in love with has money."

A Steam Balloon.

The centenary of Montgolfier's first balloon ascent at Avignon was celebrated on Nov. 18 by two banquets, representing the two sections of French aeronauts. One of these inclines to the discovery of apparatus imitating the flight of birds; the other to the steering of balloons. The former section is mostly composed of engineers; the other consists of disciples of the late M. Giffard, who succeeded, by a screw worked by a steam engine placed in the car; making the balloon deviate slightly from the direction of the wind. But though pressed to continue his experiments, he always postponed them, and died some months ago without even leaving any of the fortune acquired by his patent director to the furthering of balloon experiments. An immense balloon, however, is now being constructed with a steam screw, and will shortly be sent upon its trial trip. Two of Montgolfier's descendants were present at the banquet of this section.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE

The most successful Remedy ever discovered, as it is certain in its effects and does not blister. Read Proof Below.

Kendall's Spavin Cure

Hamilton, Mo., June 14,

B. J. Kendall & Co.,—Gents:—I write to certify that I have used Kendall's Spavin Cure, and have found it to be all that is recommended to be and in fact more than I have removed by using the above: Bone Spavins, Ring-bone, Splints, and cheerfully testify and recommend it as the best thing for any bony substance ever used, and have tried many as I have made that my study for years.

Respectfully yours,
P. V. Ch...

FROM

Col. T. L. Foste...

Youngstown, Ohio, May 10, ...

Dr B. J. Kendall & Co., Gents:—I have a very valuable Hambletonian colt that I value very highly, he had a large bone spavin on one joint and a small one on the other which made him very lame; I had him under the charge of two veterinary surgeons who undertook to cure him. I was one day reading an advertisement of Kendall's Spavin Cure in the Chicago Express. I determined to try it, and got our druggist here to get for it, they ordered three bottles; I took them all and thought I would give it a thorough trial, I used it according to directions and on fourth day the colt ceased to be lame, the lumps have disappeared. I used but one bottle and the colt's limbs are as free from lumps and as smooth as any horse's in that state. He is entirely cured. The cure is so remarkable that I let two of my neighbors have the remaining two bottles who are now using it.

Very respectfully,
L. T. FOST...

Kendall's Spavin Cu...

Wingham, Ont., Jan. 17, 18...

Dr. B. J. Kendall & Co., Gents:—I have to certify that I have used Kendall's Spavin Cure, bought from C. E. Williams, druggist, Wingham, Ont., and do without hesitation pronounce it to be an invaluable remedy for the cure of Spavins, Ringbones, or Curb. I have used it on a bone spavin of several years growth which it completely removed, and can safely say it will remove any Spavin, Curb or Ringbone if properly used. I have also recommended friends to use it, who have done so with perfect success. I gladly recommend this public, and will answer any questions by letters sent me.

Yours &c.
GEORGE BRI...

Kendall's Spavin Cu...
ON HUMAN FLESH.

West Enosburgh, Vt., Feb. 15, 18...

Dr. B. J. Kendall & Co., Gents:—Several months ago I injured my knee joint which caused an enlargement to grow the size of a walnut and caused me very severe pain for the time for four or five weeks, when I began to use Kendall's Spavin Cure with the most satisfactory results. It has entirely removed the enlargement and stopped the lameness and pain. I have long known it to be excellent for horses but now I know it to be the best liniment for human flesh that I am acquainted with.

Yours truly,
T. P. LAWRENCE

St. John, P Q Oct. 27, 18...

Dr. B. J. Kendall & Co., Gents:—I have used your Spavin Cure with great success for spavins, curbs and splints. I know it to be a good remedy for ringbones, bone spavins, cuts, galls and all kinds of lameness and difficulties about the horse. One of my mares sprained his ankle very badly. I applied Kendall's Spavin Cure and I never saw anything work like it, he was well in a few days. I know it to be good for man as well as beast. I procured one of your Treatise on the Horse by mail for 25cts. and I think it was by means of saving me $100 on one horse that I treated according to the directions given in your book for displaced stifle.

Yours truly,
Wm. J. PEARSON.

Send address for Illustrated Circular, which we think gives positive proof of its virtues. No remedy has ever met with such unqualified success to our knowledge, for beast as well as man.

Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. All druggists have it or can get it for you, or it will be sent to any address on receipt of price by the proprietors. Dr. B. J. Kendall & Co., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

Sold by all Druggists.

LYMAN, SONS & CO., Montreal, P. Q. Wholesale Agents

GEORGE NOBLE,
INSURANCE AND LAND AGENT,
LICENSED AUCTIONEER
For the County of Grey.

Agent for the following reliable Companies:
CITIZENS', of Montreal,
AGRICULTURAL, of Watertown, and
TRADE & COMMERCE, (Mutual) of Toronto.

A number of Choice Farms for sale, also Village Lots.

Auction Sales conducted in Town or Country on Shortest Notice: Charges moderate. Bills, Blank Notes, and Stamps provided.

GEO. NOBLE.

Overcometh.

To him that overcometh,—
O word divinely strong,
The victor's palm, the fadeless wreath,
The grand immortal song.
And his the hidden manna,
And his the polished stone,
Within whose whiteness shines the name
Revealed to him alone.

To him that overcometh—
Ah, what of bitter strife
Before he win the battle's gage
And snatch the crown of life!
What whirl of crossing weapons,
What gleam of flashing eyes,
What stern debate with haughty foes,
Must be before the prize?

To him that overcometh
Shall trials aye befall,
The World, the Flesh, the Devil,
He needs must face them all.
Sweet sirens of temptation
May lure with silvern strain,
And cope he must with subtile foe's
And blanch 'neath fiery pain.

To him that overcometh
Almighty help is pledged;
He wields a sword of purest mould,
By use of cycles edged,
And prophets and confessors,
And martyrs, matchless valiant band,
Have vanquished earth and stormed the skies,
With that triumphant brand.

O him that overcometh,
O promise dearest dear!
Which Christ himself who died for him
Will consecrate be near.
Will consecrate be near,
Shall rest upon his garments,
Shall deck rubies that royal be,
"Overcoming throne," the King hath said,
"Shall own shall sit with me."

O him that overcometh,—
O word divinely strong!
That carries itself through weary hours
Of conflict, rejoicing song.
Of conflict, rejoicing song,
Of the hidden manna,
Of the name unknown.
Of the Lord one day of days
Of that alone.

—MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

IS SACRIFICE:

OR,

For Love of Her.

CHAPTER IX.

Many times during his after life Arundel often asked himself bitterly why he did not die that day on the plains; why, if there is a God who can read men's future knew that God permitted him to live. I suppose all of us going our ways through life have seen people whom we have reasonably thought would be much better out of the world than in it. We have asked ourselves wonderingly how an all-seeing God could permit those to live who certainly reflect discredit upon Him as their maker, and are only a source of sorrow and pain to their friends. Verily, there are many things in this world hard to understand; perhaps there is no question more puzzling than this why two people are permitted to come together when one is to be only the cause of the other's wretchedness to the other; and when the question arises, it is sometimes far more easy to answer, it is fate, than it is God.

Whether or no his Creator had some definite purpose in view when He allowed Russel Anthon to live, is hard to say; however it was, he did not die, although he came very near to the dark river which separates life from death. When he went back the second time into that land of wild fever, Muriel's face went with him; every feature seemed to have stamped itself indelibly upon his memory; he would rave of the lovely eyes that had looked into his, the smiling lips that his had kissed.

Russel, watching beside him, knew that it was Muriel's beauty over which he was raving, could not conquer the pain that seemed to go through his heart, as he listened to the passionately tender words that fell from Arundel's lips.

At last the fever burnt itself out, leaving the child weak, helpless as a little child; and looking up into the face of the man who had watched him so untiringly night and day, recognized his brother, and knew that the appeal to Russel had not been in vain. But his weak condition the shock was almost much for him, it completely unmanned him, and his form was shaken with sobs, while face wet with tears as he whispered:

"Oh, Russel, I thought you would not come to me, that I would never see you again, and it seemed as if I could not die and not look once more upon your face."

Very gently and tenderly Russel soothed him, until more quietly Arundel said, painfully:

"I do not ask you to forgive me, my brother, I only ask you to pity me, I have suffered much, Russel."

Yes, he had suffered, certainly, that Russel knew; and never had he felt deeper pity for his erring brother than now, as he said, "The past is over and gone, Arundel, we will not think of it."

It was the day after the fever had left him that Arundel had been lying very quietly with closed eyes, so quietly that Russel, sitting near him, thought he was asleep, was surprised, when the dark eyes opened suddenly, to see that there was no look of slumber in them, only a deep wistfulness.

"Russel," he said, slowly, a flush creeping into his pale face, though he tried to smile, "I don't believe that my head is just right for something seems to bother me—something I can't exactly understand. I have a distinct recollection of having a picture in my hand—how it came there I cannot remember at all, but I remember the picture clearly. It was a woman, Russel, and it was the most exquisite face, with the loveliest eyes, and such a tender, smiling mouth. I can see it now just as plainly as I see you. It seems to be fast in my brain, on my eyes; I can see it always. Could it have been a dream, Russel, only a wild feverish fancy?"

The thin fingers were twining themselves nervously, restlessly together, there was a strained, excited look in the eyes that were fixed so eagerly on Russel's face.

Very quietly the answer came.

"It was not a dream, Arundel. The picture slipped out of my pocket when one time I threw myself for a moment down beside you, and you must have found it lying under a fold in the blanket—it is a picture of my wife, Arundel."

"Your wife!"

Vainly Russel tried not to notice the ring of bitter disappointment in his brother's voice, though Arundel himself was not aware that in the utterance of those two words he had betrayed his own feelings. He was silent for a moment; then he said, trying to speak lightly and with a miserable attempt to laugh:

"So you are married, Russel, and I never knew it; strange I did not think that it might be so. She is very beautiful; tell me about her, Russel; tell me all about—your wife?"

And then he lay very quiet, with one hand half over his eyes, while Russel told him of Muriel—of her beauty and sweetness, where he had first met her, and how long they had been married—last of all, of his great love for her.

"You do not need to tell how much you care for her," said Arundel, a little wearily, when he had finished. "I can see that very plainly for myself; and I suppose this beautiful Muriel of yours loves you just as devotedly as you do her. How did you ever win her consent to let you leave her and come out here and hunt me up?"

Little did he think how cruelly his words hurt Russel; he did not see the shadow that fell over his brother's face as he answered:

"Muriel felt so deeply sorry for you, Arundel, that she willingly gave her consent."

"Then she knows all about me, does she," said Arundel, bitterly—"knows what a miserable creature I am?"

"Yes, she knows all, Arundel; but there are no feelings in her heart for you other than those of tender pity. Her tears fell like rain as she listened to your story, and she told me to tell you that even though she may never see you, she will always bear for you a sister's love—that she will pray for you—pray that the remainder of your life may be nobly spent."

"Did she say that, Russel? God bless her; perhaps her prayers will help me; it is a long time since any woman prayed for me."

He stopped abruptly, turned his head away and lay, neither speaking or moving; and Russel, thinking he was tired, said gently:

"I am afraid I have let you talk too much; you are very weak yet; try and sleep, Arundel."

"I believe I am tired; while I take a nap you go out and get a little fresh air, Russel; you need it."

But after his brother had left him, Arundel Anthon did not sink into slumber; he lay there with closed eyes, thinking of Muriel.

"Muriel," he whispered to himself, "the name suits her; it is such a pretty name. Strange in all my life before no woman's face ever affected me as her pictured one has done, and she is my brother's wife. Ah, how sweet life must be to a man who has the love of such a woman as she must be; and how dearly Russel loves her—who could help loving her? I love her, I who have never seen her."

Then he fell to thinking of his lonely, loveless life. Never before had it seemed quite so desolate and barren to him as now; and thinking of it all, he could not restrain the tears which forced their way through his closed eyelids and trickled down over his thin, white face.

Though he would not own it even to himself, the knowledge that the woman whose pictured face had been a revelation to him of the influence a woman can gain over a man was a wife, and a brother's wife as well, was a crushing disappointment to him. It was singular, unnatural if you choose; probably it was because of his weak, low physical condition, but he had built upon that pictured face hopes which were brighter than any he had known since that terrible night when he had held Percy Evringham's dead body in his arms. The thought had grown in his morbidly active brain that he might some time meet the lovely woman whose soft eyes had looked out at him so tenderly from her picture, and in her he would find rest and peace; she would advise comfort, strengthen him, and perhaps who could tell? she might come to love him. Certainly it was a wild, unnatural thought; but then you must remember that Arundel Anthon was mentally and physically in that low state when wilder thoughts than this even are cherished.

After that there was not a day that he did not beg Russel to talk to him about his life; and thinking to divert his brother's mind from his own sad thoughts, Russel would tell him patiently about his home, his friends, his young wife, until after a while there was scarcely a detail in his life for five years back with which Arundel was not perfectly familiar. It was pitiful too, the deep attention with which the homeless, friendless, wifeless man would listen to his brother, as he described his beautiful home, grew eloquent over his many warm, true friends, and spoke so tenderly of his lovely wife.

And many times after he had heard it all, Arundel would say to himself with a great pang of sorrow and remorse.

"Ah, Russel, I do not envy you your beautiful home, your many friends, your wealth; but I do envy you—may God forgive me for it—your young wife."

But all this time he was growing stronger, and Russel began to think hopefully of getting back to El Paso; that would not be a hard matter as soon as Arundel was sufficiently strong to ride, for they had three fine saddle-horses at their disposal.

They had made all their plans. Russel had insisted that his brother should accept a large sum of money yearly from him, but though the liberal allowance would enable Arundel to live in comfort and luxury without a thought of work, still he had resolved to go into Texas, buy a large tract of land, and settle down to stock raising as a business.

"For I could not live if I did not work, Russel," he said, sorrowfully; "life is only tolerable when I am so busy that I have not time to think of myself; you have no idea what it is to have a past so terrible that it makes you shiver and grow faint to look back upon it."

Russel, of course, was to return to New York as soon as possible; now that he had seen his brother, had provided for his future, a great longing to get back to his wife had come upon him.

It was decided that in six months the two brothers should meet again in San Francisco, and that in the interval they should correspond regularly.

"And, my poor boy, you must never feel that you are alone in the world, that there is no one to take an interest in your welfare, to care whether you live or die," said Russel, earnestly. "Remember that as long as Muriel and I live, you will have a brother and sister who will always love you and think of you. Be true to yourself, Arundel; God will find you something to do, and life will not seem so hard, after all."

"Will your bring Muriel with you when you come to meet me in California?" said Arundel, wistfully. "I wish you would, Russel. I would so much like to see her."

And Russel answered cheerfully.

"If it is a possible thing, she shall come with me."

He did not think—poor Russel Anthon—that Arundel would see Muriel long before he would, that it would be many months ere his eyes would rest again upon his wife's face.

CHAPTER X.

It was the day before they were to start for El Paso, and Arundel Anthon, stretched at full length upon his blanket in front of the little cabin, was watching the sunset. There was a very weary look in the dark eyes fixed upon a huge red ball which every moment was sinking lower into its bed of rose and gold clouds, the white face wore the saddest expression which it is possible for a human face to wear—an expression of utter hopelessness.

Many times during the years which had elapsed since his own act had made him a wanderer upon the face of the earth, Arundel Anthon had been tempted to take his own life, never before so strongly tempted as now, for never had life seemed so terrible, so unendurable.

Sometimes we are unconscious of the blackness and intensity of the darkness in which we are walking, until a gleam of light reveals it to us. Often we can bear sorrow and pain with some degree of calmness and resignation, until by comparison with the joy and happiness of another, they suddenly grow intolerable. It is hard to reconcile ourselves to our own poverty when the riches of another man stare us in the face. After all, it is true, "What the eyes do not see, the heart does not feel."

Arundel Anthon had never realized quite so plainly all that he had lost, until he heard his brother speak of his own happy, peaceful life; then, with almost a breaking heart, he did realize, with bitter clearness, all that he had recklessly thrown away. Home, friends, the love of a wife, the spontaneous affection of children, these were for other men, never, never for him; and yet it might have been that, instead of being an outcast as he was, he had been sitting by his own fireside, with a woman's hand in his own—a woman, perhaps, with eyes soft as Muriel's—and with little children playing beside him. Ah, how that picture of what might have been came and went before the eyes of the lonely man, until many times he groaned in bitter agony, "My God my punishment is heavier than I can bear."

Now, on the morrow they would start for El Paso, there to separate, going each his own way again—one brother to go back to his home, to find there love and happiness and rest, the other to resume the old weary life of loneliness and labor and horrible despair.

Small wonder that Arundel's face wore its look of hopelessness as he lay there with the sunset-light falling over him, and compared his own life with that of his brother's.

He could hear Russel's voice plainly; he was only a few feet away, talking to the Mexican boy—asking some questions regarding the journey back to El Paso—and after a few moments he came and threw himself down beside Arundel.

"Everything is all ready," he said, wearily; "the horses are in a splendid condition, and if we start at sunrise we will be some distance from here by to-morrow this time."

"Yes, indeed," murmured Arundel, rather absently, letting his eyes wander slowly from the western sky to his brother's face; and then he raised his head quickly, for Russel's face was deeply flushed, and his eyes dull and heavy.

"You are not feeling well, Russel," he said, anxiously, "you look very badly."

"I am tired and my head aches, that is all," answered Russel, languidly. "I shall be all right in the morning, after a good night's sleep. You don't know how I long to get away from here, Arundel; it seems as though to-morrow would never come."

But Arundel's fears were not so easily quieted; he had seen too many men stricken down with the fever not to be seriously alarmed at his brother's appearance, and, rising hastily, he mixed some medicine, saying as he gave it to him:

"It won't do you any harm to take it, Russel, and it may do you some good; you can't afford to be sick now, you know."

Russel laughed a little as he drank it.

"Me sick, Arundel? Why, I have not known a day's sickness in years! I have a wonderfully strong constitution. As I said before, it is only a headache that troubles me now, and that will be all gone by to-morrow morning."

"I hope it will be so," thought Arundel.

But at sunrise the next morning, Russel's headache was not gone; it was there still, that dull, throbbing pain; and, after making several ineffectual attempts to rise, he fell back heavily, his face growing deadly white as a sudden fear came over him.

"Give me some more medicine, Arundel," he said, trying to speak quickly, trying not to give way to that sickening fear. "In a little while, an hour or so, perhaps, I will feel better; because we must start to-day, you know; we must get back to El Paso, I must go home to Muriel!"

And Arundel could not bring himself to tell him that not that day, nor for many days, perhaps never, would he ride back to El Paso; he could only stand there in silence thinking how he would break the news to him, until Russel, wondering why he did not speak, looked up into his face.

For a moment that which he read there stunned him; then, though his lips were colorless, they did not tremble as he said, bravely:

"It is the fever. Very well, we must fight it, Arundel, you and I, and, for Muriel's sake, you must not let me die."

So, from the first he was brave, calm, hopeful; even when he drifted off into the delirium, which is the natural course of that terrible fever, he did not rave wildly, madly, as Arundel had done. The days went on, the fever raged fiercely, and Arundel knew his brother was more dangerously ill than he had been; knew it and could do nothing but watch beside him and see him grow hourly weaker.

This thing is certain, Arundel Anthon had then not the slightest thought of the fearful thing he was afterward to do,; he had only one thought, one wish, one hope, and that was, that Russel might live to go back to his home, and to Muriel. He prayed, as he had not done since he was a boy, that God in mercy would spare his brother's life.

One day—it was toward nightfall—a party of surveyors stopped at the cabin and encamped about it for the night. They were Americans, all of them well educated men; and very anxiously Arundel asked their opinion with regard to his brother. Out on the plainsmen fraternized readily, and there was not one of those men who did not speak sadly, as in answer to Arundel's questions they told him truthfully that his brother had scarcely a chance for his life. They told him too, with grave faces, that they had that day seen what they believed were Indian signs, and Arundel was too well versed in frontier life not to be somewhat alarmed at the information.

The following morning before they went on their way, one of them drew Arundel aside.

"I don't believe your brother will live the day out, my friend," he said, bluntly; "he is sinking very fast; he is much worse this morning than he was last night, and I am not the only one who thinks so; ask any of the boys, they will tell you the same thing. And here's a bit of advice for you: just as soon as you possibly can get back to El Paso, or nearer to it than you are now; there are Indians about here, of that I am positive, and the red devils are not the most agreeable companions in the world; I've had many a brush with them, and I'd rather a thousand times take my own life than meet death at their hands."

The party had not been gone long before Arundel missed the young Mexican. At first the boy's absence did not worry him any, he thought he might have gone a little way with the surveyors; but when the time went by and he did not return, when he discovered too that he had taken their best saddle-horse and Russel's rifle, he could not help feeling very anxious.

Could it be possible that the boy was in league with the Indians, and had gone to apprise them of the whereabouts of the surveying party? It did not seem as if it could be so, for he had been so faithful and devoted to all outside appearances; yet when he came to think about it, Arundel remembered many of his actions, which, at the time of their occurrence, he had thought were a little strange.

Slowly the day wore on, still Russel slept that heavy sleep which was so like death, which must inevitably end in death; and Arundel kneeling beside him asked himself despairingly why Russel must die instead of him.

"If death must have one of us why did it not take me and let you live, Russel," he whispered brokenly. "I have nothing to live for, you have everything that can make life worth the living—great wealth, many friends, a beautiful home, a loving wife, and yet you must die and I live; I who am a disgraced, dishonored man, afraid to go back to my own country, afraid to bear the name which is mine by right of birth, an outcast, a wanderer."

And then his agony seemed to culminate in the words uttered in such a passion of anguish.

"Oh, my dear brother, why am I not in your place?"

Was there a demon standing beside him whispering in his ear? for surely the horrible thought that came to him and which apparently his own words had suggested, was devil-born.

"My God!"

With a low cry he started to his feet, great drops of moisture standing upon his forehead.

"How came that thought into my brain?" he muttered hoarsely.

"Surely I did not think it, no, no. not that; for though I have led a wild, sinful life, I could not myself have thought of that—Great God am I going mad?"

It seemed so almost; the blood had settled in spots upon his face, his fingers twitched convulsively, and there was a wild, hunted look in his eyes. Almost staggering he walked toward the door and stood leaning heavily against the framework.

Suddenly an exclamation escaped him. He bent forward eagerly, his breath coming in quick gasps. Far away, shadowy and indistinct in the distance, he could dimly discern a group of dark figures, so far off were they that they looked like stationary black dots against the clear afternoon sky. But Arundel Anthon had seen just such dark groups as that before; he knew what they were, knew too that they were not stationary—that they were advancing rapidly.

"Indians," he muttered, as after another long, searching look he turned back into the cabin. "I was afraid the red devils would track us out!"

For a few moments he bent earnestly over Russel; there was not a particle of color in the thin face, the lips were blue, the pulse so weak it was barely perceptible. With a deep sigh, in which relief was strangely mingled with despair, Arundel rose to his feet.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

On the estate of Clyth, in Caithness, Scotland, on rent day recently 200 tenants assembled in front of the shooting lodge, where Mr. Sharp, the proprietor was waiting to receive his rents. A deputation demanded a revaluation of the holdings, which, they said, are excessively rented. The request was refused, Mr. Sharp denying that the condition of the tenants is bad. The landlord's answer having been communicated to the tenants, they unanimously resolved to pay no rent until they got a revaluation, and they also decided not to pay arrears, lest they should be made as a cover for paying rent. The crowd then dispersed.

The "Victory."

If the reader should at any time find himself a visitor to the first naval port of Great Britain—which he need not be told is Portsmouth—he will find lying placidly in the the noble harbor, which is large enough to accommodate a whole fleet, a vessel of modern-antique appearance, and evidently very carefully preserved. Should he happen to be there on October 21, he would find the ship gaily decorated with wreaths and evergreens and flags, her appearance attracting to her side an unusual number of visitors in small boats from the shore. Nor will he be surprised at this when he learns that it is none other than the famous Victory, that carried Nelson's flag on the sad but glorious day of Trafalgar, and went bravely through so many a storm of war and weather. Very little of the oft-shattered hulk of the original vessel remains, it is true—she has been so often renewed and patched and painted; yet the lines and form of the old three-decker remains to show us what the flag-ship of Hood, and Jervis, and Nelson was in general appearance. She towers grandly out of the water, making a few sailors and loiterers on deck look like marionettes—mere miniature men; and as our wherry approaches the entrance-port, we admire the really graceful lines of the planks, diminishing in perspective. The triple battery of formidable guns peeping from under the stout old ports which overshadowed them, the enormous cables and spare anchors, and the immensely thick masts, heavy shrouds and rigging, which she had in old times, must have given an impression of solidity in this good old "heart of oak" which is wanting even in the strongest built iron vessel. Many a brave tar has lost his life on her, but yet she is no coffin-ship. On board, one notes the scrupulous order, the absolute perfection of everything of cleanliness and trimness; the large guns and carriages alternating with the mess tables of the crew. And we should not think much of the man who could stand emotionless and unmoved over the spots—still pointed out on the upper deck and cockpit below—where Nelson fell and Nelson died, on that memorable 21st, off Trafalgar Bay. He had embarked, only five weeks before, from the present resting place of his brave old ship, when enthusiastic crowds had pressed forward to bless and take one last look at England's preserver. "I had their hurrahs before," said the poor shattered hero; "now I have their hearts!" And when three months later his body was brought home, the sailors divided the leaden coffin into fragments, as relics of "Saint Nelson," as his gunner had termed him.

Tacks.

A tack is a simple, unpretending sort of a young nail, noted far its keen repartee when pressed for a reply, and possessing the peculiar power, when standing on its head, of causing the cold shivers to run down the back of a man in mere anticipation of what might be.

Tacks are in season all the year round, but the early spring is usually the time selected by them for a grand combined effort, and then they flourish everywhere for at least a month. Since the time of the inauguration of the time-honored ceremonies of house-cleaning, every thorough housekeeper, with long experience in the line of duty, so takes up the carpet as to retain all the tacks in their original places, thus preventing it slipping from the shaker's hands, unless the tack breaks or the fingers give out. But the triumph of the tack is not complete at this early stage; it patiently abides its time, and on the relaying of the carpet issues forth in double force. After searching the entire house for a paper of tacks, without success, the unfortunate man drops on his hands and knees to begin, and immediately discovers four tack at least, and as he rolls over and sits down to ext act these, finds the rest of the paper directy under him, and then unless he is a man accustomed to put up stoves and join stove-pipe the chances of laying the carpet on that evening are slight. In selecting tacks from a saucer he always inspects the points of his forefinger, as the tack instantly loses its head when they come to blows. In argument the tack is sharp and pointed, but the display of either or both, depends largely on the amount of pressure employed by its opponent. In direct contrast to a good joke the amusement generally begins before you see the point, and this fact is easily demonstrated by walking the floor in your stocking feet, a well-kept room on such an occasion averaging two tacks to the square foot.

The future of the tack gives great promise of more extended usefulness and unlimited possibilities, as several of our most eminent college professors have carefully studied the effect of a sharp tack of reasonable length placed properly in a chair or under a cot, are about to introduce tacks, and do away with spring-boards in our college gymnasiums.

The Wisdom of a Solomon.

A curious decision is reported as having been given by a Chinese mandarin the other day. A Chinese who had been drinking in a tea-house pulled out a dollar to pay the bill. This was immediately claimed by an Indian, who was there too, and who accused the Chinaman of having stolen it from him. On the matter being referred to the magistrate a second claimant appeared in the form of a Japanese; but neither could make good his case. After profound deliberation the magistrate came to the conclusion that there was not the slighest evidence to prove than the dollar belonged to either the Japanese or the Hindoo; he decided, therefore, that it should be divided equally between them, and the Chinaman discharged from custody.—North China Daily News.

The French in China.

It is stated in Paris that China is making great preparations to resist French designs in Tonquin. The French Government is consequently being urged to take active measures. Telegrams from Saigou to Paris report 10,000 Chinese have crossed the Tonquin frontier.

NOT A NEW DISCOVERY.—There is a women who eats with her eyes. She looks at food and her hunger is appeased. All women can talk with their eyes. The tongue is therefore a useless appendage to the sex; still there are women who have found something for it to do.—Progress.

A MERRY CHRISTMAS AND

The Standard.

MARKDALE, DEC. 21st, 1882.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

Boar Pigs—D. R. Ellis.
Estray Cattle—W. Wait.
Booming, Booming—W. F. Doll.
Undertaking and Furniture—Geo. Grant.
Auction Sale—Sm.. ., Smith & Rae, Toronto.
To the Electors of Euphrasia—W. J. Black.
To the Electors of Euphrasia—J. Erskine.

MUNICIPAL MATTERS.

To-morrow (Friday) will be nomination day and will decide who the candidates will be formunicipal honors.

In Glenelg—the present Reeve will no doubt be elected by acclamation. Mr. Mullarky, the present deputy, and Mr. Glencross, councillor, are likely to be the candidates for Deputy-Reeve, while the following names are mentioned as candidates for Councillors: Dunsmoor, Davis, Binnie, Neil, McMillan, McQuaig, and R. H. Boyce.

In Artemesia—Dr. Christoe will be re-elected by acclamation. In Priceville ward Mr. Webster, the present deputy, will resign, and Mr. John McArthur will likely be elected by acclamation. We hear of no opposition to Mr. Wright in Flesherton ward. Mr. Pedlar will be opposed by Mr. Wm. McKee, and Mr. Elliott will be elected in Markdale ward.

In Holland—Mr. Cameron, the present deputy, will no doubt be elected Reeve, while the Deputyship will be between Messrs. Norton and Shute, both of whom have been councillors for many years.

Euphrasia is having a lively time already. Mr. Myles and Mr. Gilray are in the field for the Reeveship, while Messrs. Fawcett, Ellis and Erskine are candidates for Deputy, leaving vacancies for three new councillors.

Very little is said publicly in Osprey yet, but there is need of a change in some of the members of the present board.

In Proton it is thought J. J. Middleton will oppose the present Reeve.

ON OUR TABLE.

THE FARMER'S ADVOCATE for December is before us and is no discredit to its name. It continues to improve and should be in every household. Only $1 per annum, or 85 cents clubbed with the STANDARD.

WILFORD'S MICROCOSM.—A monthly containing 30 pages devoted to the Discoveries, Theories and Investigations of Modern Science in their bearing upon the religious thought of the age. This monthly is only $1 per year, and is deeply interesting to all classes desiring information on the deep things of life, present and future, from the ablest writers on the continent. Hall & Co., Publishers, 28 Park Row, New York.

GRIP'S ALMANAC for 1883 is to hand, and is interesting, amusing and useful. Price 25 cents.

SAWYER'S COMMERCIAL PENMAN.—A monthly magazine devoted to pen, art and natural science. Published by Sawyer Bros., Ottawa, at $1 per annum.

We have received Vick's Illustrated Monthly Magazine for December and a prettier, better printed, or more useful volume it would be hard to find. It is furnished to subscribers at $1.25 per annum, and each number contains one of the finest colored plates that it is possible to conceive of, and is a perfect gem of art. It is quite evident that the sons of James Vick have inherited their father's talent in this respect, and we have no doubt will meet with the success their enterprise deserves.

PERSONAL ITEM.

The following references are to a matter of sufficient importance to enlist the attention of all our readers.

OFFICE OF THE CHIEF OF POLICE
HAMILTON, ONT.

I have much pleasure in stating, that I used St. Jacobs Oil in a case of very severe sprain, with Marvelous effect. I had been badly hurt and could not afford to rest too long: I therefore used the quickest means of relief, St. Jacobs Oil, which certainly worked wonders in my case. I consider it to be an invaluable remedy and shall not hesitate to recommend it to any one whom I meet, suffering from want of a reliable remedy. I regard St. Jacobs Oil as a wonderful preparation, and shall freely suggest its use to my friends,—or enemies for that matter—when I find them seeking anything for the alleviation of the terrible torture of rheumatism. I write this note voluntarily to say what I think of the Oil, and it may be used in any way to accomplish the most good.

A. D. STEWART, Chief of Police

Correspondence.

NOTICE.—We wish it distinctly understood that we do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions expressed by our correspondents

INSPECTOR'S OFFICE, S. GREY.
Priceville, 12th Dec., 1882.

MR. EDITOR, DEAR SIR,—Please inform the trustees and teachers of South Grey, through your valuable paper, that I have this day mailed to each school section in my district, copies of the following blank forms, to be carefully and correctly filled up and returned, viz:—Annual and Semi-annual Reports, Supplementary do., Special Report on Religious Instruction, and Trustees' Orders for the School Fund; also a memorandum of the number of teaching days in each month of the half year.

Included in the same package is an Appeal from Dr. Hodgins, and Inspector Hughes, of Toronto, Chairman and Secretary of the "Ryerson Memorial Fund," to be submitted to the Annual School Meeting on the 27th inst.

Yours very truly,
W. FERGUSON, I. P. S.,
South Grey.

To the Editor of the STANDARD.

DEAR SIR,—In your issue of the 7th inst. an article appeared reflecting very much on the respectability of our hotels. Now, sir, I hold that we have just as good and respectably conducted hotels in our village as may be found in a day's travel; and while there may be places in our midst which are a discredit to the town, yet all should not be classed as such without distinction.

X.

ARTEMESIA COUNCIL.

This Council met in the Town Hall, Flesherton, Dec. 4th, 1882.

Members all present.

Minutes of previous meeting read and confirmed.

Communications as follows were presented and read:—S. Coleman, S. Cowan re Convention to be held at Orangeville, J. Masson asking Council to return S. Kelly his school tax of 1881, A. Nelson re drains, the Clerk of Melancthon re Arbitrator.

Accounts as follows presented and ordered to be paid:—R. J. Sproule, postage, $1.70; S. Pedlar, services on committee, $2; Mrs. Thompson, bread to Boyles and Taylor, two indigents, $11.25; John Noble, repairing scraper, 75c.

Report of Committee on town line, Osprey and Artemesia, received and adopted.

By laws appointing deputy-returning officers and polling places, and to extend the time for return of the Collectors' roll until 1st Jan., were presented and read requisite number of times and passed.

A contract which had been let to one Chas. Ryan on the base line, not having been fulfilled, was cancelled, also the order to pay the same.

The taxes of Ann McKinnon, of Priceville, were ordered to be remitted, she being in poor circumstances.

Orders for payment of the Trustees rates in the different school sections were passed.

Chas. Lumley was paid $2, being balance of contract on town line, Glenelg, and Don. McDonald, 75c., repairs to the bridge in Priceville. Samuel Wauchob was paid $11, being road job in Ward No. 3.

The Reeve and Deputy-Reeve were appointed to attend a convention in Orangeville on the 12th inst. Mr. Wright was appointed to represent this Council at the arbitration re drains from Melancthon at Dundalk on the 12th inst.

After the business of the year was finished the Reeve was requested to vacate the chair, when the following resolution was put and unanimously carried.

Mr. Webster moved, seconded by Mr. Pedlar, that the thanks of this Council are due and are hereby tendered to the Reeve, Dr. Christoe, for the able and impartial manner in which he has presided over this Council during the year, and for the careful and painstaking manner in which he has discharged his duties as Reeve for the past year.

Council adjourned.

W. J. BELLAMY, Clerk.

The Minutes of Glenelg Holland council together with G's communicatiom and other matter crowded out this week; will appear next issue.

MARRIAGES.

ANDERSON—GILLESPIE—At the Primitive Methodist Parsonage, on the 20th inst., by the Rev. J. S. Corcoran, Mr. Robt. Anderson to Miss Sarah Gillespie, all of Holland.

DIED.

MORWOOD—In Euphrasia, on the 20th inst., Isaac Morwood, aged 16 years.

CROWTHER—In Williamsford, on 13th inst., Mrs. John Crowther, aged 64 years.

Auction Sale
OF PROPERTY

Situated in the Village of Priceville and Township of Proton, County of Grey.

Pursuant to the Power of Sale contained in a certain mortgage there will be sold by public auction at the Crown Hotel, in the Village of Priceville, on

MONDAY, THE 15TH DAY OF JANUARY, 1883,

at one o'clock in the afternoon.

PARCEL 1.—Lot 9, south side Kinross street; Lot 9, north side Torry street, Priceville, containing one acre, more or less. This is a good acre of land, well fenced, without any buildings on it.

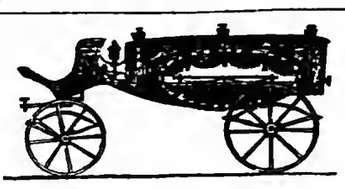
PARCEL 2.—Lots 11, 12 and 13 on south side of Kinross street; and lots 11, 12 and 13 on the north side of Torry street, Priceville, containing three acres more or less.

Upon this property is erected a rough-cast house 18x24, with an extension 12x23, and wood shed in fair repair also a stble 20x30. There is also a very nice orchard consisting of apple, plum, cherry, and crab trees, also currant and gooseberry bushes. There is also a well upon the premises. The property is well fenced.

PARCEL 3.—Also at the same time and place there will be sold lot 3, north side of Elgin street, and lot 3, south side of Harvey street, Priceville, containing one acre more or less.

Upon this property is erected a house 18x24 with an extension 10x24, and the property is fairly fenced.

PARCEL 4.—Also lot 17, concession 8, Township of Proton, containing 100 acres more or less.



Terms and conditions of sale very favorable and will be made known at time of sale.

The Vendors reserve to themselves the right of one bid for each parcel.

For further particulars apply to

SMITH, SMITH & RAE,
Vendors' Solicitors,
3 Building and Loan Chambers,
Toronto St., Toronto.

119td

Undertaking.

Coffins,
Caskets,
Burial Robes,
Gloves,
Crapes,
—AND—
All Furnishings for Funerals

May be had on Shortest Notice, and at All Hours from

GEO. GRANT,
MARKDALE.

Also a well assorted stock of

FURNITURE

from plain to fine quality, all at moderate prices. 119tf.

ESTRAY.

CAME on to the premises of the undersigned, lot 21, concession 12, Holland, about the middle of November, one red Steer, and two red and white Heifers rising three years old. The owner is requested to prove property, pay expenses and take them away.

W. WAIT.
Holland, Dec. 20th, 1882. 119-4t*

DYSPEPSIA & LIVER COMPLAINT.

Is it not worth the small price of 75 cents to free yourself of every symptom of these distressing complaints, if you think so call at our store and get a bottle of Shiloh's Vitalizer, every bottle has a printed guarantee on it, use according'y and if it does you no good it will cost you nothing. Sold at Wm. Brown's General Store, Markdale.

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE TOWNSHIP OF EUPHRASIA.

GENTLEMEN,—Having been urgently solicited by a large number of influential ratepayers to offer myself as a candidate for councillor for the ensuing year. I hereby respectfully comply, and would take this means of soliciting your vote and influence. If elected I pledge my honor to use my best endeavor for the best interests of the Township.

W. J. BLACK.
Epping. Dec. 16th, 1882. 119 2w.

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE TOWNSHIP OF EUPHRASIA.

GENTLEMEN,—I have been waited on and earnestly entreated by a large number of influential ratepayers of the Township and have consented to become a candidate for the office of Deputy-Reeve for the year 1883. Your vote and influence is respectfully solicited. Should you place me at the head of the poll I pledge my honor to use my best endeavors for the best interest of the Township regarless of locality or party.

JAMES ERSKINE.
Rocklyn, Dec. 16th, 1882. 119-2t

SUFFOLK BOAR.

A WELL BRED Suffolk Boar for service on Lot 6, Concession 7, Euphrasia. Also a Poland China Boar. Charges for either $1 at time of service.

D. R. ELLIS.
Dec. 16th, 1882. 119-6w.

Christmas

Headquarters of Santa Claus.

In returning thanks to our numerous customers and the public generally for liberal patronage bestowed upon us in the past, we desire to announce the arrival of our annual stock of Christmas goods which is extensive and well assorted, comprising and a great number of other articles suitable for Christmas and New Year. Wishing you the compliments of the season, we respectfully solicit a continuance of favors.

Christmas Cards, English and Canadian, China Cups and Saucers, Moustache Cups, Shaving Mugs, Bohemian Vases, Sets, Albums, a very large assortment, Card Cases, Wallets, Boxes, Shell Boxes, Writing Desks, Tin Toys, Books, Poems, Bibles, Prayer Books, Book Marks, Picture Books, Dolls,

Markdale, Dec. 5th, 1882. A. TURNER &

JNO. MONTGOMERY,
BAKER,

Begs to tender his thanks to the inhabitants of Markdale and surrounding country for past patronage, and to intimate to them that he is prepared to supply the public with either plain or iced and ornamented. Also Brides' Cakes got up in the best style that can be done this side of Toronto.

Fruit, Pound and Plum Cake

Bread, Buns and Cakes!

in great variety. All these are manufactured on his own premises by himself, besides Biscuit of every description from the best manufacturers in Ontario.

CHOICEST CONFECTIONERY

in great variety. Tea Meetings, Socials, and other parties supplied on the shortest notice and on the most reasonable terms.

JOHN MONTGOMERY.
Markdale, Nov. 22nd, 1882. 115-3m

W. H. CAMPAIGNE,

LICENSED Auctioneer for the County of Grey. Sales attended in town or country on the shortest notice. Charges reasonable.

Orders left at the STANDARD office will receive prompt attention. 117-3m

ESTRAY.

CAME into the premises of the undersigned, early in September, a Heifer rising two years old. The owner may have it by proving property and paying expenses.

JOHN MERCER,
Lots 109 & 110. E. T. & S. Road.
Artemesia, Dec. 5th, 1882. 117-4t*

Land for Sale.

100 ACRES; about 30 of which is cleared, being composed of the E. half of Lot 10, in the 8th concession of the Township of Euphrasia. Apply at this office, or to ROBERT DUNLOP, Township Clerk of Euphrasia, Griersville P. O. 117-tf.

Just Arrived!

A LARGE STOCK OF

NEW AND FASHIONABTE

DRY GOODS,

Boots and Shoes,
NEW GROCERIES,

At prices which will astonish you. Call and see.

Highest price paid for Butter and Eggs or any kind of Fowl at the CHEAP STORE.

JOHN DOUPE,
Flesherton Station.
Nov. 15th, 1882. 114-3m.

CABINETS

$3 per Dozen.

PANELS

$4 per Doz.

For the Holidays Only

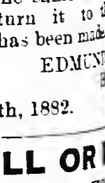
—AT—

J. L. BROWNE'S

OVER THE STANDARD OFFICE.

MARKDALE MA...

Fall Wheat, $0.80 to $0.82; ... to $0.85 Barley, 55c; Peas, ... Butter, 20c; Eggs, 22c; Potatoes, $9.00; Pork, 7.40 to 7 60.



FLESHERTON MA...

Fall Wheat, $0.80 to $0.84; ... to $0.90 Barley, 40c; Peas, ... Butter, 17c; Eggs, 22c; Potatoes, $9.00; Pork, $7.00 to $7 50

TORONTO MARK...

Fall Wheat, $0.90 to $0.94; ... to $0 68; Barley, 56c to 72c; ... Peas, 70c to 74c; Hogs, $7.50 ... toes, per bag, 75c to 80c; Butter to 20c; eggs. 23c to 24c.

A... H...

TAILO...

Over McFarland's
MARKDALE

Special attention to ...

If you want a Perfect ... your Order with.

A. ...

September 20th 1882.

BILLIARD R...

D. M. HOGAN, Prop...

First class tables. Cigars ... drinks to be had.

NOTE LOST

A NOTE DRAWN IN FAVOR ... McKenna, Markdale by ... Harkaway P. O., for $160. ... ing or having the same in ... will please return it to ... ed as payment has been made.

EDMUND ...

November 28th, 1882.

TO SELL OR ...

LOT 15, CON. 12, ... acres, 100 cleared, good ... on. Terms easy. Apply to ... Postmaster, near the premises.

M. S. KELLOW ...

November 14th, 1882.

Health is W...

Dr. E. C. WEST'S NERVE AND ... MENT, a guaranteed specific ... Dizziness, Convulsions, Fits, ... ralgia, Headache, Nervous Pro... ed by the use of alcohol or ... fulness, Mental Depression, ... Brain, resulting in Insanity, ... misery, decay and death, Premature ... Barrenness, Loss of Power ... Involuntary losses and ... caused by over-exertion of ... abuse or over-indulgence. ... cu e recent cases. Each box ... month's treatment. One dollar a box, ... six boxes for five dollars; sent by mail ... paid on receipt of price. We guarantee ... boxes to cure any case. With each order ... ceived by us for six boxes, accompanied by ... five dollars, we will send the purchaser our ... written guarantee to refund the money if ... the treatment does not effect a cure. Guarantees issued only by A. Turner, ... authorized Agent for Markdale, and E. ... C. West & Co. sole proprietors, Toronto.

A HAPPY NEW YEAR TO ALL

BOOMING.

BOOMING.

BOOMING.

THE GREAT

Discount Sale

—OF—

Watches,
Clocks,
Jewellery,

XMAS GOODS,

&c., &c., &c. at

W. F. DOLL'S

MARKDALE.

—o—

At Cost the balance of those beautiful Xmas and New Year's cards at W. F. Doll's.

GOODS ARE BEING GREATLY SLAUGHTERED.

Local Items

Mr. Wm. G. Moffat, of Osprey Township, sold a fine team of horses to Mr. J. R. Trimble, of Markdale, last week for $300.

Mr. Boyd (the weaver) is doing an extensive trade this season, and is not able to keep up with his work. He is an excellent weaver.

Reynolds & Son have in a fine display of goods suitable for Christmas presents. In fact their stock throughout is handsome and complete.

While the Georgia Minstrel band was playing on our streets the other day we heard several remark, "Why can we not have a band?" So say we.

Our esteemed and obliging townsman Mr. A. McIntyre has his shop fully stocked with fresh goods in every line, and is doing a fine trade.

We direct the attention of our readers to Mr. Geo. Grant's advertisement in another column. He is fully prepared to meet the wants of customers in undertaking and furniture of every description. Give him a call.

Mr. Browne, our Artist, was favoured last week with an order for a quantity of photographs, in groups, from the Georgia Minstrel troupe. Browne is doing some fine work in large groups with his monster Lense recently purchased.

GOOD YIELD.—Mr. John Whitby, a prominent farmer living 3 miles from here, threshed last week 9 acres of fall wheat and 8 of spring which yielded 34 bushels per acre all round. This we consider a good crop considering the general deficiency in spring grain.

The naughty man of the Orillia packet says he has good reasons to believe that the young ladies of the Orillia Baptist church do not lace tight. And now his better half is waltzing around the sanctum with a double barreled broom enquiring into those "good reasons."—Enterprise.

Berkeley S. S. Tea-Meeting came off on Friday evening last, and notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather and bad state of the roads there was a goodly number out, and a pleasant time was spent. The proceeds amounted to about $12 clear, which goes to purchasing a library.

A TREAT.—The Georgia Minstrel band serenaded our public streets last Saturday. There were twenty-three in the troupe, and their music was exceedingly well rendered. They gave an entertainment in Dufferin Hall the same night which was largely attended. The programme was ably and vigorously sustained. They appear to be quite a respectable troupe.

ENTERTAINMENT.—On Thursday, the 14th inst., an entertainment was given by the Meaford Road Bible Class in the Orange Hall. A very enjoyable and pleasant evening was spent. The chair was occupied by Mr. Thomas Boland. The programme consisted of music, speeches, recitations and readings, after which all returned to their homes well pleased with the evening's entertainment.

Choice brands of pure Liquors a McIntyre's.

A tremendous rush of business those days.

Annual School Meeting next Wednesday, 27th.

Nomination to-morrow (Friday) for Councillors and Police Trustees.

An endless variety of Candies, Sweet Meats, &c, at McIntyre's.

Sleigh Bells Chime to Doll's for Watches and Xmas Goods, and the very winds cry out he sells cheap.

Next Monday (Christmas) is a public holiday and places of business will be closed.

Our skating rink opened Saturday and was free that evening. The ice is good now. Hot Coffee provided in the rink.

Trimble & Wright are too busy to write advertisement this week. Come and see them and get some of the bargains.

A large stock of Oranges, Lemons, Candies of every description, Nuts, Biscuits, Oysters, Sardines, &c., &c., at McIntyre's.

Trimble & Wright have opened a branch store in Maxwell to accommodate their numerous customers from that section of country.

Some of the best bargains in Cloths and Clothing ever offered in the County of Grey can be had at Trimble & Wright's cheap store.

Trimble & Wright have received this week a beautiful line of Dress Goods in all the newest shades at 15c per yd., well worth 25c. and 30c.

Trimble & Wright say their trade is increasing far beyond their expectations. Their store is crowded with customers from morning till night.

Methodist Tea-meeting on Christmas Day from 5 to 7 p. m, after which addresses will be delivered and a good time may be expected. Admission 25c, children 15c.

At a meeting of Markdale A. C. U. W. held on the 18th inst., the following officers were elected for 1883:—R. S. Rae, M. W.; Jas. McDougall, Foreman; E. C. Large, Overseer; J. G. Irving, Recorder; A. McIntyre, Receiver; W. N. Haskett, Financier; G. Wilson, I. W.; J. H. Hull, O. W.

We have a speedy and positive cure, for Catarah, Diphtheria, Canker mouth and Head Ache, in SHHILOH'S CATARRH REMEDY. A nasal Injector free with each bottle. Use it if you desire health and sweet breath. Price 50 cents. Sold at Wm. Brown's General Store, Markdale.

Presbyterian Church Opening on Sabbath, 31st. Rev. Dr. Gregg, Professor of Apologetics, &c., Knox College, Toronto, will preach at 10.30 a. m. and 7 p.m., and Rev. D. McLeod, of Priceville, at 2.30 p.m. A tea-meeting will be held the following day (New Year's.) Doors open at 4 p. m., Tea from 5 to 7 p. m. Admission 25c, children 15c.

The majority of subscriptions to the STANDARD expire at the end of the year, which will be next issue. Many have already renewed and we hope to retain all the old ones and have their renewals promptly. Those at a distance desirous of renewing would do well to do so at once, as we purpose striking off any who have not done so by the 15th of January.

According to postal arrangements we are obliged to pay half a cent for each paper mailed at our own Post Office to be called for at the same office, which will cost us 26 cents p r. year on each subscription. Hence we will have to ask our patrons who have been getting their paper at Markdale Post Office, to call at the Printing Office henceforth. We hope it will not be any great inconvenience to you.

On Sunday evening last as Miss Armstrong and Miss Gamey were on their way home from Sunday School, they were knocked down and run over by three young lads on horse back. It appears the boys were running their horses on their way to water when the accident happened. We are glad to learn that the girls were not seriously injured, though considerably stunned. This should be a warning to boys who make a practice of running horses on the street on going to water.

OH, WHAT A COUGH!

Will you heed the warning. The signal perhaps of the sure approach of that more terrible disease consumption. Ask yourselves if you can afford for the sake of 50cts., to run the risk and do nothing for it. We know from experience that Shiloh's Cure will cure your Cough. It never fails. This explains why more than a Million Bottles were sold the past year. It relieves Croup, and Whooping Cough, at once. Mothers do not be without it. For Lame Back, Side, or Chest, use Shiloh's Porous plaster. Sold at Wm. Brown's General Store, Markdale.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.

The advertiser, having been permanently cured of that dread disease, Consumption, by a simple remedy, is anxious to make known to his fellow sufferers the means of cure. To all who desire it, he will send a copy of the prescription used, (free of charge,) with he directions for prepairing and using the same which they will find a SURE CURE for CONSUMPTION, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, &c.

Parties wishing the Prescription, will please address, Rev. E. A, Wilson, 149 Penn st., Williamsburgh, N. Y. 75-127

AGENTS WANTED.—Big pay.—Light Work. Steady Employment. Samples free. Address, M. L. BYRN, 46 Naussau stree New York. 20

VALUABLE PROPERTY

FOR SALE

IN THE TOWN OF DURHAM, IN THE COUNTY OF GREY.

THE following valuable town properties will be sold on reasonable terms or will be rented for a term of years, or exchange for farm propeoty.

1st,

Lot No. 1 on the west side of Gaisafraxa street and south of Hunter street, opposite Mr. J. H. Hunter's store house, well fenced and first class frame buildings, good cellars, hard and soft water, a most conveniant residence and would make a good business stand.

2nd,

That most desirable property being park lots Nos. 2 and 3 on the north side of George st., 8 acres more or less, well fenced, front fenced with pickets, one and a half acres of a thriving young orchard and very convenient to the railway station.

The east half of the west half on lot 18 on the west side of countess street with a new frame house and kitchen, good stable and wood shed, well fenced, front fence painted white, hard and soft water on the premises.

4th,

Park Lot No. 8, Wm. Hunter's, Survey.

5th

Lots 1 and 2, Presbyterian Survey.

6th,

Lot No 15 on the North side of Mill street in the village of Markdale close to the railway station, with good frame house thereon. If the above properties are sold the very best title will be given free from all encumbrances.

——Also the——

Following Farming Properties.

will be sold on reasonable terms of payment.

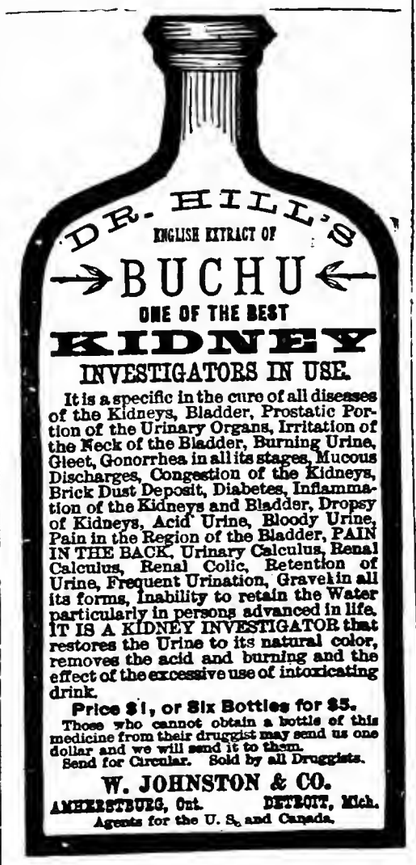
7th,

Lot No. 22, Con. 9 Glenelg, 100 acres more or less, 3½ miles from the T. G. & B. R. at Markdale, 75 acres cleared, a new frame house and two log barns.

8th

Lot No. 93 in the 3rd Con. W. T. & S. R., Glenelg, 50 acres, about 45 acres cleared and good log buildings, about 2½ miles from Markdale station T. G. & B. R.

9th,



The west half lot 17, Con. 4. N. D. R., Glenelg, 50 acres 40 acres cleared, good rough cast house and orchard on the premises. The house and one acre will be reserved during the life of the occupants who are now between 80 and 85 years of age.

10th

East part lot No. 1. con 2 Normanby, 63 acres, about 50 acres cleared, situation about 2 miles from the town of Durham. For further particulars apply to

FINLEY MacRAE, Durham.

Dated 15th August, 1882. tf 104,

Mothers! Mothers! Mothers!

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the excruciating pain of cutting teeth! If so go at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately—depend upon it; there is no mistake about it. There is not a mother upon earth who has ever used it, who will not tell you at once that it will regulate the bowels, and give rest to the mother, and relief and health to the child, operating like magic. It is perfectly safe to use in all cases, and pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Sold everywhere at 25 cents a bottle. 75-127

Re-Fresh-ing

In the cool assertion of some people that they can sell below cost, &c, it may not be amiss to let the public of Markdale and surrounding country know that

Wilson Benson,

of the "BELFAST HOUSE," MARKDALE, can sell "cheaper than the cheapest," and "better than the best," all kinds of

Groceries, Liquors, &c.

Consisting of

TEAS, TOBACCOS, SPICES, CANNED FISH, ETC.,

And for those wishing pure Wine for sacramental purposes, will find a brand that will equal anything on this side the Atlantic.

Other Liquors equally pure.

SPECIAL! Pure Holland Gin.

Cheese from the best manufactories.

Our Whiskies are from the firm of Gooderham & Worts, Toronto, and the public may rely on receiving them as they are sent.

FLOUR, POTATOES, and everything in the household line kept constantly on hand.

Henceforth my Store will be supplied with Fruits of all kinds, such as

APPLES, PEARS, PLUMS, &c.

FRUIT CAKES of all kinds always kept on hand.

Essences, Hair Oils, and Perfumery of the choicest nectars.

TOILET & FANCY SOAPS, better than the best.

CANADIAN & WESTERN PORK, of first quality.

Everything in the Grocery Line kept on a fuller and more complete scale than at any other place in Markdale.

WILSON BENSON.

PIMPLES.

I will mail (Free) the recipe for a simple VEGETABLE BALM that will remove TAN-FRECKLES, PIMPLES and BLOTCHES, leaving the skin soft, clear and beautiful; also instructions for producing a luxuriant growth of hair on a bald head or smooth face. Address, enclosing a 3c. stamp, Ben. Vandelf & Co., 5 Beekman st., N. Y. 75-127

ERRORS OF YOUTH.

A GENTLEMAN who suffered for years from NERVOUS DEBILITY, PREMATURE DECAY, and all the effects of youthful indiscretion will, for the sake of suffering humanity, send free to all who need it, the recipe and directions for making the simple remedy by which he was cured. Sufferers wishing to profit by the advertiser's experience can do so by addressing in perfect confidence, JOHN B. OGDEN,
75-127 42 Cedar St., New York.

Gold. Great chance to make money. Those who always take advantage of the good chances for making money that are offered, generally become wealthy, while those who do not improve such chances remain in poverty. We want many men, women, boys and girls to work for us right in their own localities. Any one can do the work properly from the first start. The business will pay more than ten times ordinary wages. Expensive outfit furnished free. No one who engages fails to make money rapidly. You can devote your whole time in the work, or only your spare moments. Full information and all that is needed sent free. Addres, STINSON & Co., Portland Maine. 71-126

MANHOOD

HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED

SEAL We have recently published a new edition of Dr. CULVERWELL'S CELEBRATED ESSAY on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, &c., resulting from excesses.

☞ Price, in sealed envelope, only 6 cents, or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

☞ This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Address

The Culverwell Medical Co,,
P.O. box 450 41 Ann St., New York

$500 Reward!

We will pay the above reward for any case of Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Indigestion, Constipation or Costiveness we cannot cure with West's Vegetable Liver Pills, when the directions are strictly complied with. They are purely Vegetable, and never fail to give satisfaction. Sugar Coated. Large Boxes, containing 30 Pills, 25 cts. For sale by all Druggists. Beware of counterfeits and immitations. The genuine manufactured only by JOHN C. WEST & CO., "The Pill Makers," 81 & 83 King St. East, Toronto, Ont. Free trial package sent by mail prepaid on receipt of a 3 cent stamp. For sale at Turner & Co. Drug Store.

STRAYED

FROM THE PREMISES OF THE UNdersigned Lot 3, Con. 7, Euphrasia, about the last of August, one Steer and one Heifer, dark grey, and one Heifer white, all rising two years old. Any person giving such information as will lead to their recovery will be suitably rewarded.

JOHN HUTCHINSON,
118-3w* Vandeleur P. O.

Teacher Wanted

FOR S. S. No. 3, Holland and Euphrasia. Duties to commence the 2nd day of January, 1883 Apply, stating salary, to

ALEX. MURDOCK, Sec'y,
115-4w. Harkway P. O

MARKDALE Meat Market.

A constant supply of

Fresh Meats!

on hand, at the

Lowest Living Prices.

Orders solicited, and delivered free to all parts of the Town.

Farmers having fat stock to dispose of, will please leave their addresses.

TERMS, STRICTLY CASH.

FRED. SARJEANT.

Markdale, March 23, 1882. 80-ly

SEEING IS BELIEVING.

GENTLEMEN,—

If you want a first-class

Buggie or Wagon

call at

MCKENNA & MASON'S

CARRIAGE WORKS

MARKDALE.

They can supply you with anything from a

Lumber Wagon

up to

Extension Top Phæton.

To buy from them is to

SAVE MONEY!

They are both practical workmen, and employ none but

PRACTICAL WORKMEN

They guarantee their work Second to none for Lightness of Draught and Superiority of Finish.

They use nothing but First-class White Oak for Wagons, and thrice Extra Second Growth Hickory for light work.

The immense amount of work turned out of McKenna & Mason's shop is sufficient proof of the wide reputation they enjoy for doing good work.

THE BEST IS THE CHEAPEST IN THE END

Poor cheap work we positively will not take.

Special attention given to Re-Trimming and Repainting all classes of Carriage Work.

Satisfaction guaranteed (or No Pay) in

HORSESHOEING

SHOP—On Mill Street opposite to Sproule's Hotel.

McKENNA & MASON.

THOS. MATTHEWS,

Harness Establishment!

MARKDALE.

EVERYTHING IN OUR LINE KEPT ON HAND OR MADE TO ORDER ON SHORT NOTICE.

LIVERY!

IN CONNECTION.

GEORGE WILSON,

Wholesale and Retail

BUTCHER!!

BEEF, PORK OR MUTTON SUPPLIED. from a single pound to a whole carcass, at the lowest market prices.

FISH & FOWL IN THEIR SEASON

Farmers having Fat Cattle, Sheep, or Pigs to dispose of will do well to call at No. 3 Burns' Block, opposite the new Union Block.

Markdale. Oct. 25th, 1881.

Nothing Like Leather.

M. M. M'LEOD,

MARKDALE.

NOT TO BE BEATEN!

All those who may have had the misfortune to have been born barefooted will bear in mind that we have just received the largest and best stock of leather ever before brought into Markdale, consisting of Spanish Sole, French Kip and Calf, and are now prepared to manufacture Ladies, Gents, Youth's and Misses boots and shoes, from the stoga to the finest kid and prunella.

Sewed Work a Specialty.

All work warranted. Invisible patching also done here.

M. M. McLEOD.

Markdale, Sept. 19th, 1881.

LATEST NEWS NOTES.

Sparks From the Wires — Domestic and Foreign—Five Minutes' Select Reading—Items to Interest Everyone.

Two hotels were recently burned at Winnipeg. Loss, $60,000.

The Dominion Government have promised a large subsidy for the Gatineau Railway.

By the flooding of a mine in Creswick, Victoria, Australia, twenty persons were drowned.

Sixty persons have been killed by the explosion of a magazine at Guayaquil, South America.

China is establishing defence armaments on a large scale and massing troops on the Russian frontier,

The Argentine Confederation has taken possession of territory claimed by Brazil, and both countries are preparing for war.

A suitable location on the Saskatchewan River has been granted by the Dominion Government to a company who propose to wash for gold.

In order to relieve the great destitution in the southern provinces of Spain it is proposed to spend a large sum in public improvements.

The city of Athens, Greece, will confer its freedom upon Mr. Gladstone on the occasion of his fiftieth anniversary of his entering Parliament.

While Chili and Peru are as far as ever from making peace, there is every possibility of a speedy termination of hostilities between Chili and Bolivia.

The Imperial Government decline to order the construction of any relief works in Ireland during the coming winter. They will depend on the Board of Guardians to look after the matter.

A motion will be introduced in the Spanish Cortes declaring that the present constitution satisfies the requirements of the nation, and the aspirations for liberty.

Vollmar, the Socialist Deputy, declared in the German Reichstag that the Socialists would not be induced by trifling concessions to abate anything of their demands.

The Mennonites, of Southern Manitoba, have been subjected to a species of boycotting by the grain buyers of Emerson and West Lynne, and as a result their position is becoming a hard one.

Further particulars of the recent fire at Kingston, Jamaica, places the loss at three millions sterling. Four hundred stores and all the warehouses, wharves and stores were consumed, and five lives were lost.

At the Elgin County Court recently a prisoner was acquitted of stealing a watch, although the evidence was conclusive against him. Commenting upon the verdict, his Honour Judge Hughes said he had never seen a clearer case, and believed the jury had been tampered with.

The Grand jury of Frontenac have expressed approval of the County Judge's remarks in favour of corporal punishment for juvenile offenders, but add a rider suggesting that where the children are led into crime by their parents the latter receive the lash instead of their offspring.

The last strike at Montreal has been renewed. The men returned to work for one day, but when they were asked to give a written pledge not to interfere with their employers in selecting workmen in future they refused, and again went out in a body.

The famous Hampton Court Palace narrowly escaped destruction by fire recently. The conflagration broke out in a suite of private rooms above the celebrated picture gallery, the contents of which were greatly damaged by water. The magnificent ceiling painting in Queen Anne's bedroom, and many other works of art of great value, were seriously damaged. One of the inmates was burned to death.

A settlement of the difficulties arising from the co-education of the sexes at the Royal Medical College, Kingston, has not yet been reached. The students, in reply to a compromise offered by the faculty, have presented their ultimatum, which requires that no more females be admitted, and that the females now studying be compelled to finish their course by taking summer sessions, and that the two sexes hereafter be kept separate. A rumour was current late last evening that the Gordian knot had been severed by the ladies withdrawing from the College.

In speeches delivered lately Lord Derby and Mr. Forster both declared against Home Rule for Ireland. Two important arrests have been made as Dublin in connection with the late assassination of Lord F. Cavendish and Under Secretary Burke. Mr. Parnell has taken advantage of the legislation of last session to sell his estate in order to give the tenants an opportunity to become owners. By the destruction of the co-operative stores at Dublin it is feared that the caretaker and his family were consumed.

The World's Population.

In the seventh volume of "Die Bevölkerung der Erde," we find that the earth, on a space of 136,038,872 square kilometres, counts 1,433,887,500 inhabitants, making on an average 10. 5 inhabitants to every square kilometre. Europe is the most thickly populated portion, with 34 inhabitants for every square kilometre, then Asia with 18, Africa with seven, America with 6, and Australia and Polynesia with 0. 5. Of European States, Belgium comes first with 188 inhabitants per square kilometre, the Netherlands with 123, Great Britain with 112, the Azores with 106, Italy with 99. San Marino with 91, Germany with 84, Luxembourg with 81, France with 71, Switzerland with 69, Austria with 61, Leichtenstein and Denmark with 51, Portugal with 45, Roumania with 41, Servia with 35, Spain with 33, Bulgaria and Greece with 31, Montenegro and Turkey with 26, Bosnia and Heregovina with 22, Russia with 17, Sweden with 10, Norway with 6, and Finland with 5. Of States out of Europe we take Japan with 95 inhabitants per square kilometre, India with 67, China (exclusive of neighboring lands) 87, Annam 48. The united States has only 5. 4, and Chili the most populous South American State, only 4. 5. Excepting the Polar regions, the most thinly populated countries are Canada with 0. 5, the Sahara with 0.4, and Siberia with 0.3 inhabitants per every square kilometre.

SOME WONDERFUL FIGURES BY AN EMINENT MAN.

The Fiery Stage—How Long the Earth was in Cooling.

It has been shown that had past geological changes in the earth taken place at the same rate as those which are now in progress 100,000,000 of years at the very least would have been required to produce those effects which have actually been produced, we find, since the earth's surface was fit to be the abode of life. But recently it has been pointed out, correctly in all probability, that under the great tide-raising power of the moon in past ages, these changes would have taken place more rapidly. As, however, certainly 10,000,000 of years, and probably a much longer time, must have elapsed since the moon was at that favorable distance for raising tides, we are by no meas enabled, as some well-meaning but mistaken persons have imagined, to reduce the life-bearing stage of the earth from a duration of 10,000,000 of years to a minute fraction of such a period. The short life, but exceedingly lively one, which they desire to see established by geological or astronomical reasoning, never can be demonstrated. At the very least we must assign 10,000,000 years to the life-bearing stage of the earth's existence. If we now multiply this period by seven for Jupiter we get a period of 60,000,000 years longer. But take the stage preceding that of life on the earth. From the researches of Bischeff into the cooling of masses of heated rock, it seems to follow that a period of more than 300,000,000 years must have been required for the cooling of the earth from a temperature of 2,000° centigrade to one of 100°, a cooling which has certainly taken place. Suppose, however, that these experiments, or the calculations based on them, were vitiated by some error so considerable as to increase the real duration of the fiery stage of our earth's history more than tenfold, the real duration of that period being only 30,000,000 years. Multiply this in turn by 7, and we get a period of 210,000,000 years, or 180,000,000 years longer. We ought next to consider the vaporous stage; but the evidence on which to form an opinion as to the duration of this stage of a planet's history is too slight to be the basis of actual calculation. Here, as Tyndall has well remarked, "conjecture must entirely cease." But, by considering only two stages—the fiery stage and the life-bearing, or rather that portion of the life-bearing stage through which the earth has hitherto passed—we find the two monstrous time differences—180,000,000 and 60,000,000, or 240,000,000 years in all. They mean that, if our assumptions as to the effect of Jupiter's superior mass is correct, then, supposing Jupiter and the earth to have started into existence as distinct orbs at the same or nearly the same time, 240,000,000 years must elapse before Jupiter will reach the stage of planetary life through which our earth is now passing. Whether the assumption be correct or not, the time differences between the stages of Jupiter's life and the earth's are of this order They must be measured by tens of millons if not by hundreds of millions of years. We must note, however, that the 240,000,000 years correspond with only a seventh part of that time in the earth's history; so that we may say that, if our assumptions are correct, Jupiter would now be in the state in which our earth was 34,000,000 years ago, or nearer the beginning than the end of the fiery stage.—Proctor, in Belgravia.

Canada Victorious.

From papers and private letters received by the last Pacific mail from Honolulu, capital of the Sandwich Islands, we obtain accounts of events in boat racing which ought to be of much interest to Canadians, showing as they do that our oarsmen, amateur as well as professional, can take care of the reputation of their country in any part of the world,

The occasion was a grand regatta held in celebration of the forty-sixth birthday of his Majesty, King Kalakaua. Vast crowds thronged the wharves and swarmed in the rigging of vessels to view the races.

One of the principal contests was a six-oared gig race—first prize, the Queen's cup and $100; second prize, $50. There were four entries, including a crew from the frigate "Alaska," of the United States navy and one from the Canadian mechanics' employed in constructing a marine railway in the harbor of Honolulu. The Canadians rowed in a boat belonging to the king, called the "Kapuaala," which signifies a certain sweet smelling flower of the Islands, and all the boats are described in a local paper as being fine, with splendid looking crews. The marine railway crew obtained choice of positions, each boat strove for first place at the start, and each took it in turn. At a short distance all had settled down to an average stroke of about forty to the minute. Outside the harbor, where the trade wind blowing pretty briskly made a wabbly sea, the marine railway crew drew gradually ahead and kept there throughout the race, beating the second boat by 27 sec., the third by 1 min. 23 sec., and the fourth (the American) by 1 min. 30 sec. The report in a Honolulu paper says "the marine railway boys felt very good over their success, and announced that they would 'pull around a little' to warm themselves up for their second effort later in the day. The 'Alaska' boys were somewhat chagrined at the result of the race but consoled themselves with the reflection that everybody couldn't be last."

The winners are all or nearly all from Nova Scotia, and their names are as follows: "Charles H. Purdy, stroke oar, Edward Webbe, Dougal Welsh, James A. Lyle, John DeBay, Henry Phener, bow oar.

Of course the royal family were spectators of the struggle for the Queen's cup, and His Majesty actually backed the Canadians heavily during the progress of the race. The gentleman who entered the winning boat for the race, it is said, won three thousand dollars by backing it.

Later in the day three six-oared gigs contested for the Likelike purse of $100, second prize $50, and the "Kapuaala" with the same crew was again the winner, beating its former record by 1 min. and 5 secs., and the second boat by 2 min., 23 sec. The U. S. naval crew did not contest this event. Hearing that the Americans attributed their defeat in the first race to the superior boat used by the Canadians, the latter offered to exchange gigs and row them, but the offer was declined.

AN OSTRICH'S NEST.

The Care Taken of It by the Parent Fowls.

After pairing, the ostrich begins to make his nest. It is the male alone that performs this duty. To do this it squats upon the ground, and balancing itself upon its sternum, it scratches up the earth with its legs and throws the sand behind it. When it has dug out enough on one side to suit it, it turn around and begins to dig on another side, and continues this operation until it has made a hole large enough to sit in comfortably. This nest is elliptical in shape, and is about 0.25 meters deep, 1 meter wide, and 1½ mtters long. A few days after the nest is finished the female begins to lay one egg on every alternate day for eighteen or twenty days. She then rests for a while, which time varies from four to ten days, and then begins to lay more. A pair of ostrich yield forty eggs. This is only the minimum number, which is always reached. It is not unusual for a well fed, well kept pair to yield fifty and even sixty eggs. These eggs are placed so as to leave no spaces between them. They are sat upon at first for several hours each day, and finally altogether. The male and the female brood alternately. At night the male is always on the nest, as it possesses greater warmth than the female. When the birds relieve each other on the the nest, the new comer turns over each egg, in order that the portion which has lain against the nest shall receive the warmth of the brooder. These birds perform their duties with the greatest skill, without any noise or breakage of the eggs. They squat down and with their head and neck rake up and overturn every one of the eggs, one after the other, without neglecting a single one. The incubation lasts forty-five days on an average, sometimes fifty days, but never continues beyond that. When the chickens hatch out they can be heard trying to break the shell of the eggs. Sometimes they succeed in doing so, but usually the father breaks the egg under his breast bone, and seizing with his bill the inside skin tears it and frees the chickling. Upon first reaching the air the chickling remains limp and weak. But the warmth of the parents soon revives it, and a few hours afterwards it begins to run about the nest, exercising its long legs, tottling over at each step, and recommencing again its stumbling journey. Four days after their hatching the chickens begin to eat. They run after insects and swallow small pebbles. The father and mother do not help their little ones find food.

Close Shots.

One or two cases of very narrow escapes from death by a bullet occur to me. During the Kaffir war, which I have already alluded to, I several times accompanied large parties of troops sent out to intercept or pursue bodies of the enemy, or to destroy kraals or capture cattle. We never succeeded in intercepting or overtaking Kafirs unless thy were in strong parties and desired to fight, and, as we marched along by day, the Kaffirs, in loose order and in parties of two and three, would hang on our banks and rear, showing themselves upon the high ground, but keeping out of range of our muskets. One night four of us were sitting cross-legged round a little fire, on which we had put our coffee kettle to boil, and, as we thus sat, a report, followed by the ring of a bullet, close over our heads, warned us that Kafirs were prowling about. This was followed by several other shots, which struck the ground quite close to us; but we were tired, and cold and hungry, having no food all day, and we were unwilling to lie down to sleep on the bare ground, with empty stomachs. We therefore determined, in spite of danger, to keep the fire burning till the coffee was ready; and to hurry this one of us stooped down to blow the fire with his mouth, when another shot settled the matter, for a bullet passing between two of us smashed the kettle and scattered the embers about the head of the one who was blowing the fire. How close the bullet passed to his head may be imagined, for it touched his hair. There was nothing to be done but to stamp all the embers out, roll ourselves in our cloaks, and light our pipes to keep down the cravings of hunger. At the relief of the residency of Lucknow the colonel of my regiment had two very narrow escapes. As he was cantering from one position to another, the motion of the horse raised him a little out of the saddle every now and then, and just at the moment when he was raised out of the saddle a bullet passed below him, tearing the leather open along the whole seat of the saddle. Had he been sitting still in the saddle he would have been horribly wounded. Shortly after the bullet struck the handle of his revolver, which was in a pouch, attached to his sword, and but for the revolver he would have received a mortal wound. —Chambers' Journal.

A Live and a Dead Buck With Locked Horns.

The particulars of a very remarkable occurence near Brander's Bridge, in Chesterfield county, Virginia, have been received. A son of Charles Harrison, and another gentleman, named Baird, were out opossum hunting, some nights ago, in the vicinity of the bridge, when they heard their dogs baying in a reedy swamp close by. The gentlemen then concluded to go home and procure a gun, and on their return found that the dogs were after two large bucks, one with eight prongs and the other with ten points. For some cause or other the buck with the eight prongs had killed the one with the ten points with ons of its prongs. The prong entered near the eye and came out near the ear. By some means the prong of each of the bucks became interlocked, and had evidently been so for several days, as the dead animal had been dragged a considerable distance, and had been killed long enough to become offensive. The live buck which had undoubtedly suffered for food, was in a very poor and emaciated condition, and was shot and killed before the marksmen could recognize what it was in the dark.

SPELLING.—The advocate of the short way of spelling are circulating this: "A little fellow in a primary school was asked by his teacher to spell the word knife. After he had correctly done so he added, "But what's the K for?"

Dutch Costume.

There is not much to see in the way of costume in the large Dutch cities. Any part of London or Paris would shew as great a variety. In fact, I should be inclined to back a London "Blue-coat School" boy against anything in Holland, as not only being more downright picturesque, but also more historically correct and interesting to a student of costume. He means something. I do wish, however, that the Blue coat boy himself could only know how well the real cap of the period would go with the rest of the dress, and wear it bravely. No, he would rather go bare headed all the days of his life, in the wildest weather, than stand the street gamin comparing his head-gear to a "muffin." His patron Edward VI. wore one of the same shape. But what would the London street boy say to the costume of half-orphan schools of Amsterdam? Some sad humorist of philanthropic turn, in years gone by, thought it a neat idea to make the children of the school dress forever after in a party-colored dress of black and red. I have no doubt that he saw in it some fitting reminder of their half-orphaned condition if they were grotesquely pied up and down with these two striking contrasts,

The "Aan Spraaker" is also, to the innocent stranger, more of an object of amusement than his grewsome and serious office intended him for. He is a quick-moving individual, rushing from house to house, bearing tidings of deaths and births. He is clad in black cloth citizen's costume of the last century, cocked hat, white streamer behind flying in the wind if his message is of birth (some subtle sub-meaning also conveyed of sex as well, I fancy), a black streamer if of death. His knee-breeches, black stockings, and shoes with great silver buckles make him rather a striking figure as he cuts along the streets on his momentous errands. He always struck me as having left something important behind him at home, and as hurrying back for it with all his might. As a picturesque object, or as an expression by means of outward show of his serious mission he struck us as being somewhat of a failure. —GEORGE H BOUGHTON, in Harper's Magazine for January.

A Discriminating Butler.

There are some fine minds left here. One of these belongs to the butler of a friend of mine, whose faculty of discriminating was only equalled by his love of rule. My friend is an eminent surgeon, at the head of his branch of the profession, very wealthy and fond of entertaining his friends. His butler was of the old and faithful retainer variety and knew his work perfectly. When his master told him he was going to have company to dinner he coolly asked who the people were. Then he would recollect that Mr. X. liked codfish or Mr. Y. curry, and debate the menu by items. The only difficulty was about wine. The master has a magnificent cellar and likes to give everybody the best of everything, but the butler did not see things in that light. When his master had ordered certain wines from choice bins his zealous custodian would say: "Ardly, sir, I think, the '40 or '47 port to-night. The company won't understand it, Sir. Something fruitier would suit them quite as well. This would occur whenever no special connoisseurs of port wine were coming, and was well enough, but sometimes the butler went too far. One day the eminent surgeon was giving a dinner to his assistants and dressers at the hospital, and ordered a fine dinner with the best wine. The port was protested against. "For them young gents. sir?" was asked in an appealing tone. This point was yielded, and the victor then objected to the champage:

"Perrier Jouet tres sec would be quite throwed away, sir. There is some of that lot you bought the other day would do just as well."

"But what," roared the master, "am I to drink? I can give my guests wine I won't drink myself."

"Which you might pass it, sir, for once," was the reply; "champagne ain't good for you, sir, leastways every day."

This was trop de zele, and my surgeon friend parted with his chief butler, to my profound regret, for the new man knows not Joseph, and will allow all the best bins to be wasted on women and boys, instead of reserving them for viveurs accomplis.—London Cor. New Yord Tribune.

Female Constables in the South Pacific.

Is there anything new under the sun? For years past, with the steady increase of trade, there has been a serious increase of strong drink, foreign and native. At Rereotonga, at one of our meetings, a chief put me to shame by saying that "he wondered what sort of Christians the English were to allow vessels laden with grog to leave port for these islands, when it is well known the sale of spirituous liquor is forbidden and its use is utterly destructive of the native race? It is heartbreaking to the missionary to see the young drawn aside, and the once quiet happy homes of the islanders notorious for quarrelling and fighting. A crisis at last arrived. Queen Makea one day called together her people and said: "You constables were directed to put down drink. You have winked at it. In truth you are no use whatever, except to eat on feast days and to share fines! I am a woman. Let the staid middle aged women of this village be enrolled as a police force: perhaps they will have some regard foe my word." This novel plan, (of her own devising) has been tried for some months, and so far succeds remarkably well. Nothing escapes the eyes of these women constables. About fifty Orange River barrels have been given up and destroyed. Most of these barrels had pet names. The fact is, the drunkards are in great consternation, several of them have turned over a new leaf. One day a drunken man on horseback was surrounded, but succeeded in beating off the women with a long whip. Next day, now perfectly sober, he unwisely showed his face, and of course was heavily fined. A striking outward reformation has been effected, A day ar two ago a good old man said in his praper: "Lord, we have been told that such a plan was never before hit upon in any part of the world. Are we in this matter sinning against Thee? Anyway, let the strong drink that (some years ago) occasioned the murder of my only son be put down effectually. May Ngaun's prayer be answered." One day, by way of encouragement, Queen Makea gave the women constables a great feast. I counted forty-seven fat hogs.—William Wyall Gill in the Sunday at Home.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

Entertainingly Arranged for ... tings.

While the Japanese and some ... ental races are gradually adopting ... medical science as the most civiliz... cidental doctors are testing and int... the cast-off drugs of the despised ... Kava-kava, an intoxicating drink of ... jians, has been used in various dis... our doctors, who claim good qualiti...

The student Dauth, who was arrest... killing a Bavarian Captain in a d... ceeded in escaping while he was be... veyed to Wurzburg. The result of ... in question continues to excite gener... satisfaction at the state of the law ... many upon this subject. Several ... German papers comment at great l... the difference between English and ... ideas of "honor," and urge that a c... required upon the model of British ...

With the exception of the Phoen... murders, committed under his wing... Joyce murders in Galway are beli... be the only crimes personally inve... on the spot by an Irish Viceroy. ... Spencer carefully went into every ... the scene, aided by engineers, police... trates, &c.

Years ago an old gentleman, w... the pier at Dover, England, drop... gold-headed cane through one of ... locally known as tree nail holes, in ... Indignant and disgusted at his loss, ... queathed a sum of money to pay ... nually stopping these holes, the o... be laid out in a dinner to the Corp... An annual dinner consequently take... and before the party break up they ... that the holes have been duly attend...

Tippoo (which means tiger) Sai... tigers to very practical purposes, ... mous one was found chained near ... ury, and an attendant who offended ... a prisoner to be disposed of, met ... Daniel, but with different final ... There is still extent an illustration ... poo's idea of playful pleasantry ... shape of a mechanical tiger, life siz... vised that Tippoo could make it light ... unsuspecting person, whose agony ... afforded him the keenest gratificatio...

To give an idea of the dairy ind... France, M. Herve Mangon recently ... at an agricultural gathering that ... produced in the country would, if ... form a stream 4 feet 4 inches in wi... 1 foot 1 inch in depth, flowing ni... day all the year with a mean veloc... feet 4 inches per second. Young ... drink a part of this enormus volume ... man takes a good part of it, and ... transformed into cheese and butter.

The young lady who has recently ... the prize for beauty at Buda, Pesth, ... engaged by M. Bertrand, the ente... director of the Varietes in Paris, ... in the forthcoming revue at the thea... beauty has arrived in Paris, and sig... agreement with the director. The ... pal clauses in it are that a private b... first tier is to be reserved for her d... engagement, that two guardians are ... always in attendance on her, and ... she is to lodge in M. Bertrand's ow...

The Keely Motor.

The annual meeting of the stockhold... the Keely Motor Company was h... cently at Philadelphia, at which the ... of William Boekel, who was chosen ... stockholders and Mr. Keely as the ... dian of his secret, supplemented by ... report from Mr. Keely himself, was ... ed. Mr. Keely's communication s... his engine will soon be completed ... full operation, and that it is his p... soon to bring the matter to the attent... the Pennsylvania Railroad Compa... a view of having the engine first appl... their road between Philadelphia and ... York. Mr. Keely assures the stockh... that he has passed the line of experi... and nothing is left to be done but the ... pletion of the mechanical work now ... done on the engine. He says in conc... "At your request and with the aid ... Boekel and of myself, I have prep... caveat for my generator, which has ... forwarded to the Patent office."

Mr. Boekel, in his report, after sket... the corporate existence of the com... treats of the great possibilities of ... forces, which, he says, Mr. Keely has ... assiduously studying, until the inv... "investigations and experiments have ... ried him far beyond the laboratory ex... ments of such men as Prof. Tyndall ... other scientific investigators, and h... succeeded in exciting, harnessing ... utilizing the subtle force which to th... been only a subject of scientific wo... Then he goes on to show that what ... Keely claims to have discovered is ... fact that water in its natural state is ... of being, by vibratory action, disinte... so that its musular structure is broke... and there is evolved therefrom a perm... expansive gas or other, which result ... duced by mechanical action. Very m... these to whom this communication is ... ed have frequently seen at the works ... Mr. Keely the evolution of this su... and its registry in a chamber, where ... erted an expansive energy of upward ... 000 pounds to the square inch." T... port does not describe the mechan... ployed, as Mr. Boekel says that w... improper, but he concludes that Mr. ... has discovered all that he has claimed ... that the stockholders should abide ... tience the success of the enterprise, ... respect to the great lapse of time sin... announcement of the discovery and the ... tical utilization thereof, the report sa... Mr. Keely has constructed three engi... different times, each being an improv... on its predecessor, but none of them ... to a fair test, but now he is engaged ... construction of a vibratory engine of ... horse power.

Mr. F. G. Green of New York, the T... urer of the company, submitted a state... of its financial condition. The disb... ments of revenue obtained by the s... stock since December, 1879, are: ... shares, $46,391.75; 1,500 shares are p... J. W. Keely on account of engine, ... for loan stock previous to consolidat... and the balance of the stock, 8,300 ... of the entire 20,080, is in the com... possession. The cash balance is $58.8...

At a special meeting of the stockhol... which was held prior to the general ... ing, the question of reducing the num... directors from thirteen to seven was ... cussed and agreed to.

Scene at a Danish Execution.

e country was thrilled by a gen- of horror when the papers at recently brought the details of ion of a criminal in a provincial previous day. According to the criminals condemned to death last penalty of the law by decapi- eans of an axe, the block being me conspicuous point as near as the place where the murder was A man condemned to death ecuted yesterday morning, and, large crowd of people from the districts had assembled round one constable being present When the usual formalitites through, the criminal laid his head ; as the eye and the hand of who had been drinking previous day, were uncertain, e fell over both shoulders, the ering a smothered cry of pain. tioner wrenched the axe out of wielded it again, and struck the up on the back of the head; ched the axe out of the wound, ed at last in cutting the head crowd rushed to the headless to try to catch some drops of the peasants think has some al effect to cure certain diseases, satisfy their morbid curiosity: in rible and disgusting scene took eral men and women fainting. e agrees that such a disgraceful must never more take place in and the Minister of Justice has with praiseworthy speed, declared n to bring in a short bill provid- ution by means of the guillotine, the precincts of the prison.

A High Opinion.

m J. Dawson, late of the British ding on Love street, between Man- Spain, this city, says he used St. with the greatest possible advant- afflicted with rheumatism.—New s Democrat.

the top bunches in a box of rais- ns in a hay-loft? They are the r.

troleum, deprived of its color reeable odor without distillation d of acids or alkalies, is what the is made from. As now improved d it is a beautiful preparation, ms all that is claimed for it as a r.

people object to the practice of fee- water, but does not the smiling the hills with gold?

ial from Mr. W. S. Wisner, of J. O. Son, Manufacturers of Agricultural rs:—

Brantford, Ont., July 28th, 1882. therland, Esq.: Dear Sir—I take bearing testimony to the efficacy of matine. Last spring I was complete- d with rheumatism, and tried various aths, etc., and finally heard of your rchased and used three bottles of it ted a complete cure, for I have not e of the disease since.

Yours truly, W. S. WISNER.

has never failed to effect a cure, e and strength to the system de- by disease.

veller in England always notices anomaly—the weather is always the people are always dry.

The Very Latest News.

n heard the latest news?" said one to another. "No, do tell me what it I have at last got rid of my corns d of Putnam's Painless Corn Ex- d I know yours were even worse were, I couldn't pass without telling a bottle at your druggists. I'll t will fix 'em completely." It is sure, d painless, taking the corns out at everywhere. Beware of substitutes ons.

yer's Cherry Pectoral to stop our ghs and Bronchial Affections be- rn into Consumption that you top.

is in deep mourning, "Have you ne?" a friend asks. "Alas, no; ease which has just expired!"

Oil not Eclectric Oil. The two words different significations, as will be erences to Webster. The Eclectric claim th Electric properties only by on the wrapper, which looks like the question, The popularity of ectric Oil is such aa to induce un- persons to appropriate all the law them to do. The proprietors of d Electric Oil have no claim to the ectric or Thomas; but to the words ever they do lay claim, by right, ve made them of value to themselves.

"A. P." 104

RSION STEAMER FOR SALE—running—built last year in the strong- r for the roughest water; 92 feet long, ches beam, 6 feet 3 inches hold; low engine 23 h. p., 22 inch cylinder and 6 ; feathering paddles; easy on fuel; or coal. MACKINTOSH & PET- ro.

OLESALE CASKET AND UNDER AKERS' supply business and premises stock about $2 200; premises and plant, venient term s, or would take partner less than $2,000, MACKINTOSH & Toronto.

BELL TELEPHONE CO. OF CANADA ing purchased patents of Telephones, an be rented at reduced rates for private oses, parties desiring to obtain same rnished on application to the Company ead Office, Montreal, or to agents, or of Ontario Department Bell Telephone milton.

Young men or middle aged ones, suffering from nervous debility and kindred weaknesses should send three stamps for Part VII of World's Dispensary Dime Series of books. Address WORLD'S MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Buffalo N. Y.

Men who have money to loan take the greatest possible interest in their business.

"Women and her Diseases" is the title of an interesting treatise (96 pages) sent, post-paid, for three stamps. Address WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Buffalo N. Y.

"Blood will tell," so be careful how you make confidants of your relations.

A Dead Shot

may be taken at liver and bilious disorders with Dr. R. V. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets." Mild yet certain in operation; and there is none of the reaction consequent upon taking severe and drastic cathartics. By druggists.

You can hold a onion more firmly than you can clutch a hornet.

Davy & Clark, Druggists, Renfrew, date of June 3rd, write," Burdock Blood Bitters though comparatively a new preparation, has taken the lead in this locality as a blood purifier, our sales of it being equal to that of all other medicines used for the purpose during the last year." 18.

Vegetine

Dyspepsia, Kidney Complaint, General Debility, Nervousness, Headache, Faintness at the Stomach.

Acadian Mines, N. S. June 14, 1880.

H. R. Stevens, Esq.—Dear Sir: I consider it a duty I owe to invalids in general to testify to the great good Vegetine has done for me. I had suffered for years from various diseases; in fact, my whole ayatem appeared to be affected; was unable to stand erect, and scarcely able to walk. I tried almost everything I aaw recommended without receiving any benefit. I had several doctors and used their medicines, but they gave me up, saying that there was no cure for me.

About this time my sister-in-law recommended Vegetine to me (two bottles of which had cured her of Dyspepsia). I tried it, and, before I had finished taking the first bottle, was able to do my housework, which I had not been able to do for several months. I have taken Vegetine for Kidney Complaint, General Debility and Nervous Headache with equally good results. Have recommended it to neighbors, and know it to have effected some wonderful cures. My husband has taken it for Faintness at the Stomach or Dyspepsia, and he says "there is nothing as good as Vegetine."

Yours truly, Mrs. J. W. SCOTT.

Dyspepsia, Nervousness and General Debility.

Cincinnati, O., April 9, 1877.

Mr. H. R. Stevens—Dear Sir: I have used several bottles of Vegetine for Dyspepsia, Nervousness and General Debility, and I can truly say I never had a remedy so sure in its effects, therefore I may recommend it to all sufferers.

W. L. BELL, Walnut Hills, 41 Court-st.

General Debility and Nervousness.

Brockville, Ont., Mar. 24, 1880.

Mr. H. R. Stevens, Boston, Mass.:

Dear Sir—I have been greatly troubled for a number of years with General Debility and Nervousness, and after using two bottles I find myself very much relieved and I most cheerfully recommend Vegetine to all who are troubled as I was. T. SHERWOOD.

Vegetine is Sold by All Druggists.

THE ONTARIO WIRE WORKS IS THE place to get Wire Cloth for Fanning Mills, etc. Window Guards and every description of wire work. PARTRIDGE & SABISTON. 116 Bay Street, Toronto.

Just opened, the largest and finest assortment of English and French Instruments in nickel, polished steel and German silver, Rubber Goods, Etc.

SURGICAL INSTRUMENTS!

N.B.—Send names of Instruments required and we will give price by return mail. City Pharmacy, 274 Yonge St., Toronto. E. A. SMITH, Proprietor.

DOBYN'S SURE CURE IS THE BEST remedy known for Catarrh. One dollar for single box, or three boxes for $2. C. POMEROY & Co., 85 King-st, West, Toronto.

WM. ASHALL, WATCHMAKER AND Jeweler, 262 Yonge St., Toronto, has enlarged his premises, and greatly increased his stock of gold and silver jewelry, plated ware, cutlery, clocks, watches, etc. Fine stock of jet and garnet jewelry. Goods imported direct. Every kind of jewelry repaired promptly, neatly, and cheaply.

"A Merciful Man is Merciful to his Beast.

AGENTS HORSE BOOK.

Send 14 cents TO TRUTH OFFICE, Toronto, for a sample copy of a new HORSE BOOK It treats all diseases of the horse and has a large number of receipts and is pronounced the best book ever printed for the price. Profusely illustrated and sells, at sight. Agents claim it to be the best selling book they ever canvassed with. 9 copies for one dollar or to agents 85 cents per dozen. Try it.

Agents Wanted.

SUTHERLAND'S

RHEUMATINE

THE GREAT CURE FOR

RHEUMATISM

And all complaints of a Rheumatic nature,

RHEUMATINE is not a sovereign remedy for "all the ills that flesh is heir to," but for NEURALGIA, SCIATICA, RHEUMATISM, and complaints of Rheumatic nature,

IT IS A SURE CURE.

Sold by all druggists. The Rheumatine Manufacturing Co., St. Catherines, Ont, Messrs. Northrop & Lyman, Wholesale Agts., Toronto.

Mack's Magnetic Medicine.

Brain and Nerve Food

Positively cures Nervousness in all its stages, Weak Memory, Loss of Brain Power, Night Sweats, Barrenness, Weakness and General Loss of Power. It repairs Nervous Waste, rejuvenates the Jaded Intellect, strengthens the Enfeebled Brain and restores surprising tone and vigor to the Exhausted Generative Organs in either sex. ☞ With each order for Twelve packages, accompanied with five dollars, we will send our written Guarantee to refund the money if the treatment does not effect a cure. It is the Cheapest and Best Medicine in the market. Pamphlet sent free by mail to any address.

Mack's Magnetic Medicine is sold by druggists at 50 cents per box, or 6 boxes for $2.50, or will be mailed free of postage, on receipt of money, by addressing Mack's Magnetic Medicine Co., Windsor, Ont., Canada. Sold by all druggists in Canada.

TORONTO!

As soon as you arrive in Toronto

GO TO A. B. FLINT'S

And buy all your

DRY GOODS.

A.B. Flint, 35 Colborne St.

LADIES! BEWARE of fraudulent corsets. "Coraline" corsets will not break, or lose their shape. Wear corsets made by Crompton Corset Co. Toronto.

THE SILVER LINE.

Wait Till the Clouds Roll By.

Pretty Little Darling, I Love You.

The latest popular songs in full size sheet music form. Price only five cents per copy, or the three for ten cents.

S. FRANK WILSON

PUBLISHER,

33 & 35 Adelaide street West.

Established 1836.

J. E. ELLIS & CO.

Cor. King & Yonge Sts., Toronto,

(The oldest house in the Trade,)

MANUFACTURING

Jewellers & Silversmiths,

IMPORTERS OF

FINE WATCHES, DIAMONDS,
GOLD & SILVER JEWELLERY,
FRENCH CLOCKS,
STERLING SILVERWARE,
SILVER PLATED WARE,
PRESENTATION PLATE.

All Goods Guaranteed. Prices lower than any house in the trade. Orders by mail promptly attended to.

J. E. ELLIS & Co.

King and Yonge sts., Toronto.

Old and young should use "TEABERRY," Then your laugh may be quite merry Fragrant Breath shall pass your lips, And your Teeth shall pearls eclipse.

DRACE UP—Your system for work. ZOPESA, the new Dyspepsia and Liver Remedy, attends atrictly to business in correcting the Stomach, Liver, and Kidneys. Sample bottles 10 cents; large bottles 75 cents.

MIRRORS!

EWING & CO.

Offer the largest and finest assortment of Mirrors in the Dominion, in

WALNUT & GOLD & EBONY & GOLD

finely carved. Fitted with best British Plate

30 x 40	$25 to $40
40 x 50	35 to 56
60 x 48	45 to
54 x 72	80 to
24 x 72	35 to 65
30 x 72	45 to 75
36 x 84	60 to 100
36 x 96	70 to 120

EWING & CO.,

68 KING ST., WEST.

JOHN MACDONALD & CO.

WHOLESALE IMPORTERS OF

DRY GOODS, WOOLLENS, CARPETS AND FANCY GOODS,

TORONTO.

The Reasons Why They are Enabled to Sell Cheaply:

They buy all their goods for Cash, thereby being enabled to purchase from manufacturers direct, and not from dealers.

They buy at the very lowest prices, and get the cash discount.

They buy in very large quantities, getting the additional allowance given to large New York and Chicago buyers in European markets, and also by manufacturers in this country.

They buy all their goods by expert departmental buyers, who, buying for their special rooms only, bring to bear on all lines bought, great attention, knowledge and expertness.

Doing a large trade, they are able to make the rate of expense low, which would be impossible in a smaller trade, and selling largely, are satisfied with a small profit.

Confederation Life Association.

President—SIR W. P. HOWLAND, C.B., K.C.M.G.
Vice-Presidents—HON. WM. McMASTER AND WM. ELLIOT, Esqs.

The Directors have great pleasure in recognizing the growing popularity of the Association in the largely increased volume of new business.

The profit results for the past quinquennium have given the greatest satisfaction to our policy holders.

These profit results have created some jealousy on the part of interested parties, who have adopted the questionable means of attacking this Association through the columns of The Insurance Times of New York, and by the circulation of that periodical and reprints and other anonymous communications, at evidently considerable cost to the persons claiming to be disinterested friends of our policy holders.

These self-constituted public benefactors no doubt fancied they were safe, but the Directors know them, and to-day a writ for libel has been issued against the first batch of three, who will be afforded ample opportunity to prove their slanderous statements or take the consequences. The others will have attention in due course.

This Association can afford to submit to the fullest investigation, and the directors are prepared to give good reason for any act of theirs which may be called in question.

As the statements made against the Association will be dealt with before a Court of Law, the Directors, for the present, simply state that in every essential particular the charges made by The Insurance Times and circulated in this country, are untrue.

J. K. MACDONALD, Managing Director C. L. A.

Toronto, December 11th, 1882.

INDIA RUBBER GOODS!

Rubber Belting, Rubber Packing, Rubber Hose, Rubber Boots and Shoes, Rubber Clothing, Rubber Gloves, India Rubber Goods of Every Description. The largest and only complete stock in the Dominion. Patent Carbolized

MALTESE CROSS BRAND.

STEAM FIRE  ENGINE HOSE.

Secured to Manufacturers under Letters Patent, Nos. 66, 518, 99,935, 151, 418, 151, 519, 159, 345. Re-issue Nos. 3,842, 4,148.

More than Two Million Feet Sold since 1870.

This Hose can be Relied on for Long and Efficient Service.

This brand is now in use in all the principal Fire Departments in Canada, and universally acknowledged to be the Most Economical Fire Hose Made.

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES.—First—The hose is made of the finest quality of Rubber, and Cotton Duck of the greatest possible tensile strength, woven for the exclusive use of this Company. Second—It is effectually preserved from rot and decay by being charged with Carbolic Acid. Third—The ends are made extra heavy, and strengthened so as to successfully resist the force they are exposed to. Fourth—The ends are hermetically capped, thus excluding all air and moisture from the Cotton Duck. Fifth—The hose will not contract or twist, but under pressure has the quality of elongating about 30 inches to 50 feet Section.

We have the Largest and Best Equipped Rubber Factory in the World for the Manufacture of Vulcanized India Rubber Goods for Mechanical Purposes.

Also Dealers and Jobbers in all kinds of Fire Department Supplies, viz.:—Trumpets, Belts, Coats, Boots, Lanterns, Controlling Nozzles, Buckets, Hose Pipes, Couplings, Axes, Siamese Connections, Wrenches, Badges, Hats, Caps, etc. In fact everything appertaining to the equipment of Fire Departments. We invite correspondence, and shall be pleased to submit Prices, Samples, etc.

Just Arrived, ex S. S. Celtic from England and S. S. Neckar from Germany, a large and Well-selected Stock of Rubber (tweed finish) Gentlemen's and Ladies' Coats and Mantles- also, a very handsome assortment of Wool-lined Rubber Lay Robes and Carriage Aprons, Sportsmen's Outfits, etc.

The Gutta Percha and Rubber Manufacturing Company,

WAREHOUSE—10 & 12 King-St. East, Toronto. T. McILROY, Jr., Manager.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

INTERESTING ITEMS GATHERED FROM OUR EXCHANGES AND OTHERWISE FOR THE READERS OF THE "STANDARD."

Flesherton.

A coffee and lunch room opened here.

The village police trustees have acquitted themselves creditably, and given a satisfactory account through the press of their stewardship.

Presbyterian Anniversary sermon will be preached at 2 30 p. m. next Sabbath and a tea-meeting will be held the following (Christmas) evening; admission 25cts.

The Methodist S. S. Anniversary will take place as usual on New Year's day.

Rumors have been going that scarlet fever has been raging in this village; no such thing

Business brisk. Good sleighing.

John Bullivan's wife of a daughter.

Mr. Brooks' wife of a daughter,

Nomination on Friday.

Skating rink opens on Thursday night.

Mr. Robt. Morrow had his feet bruised while loading a stick of timber on Saturday last at Flesherton station.

THE REASON HE WROTE IT.

"I write this," says Mr. Nelson de Pew, of Napiersville, Quebec, Canada, "to say that, after suffering six years with rheumatism—accompanied with the most intense pain with which any one could be afflicted—I have been completely cured by the use of St. Jacobs Oil. I thus write because I consider it my duty to so do, and because I wish to publish to suffering humanity the wonderful efficacy of the Great German Remedy. when I remember that during the six years in which I was bedridden with this awful disease, I tried all kinds of remedies, and expended a very large amount of money with doctors of all schools, and underwent all kinds of treatment, the feeling of gratitude at my Marvelous recovery impresses me to give the widest publicity to my case."

Durham.

The late storm blocked the roads for two days,

The Review is enlarged by four columns.

Mr. John Hasting is here renovating feather beds. He does them first class.

Considerable cross firing is indulged in between our newspaper men.

HOW IT WORKED AT THE MURRAY HOUSE

Among the cosiest hotels in Ontario, is the Murray House of St. Catherines, kept by Mr. Thomas Sculley, where the writer always stops when in that city. Upon a recent trip, the writer was speaking with Mr. Sculley concerning his old ailment, weak back, when Mr. S. observed: "I take sincere pleasure in recommending St. Jacobs Oil to all sufferers. I have found a most excellent remedy myself, and I know of others who have used it with great success. I would not be without St. Jacobs Oil, nor do I believe any sensible man ought. I caught a cold about three years ago, which settled in my back and sorely afflicted me between my shoulders. The pain was almost unendurable at times, especially at impending changes of the weather; and at such times, I used to be incapaciated for attending to my business. I tried electric baths, salt baths, various strengthening plasters and other such means without success. Finally I tried St. Jacobs Oil, the Great German Remedy, and was cured at once and permanently, St. Jacobs Oil is a most excellent remedy and I would not be without it at any price."

Williamsford.

About three feet of snow here.

Tea-meeting in the Methodist church to-night, (Thursday.)

A Hop and Supper at Vogan's Hotel on Christmas evening.

Our population is on the increase, two of our respected citizens were the recipients of a Christmas present each a short time since. Mr. S. Watson a daughter and Mr. J. L. Patterson likewise.

Nomination to-morrow (Friday)and a stirring time is expected. Mr. Cameron is a candidate for the Reeveship. and Mr. Shute for Deputy Reeve; Mr. Norton will be a candidate for either Reeve of Deputy, it is not yet known which, but it is said his chances are good for election in either case.

The following are in the field for councillors.—Messrs. R. Clark, Thos. Neeley, J. Deavitt, and others.

Lillburn Bros. are paying cash for any quantity of logs for their mill.

Mr. Smith expects his Millwright shortly to overhaul his flour mill.

Women's Felt Boots 50c. per pair at M. Richardson's, Flesherton.

On our Table.—A fine goose for Christmas. Mrs. W. will please accept our thanks for so appropriate a present.

Robt. S Rae.

TAILOR,

SYDENHAM STREET,

MARKDALE.

AN IMMENSE STOCK OF

BOOTS & SHOES

JUST ARRIVED AT THE

TORONTO HOUSE

BEST QUALITY AND LOWEST PRICE.

STOCK COMPLETE IN

Dry Goods and Groceries!

PRICES ALWAYS RIGHT.

OUR THIRTY CENT TEA

Is the wonder of the day A trial solicited.

WM. BROWN.

Markdale, Oct. 11th, 1882.

GROCERIES

A. M'INTYRE

TEA! TEA! TEA!

A. M'INTYRE

Flour, Flour, Flour.

McINTYRE'S LIQUORS! LIQUORS

McINTYRE'S Cigars, Cigars.

McINTYRE'S Coffee, Coffee.

McINTYRE'S MEAL! MEAL! MEAL!

McINTYRE'S Pork, Pork, Pork.

McINTYRE'S Teas, Teas.

And ever ything kept in a first-class Grocery and Liquor Store. always on hand, CHEAP FOR CASH.

GROCERIES

MARKDALE

Sash and Door Factory

SASH, DOORS,
BLINDS
MOULDINGS,
HOLLOW BATTONS,
FRAMES

Lumber, Lath and Shingles,

Always on Hand. Orders Promptly Filled.

The Subscriber wishes to return thanks to the people of Markdale and vicinity, for the very liberal patronage they have given him in the past, and hopes by close attention to business to merit a continuance of the same.

I have now extended my business, and will in future keep a full Stock of

PINE LUMBER.

Direct from the North Shore.

ALL SIZES, DRESSED AND UNDRESSED,

All Kinds of Plain and Fancy Turning

Done in a first-class manner.

THOS. McNEA.

Markdale May 27th, 1881. 37-tf

GENERAL

Blacksmithing

Flesherton Station.

The subscriber begs to announce to the inhabitants of Flesherton, Markdale and Priceville, and surrounding country, that he has commenced business at Flesherton Station, where he hopes by satisfactory work and moderate rates to secure a share of public patronage.

HORSE-SHOEING A SPECIALTY.

And guaranteed that in a case of interfereing horses he will cure the defect in two shoeings or no charge will be made for the second shoeing.

A TRIAL SOLICITED.

HENRY WHITE.

Flesherton Station, Oct. 17, 1882. 110

NOTICE TO FARMERS.

BUSINESS STILL INCREASING WITH

W. J. ROWE

—AT THE—

Barrhead Mill

UNDER THE OLD PROCESS.

Gristing and Chopping done every working day. Farmers from a distance can have their stuff home with them the same day.

All orders for Flour and Feed promptly filled.

W. J. ROWE, "Barrhead Mills."

October 28th 1882. 113-126

W. BULMER,

The People's Photograph

FLESHERTON.

Continues to take Pictures,
Do Copying and Enlarging in good

FRAMES and FRAME FIXI

in great variety and latest designs at desperate low prices.

W. BULM

ARTEMESIA WAREHOU

FLESHERTON STATION.

Dry Goods, Hardware, Crockery, Boots and

Groceries, Provisions, &c. Stock kept full and well assorted goods received every week.

Cash paid for all kinds of Grain at the Sta

MY BRANCH STORE AT EUGENIA

replenished with new goods every week. For sale cheap for cash o

My Saw Mill, Shingle Factoty, and Lime

AT LITTLE FALLS, ARE IN OPERATION.

All kinds Saw Logs bought at the Mill or sawn on Lumber, Lath, Broom Handles, Shingles and Lime fo

WM. HO

November 7th, 1882.

TORONTO HOUS

FLESHERTON.

Stock Fully Complete. Unusually

VERY ATTRACTIVE, AND

CHEAPER THAN THE CHEAP

EVERY DEPARTMENT SPECIALLY ATTRA

Variety and Value Unsurpasse

DRY GOODS DEPARME

Is this season very complete with a very large stock of Dress Go prising in part Cashmeres in all colors. Worsted Wool Go endless variety.

Boot and Shoe Departmen

Would call special attention of close buyers as my stock is unus from the best manufacturers and at rock bottom prices

ORDERED CLOTHING

Has been exceedingly brisk this season, on account of which I h the largest and best stock of Tweeds, Coatings, Trowserings, and ings in this section of country. As I have always led the trade in partment buyers will find it to their advantage to call before p elsewhere.

Millinery Department.

Under the able management of a first-class milliner, with plenty ance, will be found unusually attractive with the prettiest and m able, and cheapest stock to be found in the county. Ladies, it you good to call and look at the stock.

Hardware and Grocery Departmen

Is always fully assorted and complete with the best goods, at the sible price.

I am the only constant and reliable buyer of Grain and P duce in Flesherton, and for which I will pay the highest price any quantity of good dry, sound grain, which I would specially to clean well. A call solicited.

R. J. SPROUL

Flesherton, Oct. 3rd, 1882.

Markdale PUMP Facto

J. G. IRVING

MAKER OF ALL KINDS OF PUMPS,

DROP VALVE PUMPS, CYLINDER PUMPS, CISTERN FORCE PUMPS,

Also, ALL KINDS OF IRON PUMPS SUPPLED.

Satisfaction guaranteed on all my work; the proof of its fact that I am doing a larger business now than ever was doin the Pump business. Remember the stand, 1 door north of Eldridge

Sydenham Street, Markdale

Markdale Standard

L. 3.--No. 16. MARKDALE, ONT., DEC. 28, 1882. No. 120.

Markdale Standard

IS PUBLISHED

THURSDAY EVENING,

At Markdale Ontario.

Per Annum

IN ADVANCE

three months, $2 if not paid till the year. No paper discontinued years are paid up, except at the the publisher, and parties refusing from paying up will be held responsible years subscriptions until they with the rules.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING:

One year..... $50 00
do. 27 50
do. 15 00
do. 8 00
do. 4 00
lines, first insertion per line 8 subsequent insertion..... 3

Number of lines to be reckoned by the actual measured by a scale of solid Advertisements without specific will be published till forbid and accordingly. All transitory advertisements must be in the office or publication-day on the wednesday preceding publication.

JOB PRINTING

of every description executed with neatness and despatch at the Office of the Standard, Markdale.

C. W. RUTLEDGE.

EDITOR & PROPRIETOR.

PROFESSIONAL AND BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

Sproule & Armstrong,

Barristers, Surgeons, Accoucheur &c.

Medical Hall; residence at House.

Dr. M.D., M.C.P. & S., O. Physician and Surgeon, Priceville, Graduate of University. Vict. College. " New York, and " of the same, " Aylesth Medical Institute. " Opthalmic Hospital, N.Y. Member of Physicians & Surgeons, O. 104

Dental Card.

Cameron & Knight,

DENTAL SURGEONS,

Over D. A. Cameron and Co's Drug Store, 1st St., OWEN SOUND.

Attention given to the preservation of the teeth. Artificial Dentures mounted on Celluloid, and Rubber bases.

At Markdale the last Tuesday in each month.

J. Cameron, M.D., & C. F. Knight, L.D.S. Graduate of Glasgow, Medalist Royal College Den. Sur., Ont

Legal.

Frost & Frost,

BARRISTERS, AND ATTORNEYS-AT-LAW, Solicitors in Chancery, Conveyancers, &c. Owen Sound, Have resumed at Markdale. Office open every Thursday, as usual.

J. W. FROST, LL. B. Crown Attorney 1

J. MASSON,

MASTER, MASTER AND DEP. REG. Chancery, Notary Public, Conveyancer, &c.

MONEY TO LEND AT SIX PER CENT. Office in Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block and in Markdale, over McFarlane's Store on Friday and Saturday every week. 57.ly

Creasor & Morrison.

BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, CONVEYANCERS &c.

Office in Owen Sound, Dufferin Block, Walker Square.

MARKDALE Office in Maitland's Store on Thursday of each week.

Money to loan, on reasonable terms.

Owen Sound, Oct. 5, 1882 DUNCAN MORISON 79-1y

Alexander Brown.

Issuer of Marriage Licenses, Fire and Life Insurance Agent Commissioner &c. Conveyancer and Licensed Auctioneer for the County of Grey. Farmers, Sales of Land Sales, Punctually attended to. Charges moderate. Markdale, Sept. 17, 1880. 1-y

Hotels.

MANCHESTER HOTEL,

MARKDALE.

JOHN BOULE, - Proprietor.

This popular Hotel has had a large addition added to it, thoroughly refitted, and is second to none in the county. Good sitting and attentive ostler. First-class accommodation for commercial travel by the day. Barber's shop in connection.

Markdale Hotel.

Good Accommodation for Travellers. 'Bus to and from all trains. Charges moderate. Markdale. A. BUTLEDGE, PROP.

COMMERCIAL HOTEL.

PRICEVILLE, Ont.

Large and commodious Sample Rooms Good Bed Rooms, &c. The Bar and larde well supplied with the best the market affords; good Stabling and attentive Hostler's

THOS. ATKINSON, Proprietor

CHATSWORTH HOUSE

(LATE MORROW HOUSE,)

CHATSWORTH, Ont.

THE undersigned having purchased the above property has had it thoroughly renovated and refurnished throughout beside making other new improvements, which will greatly add to the comfort and convenience of his guests, would respectfully solicit the patronage of the public generally. The best brands of liquors and cigars always in stock. Good meal and comfortable rooms guaranteed. Good stabling and attentive hostler.

—C. H. MATHEWS, Prop. 114.

Miscellaneous.

John McDonald

CHATSWORTH,

DIVISION Court Clerk, Issuer of Marriage Licenses, Commissioner in B.R., Conveyancer, &c. Deeds, Mortgages, Wills, &c. attended to promptly, accurately, neatly, and cheaply. Private funds to lend in small sums on easy terms. Notes discounted

MISS LAMB,

DRESS-MAKER. UP-STAIRS IN Douglas' Block. Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges moderate.

Markdale, Nov. 15th, 1882. 11-3m.

R. M. Galbraith,

AUCTIONEER AND GENERAL LAND Agent, Williamsford Station. Auction Sales attended in all parts of the County. Goods sold on commission. Rates moderate. Pianos, Organs, and Sewing Machines; also Fruit and Ornamental Trees. Vines, Agricultural Implemennts, and Machinery of all kinds on sale.

Williamsford, Jan. 27, 1881.

T. E. DAVIS,

BUILDER & CONTRACTOR, (Stone and Brick). After completing 13 buildings his season is still on the track and is still prepared to do all kinds of stone and brick work, plastering and tuck pointing. Those who contemplate building will find it to their advantage to give him a call.

Residence corner of Brown and Sproule Stetes. MARKDALE. 16-y

MISS WELSH,

Dress & Mantlemaker. Charges moderate. Satisfaction guaranteed. Hill's Block, Sydenham street.

Markdale, Nov. 6th, 1882. 113-126

Wm. Brown,

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.

Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.

N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate security.

LOYAL MARKDALE LODGE,

Of C. O. O. F. No. 78, will meet in their hall on Monday evening. Dec. 25th, at eight o'clock p. m.

108 W. L. YOUNG, Sec'y.

EUCENIA

Grist, Saw and Lath Mills

Having made extensive improvements in my Grist Mill I feel confident I can give good satisfaction.

GOOD FLOUR ALWAYS ON HAND.

Chopping Done Every Day.

Custom Sawing and Bills Filled on the shortest notice.

LUMBER AND LATH ALWAYS ON HAND.

Cherry, Butternut, White Ash, Black Ash Basswood, Pine and Hemlock Logs wanted

69ly. M. AKITT, Eugenia.

$66 a week in your own town. $5 outfit free. No risk. Everything new. Capital not required. We will furnish you everything. Many are making fortunes. Ladies make as much as men, and boys and girls make great pay. Reader, if you want a business at which you can make great pay all the time you work, write for particulars to H. HALLETT & Co., Portland, Maine. 71-126

$2 Watches, Gold watches $2.50. White metal Hunting Case $4. Imitation gold $6. Solid gold $12. Cheapest and best for your own use or speculative purpose. Valuable catalogue free. TIFFANY & Co., 130 Nassau St., New York.

ROBT. ASKIN,

MARKDALE,

Has opened out a First-Class

Furniture !

AND

UNDERTKING ESTABLISHMENT,

And therefore has supplied a want long felt, especially in the Undertaking Line.

COFFINS,

CASKETS,

SHROUDS,

and all

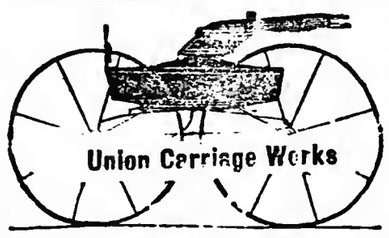
FUNERAL FURNISHINGS,

supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse

for hire at moderate rates.

FURNITURE!



From the Common to the

Best and Latest Styles,

in everything in the line.

Call and see for yourself

ROBT. ASKIN.

Union Carriage Works

Union Carriage Works.

All work manufactured from

FIRST CLASS MATERIAL

In the Latest and Best Improved Style, and finished with

English Varnish.

Painting & Trimming Rigs

will receive prompt attention.

All Repairs executed in the shortest possible time consistent with good workmanship.

GOOD WORK A SPECIALITY.

Remember the Shop, opposite the Cheapside

D. J. SHANAHAN,

Proprietor.

Markdale, Dec. 2nd, 1881. 64.

HAIR CUTTING AND SHAVING

By T. D. Smith,

Razors, Straps, and Shaving Brushes for sale. Razors sharpened.

☞ Orders filled for Tomb Stones.

STARTLING DISCOVERY!

LOST MANHOOD RESTORED.

A victim of youthful imprudence causing Premature Decay, Nervous Debility, Lost Manhood, etc., having tried in vain every known remedy, has discovered a simple self cure, which he will send FREE to his fellow-sufferers, address J. H. REEVES, 43 Chatham St., N. Y

WARNING!

There is great danger of taking cold from wet feet. If you want to Guard Against Sickness!

Keep your feet dry and warm by procuring your

BOOTS!

—FROM—

KAY & THOMAS.

Satisfaction Guaranteed. Medicated Cork Soles, all sizes, kept on hand. Remember the place opposite the new STANDARD Office. 49

Best business now before the public. You can make money faster at work for us than at anything else. Capital not needed. We will start you. $12 a day and upwards made at home by the industrious. Men, women, boys and girls wanted everywhere to work for us. Now is the time. You can work in spare time only or give your whole time to the business. You can live at home and do the work. No other business will pay you nearly as well. No one can fail to make enormous pay by engaging at once. Costly outfit and terms free. Money made fast, easily and honorably. Address TRUE & Co., Augusta, Maine. 71-126

REST AND COMFORT TO THE SUFFERING

Brown's Household Panacea

has no equal for relieving pain, both internal and external. It cures pain in the Side, Back or Bowels, Sore Throat, Rheumatism, Toothache, Lumbago and any kind of a Pain or Ache. "It will most surely quicken the Blood and heal, as its acting power is wonderful." "Brown's Household Panacea," being acknowledged as the great Pain Reliever, and of double the strength of any other Elixer or Liniment in the world, should be in every family handy for use when wanted "as it really is the best remedy in the world for Cramps in the Stomach, and Pains and Aches of all kinds," and is for sale by all Druggists at 25 cents a bottle. 75-127

EARS FOR THE MILLION

HOO CHOO'S BALSAM OF SHARK'S OIL positively Restores the Hearing, and is the Only Absolute Cure for Deafness known This Oil is abstracted from peculiar species of small White Shark, caught in the Yellow Sea, known as CARCHARODON RONDELETII. Every Chinese fisherman knows it. Its virtues as a restorative of hearing were discovered by a Buddhist Priest were discovered about the year 1410. Its cures were so numerous, and many so seemingly miraculous, that the remedy was officially proclaimed over the entire Empire. Its use became so universal, that for over 300 years no Deafness has existed among the Chinese people. Sent, charges prepaid, to any address at $1.00 per bottle.

Hear what the Deaf say:

It has performed a miracle in my case.
I have no unearthly noises in my head, and hear much better.
I have been greatly benefited.
My deafness helped a great deal—think another bottle will cure me.

Its virtues are unquestionable and its curative character absolute, as the writer can personally testify, both from experience and observation. Write at once to Haylock and Jenney, 7 Dey Street, New York, enclosing $1 and you will receive by return a remedy that will enable you to hear like anybody else, and whose curative effects will be permanent. You will never regret doing so."—EDITOR OF MERCANTILE REVIEW.

☞To avoid loss in the mails, please send money by Registered Letter.

Only imported by HAYLOCK & JENNEY, late Haylock & Co.,

Sole Agents for America. 7 DEY ST NEW YORK 93-145.

Wm. Lucas & Co.,

BANKERS,

Money Loaned

IN large or small amounts, at all times, on good endorsed notes, or on collateral security.

INTEREST AT 6 PER CENT.

Allowed on Savings Deposits.

☞Drafts issued and Collections made on points, at lowest rates.

W.M. LUCAS, Manager.

September 23, 1880. 2-ly

JOHN NOBLE,

MARKDALE.

GENER'L BLACKSMITH

HORSE SHOEING

A SPECIALTY.

A CARD.

To all who are suffering from the errors and indiscretions of youth, nervous weakness, early decay, loss of manhood, &c., I will send a receipe that will cure you, FREE OF CHARGE. This great Remedy was discovered by a missionary in South America. Send a self-addressed envelope to Rev. JOSEPH T. INMAN, Station D, New York City.

STRAYED

FROM THE PREMISES OF THE UNdersigned Lot 3, Con. 7, Euphrasia, about the last of August, one Steer and one Heifer, dark grey, and one Heifer white, all rising two years old. Any person giving such information as will lead to their recovery will be suitably rewarded.

JOHN HUTCHINSON,

118-3w* Vandeleur P. O.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

Eugenia.

Eugenia L. O. L. No. 1118.

At the December monthly meeting the following were elected officers for the ensuing year.

J. I. Graham, Master; J. Fields, Dept; Rev. Thos. Grandy, Chap; J. G. Carson, Recording Sec.; J. Linton, Financial Sec.; S. Pedlar, Director of ceremonies; Wallice Armstrong, 1st committee man; H. Williams, 2nd; W. Akitt, 3rd; J. Hambley, 4th; Paul Sherwood, 5th.

Dundalk.

Grain is being shipped from Dundalk to Glasgow Scotland.

Immense quantity of cordwood is being drawn into the village.

The merchants are doing a rushing business and they look quite happy over it.

The Anniversary of the C. M. Sabbath school was a grand success. The Xmas tree was loaded with presents and caused great pleasure among the pupils of the school. The proceeds of the entertainment was $75.

Flesherton.

The annual tea meeting in connection with the Presbyterian Sabbath School came off here Xmas evening, tea was served at 7 p. m. in the Town Hall before the hour for tea the hall was filled too overflowing after the good things of this life had been done ample justice, the Rev. A. Wilson called the meeting to order and proceeded to introduce those who were to take part in the programme. The S. S. choir under the leadership of Mr. Anderson, rendered some fine selections of music during the evening which showed good taste in their selections and great credit in the way they were performed, Master Wesley Buskin gave a congratulatory speech which was well received, Miss Carr and Miss Vandusen's class sang two very fine pieces, Miss Mallie Vandusen sang peace be still splendidly, Mr. Anderson sang a Guid New Year to one ane a'a in his usual style and in response to a hearty enchore sang Merrily over the Waves we go, Readings and Recitations by the children of the school and others were all well rendered and received with marked approval, Mr. Anderson and family sang a duett entitled "Call John" which caused great applause. It is safe to say this was the best entertainment of the kind ever held in Flesherton although the Hall was crowded to suffocation the best of order prevailed throughout, and all were pleased in the successful entertainment. The whole audience joined in singing God save the Queen, and dispersed quietly to their homes, nett proceeds $78.

Williamsford.

The tea meeting which was held in this place on the 21st inst., was a grand success. The tea in itself was all that could be desired After the overwhelming crowd had satisfied themselves with the good things provided by the ladies, the programme was proceeded with. Rev. Mr. Lake first addressed the meeting in his usual happy moode and was well recieved, then came a recitation by Mr. John Trouton which was well rendered. Rev. Mr. McDiarmid was then called on, and in his masterly manner delivered a neat address which was listened to with rapt attention, and was followed with recitations and music by the children trained by Miss Mitchell, Public School Teacher. Little Jim, by Mary Jane Vogan was specially well rendered. Rev. Mr. Perry, Walters Falls, then addressed the audience, choice selections of music were given during the evening my Miss Mitchell. Howey and Lickbold sang beautifull. A six story cake was then disposed off. Net proceeds of Entertainment $82.

A Social was held the following evening, and was a success. The Missionary sermons will be preached on 15th January by the Rev. Mr. Perry, and meetings as follows, Walkers appointment Monday 16th, Williamsford 17th and Massie 18th. Messrs Perry, Lake and McDiarmid, Deputation.

A CHRISTIAN HAREM.

The Beautiful But Ignorant Creatures Who Graced the Establishment of a Wealthy Resident of Jaffa.

Writing of life in the Orient in Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine, Edwin De Leon says: One evening we passed in the enjoyment of the hospitalities of a rich Greek who resided in the town. It had chanced that in my official capacity I had been able in Egypt to accord protection to the large colony of Greeks residing in Egypt during the Crimean war, when an edict for their expulsion from the Ottoman dominions had been issued from Constantinople by the sublime porte, and sanctioned by the Christian powers of Europe potential there.

Not representing a European power, I took the responsibility of retaining and protecting these people in Egypt, and was ranked among the Phil-Hellenes throughout the whole east therefor, besides being made a knight of the order of San Sauveur by King Otho. As the Greeks are scattered everywhere throughout the east, and keep up a constant intercommunication and strict bonds of sympathy, this stood me in good stead. Among other benefits, it procured me on this evening the view of one of the loveliest women I have ever beheld in any part of the world—the daughter of our entertainer at Jaffa. Although the Greeks are most fanatical Christians, yet in many customs they, as well as all other native Christians in the east, follow many of the Moslem usages—among others, the absolute seclusion of women from the sight of strangers, either at home or on the streets. While walking out they wear impenetrable veils—at home they are jealously restricted to their own apartments, into which no man is ever admitted, save the owners of their own household. Even the happy bridegroom is not allowed to see the face of his bride until after formal betrothal. His female relatives inspect and report her charms, on which he must form his judgment. It was therefore by a special and extraordinary favor by which I was permitted to look on the unveiled face of this lovely Greek maiden, whose beauties the eye of no unmarried man had ever viewed before, save her future husband, who that day had first been granted the privilege. "Les extremes se touchent." For here in Jaffa was practiced the matrimonial brokerage which prevails in France—the queen of modern civilization. Mrs. Prime had been passing the evening in this Christian harem, while we men creatures were solemnly smoking and stuffing ourselves with eastern sweetmeats in the men's apartment below, and were getting sleepy from the smoky atmosphere, repletion, and the conversation uder difficulties, diluted and strained through several languages, when a messenger mysteriously beckoned Mr. Prime and myself into the sacred precincts of the ladies' bower, where we found Mrs. Prime surrounded by a bevy of damsels of all ages and sizes, from the full-fledged proportions of the matron down to the slender-waisted gazelle-eyed girls of 12 or 13 years of age just ripening into womanhood. Then first I knew where the prophet had drawn his visions of the future state, and where on earth its houris might be seen. . . those women were of rare and witching loveliness, yet a loveliness of earth earthly—save those who were very young, around whom yet lingered the grace and purity of childhood. The soft, bright light of intelligence, cultivated by education and thought, refined by knowledge, poetry, and music and feminine accomplishments, was wanting in those full, dark brilliant orbs, which shyly lifted up from under the long fringed lashes, shot a ray of light into your own, then were bent down again. Yet there was much to attract the senses in the sweet faces and willowly features of the younger damsels, the bride-expectant being a very paragon of loveliness.

We are bound over to perfect secrecy as to our visit, but found the ladies much nicer to look at than to talk to, being as ignorant and ill-informed as children, but full of curiosity, and excessively loquacious. They were habited in eastern costume of the richest stuffs, exposing the bosom, and substituting baggy trousers of silk (shintyane) for petticoats and skirts, while in their braided hair shone jewels and golden coins. They seemed to enjoy as a rare frolic the presence of two bearded men among them, and no doubt talked it over, as a belle would her first ball.

Here, as below, pipes, perfumed nargilehs, and sweetmeats were the order of the evening, and fair damsels puffed energetically and blew clouds of Latakia smoke through their nostrils with equal grace and gravity. It was very late when we left, and the jealousy of our unfortunate friends we had left below was vehemently kindled when they learned our happy fortune.

Bee Notes for January.

If well cared for, the bees will need no attention this month. Those that are in the cellar will become uneasy, if not kept at the right temperature, and well ventilated. During warm days, the bees may be carried out to their summer stands, and permitted to fly. If the bees are quiet, it is best to leave them undisturbed in the cellar. Winter is a time of leisure for the bee-keeper, but it should not be a time of sloth and indolence. If the apiarist makes his own hives, sections, etc., this is the time for such work. But as these are constructed so cheaply and well at the factories, it is generally best to buy them unless one is skilful with tools. It may be well to get the material in the "knock down," and then put up the apiary. This saves freight, and gives work for winter. Now is the time for studying up apiarian subjects. Read the literature of the past year, study good books on bee culture, think well of what is read, and in the light of such information plan the work for next year. Every bee-keeper should experiment some, as this makes his advancement greater, and gives added interest to the business. Now, in January, is the time to plan experiments for the coming year.

Honey should be kept during winter in a dry, warm room. When thus stored, the comb honey will not break badly, and the extracted does not ferment. Even comb honey often ferments in a cool, damp room. Winter is a good time to build up a market. For extracted honey, use attractive pails and jars, with neat labels, which state the kind of honey, and the name of the person that produces it. Neat pyramids of these packages, in the stores, will attract buyers. The size of the vessels should vary from one-half a pound to those that will hold five pounds. The label should state that the granulation is no injury, and, indeed, is the best assurance of purity. It should also tell how to restore the liquid condition, without harm to the honey, by applying heat not to exceed 180° F.

Comb honey should be put in a neat case, so as to show off to the best advantage. The case ought to bear the name of the producer, and the kind and grade of the honey. Bee-keepers can not be too careful about grading their honey. In creating a market, nothing will take the place of neatness and care in putting up the honey. If it is properly arranged, every dealer will be only too glad to give it a showy place in his store.

A writer on bee culture makes a point in wintering which may have force. He calls attention to the fact that honey, the winter food of the bees, is almost purely a hydrocarbon, and so needs little digestion, before it is absorbed into the nuritive fluid from the stomach. Then it is assimilated, and passes off as water and carbonic acid. Thus the excretion, in winter, is by respiration. That this may go on freely, the air must be dry. The writer then asserts, that in those winters most remarkable for the bee mortality, the air has been very moist. We have the data whereby this can be determined, as in this place the condition of the atmosphere as to moisture has been recorded daily for 19 years. If this is true, it shows well why dry earth ventilation has been so successful, as by that method the air is kept from getting moist. The appearance of bees that die of "dysentery" is also favorable to this view; they look dropsical, and seem fairly oozing with liquid excreta.

The past season has been a very remarkable one as to the honey yield. In parts of Ohio and the East, the honey crop has been very light. In Iowa, Illinois, Texas, and other Gulf States, the product was immense.

In one case, in Texas, the yield of a single colony and its increase, has been reported as 1,200 pounds.

The requisites of a good bee-feeder are, that it will hold from one to five pounds of honey or syrup; that it can be placed immediately above the cluster of bees, so that they can visit it on very cool days in fall and spring; that it can be closely covered with a quilt or chaff pillow; and that it shall be so made that feeding can be done without in the least disturbing the bees. In the cool days of spring and fall, the feeder can be entirely covered by a quilt or pillow, and no heat will escape, while as it is directly over the cluster, the bees will be able to take the feed on very cold days. Of course as the honey is turned on to the wire gauze, this will be sticky.—American Agriculturist.

New Year's Customs.

Some odd New Year's customs formerly prevailed in the rural portions of England, and in remote parts, may still be found to some extent. One of the most curious of these is called the "Apple Howling," which, besides giving the boys a frolic, was supposed to secure a good crop of fruit for the coming season. On New Year's Eve a troop of these sturdy country urchins, armed with strong sticks, would visit all the orchards in the neighborhood, and encircling the apple trees, repeat in chorus the following words:

"Stand fast root, bear well top,
Pray God send us a howling Crop.
Every twig, apples big,
Every bough, apples enou'.
Hats full, caps full,
Full quarter sacks full."

One of their number accompanied this chorus on a cow's horn, and during the ceremony the boys rapped the trees with their sticks. We can imagine that "Apple Howling was a very appropriate name.

The girls meanwhile were also having their sport, going about from door to door, singing verses in honor of the season, and bearing the wassail bowl, a great bowl decked with garlands and ribbons, and filled with a composition of ale, nutmeg, sugar, and roasted crabs or apples, called "Lamb's Wool." Those visited, drank each other's health in this mixture, repeating Was-haille, or drinc-heil, which are the same as our "Come, here's to you!" or "I'll pledge you!" They generally bestowed upon the maiden wassailers, a small coin, or a little gift. An orange stuck with cloves, appears to have been a favorite New Year's gift in the olden time, as well as gilted nutmegs, and Kentish pippins.

In Scotland, on the last day of the old year, the children go from house to house, asking for bread and cheese, which they call "Wog-money." They make their request in these words—

"Get up, gude wife, and binno sweir (be not lazy),
And deal your cakes and cheese while you are here,
For the time will come, when ye'll be dead
And neither need your cheese or bread."

It must be a hard-hearted person indeed who can refuse a trifle to these bonny lads and lassies.

In France New Year's day is celebrated more as it is in this country, by a round of visits being made between relatives and friends, and an exchange of bon-bons, and sweet-meats. It is a contest of politeness, which shall start earliest, and make the first call, but sugar-plums must always be presented either in fancy boxes or baskets, or simply wrapped in paper. A dinner is generally given by some member of the family, and the evening concludes with a social gathering.

Furs for Gifts.

In Europe the fashion of giving real lace by the bridegroom-elect to his bride has gone out, and in place furs are presented, and no corbeille is considered complete without a sealskin pelisse, trimmed either with beaver or Kamschatka seal. The pelisse fits the figure closely, and sometimes it seems divided in two parts—a jacket and a tunic. It is also considered high-toned to present a pair of sable tails, muff and trimmings, at usually great expense.

A magnificent wrap is of sealskin, with the back of the skirt arranged in large plaits, while the sleeves are in kangaroo shape. No trimming is used on the garment, except the rich brandenbergs with which the front is fastened. The cloak is lined with satin quilted in diamonds.

Seal-brown plush mantles come in the same shape, only in them there are not box plaits in the back portion; the side seams are open and filled in with plush fan plaitings, across which are looped rich festoons of cord tipped with handsome tassels, the topmost one commencing at the sleeves under a rich chenille ornament. The front is secured with cords and tassels.

MANITOBA NOTES.

Interesting Notes of that Frozen Country—Readable Things for Everyone.

EMERSON.

The cold snap of the past week played fast and loose with the trains and mails of this city, and considerably lessened the number of farmers' teams coming to town. The business done by merchants was not lessened, however, as the intense cold compelled purchases that would otherwise not have been made. The quantity of grain coming to town has not diminished materially, and the number of cars leaving by rail have been almost as great as the previous week. Wheat was sold at 70c. to 75c. according to quality. Oats are worth 40c. to 42c.; barley, 45c. to 55c.; potatoes, 80c. and dry cord wood $6. Merchants say that collections have been very easy during the week, and trade generally is in a prosperous state.

While all the gas about provincial rights has been blowing off during the last two weeks, sensible Mayor Carney has been accomplishing some good for the city in Ottawa. He has prevailed upon the C. P. R. syndicate to commence at once the construction of their branch from Emerson to West Lynne to connect with the South-western branch. The work is to be completed by July next, and the trade of Southern Manitoba will then be tributary to the dual cities as far as the South-western branch is extended.

BRANDON.

A project is on foot to build a railway from Souris city to this city. It is the intention of its promoters to ask Brandon for a bonus for $50,000, and the country of Brandon for $100,000. This line will be a link in the branch from Emerson, to this point, which will be built by the C. P. R.

A by-law was carried on Monday empowering the city council to raise $150,000 for permanent improvements in the city.

The club was most scuccessfully opened on a recent night. It is one of the bes in Canada and reflects great credit on its promoters.

Business was somewhat suspended during the stormy weather. It, however, booms again; the sleighing being good has brought in a large number of farmers.

Brandon can boast that the branch of the Imperial here is the third largest agency of that institution. This is good showing for a town only seventeen months old.

PORTAGE LA PRAIRIE.

The cold snap of this week has given quite a boom to certain branches of business, and merchants have been doing a good town trade. A slight check was placed upon the grain receipts for a few days, but grain is by no means scarce. A slight disagreement has taken place between the wheat buyers of the town, and prices have gone up a little to the profit of the farmer. 78c. was reached on the 8th for No. 1 hard, and next week 80c. will in all probability be paid. The rise does not affect other grains, and oats still sell at 40c. to 42c.; barley, 45c. to 55c.; potatoes, 75c. to 80c. The fight is between the Winnipeg millers and the local buyers and may grow into a bitter struggle.

Mr. McIllvanie is evidently going to have some trouble in securing a supply of water at his paper mill. Boring operations have now been carried to a depth of 100 feet, and no adequate supply of water has yet been struck.

The Review of a recent date says, the sale of stamps at Portage Post office here for the months ending November 30th amounted to $1,773.50. The gross business of the money order department for the month of November amounted to $9,092.21.

RAT PORTAGE.

The Canadian Pacific Railway are erecting at present a large round house which will be capable of accomodating fifteen engines.

The foundation for a large paper mill is being carried on. It is well known that the water power of Rat Portage is the largest in the North-west.

Messrs. Jarvis & Berridge of Winnipeg, and the Rainy River Lumber Company are in course of erecting two large sawmills, and when completed will employ about 200 men each. The lumber business is very brisk at present.

The train which started from Pembina Mountain Junction on the South-western branch of the C. P. R. on Wednesday failed to reach Winnipeg until Saturday. Several passengers, among whom was W. H. Harder, C. P. R. assistant traffic manager, had to drive from Morris to Emerson, and reach Winnipeg by train from the south.—Winnipeg Commercial.

It is is estimated that about fifteen different engines died out on different portions of the C. P. R. owing to the late severe cold. The rapid construction of this company's lines has outgrown their water-tank accommodation, and the construction of quite a number of frost-proof watering arrangements will be completed as quickly as possible, so as to prevent a repetition of the state of affairs mentioned.

There is at present a great amount of railway travelling between Winnipeg and Rat Portage, so much so that it has been necessary for the Canada Pacific Railway to put three passenger coaches on the daily train. Large crowds of men arrive each evening for the new saw-mills about to be erected on the Lake of the Woods. The accomodation is limited and the Ridout House is crowded each evening, so much so that no sleeping accommodation can be had.

Great inconvenience is felt for the want of a bank in Rat Portage. It is surprising that a bank has not been opened before this, considering the amount of business carried on. One merchant alone, turns over $100,000 per annum and now there is in course of erection two sawmills, a paper mill and the lumbering industry; there is no doubt such an institution would not only be a convenience to the public, but would also be profitable for any bank which may chose to open a branch. It is hoped that a branch of a bank will be opened before long. Banks are in less business localities.

The naked trunk of a man was found in the River Columbus, Ohio. The head and limbs had been chopped off, and a foul murder is suspected.

NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

Five Minutes' Select Reading.

Summary of Foreign, Domestic and War Items—Concise, Pithy and Polished.

DOMESTIC.

Barnes Mallon, son of a wealthy French wine-grower, was found shooting jewellery at a fashionable boarding house in Montreal.

Louis Hudon, and Charles Sixby, Canadians, once well known in Montreal, were killed by Apache Indians on Rock Creek, Arizona.

General Manager Van Horn states that the Canadian Pacific Railway will endeavor to reach the summit of the Rockies next year.

At a sale of timber limits at Ottawa recently, 30 square miles on the Dumoine River, Upper Ottawa region, were sold at $2,600 per mile.

The roof of a building at Brantford, owned by the Waterous Engine Works Company, caved in, owing to the heavy weight of snow and rain.

General Manager Hickson is reported to have said that the Grand Trunk Railway does not at present entertain any project for entering the North-west.

Prof. E. Stone Wiggins is about to write to the Governor-General not to let the Princess go to Bermuda during the early portion of March, when he is going to bring on his big storm.

UNITED STATES.

Oscar Wilde has returned to England.

The faculty of Albert College has reinstated the expelled junior class.

The Mercy Hospital at Big Rapids, Mich. was totally destroyed by fire on Wednesday.

James Gordon Bennett, of the New York Herald, has decided to lay two cables across the Atlantic.

The Detroit Post and Tribune, will appeal to the Supreme Court against the verdict in the Battrick case.

The Attorney-General has commenced an action against the City Bank of Rochester on behalf of the people,

It is probable that letter postage in the United States will be reduced from three to two cents after January.

It is stated that R. Harris, dry-goods merchant, at Corry, Pa., who recently failed, lost $40,000 through speculating in oil.

The Mayor of Chicago will not interfere with the parade of armed Socialists when Herr Most arrives, unless a disturbance occurs.

John Cummings a laborer in the employ of the New York Street Cleaning Department claims to have found a $19,000 Government bond in a dirt heap.

GENERAL.

The Belgian deficit is estimated at twenty-five million francs.

Prince Krapotkin, the Nihilist chief, has been arrested at Lyons.

It is reported that Cardinal Donnet, Archbishop of Bordeau, is dead.

It is stated that reinforcements will be sent immediately to occupy Tonquin.

It is thought desirable to remove Gambetta to Paris at the first opportunity.

The French Cabinet have adjusted their differences on the Tonquin expedition.

Osman Pasha, accused of intriguing with Halim Pasha against the Khedive has been released.

The calico print works of Dalgleish & Falconer, Glasgow, have been burned. Loss £20,000.

The Greeks are excited over alleged indignities suffered by their co-religionists in Roumania.

The commander of H. M. S. Clyde has been dismissed the service for misappropriating the ship's stores.

Albert Victor, eldest son of the Prince of Wales, has been entered for Oxford University for the next term.

Three more deaths have occurred in consequence of the explosion of the cartridge factory at Mount Valerien.

General Stone, late chief of the staff of the Egyptian army, has resigned his commission. He intends to return to America.

The Paris journals are becoming less hostile to England, and now advocate a fresh French, English and Italian alliance.

Telephone communication has been successfully established between London and Brighton, England, a distance of 47 miles.

It is stated that the French Government has ordered the press to maintain silence regarding the relations of Russia, Austria and Germany.

Mr. Parnell is so busy with private and public affairs that he will probably be unable to go to America to attend the forthcoming convention.

When the body of a man was taken into Christ Church, at Hillier, Ontario, the Rev. John Halliwell, who had been deprived of the right to officiate by his Bishop, was found there with his surplice on and book in hand. The Rev. Mr. Loucks, the rector of a neighboring village, had been brought over to read the burial service, and he met the procession at the foot of the aisle in the usual manner. So did Mr. Halliwell. Both ministers began to read. Then Mr. Loucks stopped, led the mourners to the grave, and there completed the service, leaving Mr. Halliwell in possession of the church.

Many historical events will derive fresh interest from the opening of the new Law Courts in London. The King (or Queen) is technically both the fountain of justice and head of the judicial bench. King John and several of the Henrys and Edwards sat and heard cases in the Court of King's Bench, and the English monarch of to-day can do the same. But, though the monarch can try any cause, he or she is by the Constitution debarred from deciding any question that comes before the court. It is matter of history that James I. sought to push his prerogative to the extent of deciding cases in court. The Judges refused to allow this, and their dignified rebuke silenced themeddle some petulance of the King.

The Bombardment of A[lexandria]

The Council again met at 3 p.m. (the 10th) and sat for an hour and a half. After a long discussion on the subject of the Admiral's demand, it was agreed that it would be altogether shameful and [dis]graceful to remove the guns from a position they had occupied for more than 50 years, and [had] been always particularly careful [not] to be fighting with any power, and [more] especially England, but in this case we [should] do it in defence, but not before the Egyptians had first thrown five or six shells at us. The Khedive now showed apparently great energy and courage, and repeatedly said that should war take place he would himself carry a rifle and be to the front with the troops. The Khedive and Dervisch Pasha both telegraphed to the Porte that obedience had been decided on. After this the Khedive, with Dervisch Pasha and his family, went to Ramleh. Next morning at the appointed hour a shot was fired by the fleet, which was followed by [many]. Then we decided to reply, and [fire] began. The bombardment lasted [without] interruption for ten hours and a half, until most of the forts were wholly or partially destroyed. A portion of the Ras el Tin Palace was demolished, besides [many] other houses in the town, and particularly those near the railway station, which [were in] a line with Fort Demas, where my wife and I were. The shells came over that way into the station. During the bombardment messages were continually sent to the Khedive and Dervisch Pasha, by Mahmoud Effendi encouraging us to defend ourselves, offering us many congratulations and praising the gunners at the forts to do so, which they did with guns which were turned out, no match for those of the English. We were much astonished [not] to see the Khedive at the Ramleh palace where he remained as if no war were taking place between his Government and the English. After the bombardment [I] went myself to Ramleh about [noon] with me the Council, and informed the Khedive of what had taken place on board and he cordially thanked the soldiers for their steady and energetic behavior. I then asked his Highness for instructions [about] the forts which were still [firing]. A council was held, attended by the Khedive, Dervisch Pasha, Toulba Pasha, the other Ministers, and Ismail Pasha, to decide what course to take if all the forts were destroyed, and whether the war should be carried on or not. It was agreed that, should the English again hoist a flag of truce should be hoisted to prevent further damage and to open communications for peace. Toulba Pasha was then sent next morning to Admiral Seymour to inform him that the Egyptian Government had nothing against England and did not wish for war, even supposing that they were strong enough to oppose her. I gave instructions for the forts to hoist flags of truce, and then went to Bal el Sherki for the night. Next morning, (the 12th July,) about 6 hours after sunrise, the ships resumed bombardment of the town. The white flags were immediately hoisted on the forts, and the firing continued until they had fired 25 or 30 shells. Toulba Pasha then went in a boat to see the Admiral, and was met by one of the officers. He informed the Admiral of the Khedive's submission, and was told that the Admiral required the forts to be occupied by British troops, viz., Agami, Fort Mex, and Fort Aboukir. I requested that the Khedive should give orders to this effect by 3 o'clock p.m., failing which the firing would recommence and the forts would be taken by force. Toulba Pasha went to Ramleh and I followed him to see the Prime Minister. We had only a half in which to decide, therefore a council was held at 2:30 p.m. under the presidency of the Khedive and Dervisch Pasha, there being also present Kafri Bey, Nubar Pasha, Keshid, Ismail, Hakki, Abdel Kader, Toulba Pasha, and myself. The decision arrived at was that, as the Khedive had no right to cede Ottoman territory to a foreign power, it was necessary to communicate with Constantinople. In the meantime a flag of truce was sent again to the Admiral. The Khedive did not arrive at the beach until the forts were all blown up, and was told that an officer had been sent to Malta until the appointed hour, and, not having received the Khedive's reply, had returned to his ship. At the council the Khedive gave his consent to allow our troops to occupy Fort Agami, and to facilitate the landing of British troops. I then explained to His Highness that the infantry could not go, as the place was too exposed to the fire of the ships, and, besides, that it would be necessary to be cut off from Alexandria. The Khedive was very angry and said, "Why have you made yourselves soldiers if you cannot fight?" I explained the landing of an enemy on our coast. I then went with Ragheb Pasha to his house on the Mahmoudieh Canal, and we discussed the matter as to why the Khedive was so angry and how anxious he had been that Fort Agami should not fall into the hands of the English.—Ahmed Arabi, in the Nineteenth Century.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

Readable Notes From all Parts of the Globe.

The Lancet says that women should not carry a weight of clothes such as few men would care to carry.

The Queensland, Australia, Government asks for Legislature for $1,250,000 for immigration. In future the assisted immigrant will be bound, under severe penalties, to remain some years in the colony.

The question whether a railroad car comes under the definition, "any public place," where gambling is forbidden, has been just decided in the London Court of Justice. It is such a place.

While we have of late been enjoying all the seasons of the year in the course of a single week, surf bathing is still being enjoyed at Santa Monica, Cal. The weather is as warm as in midsummer.

A man at Kingston found $3 on the street and he advertised the find to the tune of $7 and made the loser foot the bill. It is sometimes disagreeable to meet an honest man.

The Queen brought out a good deal of enthusiasm at the recent royal review in London. When the Foot Guards, headed by the Duke of Connaught, marched past the Queen stood up in the carriage, waving her handkerchief again and again. She remembered she was a mother as well as a Queen.

BRITISH NEWS.

Rents in Scotland still continue to fall. A large farm in Berwickshire was recently reduced at $3,000, after having for many years commanded $4,640. This is a reduction of about 35 per cent. The conditions of the new lease are said, in addition, to be very liberal.

The prompt condemnation of Mr. Tenny-son's new play by a London audience leads an English newspaper to remark that English audiences are gradually "assuming something of a ferocity of the French first-night public." A man who has written a bad play is treated, it says, "with more vindictiveness than a pickpocket or a burglar." Previous good character as a dramatist is not allowed to tell in his favor.

During the royal review in London recently the warmest outward welcome was extended to Sir Evelyn Wood. Sir Garnet Wolseley is said to have appeared too early in the procesion to be generally recognized. He was missed in the crowd of surrounding cheering hats. Sir Evelyn at one point stopped to shake hands with an Essex man whom he recognized in the crowd, and was nearly pulled off his horse by the enthusiastic crowd.

At the Pembroke dock-yard in Wales was launched, a fortnight ago, the new iron-clad barbette ship "Collingwood" in the presence of many thousands of spectators. This iron-clad is 325 feet long and 68 wide; her armor has a thickness varying from 16 to 18 inches, and weighs 1,497 tons; her engines are 7,000 horse-power, and she has a total displacement of 1,950 tons.

The law has interfered with one of Mr. Edward Herne Shephard's enterprises. Mr. Shephard recently declared himself about to issue a life of Thackeray, with some of Thackeray's unpublished writings, and it will be remembered that the English publishers of Thackeray's works therefore announced an authorized edition of the unpublished works as a matter of self defence. It now comes that the publishers have applied for and have obtained an injunction restraining Mr. Shephard from carrying out his purposes.

When the Queen goes to Balmoral she goes by special train, commanded by special servants. The trip there and back is said to have cost the snug sum of £2,500. Other members of the royal family, however, travel in "saloon-carriages" by an ordinary train at first-class fares. During the Queen's residence a special train, known as the train, is run from Aberdeen to Ballater for the use of Queen's messengers and Cabinet ministers on duty. From Ballater to Balmoral they travel in carriages, as the railway track, by special desire, does not go as far as Balmoral itself.

Mr. Joynes, the undermaster of Eton School, who was arrested in Ireland last summer with Mr. Henry George, having refused to be published in London a long account, written by himself, of his experiences, one which is described as "a harmless little volume," the head master of Eton has called upon him to suppress the book. The head master afterward admitted that he had not read the book when he made the demand. "It is surely absurd," says the Pall Mall Gazette, in a note on this strange proceeding, "that the master of a great school like Eton should be tied down to one set of opinions, and that those must be opinions to which the head master happens not to object."

Mr. Preston, author of "Unclaimed Money," has startled Londoners by announcing that the new Palace of Justice has been partly raised with the surplus interest of suitors' money, the Court of Justice Building Act, 1865, giving power to apply £1,500,000 of the surplus interest fund for this purpose. Mr. Preston asserts that £75,000,000 are in the chancery funds, the number of accounts being 34,545. A hundred years ago it was £7,500,000 and 2,500 accounts. This employment of the money in buildings the courts need not have the numerous families in this country who claim these funds, inasmuch as there is an understanding that the government will make good all the money thus appropriated to all claims which shall be substantiated.

It is recorded in a London paper, as if it were a matter of some wonder, that an English gentleman possessing an income of $30,000 a year has been sent to penal servitude for shooting at Police officers. His name is Thomas A. H. Robinson. Several officers attempted to arrest Mr. Robinson and he discharged a revolver at them, without, however, doing any of them serious harm. The court at Liverpool, before which the case was taken, appears to have made speedy work of it, in entire disregard of the gentleman's income of £5,000 a year.

Ben Nevis is in a fair way to have erected upon its summit a national observatory. A son of Prof. Hilderbrand, who is the director of the observatory at Upsala, and whose researches in atmospheric phenonema are declared to be the most advanced and accurate that have been made known, has written to Baden scientific persons strongly urging that this work be undertaken. He says the atmospheric observations published from Puy-de-Dome, in the South of France, have been of great importance, but unfortunately this mountain has a bad situation in regard to storm tracks, being almost placed on the north-westerly or south-westerly slope of a high pressure. "Ben Nevis, on the contrary," he says, "is situated almost in the middle track of the depressions or storms of North-western Europe, and hence observations made there must be of far greater importance in their relation to the theory of cyclones than the mountain observations in the South of France." It is believed in London that the necessary funds for the observatory will shortly have been raised. About $25,000 will be needed.

A Hotel Man's Luck.

Mr. J. G. Tyler, chief clerk at the Union Depot Hotel, Ogden, had rheumatism in the muscles of the chest and left shoulder. By applying the Great German Remedy three days he realized complete restoration, and he is of the opinion that there is nothing equal to the St. Jacobs Oil for pain. The Great German Remedy is also a specific for burns and sprains.—Salt Lake (Utah) Tribune.

King Alfonso speaks English, but not so fluently as his wife does, naturally.

VEGETINE is composed of the best vegetable ingredients the dispensary of Nature furnishes. Their juices are extracted in a way which preserves their undiminished medical properties, making it one of the greatest cleansers of the blood that can be put together.

The dresses of Lollia Paulina, the rival of Agrippina, were valued at $2,864,480, not including her jewels, which cost as much more. It has slipped our memory whether Miss Paulina was the daughter of a plumber or an editor, but our impression is that she was.

Solid men admire the beautiful, and this accounts in some measure for the thousands upon thousands of bottles of Carboline, the deodorized petroleum hair renewer and dressing, which have been sold yearly since its invention by Messrs. Kennedy & Co., of Pittsburgh, Pa.

Marriages make men thoughtful. About half their time is spent in forming excuses.

The Source of Much Ill Temper.

When your husband comes home in bad humor, jerks off his boots, and appears to be generally miserable, do not attribute it to business cares or hard times, but to its real cause—those terrible corns constantly annoying him. A word to the wise will be sufficient—buy a bottle of Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. His corns will be quickly and painlessly removed, and his gratitude will be unbounded. Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor sold everywhere.

All good clothes come high except ball dresses.

The people of this country have spoken. They declare by their patronage Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, that they believe it to be an article of genuine merit, adapted to the cure of rheumatism, as well as relieves the pains of fractures and dislocations, external injuries, corns, bunions, piles, and other maladies.

In the Journal de Therapeutique the statement is made by Prof. Nocard, that pilocarpine, a drug upon which the medical faculty had built their hopes as a cure for hydrophobia, exerts no beneficial influence upon that malady.

D. Sullivan, Malcolm, Ontario, writes: "I have been selling Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil for some years, and have no hesitation in saying that it has given better satisfaction than any other medicine I have ever sold. I consider it the only patent medicine that cures more than it is recommended to cure.

In fishing fur krabs use yur fingers fur bait; yu kun feel then when they fust bite.

HAVE YOU TRIED IT?—If so, you can testify to its marvellous powers of healing, and recommend it to your friends. We refer to Briggs' Magic Relief, the grand specific for all summer complaints, diarrhoea, cholera morbus, dysentery, cramps, colic, sickness of the stomach, and bowel complaints.

In building the St. Gothard Railway, 310 workmen were killed and 631 injured. Of the latter a number afterward died.

"Twenty-four year's experience," says an eminent Physician, "convinces me that the only cure for "Nervous Exhaustion" and weakness or the generative organs is to repair the waste by giving Brain and Nerve Foods, and of all the remedies I have used Mack's Magnetic Medicine is the best. This remedy is now sold by all our Druggists at 50 cts. per box, or 6 for $2.50, and on receipt of an order for 12 boxes, accompanied with $5.00, addressed to Mack's Magnetic Medicine Co., Windsor, Ont., they will forward the goods free by mail, and send their "written guarantee" to refund the money, if the treatment does not effect a cure. See adv't in another column.

At Leicester, England, three weeks ago, the auction of goods seized for non-payment of fines for neglect of vaccination occasioned almost a riot, and forty police could scarcely keep order.

W. T. Bray, Pharmacist, Wingham, Ont., writes that the sale of Burdock Blood Bitters has very largely increased in that locality, and adds that he hears very favorable opinions expressed regarding it, and, if time permitted, could send many names of benefited parties, 22.

An old man named Daniel Cane was found dead on Friday morning week, in a dilapidated log house in which he lived alone, near Aberfoyle. He was said to be between seventy-five and eighty years of age, and was unmarried. It is supposed death was the result of old age.

Testimonial from Mr. W. S. Wisner, of J. C. Wisner & Son, Manufacturers of Agricultural Implements:—

Brantford, Ont., July 28th, 1880.

J. N. Sutherland, Esq.: Dear Sir,—I take pleasure in bearing testimony to the efficacy of your Rheumatine. Last spring I was completely disabled with Rheumatism, and tried various remedies, baths, &c., and finally heard of your cure. I purchased and used three bottles of it, and it effected a complete cure, for I have not had a return of the disease since.

Yours truly, W. S. WISNER.

An impression prevails in London that nearly all the members of the Queensbury family are more or less cracked; consequently, Lady Gertude's nuptials with her young baker did not so very much surprise people.

A Sure Thing

In the treatment of Chronic disease with that great system renovator and restorative, Burdock Blood Bitters, there is no uncertainty as to its action, its curative powers are speedily manifest by its marked effect upon the Liver, the Bowels and the Kidneys. Every dose performing its work in a perceptible manner. 24.

A.P. 105

St. Jacobs Oil

THE GREAT GERMAN REMEDY

FOR PAIN.

Relieves and cures

RHEUMATISM,

Neuralgia,

Sciatica, Lumbago,

BACKACHE,

HEADACHE, TOOTHACHE,

SORE THROAT,

QUINSY, SWELLINGS,

SPRAINS,

Soreness, Cuts, Bruises,

FROSTBITES,

BURNS, SCALDS,

And all other bodily aches and pains.

FIFTY CENTS A BOTTLE.

Sold by all Druggists and Dealers. Directions in 11 languages.

The Charles A. Vogeler Co.

(Successors to A. VOGELER & CO.)

Baltimore, Md., U. S. A.

If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have sallow color of skin, or yellowish-brown spots on the face or body, frequent headache or dizziness, bad taste in mouth, internal heat or chills alternated with hot blushes, low spirits and gloomy forebodings, irregular appetite, and tongue coated, you are suffering from "torpid liver," or "biliousness." In many cases of "liver complaint" only part of these symptoms are experienced. As a remedy for all such cases Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" has no equal, as it effects perfect and radical cures. At all drug stores.

One of Wellington's soldiers, Mr. Geo. Taylor, died at Morrisburg, last week, aged 95 years.

Bad temper often proceeds from those painful disorders to which women are subject. In female complaints Dr. R. V. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" is a certain cure. By all druggists.

Thirty-three thousand sheep crossed to the United States from Brockville during the season just closed.

Young or middle aged men suffering from nervous debility, loss of memory, premature old age, as the result of bad habits, should send three stamps for part VII of Dime Series pamphlets, Address WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Buffalo, N. Y.

Messrs. James Allan and John Dennison, of Perth, shipped seven carloads of provisions for Winnipeg lately, including 318 head of dressed cattle.

Purge out the morbid humors of the blood by a dose or two of Ayer's Pills, and you will have clearer heads as well as healthier bodies.

Mr. Stewart Harris, London township, weighed on Monday at the city scales a fat heifer which tipped the beam at 1,490 pounds.

A Wise Maxim.

"A stitch in time saves nine," not only in making garments, but also in mending health. If Hagyard's Pectorial Balsam were used in the earlier stages of Colds and Coughs, many a "stitch in the side" and many a case of torn lungs might be avoided, that neglected, rapidly develope into irreparable Consumption. 21.

Diphtheria of a terribly malignant form has attacked a family in Sydney township and carried off four members within a week. Another member is in a critical condition.

PROFESSIONAL.

TORONTO.—Mr. J. H. Mayne Campbell Barrister, Etc., 9 Victoria-st., Toronto

MR. FORSTER, ARTIST, HAS RETURNED from Europe and opened a Studio, 81 King-st. East. Portraits in oil life size.

RUBBER STAMPS.—ADDRESS R. H. COX, 4 King St. East, Toronto. Agents wanted.

WATCHES repaired. Trade work a specialty. A. BALLABEY, 8 King St. E., Toronto.

CHRIS. SHEPPARD, Manuf'r of Masonic and other Society Jewels, 154 King E., Toronto.

$5 PER DAY can be made by agents, male or female. C. W. DENNIS, Toronto.

PRICE TICKETS, SHOW CARDS, WINDOW SHADES. Newest designs. Send for price list. F. WILLIAMS, 4 King E., Toronto.

CARDS Christmas, New Year, Birthday and other Cards, at H. J. MATHEWS & BROS. art depot, Toronto.

AGENTS WANTED EVERYWHERE FOR our Family Bibles and popular subscription books. Send for circulars. C. R. PARISH & Co., Toronto.

$5.000.000 WORTH OF FARMING and other property in Ontario for sale by the CANADA WEST LAND AGENCY COMPANY, 14 Adelaide-st. East, Toronto. Send for list.

TAGS. Patent eyelet, smooth surface, heavy and very tough. Send for new price list. J. G. WOODLAND & CO.; Steam Printers, Toronto.

THE BRITISH AMERICAN BUSINESS College, Toronto, is the most reliable and throughly practical school of its kind in Canada. Send for circular.

ONTARIO VETERINARY COLLEGE, TORONTO. Students can enter from October until January. PROF. SMITH, S.,V. Edin., Principal. Fees, fifty dollars.

CANADIAN MUTUAL AID ASSOCIATION. Co-operative Life Assurance. Provide for families in case of death. W. PEMBERTON PAGE, Sec., 87 King St. West, Toronto. Agents wanted.

GROCERY AND LIQUOR BUSINESS FOR Sale in Western town of 2,000 population, doing $20,000 per annum; ¾ cash trade: stock about $5,000; convenient terms. MACKINTOSH & PETERS, Toronto.

SOMETHING NEW.—PATENT CIGAR made of good stock, each cigar containing its own holder. Samples will be sent for seventy-five cents per box. G. B. HUNT, 91 Church-st., Toronto.

WANTED PARTIES OWNING A PORTABLE Saw Mill to tender for sawing the lumber off 200 acres of bush land. For particulars address, AUTHORS & COX, Manufacturers of Artificial Limbs, 91 Church street, Toronto.

THOSE WISHING TO DISPOSE OF OR purchase a business of any description in the city or elsewhere should call or send particulars to C. J. PALIN, 53 and 55 King-street East. Business Agent and Valuer.

OWNERS OF FARM LANDS, CITY AND Town Properties, desiring to realize, will find purchasers by sending me full descriptions, lowest prices, and terms of payment. J. W. G. WHITNEY, Estate Agent, 25 Toronto street, Toronto.

JAMES BERGEN, BOOKSELLER & IMPORTER, No. 4 Adelaide-st. East, Toronto, Ont. Beautifully Illustrated and Cheap Editions of the best and most popular Authors in History, Fiction and Poetry; also Family Bibles, Photo. Albums, &c. Monthly Payments Taken. Agents Wanted.

FOR SALE—FARM OF 117 ACRES IN ORO, being parts of lots 22 in 13th and 14th concessions—fronts on Carthew's Bay, Lake Simcoe, and is beautifully situated; 80 acres cleared, balance in good hardwood; fine large two-storey frame-house 46 x 40, and another 20 x 30, kitchen attached; barn 50 x 30; terms easy. CROOKS, KINGSMILL & CATTANACH Toronto.

THE BELL TELEPHONE CO. OF CANADA having purchased patents of Telephones; which can be rented at reduced rates for private line purposes, parties desiring to obtain same will be furnished on application to the Company at its Head Office, Montreal, or to agents, or Manager of Ontario Department Bell Telephone Co., Hamilton.

WM. ASHALL, WATCHMAKER AND Jeweler, 262 Yonge St., Toronto, has enlargrd his premises, and greatly increased his stock of gold and silver jewelry, plated ware, cutlery, clocks, watches, etc. Fine stock of jet and garnet jewelry. Goods imported direct. Every kind of jewelry repaired promptly, neatly, and cheaply.

HOLIDAY PRESENTS.—CHAMBERS' encyclopedia, $18 75 for leather. 1882 edition, 10 vols., $14 for cloth; Worcester's Dictionary, leather, 1882 edition, $8 75; Royal Path of Life, leather, $1 50; Guthrie's Life, $3 edition for 75c; Scott's Novels, $18 set for $12, 12 vols. Annuals, Chatterbox, Horn of Plenty, Little Folks' Play Book, etc., half price, $1 25 for 63c; small Annuals in proportion; free on receipt of price. DICKENSON & CRANSTON, Woodstock.

Daughters, Wives, Mothers, look to your health! The many painful and weakening diseases from which you suffer, despairing of a cure, can be remedied by that unfailing regulator and purifying tonic, Burdock Blood Bitters. Ask your druggist for proof. 20.

Yes, there is quite a difference between an entry clerk and a hall boy.

Keep it in your family. The best remedy for accidents and emergencies, for Burns, Scalds, Bruises, Soreness, Sore Throat, Croup, Rheumatism, Chilblains, and Pain or Soreness of all kinds, is that marvellous healing remedy, Hagyard's Yellow Oil. 19.

Among the items in a shoemaker's bill presented to a Kingston man was: "Heels on wife, 25 cents."

Last week a boy of 11 years of age, son of Joseph Latchford, hotel-keeper, Thomasburg, was kicked by a horse in the head, smashing in a portion of his skull. The boy died.

A Cure for Croup. There is no better remedy for Croup than Hagyard's Yellow Oil taken internally and applied according to the special directions, this is the great household panacea for Rheumatism, Stiff Joints, Pain Inflammation &c. 23.

Street lighting is agitating the Municipal and private wisdom of Richmond. The bridge question is temporarily resting on its oars.

If your hair is coming out, do not murmur over a misfortune you can so easily avert. Ayer's Hair Vigor will remove the cause of your grief by restoring your hair to its natural color, and therewith your good looks and good nature.

Vegetine

RHEUMATISM, KIDNEY COMPLAINT

Entirely Cured by the use of

VEGETINE.

Hamilton, O., March 14, 1881.

Mr. H. R. Stevens—Dear Sir: Although an entire stranger to you, I wish to inform you what Vegetine has done for me. After suffering for several years with the Rheumatism, I can truly say, the Vegetine has entirely cured me, I have had not the slightest touch of it for several months.

Have also been badly afflicted with Kidney Complaint, suffering great pain in my back, hips and sides with great difficulty in passing urine. By the use of Vegetine I find myself entirely cured of this complaint. I take great pleasure in recommending your remedy to my acquaintances and friends, and all speak favorably of it good effects Resp'y yours, P. H. GILBERT, Undertaker.

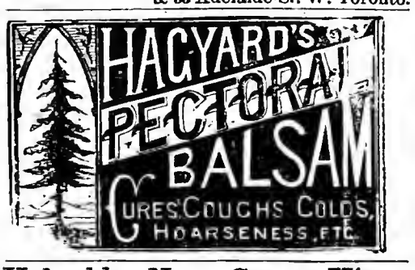
I am personally acquainted with Mr. Gilbert, and believe him perfectly reliable in his statement. B. S. JAMES, Druggist, Hamilton, O.

Read the Facts.



Toronto, April 3, 1880. 5 Bear-st.

Mr. H. R. Stevens, Boston, Mass:

Sir—I have much pleasure in bearing testimony to the efficacy of your invaluable family medicine Vegetine. For three years I was a great sufferer from Chronic Rheumatism and Derangement of the Kidneys, and after testing innumerable so called remedies, in the spring of last year, I was recommended to give the Vegetine a trial and to persevere in using it for some time. I did so, and in the course of three months found a perfect cure had been effected and I am now, thank God, in the full enjoyment of the best of health. I consider it the most effective remedy for the distressing complaints just mentioned and for Indigestion, Biliousness and Liver Disease. It is very pleasant to take, vitalizing and invigorating. I can most confidently recommend it, knowing great benefits I have derived from its use and consider I cannot over-state its great and important value to those similarly afflicted as I have been. Yours faithfully, R. L COLE, Accountant.

Vegetine is Sold by All Druggists.

MUSIC. THREE SONGS—The latest and best things out. Immensely popular. In full size sheet music form for FIVE CENTS per copy or the three for ten cents, S. FRANK WILSON, "TRUTH" Office, 33 & 35 Adelaide-St. W. Toronto.

Valuable New Grape Vines By Mail.

The undersigned will send by mail to any part of Ontario or Quebec, and guarantee them to come in good order, good, strong, well-rooted Vines of the following new and valuable varieties of Grapes at the annexed prices:

Brighton, Burnett, Lady, Moor's Early, or Worden, 50 cts. each, or 5 for $2.

Belinda, Duchess, Jefferson, Pocklington, Prentis, or Vergenes, $1 each, 6 for $5.

Also, a large assortment of other varieties of GRAPES, GOOSEBERRIES, CURRANTS, RASPBERRIES, BLACKBERRIES, STRAWBERRIES, ETC., cheap by mail or express.

Also, Fruit & Ornamental Trees.

Send for catalogue. Address

A. M. SMITH,

Box 571, St. Catharines, Ont.

P. S.—The proprietor of any paper sending a special notice of this advertisement in his paper to the undersigned will receive $1 worth of vines. A. M. SMITH.

MAGNETIC MEDICINE.

BRAIN & NERVE FOOD.

Positively cures Nervousness in all its stages, Weak Memory, Loss of Brain Power, Night Sweats, Barrenness, Weakness and General Loss of Power. It repairs Nervous Waste, rejuvenates the Jaded Intellect, strengthens the Enfeebled Brain and restores surprising tone and vigor to the Exhausted Generative Organs in either sex. ☞ With each order for Twelve packages, accompanied with five dollars, we will send our written guarantee to refund the money if the treatment does not effect a cure. It is the Cheapest and Best Medicine in the market. Pamphlet sent free by mail to any address.

Mack's Magnetic Medicine is sold by druggists at 50 cents per box, or 6 boxes for $2,50, or will be mailed free of postage, on receipt of money, by addressing Mack's Magnetic Medicine Co., Windsor, Ont., Canada. Sold by all druggists in Canada.

Old and young should use "TEABERRY
Then your laugh may be quite merry;
Fragrant breath shall pass your lips
And your Teeth shall pearls eclipse.

BRACE UP—Your system for work. ZOPESA, the new Dyspepsia and Liver remedy Atends strictly to business in correcting the Stomach, Liver, and Kidneys. Sample bottles, 10 cents; large bottles, 75 cents.

WATCHES. Send for free illustrated catalogue to RYRIE, the Jeweler, 113 Yonge Street, Toronto.

CORALINE!

CORSETS unequalled for health, comfort and durability. Manufactured by the CROMPTON CORSET CO., Toronto.

DYSPEPSIA!

And the severer forms of INDIGESTION. A small pamphlet on the above most distressing maladies and their complete cures, post free, 5 cents in stamps. By R. KING, Esq., Staff Surgeon, Royal Navy, England.

Apply to RICHARD KING, Box 346, Windsor, Ont.

The Toronto General Trusts Co.,

27 and 29 Wellington St., Toronto.

HON. ED. BLAKE, Q.C., M.P., - President.

E. A. MEREDITH, Esq., LL.D., Vice President

J. W. LANGMUIR, - - - Manager

This Company, which has been approved of by the High Court of Justice and the Lieutenant Governor in Council, accepts trusts of every description, and acts as executor, administrator, &c., and also as agent of existing trustees, executors, &c. $300,000 of Trust Funds to loan upon real estate and mortgages. For further information apply to do a great many ladies still pay from two to four dollars per year for high priced American fashion papers when they can get the Ladies' Journal one year for fifty cents. The Ladies' Journal is a 16 page monthly fashion paper, containing the sum and substance of all the latest American high priced fashion magazines. Large full page illustrations of all the newest styles, useful household hints, short stories, poetry, miscellaneous selections, and lots of other interesting matter, also one full sized Piece of sheet music in each number, always the latest and most popular thing out. To every person who sends me fifty cents for one years subscription I'll mail postpaid at once an Elegant Silver Plated Butter Knife or Pickle Fork with ivory handle. Don't forget to tell your friends that the Ladies Journal contains besides the fashion illustrations &c. a full size piece of sheet music in each number. S. FRANK WILSON, 33 & 35 Adelaide Street West, Toronto.

J. W. LANGMUIR, Manager

WHY

WHAT IS CATARRH?

Catarrh is a muco-purulent discharge caused by the presence and development of the vegetable parasite amœba in the internal lining membrane of the nose. This parasite is only developed under favorable circumstances, and these are: morbid state of the blood, as the blighted corpuscle of tubercle, the germ poison of syphilis, mercury, toxœmea, from retention of the effeted matter of the skin, suppressed perspiration, badly ventilated sleeping apartments, and other poisons that are germinated in the blood. These poisons keep the internal lining membrane of the nose in a constant state of irritation, ever ready for the deposit of the seeds of these germs, which spread up the nostrils and down the fauces or back part of the mouth causing ulceration of the throat; up the eustachian tubes, causing deafness; burrowing in the vocal cords, causing hoarseness, usurping the proper structure of the bronchial tubes ending in pulmonary consumption and death.

To effect a cure the parasite must be removed or destroyed, hence inhalants and snuffs are worthless.

Some time since a well known physician of 40 years standing, after much experimenting, succeeded in discovering the necessary combination of ingredients, which never fails in absolutely and permanently eradicating this horrible disease whether standing for one year or forty years. Sufferers should, without delay communicate with the business manager, Mr. A. H. Dixon, 307 King St. West, Toronto, and get treatise free by enclosing stamp. Ask your druggist for it

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN HAIR RENEWER

This standard article is compounded with greatest care.

Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactor as ever.

It restores gray or faded hair to its youthfu color.

It removes all eruptions, itching and dan druff, and the scalp by its use becomes whit and clean.

By its tonic properties it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness, and making the hair grow thick and strong.

As a dressing nothin so e fectual, or desirable.

Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says of it: "I consider it the best preparation for its intended purposes.

Buckingham's Dye,

FOR THE WHISKERS.

This elegant preparation may be relied on to change the color of the beard from gray or any other undesirable shade, to brown or black, a discretion. It is easily applied, being in one preparation, and quickly and effectually produces a permanent color which will neither rub nor wash off.

MANUFACTURED BY

R. P. HALL & CO.,

NASHUA, N. H.

Sold by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicin

A HAPPY NEW YEAR TO ALL

The Standard.

MARKDALE, DEC. 28ST, 1882.

To the Editor of the STANDARD.

DEAR SIR,—I was very much amused on reading Rev. Mr. Ward's long letter in your last weeks issue to find he still eludes the question asked in my letter. He 'brought out his cannon to shoot the fly" shut both eyes and went it blind, there was a loud report but no game. I stated in my last letter that if Mr. Ward desired I would discuss the matter with him in a friendly way through your columns with the understanding that he would first give his reasons for requesting his congregation to withold countenance and aid to the other church enterprises of the village. But he does not desire it; he says it is not a matter to be discussed it is simply a matter of obedience. The general public now a-days desire "a reson for the faith that is in them," they do not propose to obey contrary to reason, the days of unquestioning obedience to priestly dictation have happily passed away may they never return. I asked a plain straight forward question and certainly expected from one in Mr. Ward's position a plain straigh forward answer, but instead of that he treats us to two columns of matter entirely foreign to the subject on hand, in the course of which he quotes a letter of Rev. J. Wesley. I suppose the letter in question is arithamatic and no doubt some Methodist will be able to answer for his church, I am not a Methodist am not specially up in their literature, doubtless they had good and suffieient reasons for leaving the church of England communion, but I must say that to an outsider their simple rules. Earnest prayer and practical gospel sermons seem more in accordance with the practices and preaching of the apostles and first teachers of Christianity than the elaborate ritual crosses genuflections &c., of the so called protestant episcopal church. However I must leave this subject for the present. When Mr. Ward answers my question in a plain candid way, I may have a little further talk with him through your paper but if he does not see fit to do so, I will not condescend to follow him through all the tortuous way that the Vagaries of his imagination may lead him. Thanking you Mr. Editor for allowing me space in your widely read Journal to expose the illiberality of the Rev. Gentleman.

I am yours truly
G.

SHILOH'S CONSUMPTION CURE.

This is beyond question the most successful Cough Medicine we have ever sold, a few doses invariably cure the worst cases of Cough, Croup, and Bronchitis, while its wonderful success in the cure of Consumption is without a parallel in the history of medicine. Since its first discovery it has been sold on a guarantee, a test which no other medicine can stand. If you have a Cough we earnestly ask you to try it. Price 10cts, 50 cts. and $1.00. If your Lungs are sore, Chest, or Back, Lame, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Sold by Wm. Brown's General Store Markdale.

NOMINATIONS.

GLENELG TOWNSHIP—Reeve, F McRae (acclamation); Deputy Reeve, Mullarky and Birnie, Councillors—Dunsmore, Davis, McCnaig, Neil, McMillan, Boyce, Motly, Lauder.

OWEN SOUND—Mayor, David Creasor (acclamation). Reeve, John Chisholm (acclamation; 1st Deputy, R. Malcolm, J. W. Frost; 2nd Deputy, Thomas Frizzell, James C. Miller, Councillors—Centre Ward—T. B. Dowsley, W. J. Paterson, James Sanderson, G. P. Creighton. Bay Ward—Duncan Morrison. John Pearson, M. Forhan (all by acclamation). River Ward—Stephen Spencer, Jacob Speers, Owen Vandusen, Roderick McLeod, Samuel McLean.

OSPREY TOWNSHIP.—Reeve, Thomas McGirr, Josiah R. Sing; Deputy Reeve, John Douglas, Archie McIntyre. Councillors—Thomas Johnston, Joseph Taylor, John Winters.

DURHAM.—Mayor, D. Jackson, (acclamation); Reeve, T. Burnett and G. McKechnie. Councillors—North Ward—W. Anderson, J. Robertson, and J. Woodland, (acclamation); East Ward—W. Caldwell, T. Brown, jr., Geo. Whitmore H. Storey and A. C Mackenzie; West Ward—J. Woodland jr., D. Jamieson, C. Gayner, R. Hoon, R. Bull, W. Tucker, J. Shewell, and W. A. Vollett.

MELANCTHON.—Reeve, Hewitt and Bailey; Deputy Reeve, August and Hogg. Councillors, Gowan, Dymes, Walker and Shook.

ORANGEVILL.—Mayor, Dr. Henry (acclamation). Reeve, John Gilchrist (acclamation). Deputy Reeve, J. M. Shelton (acclamation. Councillors—West Ward, R. Lalor, Jas. Bennett, J. Kearns; South Ward, James May, J. Mole, (acclamation); East Ward, J. Foster, T. C. Mercer (acclamation); North Ward, H. Reid, J. J. Kelly, W. K. K. Decatur, Robert Beatty.

COLLINGWOOD TOWNSHIP.—Reeve, Neil McColman, T. McKenny, Jos. Rorke; First Deputy, A. Campbell, T. B. White; Second Deputy, W. Kerr, H. Hewgill; Councillors—Neil Smith, S. Lunan, L. Lougheed, John Irvine.

SHELBURNE.—Reeve, Wm. Jelly (acclamation); Councillors, J. Allen, E. Berwick, F. Campbell, D. Galloway, G. Hannah, J. Wilson.

EUPHRASIA.—Reeve, Myles and Gilray; Deputy, Erskine, Fawcett, Holbert; Councillors. Ellis, Boyd, J. L. Wilson, J. Clugson, J. Patterson, jr., H. Huid, W. S. Stewart and W. J. Black.

ARTEMESIA.—Reeve, Dr. Christoe (acclamation); Flesherton, T. Wright (acclamation); Priceville, J. McArthur (acclamation); Markdale Ward, A. Elliott (acclamotion; Eugenia Ward, J. M. Webster, S. Pedlor, W. McKee.

HOLLAND.—Mr. Cameron was Elected Reeve by (acclamation); Messrs. Norton and Shute are the candidates for Deputy while the following are in the field for Councillors, Messrs. J. Golbraith, J Merrium, J. Deavitt, J. Murray, R. Clark, W. Smith, R. McKinnett, T. Neely.

PROTON.—Reeve, Peter McGregor, Thos. Feunell; Deputy Reeve, John Agnew, A. McPherson; Councillors. J. Robinson, R. Black, J. Hopkins, S. Rogers.

The following were elected by acclamation as Police Trustees for the village of Markdale; E. Davis, C. M. Reynolds and Wm. Lucas.

MORE STEAM POWER.

The elevators in Mr. McFarland's grain store house is now working, having been started early this week. The Engine and Boiler were purchased from Mr. G. S. Brown while Moffatt Bro's of the Markdale Foundry had the contract of overhauling the same and putting in the necessary machinery and shafting which they did in a very mechanical and workmanlike manner, this is the first work of the kind which has been done in Markdale by local men, and reflects credit on our enterprising machinists who have proved themselves master of their business. Mr. McFarland is highly pleased with the manner Moffat Bros. have completed their contract, everything works so smooth and perfect. He is now able te elevate 700 bushels per hour, and has the finest grain elevator in the county.

The people are the judges, mens caps from 25cts up; a very fine line of hats from 45cts up; Ladies Russian Dog Skin caps worth $4.00 for $3.00; mens fur caps very low, at Reynold's and Son.

ANSWER THIS QUESTION.

Why do so many people we see around us, seem to prefer to suffer and be made miserable by Indigestion, Constipation, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, Coming up of the Food, Yellow Skin, when for 75 cts., we will sell them Shiloh's Vitalizer, guaranteed to cure them. Sold by Wm. Brown's General Store Markdale.

Boots, we have a very fine line from 90cts up; mens boots at the very lowest prices and the very best quality, now is the time to purchase your boots from Reynold's and Son.

BIRTHS.

MARTIN.—On Saturday, 2nd December, in Euphrasia, the wife of Mr. J. J. Martin, of a son

MCMILLAN—In Glenelg on the 23rd inst., the wife of Mr. A, McMillan of a son.

RODMAN—In Euphrasia, on the 21st inst., the wife of Mr. J. Rodman, of a daughter.

GALBRAITH—In Markdale, on the 22nd inst., the wife of Mr. James Galbraith, of a daughter.

MARRIAGES.

MCGINNIS—MCDOUALD—In Priceville, on the 26th Nov., by Rev. Father Cassin, Hugh McGinnis to Miss Annie McDouald, both of Glenelg.

SAVISBURY—PILKEY—At the Primitive Methodist Parsonage Markdale, on Christmas Day, by the Rev. J. S. Corcoran, N. W. Savisbury of Toronto to Miss Mary Pilkey, of Glenelg.

DIED.

BOLAND—In Artemesia on the 27th inst., Harriet E. Youngest daughter of John Boland.

WHITE—In Artemesia, on the 14th inst., John Waldie, son of Mr. John White, aged 3 years 5 months.

SPARLING—In Artemesia, on the 24th inst., of scarlet fever, Lura Mary, Eldest and beloved daughter of James P. and Emily Sparling aged 5 years and 8 months.

SPARLING—In Artemesia, on the 26th inst., of scarlet fever, Frances Ether Sabrina, second and beloved daughter of James P. and Emily Sparling, aged 3 years and 5 months. "Suffer the little children to come unto me and forbid them not."

NEVER GIVE UP.

If you are suffering with low and depressed spirits, loss of appetite, general debility disordered blood, weak constitution, headache, or any disease of a bilious nature, by all means procure a bottle of Electric Bitters. You will be surprised to see the rapid improvement that will follow; you will be inspired with new life; strength and activity will return; pain and misery wil cease, and henceforth you will rejoice in the praise of Electric Bitters. Sold at fifty cents a bottle by A. Turner & Co., Markdale.

BUSINESS BUSINESS—Immense Bargains at Reynolds & Son. As we are bound to sell our complete stock at the very lowest possible prices. Call and see for yourselves.

Auction Sale
OF PROPERTY

Situated in the Village of Priceville and Township of Proton, County of Grey.

Pursuant to the Power of Sale contained in a certain mortgage there will be sold by public auction at the Crown Hotel, in the Village of Priceville, on

MONDAY, THE 15TH DAY OF JANUARY, 1883,

at one o'clock in the afternoon.

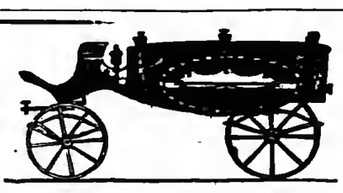
PARCEL 1.—Lot 9, south side Kinross street; Lot 9, north side Torry street, Priceville, containing one acre, more or less. This is a good acre of land, well fenced, without any buildings on it.

PARCEL 2.—Lots 11, 12 and 13 on south side of Kinross street; and lots 11, 12 and 13 on the north side of Torry street, Priceville, containing three acres more or less.

Upon this property is erected a rough-cast house 18x24, with an extension 12x23, and wood shed in fair repair also a stble 20x30. There is also a very nice orchard consisting of apple, plum, cherry, and crab trees, also currant and gooseberry bushes. There is also a well upon the premises. The property is well fenced.

PARCEL 3.—Also at the same time and place there will be sold lot 3, north side of Elgin street, and lot 3, south side of Harvey street, Priceville, containing one acre more or less.

Upon this property is erected a house 18x24 with an extension 10x24, and the property is fairly fenced.



PARCEL 4.—Also lot 17, concession 8, Township of Proton, containing 100 acres more or less.

Terms and conditions of sale very favorable and will be made known at time of sale.

The Vendors reserve to themeelves the right of one bid for each parcel.

For further particulars apply to

SMITH, SMITH & RAE,
Vendors' Solicitors,
3 Building and Loan Chambers,
Toronto St., Toronto.
119td

Undertaking.

Coffins,
Caskets,
Burial Pobes,
Gloves,
Crapes,
—AND—
All Furnishings for Funerals

May be had on Shortest Notice, and at All Hours from

GEO. GRANT,
MARKDALE.

Also a well assorted stock of

FURNITURE

from plain to fine quality. All at moderate prices. 119tf.

ESTRAY.

CAME on to the premises of the undersigned, lot 21, concession 12, Holland, about the middle of November, one red Steer, and two red and white Heifers rising three years old. The owner is requested to prove property, pay expenses and take them away.

W. WAIT.
Holland, Dec. 20th, 1882. 119-4t*

FARM FOR SALE.

LOT 6 CON. 3 E. G. RD., HOLLAND, 100 acres, 70 acres cleared, well watered, good orchard bearing good log house and barn. Situated 2 half miles from Chatsworth. A. bargain will be given in the above property, for particulars apply to Geo. Noble, Markdale, or to Chas. King, Shelburne. 120-tf.

SUFFOLK BOAR.

A WELL BRED Suffolk Boar for service on Lot 6, Concession 7. Euphrasia. Also a Poland China Boar, Charges for either $1 at time of service.

D. R. ELLIS.
Dec. 16th, 1882. 119-6w.

Christmas

Headquarters of Santa Claus.

In returning thanks to our numerous customers and the public generally for their liberal patronage bestowed upon us in the past, we desire to announce the opening of our annual stock of Christmas goods which is extensive and well assorted, comprising

Christmas Cards, English and Canadian, China Cups and Saucers, Moustache Cups, Shaving Mugs, Bohemian Vases, Toilet Sets, Albums, a very large assortment, Card Cases, Work Boxes, Shell Boxes, Writing Desks, Tin Toys, Books, Poems, Bibles, Prayer Books, Book Marks, Picture Books, Dolls,

and a great number of other articles suitable for Christmas and New Year's presents. Wishing you the compliments of the season, we respectfully solicit a continuance of favors.

Markdale, Dec. 5th, 1882. A. TURNER & CO.

JNO. MONTGOMERY,
BAKER.

Begs to tender his thanks to the inhabitants of Markdale and surrounding country for past patronage, and to intimate to them that he is prepared to supply the public with

Fruit, Pound and Plum Cake

either plain or iced and ornamented. Also Brides' Cakes got up in the best style that can be done this side of Toronto.

Bread, Buns and Cakes!

in great variety. All these are manufactured on his own premises by himself, besides Biscuit of every description from the best manufacturers in Ontario.

CHOICEST CONFECTIONERY

in great variety. Tea Meetings, Socials, and other parties supplied on the shortest notice and on the most reasonable terms.

JOHN MONTGOMERY.
Markdale, Nov. 22nd, 1882. 115-3m

W. H. CAMPAIGNE,

LICENSED Auctioneer for the County of Grey. Sales attended in town or country on the shortest notice. Charges reasonable.

Orders left at the STANDARD office will receive prompt attention. 117-3m

ESTRAY.

CAME into the premises of the undersigned, early in September, a Heifer rising two years old. The owner may have it by proving property and paying expenses.

JOHN MERCER.
Lots 109 & 110. E. T. & S. Road.
Artemesia, Dec. 5th, 1882. 117-4t*

Land for Sale.

100 ACRES; about 30 of which is cleared, being composed of the E. half of Lot 10, in the 8th concession of the Township of Euphrasia. Apply at this office, or to ROBERT DUNLOP, Township Clerk of Euphrasia, Grieraville P. O. 117-tf.

Just Arrived!

A LARGE STOCK OF

NEW AND FASHIONABTE

DRY GOODS,

Boots and Shoes,
NEW GROCERIES,

At prices which will astonish you. Call and see.

Highest price paid for Butter and Eggs or any kind of Fowl at the CHEAP STORE.

JOHN DOUPE,
Flesherton Station.
Nov. 15th, 1882. 114-3m.

CABINETS
$3 per Dozen.

PANELS
$4 per Doz.

For the Holidays Only
—AT—
J. L. BROWNE'S
OVER THE STANDARD OFFICE.

MARKDALE MARKETS.

Fall Wheat, $0.70 to $0.80; Spring to $0.85 Barley, 45c; Peas, 69c; Butter, 17c; Eggs, 22c; Potatoes, 40c $9.00; Pork, 7.40 to 7 60.

FLESHERTON MARKETS.

Fall Wheat, $0.70 to $0.80; Spring to $0.85 Barley, 43c; Peas, 66c; Oats Butter, 17c; Eggs, 22c; Potatoes, 45c $9.00; Pork, $7.00 to $7 50

TORONTO MARKETS.

Fall Wheat, $0.90 to $0.94; Spring to $0.68; Barley, 56c to 72c; Oats, 41c Peas, 70c to 74c; Hogs, $7.50 to $7.75 toes, per bag, 75c to 80c; Butter, dairy to 20c; eggs 23c to 24c

A. HILL

TAILOR.

Over McFarland's Store
MARKDALE.

☞ Special attention to Cutting

If you want a Perfect Fit in your Order with.

A. HILL
September 20th 1882. 106.

BILLIARD ROOM

D. M. HOGAN, PROPRIETOR.

First class tables. Cigars and temperance drinks to be had.

TO SELL OR RENT

LOT 15, CON. 12, HOLLAND, acres, 100 cleared, good buildings on. Terms easy. Apply to James Postmaster, near the premises, or to M. S. KELLOW, Tara P.

November 14th, 1882.

Health is Wealth

Dr. E. C. WEST'S NERVE AND BRAIN TREATMENT, a guaranteed specific for Hysteria, Dizziness, Convulsions, Fits, Nervous Neuralgia, Headache, Nervous Prostration caused by the use of alcohol or tobacco, Wakefulness, Mental Depression, Softening of the Brain, resulting in Insanity and ending in misery, decay and death. Premature Old Age, Barrenness, Loss of Power in either sex, Involuntary losses and Spermatorrhœa caused by over exertion of the brain, self-abuse or over indulgence. One box will cure recent cases. Each box contains one month's treatment. One dollar a box, or six boxes for five dollars; sent by mail prepaid on receipt of price. We guarantee six boxes to cure any case. With each order received by us for six boxes, accompanied with five dollars, we will send the purchaser a written guarantee to refund the money if the treatment does not effect a cure. Guarantees issued only by A. Turner & Co., authorized Agent for Markdale Ont. Dr. C. West & Co. sole proprietor, Toronto, Ont.

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE TOWNSHIP OF EUPHRASIA.

GENTLEMEN,—I have been waited on and earnestly entreated by a large number of influential ratepayers of the Township to have consented to become a candidate for the office of Deputy-Reeve for the year 1883. Your vote and influence is respectfully solicited. Should you place me at the head of the poll I pledge my honor to use my best endeavors for the best interest of the Township regarless of locality or party.

JAMES ERSKINE.
Rocklyn, Dec. 16th, 1882.

BOOMING.

BOOMING.

BOOMING.

THE GREAT

Discount Sale

—OF—

Watches,
Clocks,
Jewellery,
XMAS GOODS,

&c., &c., &c. at

W. F. DOLL'S

MARKDALE.

—o—

Cost the balance of those beautiful and New Year's cards at W. F. Doll's.

GOODS ARE BEING GREATLY SLAUGHTERED.

Local Items.

Miss Lazier, of Bellville, is visiting friends in Markdale.

He had a call from Mr. Alex. McDougall, of the Staynor Sun, on Monday.

J. M. Lucas & Co, bankers, Markdale loan $200,000.00 to loan on real estate. Straight loan system. No commission. Low interest; moderate charges.

We are glad to learn that Mr. Geo. Court, baggage man, who was recently arrested for accidentaly shooting Mrs. Taylor, while shooting ducks on the bay at Toronto, has been acquitted.

Rev. Dr. Gregg, of Knox college, Toronto, will preach next sabbath morning and evening in the Presbyterian church and Rev. D. Mcleod at 7 p. m. Tea-meeting the following evening.

The Presbyterian S. S. Anniversary was held in Dufferin Hall on Tuesday evening the 27th. The attendance was not as large as could desired, owing in some degree to the tea-meeting in connection with the church dedication following so soon. The programme was interesting and the Christmas tree when lit presented a beautiful appearance being well laden with presents.

Tuesday night about six o'clock the body of Mr. Isaac Garrett, hostler in Connell's stable, Rocklyn, was found lying therein. Coroner Albery held an inquest on Wednesday. From the evidence it was quite evident that Garrett, who had gone to look in the snow for his mits, had fallen through the trap door. Dr. Maclean, who made the post mortem, said he must have fallen on his shoulder; the nerves of the spine were broken, and this was the cause of death. He had only been missed 25 minutes. A case of accidental death was returned. Mr. Garrett came to this country Yorkshire some 35 years ago, was a wood-digger by trade. He was aged 63 years at the time of his death.—Mail.

The Anniversary Tea-meeting of the Methodist church in Markdale was held as usual on Christmas evening. The church was literally crowded, making it a difficult matter to move about. It is evident that better accommodation is required, and before another year rolls round we hope a move will be made towards preparing for a new edifice. After tea addresses were delivered by the Pastor, Mr. Rorke of Woodford, Rev. Mr. Edge of Paisley, on "Success," and Mr. Hare, principal of Whitby Ladies' College, on the advantage of education, and by Rev. D. C. McLeod, of Flesherton, who addressed the "boys." Two vocal duct's were rendered by Mrs. Hare and Miss McDowell which were very effectively sang; Mr. J. H. James gave "Rocked in the cradle of the deep" very creditably; the choir rendered choice selections during the evening, which were well received. Dr. Armstrong presided at the organ with ability and acceptance. The proceeds amounted to $103 which will be applied on the Parsonage debt.

Miss Agnes White has been engaged as teacher for S. S. No. 6 Artemesia.

Mr. Edward Rutledge, was elected Trustee for Markdale School at the annual meeting.

Mr. C Treadgold has been engaged as teacher for Orange Valley School for the coming year, and will open the School Tuesday the 2nd January.

Berkshire Boar.—Mr. C. Littlejohns, living two miles south of Markdale, has a fine bred Berkshire boar for service on his farm this season. 75 cts. cash, $1 if not so paid. 118-123

We are pleased to learn that Dr. Armstrong is likely to remain at least another year in Markdale. He is constantly growing more popular in his profession, as well as in the social circle.

There will be no service in the Methodist church next Sabbath morning or evening. The Dedication services of the new Presbyterian church, will take place that day, hence the withdrawal of services for the day by the Methodists.

It is about time ushers were appointed for the Methodist church in this village, as in Flesherton and other places, many refrain from going as they do not wish to intrude but if ushers were appointed, this feeling on the part of the visiters would disappear.

L. O. L. No. 1383, district of Artemesia, County of Grey, held at Kells corner met Dec. 21st and the following brethern were elected officers for 1883. James Lackey, W. M.; James Stinson, D. M.; Thomas Kells, Ch.; George Wright, Sec.; John Boland, T.; 1st com. man Samuel Bowles.

Canadian Almanac.—Mr. Turner has presented us with a copy of the Canadian Almanac for 1883. This useful and indispensible requisite to business men contains full and authentic commercial, statistical, astronomical, financial and general ieformation. Price 15cts at the Medical Hall, Markdale.

The Government have issued "reply" postal cards, by which the sender of a postal card desiring a reply can send a card attached on which to write it. This will be found a great convenience; for experience shows that often replies are neglected for days because the receiver does not happen to have a postal card at hand to reply at the time of receiving one; but with the "reply" card furnished he would probably write his answer and despatch it at once.

Hill Bros. Elevator is run by steam power and is a great improvement on horse power system. Markdale is far ahead of any place in the district for facilities for handling and storing grain and is the best market. Grain is coming 20 miles to our market.

SHILOH'S CATARRHREMEDY.

A marvelous cure for Catarrh, Diphtheria, Canker mouth, and Head Ache. With each bottle there is an ingenious nasal Injector for the more successful treatment of these complaints without extra charge. Price 50c. Sold by Wm. Brown's General Store Markdale.

VISIT TO MARKDALE.

One of the surgeons from the International Throat and Lung Institute, 173 Church St. Toronto is making a trip for the accomodation of sufferers who cannot make it convenient to visit the institute. He is being visited by crowds of physicians and sufferers receiving treatment and testing the merits of Dr. W. Souvielle's wonderful invention the Spirometer for the cure of Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness, Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption and all diseases of the head, throat and lungs, Consultation and a trial of the Spirometer free, poor people furnished with the Spirometer gratis. He will be at the Markdale House three days, January 11th, 12th, 13th. He will furnish upon application the names and address of thousands that have been cured by our treatment.

Head offices in Canada; 173 Church St. Toronto, and 13 Phillips Square Montreal, P. Q.

WORTHY OF PRAISE.

As a rule we do not recommend Patent Medicines, but when we know of one that really is a public benefactor, and does positively cure, then we consider it our duty to impart that information to all. Electric Bitters are truely a most valuable medicine and will surely cure Billiousness, Fever and Ague, Stomach. Liver and Kidney Complaints even when all other remedies fail. We know whereof we speak, and can freely recommend them to all.—Ezch.—Sold at fifty cents a bottle, by A. Turner & Co.

BUCKLEN'S ARNICA SALVE.

The best salve in the world for Cuts, Bruises, Sores, Ulcers, Salt Rheum, Fever Sores, Tetter, Chapped Hands, Chilblains, Corns, and all Skin Eruptins, and Positively cures Piles. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by A. Turner & Co

TO CONSUMPTIVES.

The advertiser, having been permanently cured of that dread disease, Consumption, by a simple remedy, is anxious to make known to his fellow sufferers the means of cure. To all who desire it, he will send a copy of the prescription used, (free of charge,) with the directions for prepairing and using the same which they will find a SURE CURE for CONSUMPTION, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, &c.

Parties wishing the Prescription, will please address, Rev. E. A. Wilson, 149 Penn st., Williamsburgh, N. Y. 75-127

AGENTS WANTED.—Big pay.—Light Work. Steady Employment. Samples free. Address, M. L. BYRN, 46 Naussan stree New York. 20

VALUABLE PROPERTY

FOR SALE

IN THE TOWN OF DURHAM, AND COUNTY OF GREY.

THE following valuable town properties will be sold on reasonable terms or will be rented for a term of years, or exchange for farm propeoty.

1st,

Lot No. 1 on the west side of Garafraxa street and south of Hunter street, opposite Mr. J. H. Hunter's store house, well fenced and first class frame buildings, good cellars, hard and soft water, a most conveniant residence and would make a good business stand.

2nd,

That most desirable property being park lots Nos 2 and 3 on the north side of George st., 8 acres more or less, well fenced, front fenced with pickets, one and a half acres of a thriving young orchard and very convenient to the railway station.

The east half of the west half on lot 18 on the west side of countess street with a new frame house and kitchen, good stable and wood shed, well fenced, front fence painted white, hard and soft water on the premises.

4th.

Park Lot No. 8, Wm. Hunter's, Survey.

5th

Lots 1 and 2, Presbyterian Survey.

6th,

Lot No 15 on the North side of Mill street in the village of Markdale close to the railway station, with good frame house thereon. If the above properties are sold the very best title will be given free from all encumbrances.

—Also the—

Following Farming Properties.

will be sold on reasonable terms of payment.

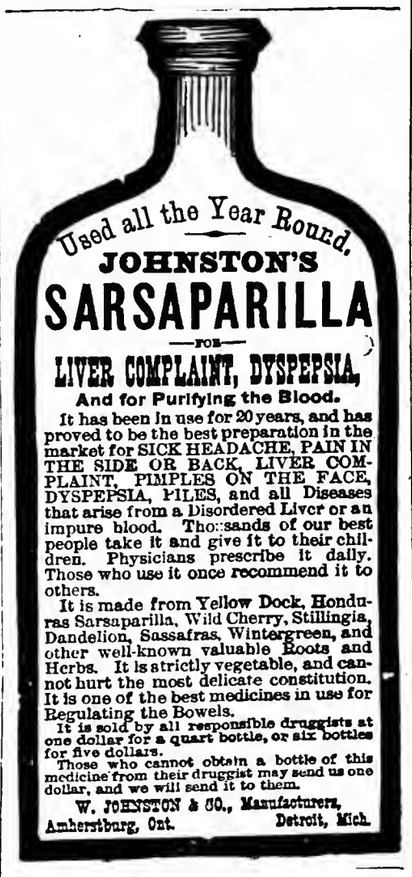
7th,

Lot No. 22, Con. 9 Glenelg, 100 acres more or less, 3½ miles from the T. G. & B. R. at Markdale, 75 acres cleared, a new frame house and two log barns.

8th

Lot No. 93 in the 3rd Con. W. T. & S. R., Glenelg. 50 acres, about 45 acres cleared and good log buildings, about 2½ miles from Markdale station T. G. & B. R.

9th,



The west half lot 17, Con. 4. N. D. R, Glenelg. 50 acres 40 acres cleared, good rough cast house and orchard on the premises. The house and one acre will be reserved during the life of the occupants who are now between 80 and 85 years of age.

10th

East part lot No. 1. con 2 Normanby, 63 acres, about 50 acres cleared, situation about 2 miles from the town of Durham. For further particulars apply to

FINLEY MacRAE, Durham.

Dated 15th August. 1882. tf 104,

Mothers! Mothers! Mothers!

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the excruciating pain of cutting teeth! If so go at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately—depend upon it; there is no mistake about it. There is not a mother upon earth who has ever used it, who will not tell you at once that it will regulate the bowels, and give rest to the mother, and relief and health to the child, operating like magic. It is perfectly safe to use in all cases, and pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Sold everywhere at 25 cents a bottle.

Re-Fresh-ing

In the cool assertion of some people that they can sell below cost. &c, it may not be amiss to let the public of Markdale and surrounding country know that

Wilson Benson,

of the "BELFAST HOUSE," MARKDALE, can sell "cheaper than the cheapest," and "better than the best," all kinds of

Groceries, Liquors, &c.

Consisting of

TEAS, TOBACCOS, SPICES, CANNED FISH, ETC.,

And for those wishing pure Wine for sacramental purposes, will find a brand that will equal anything on this side the Atlantic.

Other Liquors equally pure.

Special Pure Holland Gin.

Cheese from the best manufactories.

Our Whiskies are from the firm of Gooderham & Worts, Toronto, and the public may rely on receiving them as they are sent.

FLOUR, POTATOES, and everything in the household line kept constantly on hand.

Henceforth my Store will be supplied with Fruits of all kinds, such as

APPLES, PEARS, PLUMS, &c.

FRUIT CAKES of all kinds always kept on hand.

Essences, Hair Oils, and Perfumery of the choicest nectars.

TOILET & FANCY SOAPS, better than the best.

CANADIAN & WESTERN PORK, of first quality.

Everything in the Grocery Line kept on a fuller and more complete scale than at any other place in Markdale.

WILSON BENSON.

PIMPLES.

I will mail (Free) the recipe for a simple Vegetable Balm that will remove Tan-Freckles, Pimples and Blotches, leaving the skin soft, clear and beautiful; also instructions for producing a luxuriant growth of hair on a bald head or smooth face. Address, enclosing a 3c. stamp, Ben. Vandelf & Co., 5 Beekman st., N. Y. 75-127

ERRORS OF YOUTH.

A GENTLEMAN who suffered for years from NERVOUS DEBILITY, PREMATURE DECAY, and all the effects of youthful indiscretion will, for the sake of suffering humanity, send free to all who need it, the recipe and directions for making the simple remedy by which he was cured. Sufferers wishing to profit by the advertiser's experience can do so by addressing in perfect confidence, JOHN B. OGDEN, 75-127 42 Cedar St., New York.

Gold. Great chance to make money. Those who always take advantage of the good chances for making money that are offered, generally become wealthy, while those who do not improve such chances remain in poverty. We want many men, women, boys and girls to work for us right in their own localities. Any one can do the work properly from the first start. The business will pay more than ten times ordinary wages. Expensive outfit furnished free. No one who engages fails to make money rapidly You can devote your whole time in the work, or only your spare moments. Full information and all that is needed sent free. Addres, Stinson & Co., Portland Maine. 71-126

MANHOOD

HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED

SEAL We have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, &c., resulting from excesses.

☞ Price, in sealed envelope, only 6 cents, or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

☞ This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Address

The Culverwell Medical Co,,

P. O. box 450 41 Ann St., New York

$500 Reward!

We will pay the above reward for any case of Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Indigestion, Constipation or Costiveness we cannot cure with West's Vegetable Liver Pills, when the directions are strictly complied with. They are purely Vegetable, and never fail to give satisfaction. Sugar Coated, Large Boxes, containing 30 Pills, 25 cts. For sale by all Druggists. Beware of counterfeits and immitations. The genuine manufactured only by JOHN C. WEST & CO., "The Pill Makers," 81 & 83 King St. East, Toronto. Ont. Free trial package sent by mail prepaid on receipt of a 3 cent stamp. For sale at Turner &Co. Drug Store.

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE TOWNSHIP OF EUPHRASIA.

Gentlemen,—Having been urgently solicited by a large number of influential ratepayers to offer myself as a candidate for councillor for the ensuing year. I hereby respectfully comply, and would take this means of soliciting your vote and influence. If elected I pledge my honor to use my best endeavor for the best interests of the Township.

W. J. BLACK.

Epping. Dec. 16th, 1882. 119 2w.

SUBSCRIBE FOR THE "STANDARD."

MARKDALE Meat Market.

A constant supply of

Fresh Meats!

on hand, at the

Lowest Living Prices.

Orders solicited, and delivered free to all parts of the Town.

Farmers having fat stock to dispose of, will please leave their addresses.

TERMS, STRICTLY CASH.

FRED. SARJEANT.

Markdale, March 23, 1882. 80-ly

SEEING IS BELIEVING.

GENTLEMEN,—

If you want a first-class

Buggie or Wagon

call at

MCKENNA & MASON'S

CARRIAGE WORKS

MARKDALE.

They can supply you with anything from a

Lumber Wagon

up to

Extension Top Phæton.

To buy from them is to

SAVE MONEY!

They are both practical workmen, and employ none but

PRACTICAL WORKMEN

They guarantee their work Second to none for Lightness of Draught and Superiority of Finish.

They use nothing but First-class White Oak for Wagons, and thrice Extra Second Growth Hickory for light work.

The immense amount of work turned out of McKenna & Mason's shop is sufficient proof of the wide reputation they enjoy for doing good work.

The BEST is the CHEAPEST in the END Poor cheap work we positively will not take.

Special attention given to Re-Trimming and Repainting all classes of Carriage Work.

Satisfaction guaranteed (or No Pay) in

HORSESHOEING

SHOP—On Mill Street opposite to Sproule's Hotel.

McKENNA & MASON.

THOS. MATHEWS,

Harness Establishment!

MARKDALE.

EVERYTHING IN OUR LINE KEPT ON HAND OR MADE TO ORDER ON SHORT NOTICE.

LIVERY!

IN CONNECTION.

GEORGE WILSON,

Wholesale and Retail

{BUTCHER!}

BEEF, PORK OR MUTTON SUPPLIED, from a single pound to a whole carcass, at the lowest market prices.

FISH & FOWL IN THEIR SEASON

Farmers having Fat Cattle, Sheep, or Pigs to dispose of will do well to call at No. 3 Burns' Block, opposite, the new Union Block.

Markdale, Oct. 25th, 1881

Nothing Like Leather.

M. M. M'LEOD,

MARKDALE.

NOT TO BE BEATEN!

All those who may have had the misfortune to have been born barefooted will bear in mind that we have just received the largest and best stock of leather ever before brought into Markdale, consisting of Spanish Sole, French Kip and Calf, and are now prepared to manufacture Ladies, Gents, Youths and Misses boots and shoes, from the stoga to the finest kid and prunella.

Sewed Work a Specialty.

All work warranted. Invisible patching also done here.

M. M. McLEOD.

Markdale, Sept. 19th, 1881.

LATEST NEWS NOTES.

Transatlantic Matters, and Other Late Newsy Affairs.

At the funeral of a native chief at Lagos, on the west coast of Africa, an outbreak occurred and twelve Europeans were massacred.

Baron Rammingon, of Innsgruck, has been convicted of swindling and sentenced to seven years imprisonment with privation of title.

The Spanish Government is everywhere successful in the elections for the Councils-General.

IRELAND.

Edmond Slattery, who recently returned from America, was arrested at Tulla, on Monday evening, under the Curfew clause of the Repression Act.

Mr. Cunningham, of the Freeman's Journal; Mr. McDermott, of the Central News, and a reporter named Barrett, have been arrested at Loughrea, on a charge of having participated in the proclaimed League meeting on Sunday. They were remanded for a week.

Mr. Biggar's speech at Waterford, in which he denounced Earl Spencer, forms the subject of universal conversation.

It is stated in Dublin that the Government intend to deal instantly with Mr. Biggar, on account of his attack on the administration of justice in Ireland, and on the character of the Viceroy.

SCOTLAND.

The storm on the north-east coast of Scotland continues. Three vessels have gone ashore and all the crews were drowned.

RUSSIA AND GERMANY.

The only topic engaging attention in Berlin is that of the relations between Germany and Russia. Russian exchange was never lower on the Berlin Bourse, since the battle of Plevna, than now. Hundred rouble notes of the nominal value of 320 marks were quoted on Monday at 195 marks offered. The panic seems mainly due to an article in the Vossiche Zeitung concerning the echeloning of the Russian army on the Galician frontier. This is regarded in well-informed circles both as Berlin and Vienna as absurd, but its effect on business shows uneasiness has been raised in the mind of the public by what is known as Prince Bismarck's newspaper campaign. This consists of various articles recently published laying stress on the pure dual defensive nature of the Austro-German alliance.

A Berlin correspondent says the press continues heatedly to discuss the relations of Russia with the German Powers, but the excitement is beginning to abate. There is nothing to show that the Czar's sentiments toward Germany and Austria are hostile.

The Berlin Kreuz-Zeitung says:—As all kinds of assumptions and rumors were reported from Russia of a tendency opposed to the amicable sentiments of the Czar and M. DeGiers, it was deemed expedient to throw out a reminder that the policy of Germany had sufficiently provided for all emergencies.

THE AUSTRO-GERMAN ALLIANCE.

Austria and Germany have arrived at an understanding regarding the measures to be taken in view of Russia's military preparations.

The Austro-German alliance is approved of by the entire German press. The Berlin Germania says the prolongation of the treaty will effectually bar panslavist intrigues, Russia's expansive aspirations, and French plans for revenge.

AFFAIRS ON THE NILE.

All the political prisoners at Damietta have been released.

Circassian guards were recently ordered to search the Cairo harems for prisoners condemned by the court-martial whose property was confiscated. The women were grossly insulted, and the proceedings caused so much excitement that the Khedive revoked the order.

THE REPUBLIC OF FRANCE.

In a riot at Pa Terauledi (?) between French and Italian workmen, an Italian was killed and four other workmen seriously injured. Seven Italians were arrested.

The Council-General of the Seine have expressed a wish that the Government proceed with the Simplon tunnel scheme, in order to stop German manufactures being substituted via St. Gothard tunnel for those of France.

The Budget Committee on Tuesday decided to vote 23,000,000 francs for maintenance of the army of occupation in Tunis, but declined for the present to grant 8,000,000 for fortifications, barracks and military stations.

THE COMET.

Professor Frisby, of the Naval Observatory, Washington; has completed a calculation of the orbit of the great comet. The period occupied by the comet's revolution is about 593 years. The comet is probably identical with the very large one seen 371 B. C. and 363 A. D.

EARTHQUAKE SHOCK.

The heaviest earthquake in ten years occurred at 5.20 p. m. on Tuesday in Contoocook, N. H., and lasted several seconds.

About 5.15 p. m., on Tuesday, two slight but very perceptible shocks of earthquake were felt in Dover, N. H. The disturbance lasted ten seconds, accompanied by a rumbling noise. Shocks were felt at Rollingsford, Rochester and other towns. People rushed out of their houses bewildered.

At 5.24 on Tuesday evening one of the severest earthquake shocks occurred ever felt in Concord, N. H. The shock was like a heavy explosion and shook the buildings, from which the people rushed into the streets. In one building the concussion extinguished the gas. The movement was east and west.

FRANCE GETTING INTO TROUBLE WITH CHINA.

The Chinese ambassador in Paris states that the party of resistance in China may compel his Government to declare war against France. He says the Chinese Government is desirious of observing neutrality in the Annam matter, and wishes to participate in the protecorate of Tonquin if the French Government insists in creating one.

The Government will present a credit bill for the Tonquin expedition before the recess of the Chambers. The French representative in Annam has been instructed to assure the Emperor of the friendly disposition of France, but her determination to execute the treaty of 1874, establishing a French protectorate.

STATE OF IRELAND.

Michael Davitt, at a meeting in Stalybridge on Tuesday evening, said the land question has assumed a feverish phase. The English mind has become excited in consequence of renewed outrages and murders. Crime should be swept away, whoever was responsible for it. To it was due the death of the Land League.

Michael Flynn, the last of three men arraigned for the murder of the two Huddys at Lough Mask, was, on Wednesday, sentenced to be hanged on January 17th. The jury in the case deliberated an hour before bringing in a verdict. Flynn protested his innocence, and after he was sentenced said to the Judge: "Thank you, sir; I am as willing to go there (looking upward); as to go home. I wish you all good day."

Forty young farmers have been arrested in connection with the proclaimed meeting at Ballymena on Sunday Bail was refused. One hundred young men and women have been summoned to appear at the sessions.

THE REPUBLIC OF FRANCE.

A bulletin on Wednesday evening announces that M. Gambetta will probably speedily recover.

Altogether fifteen persons have died of injuries received in the cartridge factory explosion at Mont Valerien.

Bontoux, President and Feder, Manager of the collapsed Union Generals, were each sentenced to five years' imprisonment and fined 3,000 francs. Bontoux, ex-President, is absent, and it is doubtful whether he will surrender. He will appeal against the sentence.

AFFAIRS ON THE NILE.

Hassan Moussad Aked, Suleiman Daoud and Said Gandeel, have arrived at Alexandria. They will be tried by court-martial on charges of complicity in the massacre and incendiarism here.

M. Baedif, the French agent has resumed his functions as Comptroller.

The Digestion of an Ostrich.

It has commonly been made to appear that ostriches are so stupid or so greedy as to be totally indiscriminate in the matter of food; but this is a mistake. When two kinds of food are placed before them they will prefer the one, and are notably fond of certain kinds, such as mealies and prickly pears. Many of them even show delicate choice. But a hungry bird will eat almost anything. His system requires food in large quantity, but he always prefers the suitable kinds. It is a fact, however, that the ostrich often dies a victim of over-indulgence. On the farms birds also die by the score from apoplexy, brought on by their keepers stuffing them constantly with all they can eat. An incredible number of pebbles are sometimes found in an ostrich's stomach, where they serve the same purpose, in triturating the food, as sand in a pigeon's gizzard. Mr. Tillbrook, a farmer of the Graaff Keinet district, once found a carcass, the gizzard of which contained some nine hundred and thirty stones of sizes varying from that of a pea to that of a walnut. Most of them were bright and hard, and all more or less rounded by constant rubbing. We may see the reason of that instinct which prompts an ostrich to stretch his neck over the fence and pick off a gold stud or a diamond pin from the breast of the unsuspecting visitor, or in default of a jewel so attractive, to attempt to pull a button off his coat.—E. B. BIGGAR in the January Century.

Muffs.

Fur muffs are still fashionable, but ladies like better the dainty little creations of satin, plush, and lace, and generally they have a muff to match each and every full dress costume.

Lovely muffs are of plush broche velvet, marabout trimming on satin, birds and birds' plumage nestled in frills of lace and every sort of fancy material, tied with bows, or ornamented with fancy pins and buckles.

With a brown costume the muff is of pheasants' plumage, surrounded by brown lace, with a bow of brown satin, while for a dark-green suit the muff is of green cock's feathers, with dark green lace and loops of gold braid mounted on green plush. A muff of black lace and satin, with head and tail of a bird of paradise, can be carried with any and every costume.

Some quaint muffs are of patchwork in two colors and two materials, such as satin and velvet or brocade and plush, in gold and garnet, blue and gold, crimson and brown, with other combinations. The pieces are in any shape, but tolerably small, and are laid partially over each other and worked over with filoselle silks of the shades in feather stitch. A border of marabout feathers in a corresponding color, with a fall of lace, finishes the odd muff.

Bag muffs are pretty. Some open to allow the hands to pass through, while others are real bags and the hands pass in at the back. On such muffs a bow is placed in the centre at the top and another in the left corner, as a cluster of silk fluffy balls from the centre bow. These balls are in every color, such as copper, terra cotta, blue, green, and red.

A Honeymoon that Called for Money Soon.

They had only been married a short time. The other-day she slung her arm around him and warbled, in a low, tremulous voice: "Do you realize, Adolphus, that now we are married we are only one?" "No," replied the brute, "I can't believe it. I have just paid $75 millinery bill, and a lot more of your bills, with several outside precincts to hear from, so I am beginning to realize that as far as expenses go, instead of being one, we are about half a dozen. I can't take in that idea about our being one just yet, not by a large majority."—Texas Siftings.

Prince Arisgawa, of Japan, visited Niagara Falls recently.

NOTES ON WORK FOR THE MONTH

January opens a new year and each farmer should naturally look about to see where he may improve upon old methods, and increase his income. The important point is to make the beginning, after which the changes from the old to the new may go on as rapidly as it is seen to be safe.

How do your Accounts Stand?—The merchant finds it necessary to inventory his stock of goods at least once a year, and every farmer should do his work in the same business-like manner. Now, during the comparative leisure of winter at the opening of the year, is a most fitting time for taking an account of stock. With this record as a basis, the profits of a previous year may be determined with sufficient accuracy, especially if a cash book contains the money transactions of the farm.

Fill the Ice House.—If there is no house it is an easy and inexpenive matter to erect one. A building that will hold 40 tons ought not to cost over $30 to $50, and will last for many years. When the ice is six inches thick the harvest should begin; any delays are dangerous.

LIVE STOCK NOTES.

Horses.—This is not a busy time for farm horses, but they should not therefore receive less care. Horses should come to the heavy spring work with a good accumulation of stored-up force in the form of flesh, and not spring-poor as is too frequently the case. The stable should be kept neat and clean, with an abundance of litter to absorb all the liquid excrement, so valuable as a quick fertilizer. A plenty of wholesome food and pure water are essential to the profitable wintering of all farm animals. Horses often suffer much injury from exposure to cold winds after being driven briskly or otherwise overheated. Blankets should be used at such times; if the sweating horses are taken at once to a warm stable the blankets are not needed; in fact, frequently are of positive injury, making the animal more susceptible to chills and colds when out of doors.

Cattle.—The same neatness in the stable and abundant supply of foot and water are necessary with cattle as horses. Milch cows and their stalls should be kept specially clean, or otherwise the milk will be tainted, and only a second-rate product can result from it. The cows need brushing before being milked. Farmers who are neat in the dairy will have a quick market for their milk and butter at the highest prices. All farm stock should be fed regularly; the quantity and quality of the ration may vary, but whether all hay or a mixture of cut straw and roots, it should be given at the same hours each day.

Swine.—There have been many thorough experiments testing the value of shelter for swine with but one result; pigs, to winter well, must have a warm, clean bed, and as much wholesome food as they will eat. Store pigs are not to be fattened and need only enough food to keep them comfortable. Sows coupled now bring pigs in May—an excellent time, when the weather is warm. Porkers should be slaughtered early in the winter, as later keeping is expensive, besides it gives greater room for the store pigs reserved for breeding.

Sheep suffer greatly from exposure and need to be well housed, especially during storms. Throwing fodder on the ground is a wasteful practice. Racks can be made at small cost and they will more than pay for themselves in a single winter. Lambs that come this month need special care, and may be very profitable when ready for the early market. Ewes that are to drop lambs need separate and warm pens. In very cold weather it may be necessary to place a blanket on the young lamb or even remove it to a heated room and feed with hot ginger or some other warming liquid with its milk.

Odds and Ends.—See that good insurance is on the farm buildings. Keep out the cold from all the barns, stables, and the house, by banking with earth, manure, or even snow; double windows are a great saving in food and fuel. It is a mistake to think that severe exposure makes animals hardy; they are far better off under cover during storms. Plaster sprinkled on the stable floor will aid in keeping the air free from bad odors, and save valuable materials that would otherwise escape. Use the curry-comb and brush freely; they will help to keep horses and cattle in a healthy condition. Growing animals need comparatively more food than those fully grown: their future size and health depends largely upon present care. Water at the freezing point is not so healthful as warmer water, and requires extra food consumed to heat it in the animal system. A shivering calf appeals to the pocket as well as the sympathy of its owner. The hen with warm feed and a comfortable house will pay for her keeping, while one with no home and little to eat will be wintered—if she lives through—at a loss. Small matters make up the sum of all comforts, and constant attention to them brings a great reward. Every farmer should be confirmed in the habit of looking after the little things.—American Agriculturist.

Kaiser Wilhelm's Diary.

Emperor William keeps a diary which may serve to amuse his descendants, though it will be of doubtful value to the historians. The sheets are of folio size, each bearing at its head a date and a verse of scripture, and every morning one for that day is laid out on the Emperor's desk. On it he notes the most important events of the twenty-four hours—as they appear to him—political and personal items, discussions in matters of moment, a list of visitors, abstracts of conversations, etc. This labor has been executed faithfully by the German monarch for many years. He has at the time preserved an immense number of albums containing pictures of the most notable events of his life, many of them expressly made for the collection by artists of repute. These are to become the exclusive property of the Crown Prince on the Emperor's demise.

Seven samples of quinine pills made by the leading Philadelphia firms have been annalyzed by the Medica News and only two were found of full weight, the rest being deficient from four to nineteen per cent., and the difference made up by adulteration.

ANCIENT TORTURES.

Instruments to be Seen in Germany.

In a tower in Nuremberg, writes a traveller in Germany, is a room where there are preserved a number of very curious instruments of torture used in Nuremberg hundreds of years ago, before the days of jails and penitentiaries. There are thumb-screws of the most approval patterns, and helmets for gossiping men and women. A singularly cheerful piece of furniture is a large, sharp piece of iron. In the glorious days of old an offender who had to be punished with the wheel was striped naked and firmly bound to a plank, face downward. The piece of iron on the wheel was heated hot, and the wheel was rolled up and down and across the victim's back until justice was satisfied or the victim was dead. Inasmuch as the spike was long enough to go half way through the man's body, and was always heated red hot, the victim generally died, and justice was entirely satisfied. It was not as expeditious as the guillotine, but it was just as certain. The only man who ever survived it was adjudged a magician because he survived it, and was promptly beheaded for being a magician. That settled him. He didn't bother Nuremberg any more.

There are also dislayed switches made of fine threads of steel, which were laid on the bare back with great effect. A little of these things go a great way, but on being told that in the adjoining tower is the "steel maiden" you get over your qualmishness. Your party is taken in charge by a guide, who shows you a large assortment of horrors before you come to the chief one, as a sort of preparation. There are stocks of all kinds, gags for tittlers, handcuffs, anklets, and a cradle, the bed of which is filled with spikes, in which old-time offenders were faithfully rocked to sleep—a sleep from which there was no awakening. There are long tables with a screw at top and bottom, to which men are strapped by the hands and feet, the screws then turned till the unfortunate man was torn apart. In those cheerful days when a merchant, baker or butcher, was found selling his goods by false weight or measure, he was placed in a cage and carried all through the city, with his name and trade fastened conspicuously in front. After making the grand tour he was taken, cage and all, to the river, and ducked again and again, till it was thought that his lesson was sufficient to prevent repetition. Perhaps some such form might be advantageous in these days.

Wife-beaters in those times were severely punished. They were furnished close-fitting helmets, from which heavy weights were suspended. They were given a conspicuous place in the public square, appropriately labeled, and placed in stocks, with heavy weights attached to their arms and feet, and there they sat the live long day, subjected to the jeers and ridicule of the town. Scolding wives were put in cages, with gags in their months, and exposed in the public square. You are shown all kinds of beheading blocks and gallows upon which noted villains had gone to their reward, while the walls were covered from top to bottom with pictures of the practical operations of the various instruments that filled the room.

All this preparatory to the steel maiden, which is kept in a room above, precisely as was in the days of her usefulness. You are shown what appears at first sight to be a rude statue of a woman clumsily hewn out of wood. The guide noiselessly opened it, one door swinging to the right and the other to the left. The statue was hollow, and just the size of the average man. Inside were straps by which the offender was bound so that he could not move a single muscle. Both the doors were lined with long, sharp steel spikes, strong and thick. When the victim was firmly secured, the door on the left was slowly but firmly shut, and the long spikes went into his body, two being so arranged as to pierce his eyes. Then the door on the left was closed in a similar manner, and he would receive another complement of spikes, the closing of the doors being done very slowly, that the torture of the man in the embrace of the maiden might be prolonged as long as possible. The very last spike pierced the heart. After remaining shut up for a while, the straps were unloosened from the outside, a spring was touched, and the man fell fifteen feet into a cleverly constructed machine that ground him up as fine as mincemeat and dropped him into the river below, making food for fishes.

The Ostrich Kick.

When a farmer goes into a savage bird's camp he takes with him a thorn pole, with a branch or two of the thorny bush left on the end. This is called a "tuck," and when the tuck is applied to the ostrich's neck or head (his tender points) he is almost invariably subdued, and, after one or two efforts to escape, bolts furiously off to the other side of the camp, where he races up and down to vent his baffled rage. If, however, the bird gets near enough to his opponent to give the so-called kick, he lifts his bony leg as high as his body and throws it forward with demoniac grotesqueness, and brings it down with terrible force. His object is to rip the enemy down with his dangerous claw, but in most cases it is the flat bottom of his foot which strikes, and the kick is dangerous as much from its sheer power as from its lacerating effects. It is a movement of terrible velocity and power, at all events. Several instances may be mentioned of herd-boys being thus either wounded, maimed, or killed outright. One case occurred near Graff Reinet, in which a horse had his back broken by a single blow. In this case the bird had endeavored to kill the rider but missed him and struck the horse.

Many persons have been set upon by birds when there was no shelter not even a tree to run to. In such a case, if the pursued were acquainted with struthious tactics, he would lie down flat on the ground, where the bird finds it impossible to strike him. But even this is no light matter, for some birds in their rage at being baffled of their kick, will roll over their prostrate enemy, bellowing with fury and trampling upon him in the most contemptuous fashion. One man who thus attempted the lying-down plan found that every time he attempted to rise the bird would turn and stand sentry over him, till at last, after creeping a distance he got out only by swimming a pond that bounded one side of the camp.—"Farming for Feathers," in the January Century.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN C

The most successful

ever discovered, as it is certain in and does not blister. READ P

Kendall's Spavin

HAMILTON, Mo., June

B. J. KENDALL & Co.,—Gent

to certify that I have used Kend

Cure, and have found it to be a recommended to be and in fact

I have removed by using the abov

Bone Spavins, Ring-bone, Splint cheerfully testify and recommend the best thing for any bony substa ever used, and have tried many made that my study for years.

Respectfully yours

P. V.

FROM

Col T. L. Fos

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, May

DR B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gent

very valuable Hambletonian colt very highly, he had a large bone one joint and a small one on the made him very lame; I had charge of two veterinary surgeons ed to cure him. I was one day advertisement of Kendall's Spav

the Chicago Express. I determi to try it, and got our druggist for it, they ordered three bottles all and thought I would give trial, I used it according to direc fourth day the colt ceased to the lumps have disappeared. I bottle and the colt's limbs are lumps and as smooth as any state. He is entirely cured. T so remarkable that I let two of have the remaining two bottles using it.

Very respectfully,

L. T. F

Kendall's Spavin

WINGHAM, Ont., Jan

DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co. Gent

to certify that I have used Kend

Cure, bought from C. E. Willia

Wingham, Ont., and do without pronounce it to be an invaluable

the cure of Spavins, Ringbones used it on a bone spavin of growth which it completely re can safely say it will remove

Curb or Ringbone if properly also recommended friends to use done so with perfect success. I this public, and will answer any letters sent me.

Yours &c.

GEORGE

Kendall's Spavin

ON HUMAN FLE

WEST ENOSBURGH, Vt., Feb

DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gent

months ago I injured my knee caused an enlargement to grow a walnut and caused me very se

the time for four or five weeks, to use Kendall's Spavin Cure satisfactory results. It has en ed the enlargement and stopped and pain. I have long known

Kendall for horses but now I know best liniment for human flesh quainted with.

Yours truly,

T. P. LA

ST. JOHN, P. Q. Oc

DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gent

used your Spavin Cure with spavins, curbs and splints. I a good remedy for ringbones, cuts, galls and all kinds of lame difficulties about the horse. O sprained his ankle very bad

Kendall's Spavin Cure and I thing work like it, he was well

I know it to be good for man a

I procured one of your Treatise by mail for 25cts. and I think means of saving me $100 on

I treated according to the direc your book for displaced stifle.

Yours truly,

WM. H

Send address for Illustrated

we think gives positive proof

No remedy has ever met with ed success to our knowledge, for as man.

Price $1 per bottle, or six

All druggists have it or can or it will be sent to any addres price by the proprietors. DR.

& Co., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

Sold by all Drug

LYMAN, SONS & CO., Mo

Wholesale Agents

GEORGE NOBL

INSURANCE AND LAND

LICENSED AUCTIO

For the County of

AGENT for the following reliable

CITIZENS', of Montreal,

AGRICULTURAL, of Wa

TRADE & COMMERC

of Toronto.

A number of Choice Farms

Village Lots.

Auction Sales conducted in To try on Shortest Notice. Charg

Bills, Blank Notes, and Stamps

GEO. N

IS SACRIFICE:

OR,

For Love of Her.

TOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

Russel Anthon, a millionaire, is in love Muriel, the young daughter of Graham bridge, a gentleman of wealth, who by speculation become involved. Muriel, he heartily liking and respecting Anthon, not love him, and tells her father so, he urges her to accept him. This she under the impression that her father uld him, and that he is willing to ac- what real liking and respect she can him. Her father, however, does not Russel, who believes that Muriel really him. It does not take very long after riage to convince him to the contrary, ough in all respects Muriel endeavors to e him a true wife. Believing that he erstood from her father what she told she says nothing, and their life passes ventfully enough until Russel receives tter from Mexico which necessitates his ing her the story of his twin brother del, the scapegrace of his family, who, ing in a quarrel over cards accidentally ed his friend, fled from home, disappear- and was thought dead. The letter from co is, however, from him. Dying of e, alone among strangers, he implores el to go to him. Muriel bids Russel the vow he made his dying mother e friend his brother should he ever have opportunity, and urges him to go to his brother. Russel goes to Mexico, finds brother, nurses him through the sickness, is finally struck down by the fever him- In the meantime, however, Arundel found Muriel's picture, which Russel had dentally dropped on his bed, falls in love the beautiful unknown face, and is d by Russel asleep with the locket d in his hands. Russel tells him e picture it is: and just as they are uring to start for home Russel is struck n by the fever. Arundel watches by until there are evident signs that, weak- d by his long journey, worn out by his attendance at his brother's bedside, Rus life is coming to a close. They are being rounded by Indians, and at the last mom- believing that nothing can save Rus- and that it is for Muriel's sake, Arun- gathers up every thing of value belong- to his brother, and after some moments irresolution, quits the hut, mounts his e and flies over the plain.]

CHAPTER X.—CONTINUED.

[ying!" he said. Thank God he will be d before they get here, they will find only There won't be much left of me six rs from now," he continued, grimly. hey know me, the fiends; they have not otten that I once killed one of their ds, and they will wreak their vengeance me—the devils never forget nor forgive. after all we will both of us die out here, sel and I, and no one will know just how died!"

And then came the swift thought that riel would never know how her dearly ed husband met his death; she would t for him to come back for her, not owing that never again in this world uld he come back. Then would come long rs of hopeless waiting, of torturing fears d miserable doubts.

"The cruel suspense will kill her!" Ar- del groaned to himself: "better to know worst than to know nothing. Would it better for me to try and save myself, go her and tell her how Russel died, than to ain here and await certain death; when I am dead, no one, not even she—his ung wife—will ever know what became of ssel Anthon?"

There was no time to weigh the matter efully. Whatever was done must be done ickly; there was not a moment to re for deliberation; the shadowy forms re growing fearfully distinct, already Ar- del could distinguish the war-whoop.

With trembling hands he collected the rious articles of value in the cabin—Rus- 's watch, his ring, even the little case taining Muriel's picture; and then ir- solute he threw himself down by Russel's de, his tears falling fast upon the white e where the shadow of death rested arkly.

"I cannot leave you, my brother," he oaned. "I will stay with you and die fending your dead body, and yet for Mur- 's sake——"

Swiftly a picture rose before him. He saw e young wife standing alone watching from er window with sorrowful, yet eager eyes. aiting, waiting for some one who would ever come. For Muriel's sake! Once, ice he pressed his lips to his brother's arble-like forehead, bent one long, linger- g gaze upon the still white face; then went ut of the cabin.

Two minutes later a horse and rider e flying over the plain, and in the little abin Russel Anthon is lying alone.

CHAPTER XI.

A lovely June morning; one of those rare, perfect days which come only in the leafy month of June when Nature seems to smile most tenderly upon the earth, and to make beautiful all she smiles upon. Even the great, busy, crowded city of New York looked bright and fresh and pleasant. In the parks the closely cut grass were like emerald velvet: in front of the large hotels and fashionable club houses were huge stone vases filled with saucy-faced pansies, which nodded their purple and gold heads as the light winds passed over them, and the windows and courtyards of the handsome up-town residences were gay with flowers. Although it was not yet eleven o'clock, there were many carriages rolling up and down the avenues, many people walking along the streets; and over the whole city fell the golden morning sunshine.

The soft summer wind, creeping through the awning-shaded flower-filled windows of Muriel Anthon's boudoir, lifted the light rings of hair from her forehead as she sat in a low chair, her slender fingers busy with some rich embroidery. She looked very pretty sitting there in the exquisitely furnished room, very like a flower herself—a rare, dainty human flower. Her lace trimmed peignoir fell in snowy folds about her figure: she had fastened a great cluster of velvety pansies at her round white throat, and there was another bunch of the same flowers nestling in the wavy sunshiny hair that was gathered in a loose coil low at the back of her small head; upon her lap was a dainty little satin-lined work-basket, filled with many tinted embroidery silks, gay-colored crewels, and bits of bright satin; and down at her feet, his tawny head upon a fold of her dress, lay Leo, his intelligent eyes fastened upon her face, as if he were thinking to himself what a very lovely little mistress he had.

"There, Leo," she murmured—she had long ago contracted the habit of talking to her dog as though he were a human being—"at last that embroidery is finished, and I really think it looks very well," surveying the large square of olive satin critically as she spoke. "It will make a lovely foot rest for Russel. Oh! Leo, don't you wish he would come home? We will be so glad to see him again, won't we, you and I?"

And a very wistful look came into the lovely eyes, as with a sigh Muriel laid her head back upon the cushions of her chair. She had missed her husband very much since he had been away from her, had missed the tenderness and loving care with which he had surrounded her; life without him had not been at all comfortable, she had not longed for him with any passionate yearning, still she had missed him, and was waiting now very impatiently for him to come back to her.

Knowing that she did not love him as she felt a woman ought to love her husband, Muriel often wondered at herself when she found herself longing for Russel to come home; she had no idea that she belonged to that class of women who cannot live without love, yet so it was. Though her husband had failed to awaken the passionate love which was slumbering in her heart, and which some time must surely awake, yet in a measure his great love for her satisfied the cravings of her naturally intense nature.

And Muriel Anthon was not the only woman who had tried to content herself with being loved; all over the world there are women who endeavor to satisfy the hunger of their own hearts with the devotion of men who inspire them with reverence and tenderness perhaps, but who fail utterly to rouse in them the deep, strong love of which they are by nature capable.

The last letter Muriel had received from her husband was dated El Paso, he had written it just previous to his departure from that town in search of Arundel, and knowing that he was about to start upon a somewhat hazardous journey, Russel, always tender and thoughtful for others, had written very gently, telling her that it might possibly be some time before she heard from him again, but that she must not worry, nor be alarmed, for he would take great care of himself for her dear sake, and would come back just as soon as he could.

"For, my darling," he wrote, "I can scarcely wait to see your sweet face, you do not know how long the days seem without you, it seems like years to me since I kissed you good-by. We will never be separated again, Muriel, never again in this world. Where I go hereafter, you shall go too, for I could not bear another separation."

At first people wondered a little that Russel Anthon should leave his young wife for such a space of time, but this Mr. and Mrs. Trowbridge easily explained by saying that their son-in-law had business in Mexico which he was obliged to attend to, and that Muriel was not just at that time sufficiently strong to go with him.

"Eleven o'clock," said Muriel, dreamily, as the tiny Swiss clock on the draped mantel chimed out the hour. "I don't think I shall work any more this morning, Leo. I shall take a book and lie down for a little while: we are getting awfully lazy, Leo, you and I."

Thereupon she rose from her chair, selected a book from the many that were piled up on the centre-table, and threw herself down on the little blue velvet couch which stood in a corner of the room near one of the flower filled windows; but, though she opened the book and skimmed over the first pages, she did not go any further; holding it idly in her small white hands she lay there, dreamily watching the quick movements of the pretty yellow canary who was fluttering about in the gilded stage suspended over the flowers, and then she drifted into a reverie, thinking of Russel far away in Mexico, and of his brother—his erring, reckless, sinning brother, Arundel.

Since that night when for the first time she had heard the story of Arundel Anthon, scarcely a day had passed that she had not thought of him, always pityingly and tenderly, making excuses for him to herself, throwing a veil over his faults, closing her eyes to his sins, until at last she came to think of him almost as more sinned against than sinning. She did not attempt to explain to herself the reason of the deep interest she had always felt in him, since first she knew that such a man as Arundel Anthon lived upon the earth; she hardly thought about it; she was not given to self-analysis or self-questioning—women are not, as a rule, but if she had analyzed her own thoughts she would have found, perhaps to her surprise, that Arundel held nearly as strong a place in them as did her husband.

"Poor Arundel," she said to herself now, pityingly, "I wish Russel would bring him home with him; I am quite sure that should like him—something tells me that if I ever meet him I shall like him very much. Poor boy, what a lonely, weary life he must lead! I should like to help make it a little less weary, a little brighter, not quite so hard to bear."

And while Muriel lay there in her pretty flower-scented boudoir thinking about him, pitying him, Arundel Anthon was rapidly coming toward her, walking hurriedly up the wide avenue: the bright June sunshine falling upon his face—the face so handsome and so ghastly pale that the passers-by turned to look after him,

What he had suffered since that day, when, with the Indian war-whoops ringing in his ears, he had ridden—flying for his life—away from the little cabin where his brother lay dying, only his God knew. The thought that he had left his brother to die alone, his dead body to be horribly mutilated, perhaps, by the savages was in itself terrible, but mingled with that thought was another still more terrible.

Vainly he had tried to crush it out of existence, that fatal, deadly thought which had been born in his brain, that never-to-be-forgotten day, when, kneeling by his brother's motionless form, he had raved madly against the power which was taking Russel out of life and leaving him, Arundel, to live.

This was the thought which, like some slow, deadly poison, had worked its way through Arundel Anthon's spiritual body, until every part of it, mind and brain, heart and understanding, was half paralyzed and wholly diseased.

He had cried in agony, 'Oh my brother, why am I not in your place!" and the demon, who stands ready to tempt men to do evil, had whispered, "Why not put yourself in his place? let it be Arundel Anthon that dies out here on the plains, Russel Anthon that lives and goes back to his beautiful home, his many friends, his fair young wife."

It was surely the most horrible temptation that had ever assailed any human being. Here was this man, high bred, well educated with cultured tastes, and naturally refined manners, made an outcast by his own act, condemned to wander homeless, friendless alone, through distant countries where he should not be recognized, herding with men who were, as far as birth and breeding went, beneath him, afraid to bear his own name, yearning unutterably for the peace and rest of a home, the close companionship of friends, the clinging love of a wife, the warm affection of children, weary, ah, so very weary, of living his lonely, loveless life. A man by nature warm-hearted, affectionate, companionable, yet who was shut out from all the brightness and warmth and joy of life, his own act rising like a wall of solid ice between him and happiness; and here was an opportunity which, if he availed himself of it, would enable him to grasp and to hold as his own all that can make life beautiful and pleasant.

Those among you who have found it hard to resist a small temptation, think what this great terrible temptation was to Arundel Anthon. How he struggled and fought against it, desperately, wildly, until his strength was almost gone. All the way from Mexico that fierce desperate struggle went on between the good angels and the demons who were battling for the possession of his soul; though the angels did not lose ground, still they did not gain an inch: when he arrived in New York the demons had not conquered, but they were yet unconquered.

If the passersby had known of the warfare which was being waged within him, they would not have wondered at his deathly white face as he walked along that lovely June morning, in the summer sunshine.

At the corner of a street he came face to face with a well-dressed, aristocratic looking man, who was hurrying to catch a stage which was close at hand. To Arundel's surprise the stranger turned, bowed, and smiled calling out,

"So you are home at last, Anthon. I am very glad to see you;" then in another second the stage had rolled away with him.

The most trifling incidents sometimes help to bring us to the great turning-point of our lives. As Arundel walked almost blindly along, his fiendish adviser whispered,

See how easy it would be for you to personate your dead brother. You resemble him so closely no one will ever suspect that it was Russel, not Arundel Anthon, who died out there on the plains. You have two lives to choose from; one all brightness and love, and comfort, the other all darkness, and misery, and loneliness. Which will you choose, Arundel Anthon, which will you choose?"

And in very weakness the wretched man groaned.

"I cannot choose—not yet, not yet."

Not yet. So he went on until he reached the beautiful house which was Muriel's home, and his heart seemed to stop beating as he slowly ascended the stone steps and rang the door-bell.

CHAPTER XII.

Lying there in the quiet room, listening to the song her bird was singing, and thinking of Arundel, Muriel unconsciously yielded to the combined influences of the enervating summer heat and the stillness, and drifted slowly into dreamland; and Leo, having watched the white lids droop over the dreamy eyes, dropped his head upon his paws and quietly followed his mistress' example. But his slumber was not so deep as hers; he heard the door-bell when it rang, and was wide awake in an instant; but Muriel slept on until, after knocking twice, and receiving no answer, one of the servants came into the room, and the opening of the door, the sound of a footstep, aroused her.

"What is it?" she murmured, drowsily passing one hand lightly over her eyes, still very dreamy in their their expression.

For a moment the girl paused.

"Mr. Anthon is down stairs in the parlor, ma'am," she said.

In an instant Muriel was on her feet, all the dreaminess gone out of her eyes, her lovely face flushed and eager.

"Mr. Anthon," she said, with almost a gasp. "Why Maggie, you mean my husband?"

"I suppose so," answered the girl, hesitatingly. "I never saw him, you know, ma'am, he was gone before I came here."

But Muriel was not listening to her. With a little, low, rippling laugh of pure gladness she laid her hand upon Leo's head.

"Leo, master has come back to us" she said; and as though the dog understood her words, he bounded after her as she went swiftly out of the room along the hall, and down the stairs.

If Muriel had been wide awake when the news was brought to her, she would have wondered, just as the servant girl did, why her husband should have waited in the parlor, and sent his name up to her as any formal caller would have done; for surely a man has the right to go unannounced into his wife's presence, and formality ought not to exist between two people whom God has made one flesh. But as it was, in her glad haste to see the man she supposed, of course, was her husband, Muriel did not take time think there was anything strange or unusual in his actions.

The moment he put his foot inside his brother's house a feeling that can only be likened to a sort of mental paralysis had come upon Arundel Anthon. He seemed to have lost all power to think, reason, or understand: in the cool, darkened magnificently furnished parlor he stood, one hand grasping the carved back of a velvet chair so tightly that the veins stood out like whip cords, as rigid and almost as white as the marble Apollo which was standing near him. He heard the soft, musical voice, which he knew by instinct was Muriel's; heard her light, quick footstep and the rustle of her dress as she came down the stairs; saw in the open doorway the white-clad figure and the face more beautiful, even in life, than the pictured one which had seemed to him the loveliest upon earth; and still he did not move—he could not: it was as if he was bound hand and foot—he could hear his own heart beating faster and faster, louder and louder; there was a horrible ringing in his ears—though he did not know it, Arundel Anthon was at that moment standing upon the very brink of insanity.

With a low, glad cry Muriel hastened to him. In an instant her arms were around his neck, her head upon his breast her heart beating close to his. Realize it, if you can; think what it must be for a man who is dying of hunger to push away from his lips the bread some one holds close to them; and this man was dying of heart hunger, starving for the want of love and tenderness. God in heaven! when we pray lead us not into temptation, we do not think, many of us, what temptation is.

Arundel Anthon made one grand, almost superhuman attempt to withstand the fearful temptation; all the good in him rose in arms against him. Who can tell? another moment and good might have conquered, when suddenly Muriel raised her lovely eyes to his.

"You are not glad to see me," she murmured, a little reproachfully, "you have not kissed me once—kiss me!"

He could feel her warm breath upon his face, her lips were close to his; he could bear it no longer, his strength was gone, he was faint, sick, his brain on fire. With a sudden, quick movement he folded the beautiful figure in his arms, and bending his head laid upon the soft lips the most passionate kiss that ever man had pressed there, a kiss that thrilled Muriel from head to foot, that awoke all the slumbering passion in her heart. The demons had conquered—for that kiss Arundel Anthon had sold his honor, his truth, ay, his very soul; the struggle was over, he had yielded to the temptation, and a fierce joy swept over him, crushing down remorse, stifling conscience, as Muriel, clinging closer to him, trembling she knew not why, whispered brokenly.

"Oh, my husband, I never loved you before as I love you now."

Her very touch thrilled him, he felt that rather than give up this beautiful woman, he could commit any evil under heaven. In taking his brother's place now, as within the last moment he had resolved to do, he was influenced not by Russel's wealth, his friends, his home, his stainless reputation, but by his wife. And yet at the bar of heaven will God hold Muriel responsible for Arundel Anthon's sin? who can tell!

It was wonderful, the powerful attraction these two—this weak, guilty man and this innocent woman—had for each other; it seemed almost as if in some other world their sould had known and loved each other, and meeting now sprang to each other.

No one can explain satisfactorily that strange drawing together which is sometimes to be found between two people of opposite sex; there are many things in this world that cannot be explained or understood, they belong to the arcana of nature.

Having yielded to the temptation, Arundel Anthon gave himself up unreservedly to the intoxication of the moment, until Muriel, half ashamed of the passion which no man had ever aroused in her before, and which she could not understand, drew herself, with a burning blush, out of his embrace.

"Tell me about yourself, Russel," she murmured, seating herself beside him upon a low couch, and dropping her head upon his breast with a sigh of perfect contentment. "Have you been ill, dear? You look so very pale, and I suppose this beard makes you look strange and different," stroking the short dark beard caressingly as she spoke. "Do you know, Russel, you have changed somehow since you went away."

Although Arundel Anthon's heart seemed to stop beating, he said, very quietly:

"Do you love me, Muriel, though I may be different from the husband that went away from you?"

She did not notice the strangeness of the remark; she only nestled closer to him as she answered:

"You are dearer to me now than you were ever before, I do not think you love me now any better than I do you. You know, Russel, before we were married papa told you I did not love you as I thought a woman should love the man whose wife she was to be; since our marriage I have tried so hard to love you as I knew you loved me, but I could not—I never have, until—now."

With a whispered "Thank God!" Arundel kissed her. After all, he was not stealing her heart away from Russel, for he had never held it; she gave him, Arundel, her love.

"Oh! Russel, where is Arundel?"

With lips that did not not quiver, though they were colorless, he answered her:

"He is dead, Muriel."

"Dead! Oh, Russel, tell me how he died!"

There were tears in Muriel's eyes, her face was very sad, as she listened while Arundel told her of the long illness in the little cabin; just as though he had really been Russel Anthon he gave her the particulars of her brother's journey through Mexico and she shuddered as he told her how, with the Indian war-cry sounding in his ears, he had ridden for his life back to El Paso.

"Did I do wrong Muriel, to leave him to die there alone?"

For a moment she paused, brushing away the tears that clung to her long lashes, then very slowly:

"No, I do not think so, under the circumstances; if you had stayed with him you could not have saved his life, you would have only thrown away your own, for those horrible Indians would have murdered you. I would have never known how my husband must be dead, and the agony of not knowing would have killed me."

Yes, that was what he too had thought.

For a long time they sat talking, Muriel telling him what she had done during his absence, speaking of her father and mother, and of old friends giving him all the little details of her every-day life, until it seemed to Arundel, as he sat there listening to her that the past was all a horrible dream, and that he was in all truth Russel Anthon. He breathed free again, the color came back to his lips and face; his heart no longer loud and fast, the faint sickness was gone; a delicious feeling of rest stole over him, of rest and perfect bliss. Muriel's head lay up on his breast, his arms were round her, he had but to bend his head and kiss the lips that met his so willingly: what was all the world to him or the opinion of Heaven? his world began and ended in Muriel it was heaven to be with her.

"And now, darling, have you told me all?" he asked, laughingly, when she had finished.

She turned her face suddenly away from him, hiding it upon his arm, but not before he saw it flush rose-red.

"I have not told you quite all," she murmured, falteringly. "There is just one more thing to tell you. I should have told you, perhaps, before you went away, but I was not quite sure. I did not really know—oh, Russel, can't you guess it!"

A puzzled look came over his face.

"No, dear, I am afraid not; tell me, Muriel, don't hide your face from me, my darling!"

But she kept it turned away from him, as she said in a very low voice, pausing between every two or three words:

"I think—that next October—there will come—Russel,—to you—and me—a little baby!"

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Recipes for Cheap, Healthful, and Easily Prepared Puddings.

RICE PUDDING.—One teacup of rice washed in several waters; 2 qts. milk, 2 teaspoonsful salt. Sweeten to taste, and bake 2 hours. This makes the best rice pudding I ever tasted.

BREAD PUDDING.—One pt. bread crumbs to 1 qt. milk. Set it on the stove until the bread is soft. Add 4 eggs, 1 teaspoonful salt, a few raisins if convenient, and bake as long as for custard. A good sance is made of a pint of boiling water poured on a mixture of a tablespoonful of butter, nearly the same amount of flour, and ¾ cup sugar well stirred together. A little vinegar may be added, or the pudding can be sweetened.

INDIAN MEAL PUDDING.—Boil 2 qrt. of milk; while it is beating, mix together 1 teaspoonful of corn meal and enough molasses to moisten it all. Pour the boiling milk on this, let it stand until partially cool add a half teacupful cold milk, and bake two hours in a stove, or all night in a brick oven. It is improved by adding sweet cream when eaten.

CUSTARD PUDDING.—One qt. milk, 5 eggs, 1 teaspoonful salt, and sugar to taste. It is better to bake in a slow oven an hour or so.

CORN STARCH PUDDING is good, made without eggs, but better with 3 eggs to 3 tablespoonsful of corn starch and 1 qt. milk. Boil the milk, mix the starch thoroughly with a small quantity of cold milk; beat the eggs well and add one teaspoonful of salt. Stir all together, boil a few minutes, and eat with sauce of sweet cream and sugar, and a little nutmeg.

BIRD'S NEST PUDDING is made with apples pared and cored; put these in a pudding dish, and having filled the hollow in each with sugar, pour a custard over all, and bake slowly until done.

APPLE DUMPLINGS, either baked or boiled, are nicest and healthiest if the crust is made of cream. Pare and core an apple, cover it with crust; put several such dumplings in a baking dish (earthen is much better than tin), add sugar between them, and a little water, Eat with the same sauce given for bread pudding. If preferred, use sugar and butter beaten together.—American Agriculturist

Great Gales in Newfoundland.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld.—As telegraph communication around the island is re-established the disastrous results of the late hurricane unfold themselves. From Betts' Cove, Notre Dame Bay, the other evening the report of a very serious accident is telegraphed. The schooner "Kate," owned by Capt. Young of that place, was lying at anchor in the Cove. When the gale was at its maximum her chains parted and she drove out seaward in a newly formed sheet of ice. There were two of the crew on board at the time, and unless timely succor was afforded their doom was sealed. Eight heroic shoremen volunteered to go to the rescue. They manned a stout, strong skiff, and pulled after the drifting vessel. It was utterly impossible to save the schooner, as she was now imbedded in a sheet of ice. So the two human waifs were rescued, and the skiff was headed for the shore. Unfortunately, when passing over a spot of shoal ground, a breaker rose and split over the skiff, completely swamping her. Eight men were instantly drowned, and the remaining two were washed on shore in a state of unconsciousness and terribly bruised and gashed. The schooner shortly afterward struck a rock and sank. The names of the drowned men are Abraham Joy, John Mills, Elijah House Geo. Goss, William Meeley, Thomas Randell and William Young. Shortly after a fine new vessel, belonging to Nippers Harbor, parted her chains and became a total wreck on the island. The brigantine "Liason," from Sydney, C.B., to this port, despaired of in the past week, arrived recently. She was towed in barely in time to save her, being in a sinking condition. Her decks were completely swept, rails, stauchions and bulwarks all carried away, and her crew in an exhausted condition from continuously pumping her several days.

Paper is now being largely made in India. In the public offices the coarse quality used is no longer imported. Signs are not wanting that ten years hence the export trade to India will have greatly declined. The Indian Government can now obtain at home, at a vastly reduced cost, many things which it has had to import. With such an enormous population, labor is very cheap, and the people are expert at handicraft.

HOLLAND COUNCIL.

Holland Dec. 12th, 1882.

Council met at Vo an's Hall.

Members all present, Reeve in the chair.

Minutes of former meeting read and approved.

Moved and seconded by Messrs Norton and Shute, that D. Douglas get an order for $12.05, for back taxes charged against him in error.

George Little, assessor, applies for extra pay as assessor. The council were not inclined to grant any further increase.

Moved and seconded by Deputy Reeve and Deavitt, that a By-Law be prepared to form a polling sub division to consist of the following lots, from 11 to 40, both inclusive in the 1st, 2nd and 3rd con. E. T. S. Rd., from 12 to 30, both inclusive on the 4th con. E. T. S. Rd., from 11 to 40, both inclusive on the 1st and 2nd con. W. T. S. Rd., lots 9 to 11 on 7th con., lots 9, 10, 11, 12 and 13 on the 8th con., and lots 12, 13, 14, and 15 on he 9th con., E. G. R.

Moved and seconded by Deputy Reeve and Deavitt, that bill of S. H. Breese for postage and stationary, be paid.

Moved and seconded by Messrs Norton and Shute, that James Adams pay over to the Treasurer the sum of $21.00, (twenty one dollars) as money received for pine logs taken off of six side road.

Moved and seconded by Messrs Norton and Deavitt, that By-Law appointing returning officers and polling places be read 1st, 2nd and 3rd times and engrossed on the minutes.

Moved and seconded by Shute and Deputy Reeve, that John Murray get an order for $10.00 as part pay for doing road job on Speek's deviation.

Moved and seconded by Messrs Deavitt and Shute, that the Reeve vacate the chair and the Deputy Reeve take it.

Moved and seconded by Messrs Deavitt and Shute, that Wm. Harvey, Esq., Reeve, the sum of twenty dollars as a small token from this Council for extra services in the way of looking after the business of the Municipality.

Moved and seconded by Messrs Deavitt and Shute, that the Council adjourn sini die.

CARSON PRICE,
Tp. Clerk.

GLENELG COUNCIL.

Met at the Town Hall on the 11th inst. All the members present.

Moved by Messrs. Glencross and Neil that Maurice Doolan be refunded $4.29, which he paid in error to common school section No. 6—carried.

Neil, Glencross, that orders be issued on the Treasurer in favor of School Trustees for school money—carried.

Orders were issued on the Treasurer in payment of work on roads and bridges as follows:—Ward No. 1, $80.50; Ward No. 2, $511.90; Ward No. 4, $50.74.

Dunsmoor, Glencross, that the following parties be exempt from taxes for 1882. Mrs. Priel, lot 1, con. 15; Mrs. Smith, S. ½ lot 30, con. 3 E. G. R.; Mrs. Wilkie, E. ½ lot 14, con. 2 E. G. R.; Mrs. McDonald, lot 7, con. 3 S. D. R.; Angus Gilles, lot 47, con. 2 N. D. R.—carried.

A By-law was passed appointing Deputy-Returning Officers and Polling Places for next Municipal Election.

Dunsmoor, Glencross, that N. McCannell be allowed fifty cents for getting a road scraper repaired, and that T. & J. Brown be paid fifty cents for repairing scraper for S. Cope—carried.

Glencross, Neil, that John Fallice be paid $3 25 for three cords of wood for the town hall—carried.

Dunsmoor, Glencross, that Mr. Mullarky be refunded $2.75, that amount being advanced by him to pay freight on road scrapers—carried.

Neil, Glencross, that the selectors of jurors be paid $4 each—carried.

Neil, Glencross, that the Clerk's account for postage and stationery, amounting to $6.30, be paid—carried.

Glencross, Mullarky, that the road commissioners be paid for expending money on roads and bridges as follows: Patrick Neil, $43.97; Wm. Glencross, $34.32; N. Dunsmoor, $37.60, and that T. Mullarky be paid $6 for services on committees, and F. McRae $10 for services on committees—carried.

Glencross, Mullarky, that the Clerk be allowed $15 for services under the School Act—carried.

Mullarky, Dunsmoor, that John Reid, of Markdale, be refunded $10 taxes on account of his buildings not being finished nor occupied—carried.

The Reeve having left the chair it was moved by Mr. Glencross, seconded by Mr. Neil, that this Council tender the Reeve their thanks for the able manner in which he has discharged his duties during the past year—carried unanimously.

Council adjourned.

SHREWD AS EVER.

In an extended article in the Washington (D. C.,) Star, we notice that among others, Senator James G. Blaine, who has suffered in the past with Rheumatism, now keeps St. Jacobs Oil on hand in case of any future attack.

Robt. S. Rae.

TAILOR,

SYDENHAM STREET,

MARKDALE.

AN IMMENSE STOCK OF

BOOTS & SHOES

JUST ARRIVED AT THE

TORONTO HOUSE

BEST QUALITY AND LOWEST PRICE.

STOCK COMPLETE IN

Dry Goods and Groceries!

PRICES ALWAYS RIGHT.

OUR THIRTY CENT TEA

Is the wonder of the day A trial solicited.

WM. BROWN.

Markdale, Oct. 11th, 1882.

GROCERIES

A. M'INTYRE

TEA! TEA! TEA!

A. M'INTYRE

Flour, Flour, Flour.

McINTYRE'S LIQUORS! LIQUORS

McINTYRE'S MEAL! MEAL! MEAL!

McINTYRE'S Cigars, Cigars.

McINTYRE'S Pork, Pork, Pork

McINTYRE'S Coffee, Coffee.

McINTYRE'S Teas, Teas.

And everything kept in a first-class Grocery and Liquor Store. always on hand, CHEAP FOR CASH.

GROCERIES

MARKDALE

Sash and Door Factory

SASH, DOORS,
BLINDS
MOULDINGS,
HOLLOW BATTONS,
FRAMES

Lumber, Lath and Shingles,

Always on Hand. Orders Promptly Filled.

The Subscriber wishes to return thanks to the people of Markdale and vicinity, for the very liberal patronage they have given him in the past, and hopes by close attention to business to merit a continuance of the same.

I have now extended my business, and will in future keep a full Stock of

PINE LUMBER.

Direct from the North Shore.

ALL SIZES, DRESSED AND UNDRESSED,

All Kinds of Plain and Fancy Turning

Done in a first class manner.

THOS. McNEA.

Markdale May 27th, 1881. 37-tf

GENERAL

Blacksmithing

Flesherton Station.

The subscriber begs to announce to the inhabitants of Flesherton, Markdale and Priceville, and surrounding country, that he has commenced business at Flesherton Station, where he hopes by satisfactory work and moderate rates to secure a share of public patronage.

HORSE-SHOEING A SPECIALTY.

And guaranteed that in a case of interfereing horses he will cure the defect in two shoeings or no charge will be made for the second shoeing.

A TRIAL SOLICITED.

HENRY WHITE.

Flesherton Station, Oct. 17, 1882. 110

NOTICE TO FARMERS.

BUSINESS STILL INCREASING WITH

W. J. ROWE

—AT THE—

Barrhead Mill

UNDER THE OLD PROCESS.

Gristing and Chopping done every working day. Farmers from a distance can have their stuff home with them the same day.

All orders for Flour and Feed promptly filled.

W. J. ROWE, "Barrhead Mills."

October 28th 1882. 113-126

W. BULMER,

The People's Photographer

FLESHERTON.

Continues to take Pictures,
Do Copying and Enlarging in good style

FRAMES and FRAME FIXINGS

in great variety and latest designs at desperate low prices.

W. BULMER.

ARTEMESIA WAREHOUSE

FLESHERTON STATION.

Dry Goods, Hardware, Crockery, Boots and Shoes

Groceries, Provisions, &c. Stock kept full and well assorted with new goods received every week.

Cash paid for all kinds of Grain at the Station.

MY BRANCH STORE AT EUGENIA

replenished with new goods every week. For sale cheap for cash or produce.

My Saw Mill, Shingle Factoty, and Lime Kiln

AT LITTLE FALLS, ARE IN OPERATION.

All kinds Saw Logs bought at the Mill or sawn on shares.

Lumber, Lath, Broom Handles, Shingles and Lime for sale.

WM. HOGG.

November 7th, 1882.

TORONTO HOUSE

FLESHERTON.

Stock Fully Complete. Unusually Large

VERY ATTRACTIVE, AND

CHEAPER THAN THE CHEAPEST.

EVERY DEPARTMENT SPECIALLY ATTRACTIVE.

Variety and Value Unsurpassed.

DRY GOODS DEPARMENT.

Is this season very complete with a very large stock of Dress Goods, comprising in part Cashmeres in all colors. Worsted Wool Goods in endless variety.

Boot and Shoe Department.

Would call special attention of close buyers as my stock is unusually large from the best manufacturers and at rock bottom prices.

ORDERED CLOTHING.

Has been exceedingly brisk this season, on account of which I have laid in the largest and best stock of Tweeds, Coatings, Trowserings, and Overcoatings in this section of country. As I have always led the trade in this department buyers will find it to their advantage to call before purchasing elsewhere.

Millinery Department.

Under the able management of a first-class milliner, with plenty of assistance, will be found unusually attractive with the prettiest and most fashionable, and cheapest stock to be found in the county. Ladies, it would do you good to call and look at the stock.

Hardware and Grocery Department.

Is always fully assorted and complete with the best goods, at the lowest possible price.

I am the only constant and reliable buyer of Grain and Farm Produce in Flesherton, and for which I will pay the highest price in cash for any quantity of good dry, sound grain, which I would specially ask farmers to clean well. A call solicited.

R. J. SPROULE.

Flesherton, Oct. 3rd, 1882.

Markdale PUMP Factory.

J. G. IRVING,

MAKER OF ALL KINDS OF PUMPS,

DROP VALVE PUMPS, CYLINDER PUMPS, CISTERN PUMPS, FORCE PUMPS,

Also, ALL KINDS OF IRON PUMPS SUPPLIED.

Satisfaction guaranteed on all my work; the proof of it is found in the fact that I am doing a larger business now than ever was done in Markdale in the Pump business. Remember the stand, 1 door north of Rutledge's Hotel,

Sydenham Street, Markdale.

SHREWD AS EVER.

In an extended article in the Washington (D. C.,) Star, we notice that among others, Senator James G. Blaine, who has suffered in the past with Rheumatism, now keeps St. Jacobs Oil on hand in case of any future attack.

Markdale Standard

VOL. 3.--No. 17. MARKDALE, ONT., JAN. 4, 1883. No. 121.

The Markdale Standard

IS PUBLISHED

EVERY THURSDAY EVENING,

At Markdale, Ontario

Per Annum

IN ADVANCE.

... three months, $2 if not paid till ... No paper discontinued ... are paid up, except at the ... publisher, and parties refusing ... will be held respon- ... subscriptions until they ... rules.

RATES OF ADVERTISING:

.....	$50 00
do.	27 50
do.	15 00
do.	8 00
do.	4 00
... insertion per line	8
... insertion.....	3

... lines to be reckoned by the ... measured by a scale of solid ... All advertisements without specific ... published till forbid and ... charged accordingly. All transitory adver ... must be in the office of publica- ... Tuesday on the wednesday proceed- ... publication.

JOB PRINTING

... description executed with ... and despatch at the Office of ... Markdale.

C. W. RUTLEDGE.

EDITOR & PROPRIETOR.

PROFESSIONAL AND BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

Dr. Annable & Armstrong,

... Surgeons, Accoucheur ... &c.

... Medical Hall; residence at ... house.

... M.D., M.R.C.P. & S., O. ... Surgeon, Priceville, ... University, Vict. College. ... New York, and ... of the same, ... Adelth Medical Institute. ... Ophthalmic Hospital, N.Y. ... Physicians & Surgeons, O. 104

Dental Card.

Cameron & Knight,

DENTAL SURGEONS,

Office over D. A. Cameron and Co's Drug Store, Toronto St., OWEN SOUND.

Every attention given to the preservation of natural teeth. Artificial Dentures mounted on Gold, Celluloid, and Rubber bases.

Will be at Markdale the last Tuesday in each month.

A. Cameron, M.D., & L.F.P.S., Glasgow, L.D.S., Ont. — C. F. Knight, L.D.S. Medalist Royal College Den. Sur., Ont

Legal.

Frost & Frost,

BARRISTERS, AND ATTORNEYS-AT Law, Solicitors in Chancery, Conveyancers, &c., Owen Sound, have resumed at Flesherton, Office open every Thursday, as heretofore.

ALFRED FROST, County Crown Attorney. — J. W. FROST, LL. B. 1

J. MASSON,

BARRISTER, MASTER AND DEP. REG in Chancery, Notary Public, Conveyancer, &c.

MONEY TO LEND AT SIX PER CENT.

Office—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block Poulett St. and in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week. 57-1y

Creasor & Morrison,

BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, CONVEYANCERS, &c. &c.

Offices in Owen Sound, Dufferin Block, over W. F. Wolf's Store and in

MARKDALE;

Over W. J. McFarland's Store on Thursday and Friday of each week.

Funds to Lend on reasonable terms.

JOHN CREASOR, Q.C. DUNCAN MORISON

Markdale, March 15, 1882. 79-1y

Alexander Brown.

ISSUER of Marriage Licenses, Fire and Life Insurance Agent. Commissioner in B. R. &c. Conveyancer and Licensed Auctioneer for the County of Grey. Farmers, Merchants, and Land Sales, Punctually attended to and charges made very moderate.

Priceville, Sept. 17, 1880. 1-y

Hotels.

REVERE HOTEL,

MARKDALE.

T. SPROULE, - Proprietor.

THIS popular Hotel has had a large addition added to it, thoroughly refitted, and is now second to none in the county. Good stabling and attentive ostler. First-class accommodation for commercial travelers. $1 per day. Barber's shop in connection.

Markdale Hotel.

Good Accommodation for Travellers. 'Bus to and from all trains. Charges moderate.

Markdale. A. RUTLEDGE, PROP.

COMMERCIAL HOTEL.

PRICEVILLE, Ont.

Large and commodious Sample Rooms Good Bed Rooms, &c. The Bar and larde well supplied with the best the market affords; good Stabling and attentive Hostler's

THOS. ATKINSON, Proprietor

CHATSWORTH HOUSE

(LATE MORROW HOUSE,)

CHATSWORTH, Ont.

THE undersigned having purchased the above property has had it thoroughly renovated and refurnished throughout beside making other new improvements, which will greatly add to the comfort and convenience of his guests, would respectfully solicit the patronage of the public generally. The best brands of liquors and cigars always in stock. Good meal and comfortable rooms guaranteed. Good stabling and attentive hostler.

—C. H. MATHEWS, Prop. 114.

Miscellaneous.

John McDonald,

CHATSWORTH,

DIVISION Court Clerk, Issuer of Marriage Licenses, Commissioner in B.R., Conveyancer, &c. Deeds, Mortgages, Wills, &c. attended to promptly, accurately, neatly, and cheaply. Private funds to lend in small sums on easy terms. Notes discounted

MISS LAMB,

DRESS-MAKER. UP-STAIRS IN Douglas' Block. Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges moderate.

Markdale, Nov. 15th, 1882. 114-3m.

R. M. Galbraith,

AUCTIONEER AND GENERAL LAND Agent, Williamsford Station. Auction Sales attended in all parts of the County Goods sold on commission. Rates moderate. Pianos, Organs, and Sewing Machines; also Fruit and Ornamental Trees, Vines, Agricultural Implements, and Machinery of all kinds on sale.

Williamsford, Jan. 27, 1881.

T. E. DAVIS,

BUILDER & CONTRACTOR, (Stone and Brick). After completing 13 buildings his season is still on the track and is still prepared to do all kinds of stone and brick work, plastering and tuck pointing. Those who contemplate building will find it to their advantage to give him a call.

Residence corner of Brown and Sproule Stetes. MARKDALE. 16-y

MISS WELSH,

Dress & Mantlemaker. Charges moderate. Satisfaction guaranteed. Hill's Block, Sydenham street.

Markdale, Nov. 6th, 1882. 113-126

Wm. Brown,

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.

Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.

N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate security.

LOYAL MARKDALE LODGE,

Of C. O. O. F. No. 78, will meet in their hall on Monday evening, Jan. 8th, at eight o'clock p. m.

108 W. L. YOUNG, Sec'y.

EUGENIA

Grist, Saw and Lath Mills

Having made extensive improvements in my Grist Mill I feel confident I can give good satisfaction.

GOOD FLOUR ALWAYS ON HAND.

Chopping Done Every Day.

Custom Sawing and Bills Filled on the shortest notice.

LUMBER AND LATH ALWAYS ON HAND.

Cherry, Butternut, White Ash, Black Ash Basswood, Pine and Hemlock Logs wanted

69ly. M. AKITT, Eugenia.

$66 a week in your own town. $5 outfit free. No risk. Everything new. Capital not required. We will furnish you everything. Many are making fortunes. Ladies make as much as men, and boys and girls make great pay. Reader, if you want a business at which you can make great pay all the time you work, write for particulars to H. HALLETT & Co., Portland, Maine. 71-126

$2 Watches, worth $2.50. White metal Stemwinding Chain ... Imitation gold pa... Solid gold $15. Thousands sold last ... for years own use or speculative purposes. Valuable ... sample free. ... & Co., ... Nassau, ... York.

ROBT. ASKIN,

MARKDALE,

Has opened out a First-Class

Furniture!

—AND—

UNDERTKING ESTABLISHMENT,

And therefore has supplied a want long felt, especially in the Undertaking Line.

COFFINS,

CASKETS,

SHROUDS,

and all

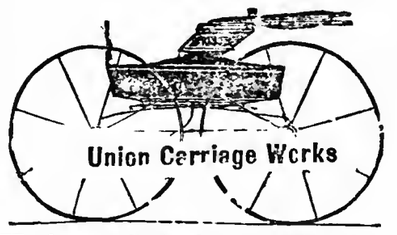
FUNERAL FURNISHINGS,

supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse

for hire at moderate rates.

FURNITURE!



From the Common to the

Best and Latest Styles,

in everything in the line.

Call and see for yourselves.

ROBT. ASKIN.

Union Carriage Works.

All work manufactured from

FIRST CLASS MATERIAL

In the Latest and Best Improved Style, and finished with

English Varnish.

Painting & Trimming Rigs

will receive prompt attention.

All Repairs executed in the shortest possible time consistent with good workmanship.

GOOD WORK A SPECIALITY.

Remember the Shop, opposite the Cheapside

D. J. SHANAHAN,

Proprietor.

Markdale, Dec. 2nd, 1881. 64.

HAIR CUTTING AND SHAVING

By T. D. Smith.

Razors, Straps, and Shaving Brushes for sale. Razors sharpened.

Orders filled for Tomb Stones.

STARTLING DISCOVERY!

LOST MANHOOD RESTORED.

A victim of youthful imprudence causing Premature Decay, Nervous Debility, Lost Manhood, etc., having tried in vain every known remedy, has discovered a simple self cure, which he will send FREE to his fellow-sufferers, address J. H. REEVES, 43 Chatham St., N. Y

WARNING!

There is great danger of taking cold from wet feet. If you want to Guard Against Sickness!

Keep your feet dry and warm by procuring your

BOOTS!

—FROM—

KAY & THOMAS.

Satisfaction Guaranteed. Medicated Cork Soles, all sizes, kept on hand. Remember the place opposite the new STANDARD Office. 48

Best business now before the public. You can make money faster at work for us than at anything else. Capital not needed. We will start you. $12 a day and upwards made at home by the industrious. Men, women, boys and girls wanted everywhere to work for us. Now is the time. You can work in spare time only or give your whole time to the business. You can live at home and do the work. No other business will pay you nearly as well. No one can fail to make enormous pay by engaging at once. Costly outfit and terms free. Money made fast, easily and honorably. Address TRUE & Co., Augusta, Maine. 71-126

REST AND COMFORT TO THE SUFFERING

Brown's Household Panacea has no equal for relieving pain, both internal and external. It cures pain in the Side, Back or Bowels, Sore Throat, Rheumatism, Toothache, Lumbago and any kind of a Pain or Ache. "It will most surely quicken the Blood and heal, as its acting power is wonderful." "Brown's Household Panacea," being acknowledged as the great Pain Reliever, and of double the strength of any other Elixer or Liniment in the world, should be in every family handy for use when wanted "as it really is the best remedy in the world for Cramps in the Stomach, and Pains and Aches of all kinds," and is for sale by all Druggists at 25 cents a bottle. 75-127

EARS FOR THE MILLION

FOO CHOO'S BALSAM OF SHARK'S OIL positively Restores the Hearing, and is the Only Absolute Cure for Deafness known This Oil is abstracted from peculiar species of small White Shark, caught in the Yellow Sea, known as CARCHARODON RONDELETII. Every Chinese fisherman knows it. Its virtues as a restorative of hearing were discovered by a Buddhist Priest were discovered about the year 1410. Its cures were so numerous, and many so seemingly miraculous, that the remedy was officially proclaimed over the entire Empire. Its use became so universal, that for over 300 years no Deafness has existed among the Chinese people. Sent, charges prepaid, to any address at $1.00 per bottle.

Hear what the Deaf say:

It has performed a miracle in my case.

I have no unearthly noises in my head, and hear much better.

I have been greatly benefited.

My deafness helped a great deal—think another bottle will cure me.

Its virtues are unquestionable and its curative character absolute, as the writer can personally testify, both from experience and observation. Write at once to Haylock and Jenney, 7 Dey Street, New York, inclosing $1 and you will receive by return a remedy that will enable you to hear like anybody else, and whose curative effects will be permanent. You will never regret doing so."—EDITOR OF MERCANTILE REVIEW.

To avoid loss in the mails, please send money by Registered Letter.

Only imported by HAYLOCK & JENNEY, late Haylock & Co.,

Sole Agents for America. 7 DEY ST NEW YORK 93-145.

Wm. Lucas & Co.,

BANKERS,

Money Loaned

IN large or small amounts, at all times, on good endorsed notes, or on collateral security.

INTEREST AT 6 PER CENT.

Allowed on Savings Deposits.

Drafts issued and Collections made on points, at lowest rates.

W.M. LUCAS, Manager.

September 23, 1880. 2-1y

JOHN NOBLE,

MARKDALE.

GENER'L BLACKSMITH

HORSE SHOEING

A SPECIALTY.

A CARD.

To all who are suffering from the errors and indiscretions of youth, nervous weakness, early decay, loss of manhood, &c., I will send a receipe that will cure you, FREE OF CHARGE. This great Remedy was discovered by a missionary in South America. Send a self-addressed envelope to REV. JOSEPH T. INMAN, Station D, New York City.

JNO. MONTGOMERY,

BAKER,

Begs to tender his thanks to the inhabitants of Markdale and surrounding country for past patronage, and to intimate to them that he is prepared to supply the public with

Chatsworth.

Mr. Neil McGregor left for Winnipeg last week. He is employed as an agent for the Winnipeg Times.

Messrs. A. McGill, J. Gilchrist, and R. McClure, were elected Village Police for 1883.

The pupils concert was a success. Proceeds $30.

Merry X-mas and Happy New Year to all from A. McIntyre

VISIT TO MARKDALE.

One of the surgeons from the International Throat and Lung Institute, 173 Church St., Toronto, is making a trip for the accomodation of sufferers who cannot make it convenient to visit the institute. He is being visited by crowds of physicians and sufferers receiving treatment and testing the Merits of Dr. M. Souvielle's wonderful invention the Spirometer for the cure of Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness, Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption and all diseases of the Head, throat and lungs, Consultation and a trial of the Spirometer gratis. He will be at the Markdale House three days, January 11th, 12th, and 13th. He will furnish upon application the names and addresses of housands that have been cured by his treatment.

Head office in Canada; 173 Church St. Toronto, and 13 Philips Square Montreal, P. Q.

Watch Repairing a specialty at Doll & Brown's, Markdale.

OH, WHAT A COUGH!

Will you heed the warning. The signal perhaps of the sure approach of that more terrible disease consumption. Ask yourselves if you can afford for the sake of 50cts., to run the risk and do nothing for it. We know from experience that Shiloh's Cure will cure your Cough. It never fails. This explains why more than a Million Bottles were sold the past year. It relieves Croup, and Whooping Cough, at once. Mothers do not be without it. For Lame Back, Side, or Chest, use Shiloh's Porous plaster. Sold at Wm. Brown's General Store Markdale.

An Organ worth $90 can be had for $60, cash. Apply at this office.

DYSPEPSIA & LIVER COMPLAINT.

Is it not worth the small price of 75 cents to free yourself of every symptom of these distressing complaints, if you think so call at our store and get a bottle of Shiloh's Vitalizer, every bottle has a printed guarantee on it, use according'y and if it does you no good it will cost you nothing. Sold at Wm. Brown's General Store, Markdale.

140 chests finest Thirty Cent Japan Tea ever shown in Markdale at McFarland's. Call and get samples.

GIVEN AWAY.

We cannot help noticing the liberal offer made to all invalids and sufferers by Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. You are requsted to call at A. Turner & Co's Drug Store, and get a Trial Bottle free of cost, if you are suffering with Consumption, Severe Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Hay Fever, Loss of Voice, Hoarseness, or any affection of the Throat or Lungs. It will positively cure you.

TOO MANY Shawls, Mantles and Blankets at McFarland's. He is bound to clear them off regardless of Cost.

FORTUNES FOR FARMERS AND MECHANICS.

Thousands of dollars can be saved by using proper judgement in taking care of the health of your self and family. If you are Bilious, have sallow complexion, poor appetite, low and depressed spirits, and generally debilitated, do not delay a moment, but go at once and procure a bottle of those Electric Bitters, which never fail to cure, and that for the trifling sum of fifty cents.—Tribune. Sold by A. Turner & Co.

Large stock of Groceries, Liquors, Provisions, Fruits, &c., always on hand at A. McIntyre's.

FREE OF COST.

All persons wishing to test the merits of a great remedy—one that will positively cure Consumption, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, or any affection of the Throat and Lungs—are requested to call at A. Turner & Co's Drug Store and get a Trial Bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption free of cost, which will show you what a regular dollar-size bottle will do.

Don't forget the Masquerade on the ice on Friday night.

WOMAN'S TRUE FRIEND.

A friend in need is a friend in deed. This none can deny, especially when assistance is rendered when one is sorely afflicted with diseases, more particularly those complaints and weakness so common to our female population. Every woman should know that Electric Bitters are Woman's true friend, and will positively restore her to health, even when all other remedies fail. A single trial always proves our assertion. They are pleasant to the taste, and only cost fifty cents a bottle. Sold by A. Turner & Co.

All indebted to me will save themselves costs by calling and settling their accounts at once.—A. McINTYRE.

HIS SACRIFICE:

OR,

For Love of Her.

CHAPTER XIII.

It was totally unexpected—he was so utterly unprepared for it that for a moment Arundel sat as if spell-bound. If Muriel had seen his face she would have been startled by the curious half-frightened, half-bewild-red look upon it. He had not dreamed of this, had not thought of the possibility of a child- Russel's child—who would call him father, whom he must acknowledge as his own. What a terrible farce it would be! The child would be born, would live, and grow up thinking itself the child of the man who had robbed its dead father of his name and place. A thousand strange thoughts came and went in his brain. Perhaps through this child, yet unborn, retribution would come upon him; it might be that Russell's child would some day avenge the terrible wrong that had been done its father.

"You are not sorry, Russel!"

The low, sweet voice was a little wistful. Muriel could not help feeling that, after all, her secret had not been such a glad surprise to her husband as she thought it would be.

With a great effort Arundel dispersed the strange thoughts that were twisting and tangling themselves together in his brain.

"You are glad, are you not?" he said, looking into the face lifted almost pleadingly into his, and noticing the soft light in the beautiful eyes; and he added quickly, "Then I am glad too, darling. Anything that brings you happiness seems good and glad to me."

She was satisfied; her lips curled in a smile as she said confidently, and with a little emphatic shake of her head,

"I knew you would be glad—and now you know all the news. Why, Russel," suddenly remembering something, "you have not spoken to Leo. You surely have not forgotten him?"

He must begin to be on his guard, to speak carefully, to manifest no surprise at anything, to act as if perfectly familiar with everything of which Muriel spoke.

Many times he had heard Russel speak of Leo, Muriel's dog; he knew what a pet the animal was with her.

"I have not forgotten him," he said, "but you will forgive me if I did not think of him—you have filled all my thoughts."

She gave him a swift, tender smile that was almost like a caress. "I will forgive you," she said merrily. "I am afraid I should be apt to forgive you anything you might do; it is such an easy thing to forgive people one does not exactly hate," glancing mischievously up at him.

He caught her in his arms, laying his head against her sunny hair to hide the look of pain which he felt was upon his face. "Do you really love me Muriel? me, the man I am? I cannot realize that you truly love me.'

"I truly love you," she answered solemnly, "love you—the man you are—as I have never loved any one in all my life before. There! you must not kiss me again until you have spoken to Leo—poor fellow, he has missed you so much. Where is the dog?—oh, there he is—come Leo!"

In a darkened corner of the room the dog was lying his head upon his paws, his eyes fixed upon Arundel; he had lain in that position ever since he entered the parlor, not once moving his eyes from Arundel's face; and the man started as he caught sight of the dumb beast, for, in the animal's eyes was an expression of almost human suspicion and distrust.

"Why don't you come to me, Leo?" exclaimed Muriel, in great surprise, for the dog, who had never before refused to come at her call did not move; "come right here, sir," stamping her small foot by way of emphasis.

Reluctantly the animal rose, walked slowly to her side, and stood there, and attracted by the dog's beauty, knowing, too, that Muriel expected him to notice Leo, Arundel stretched out his hand; but before he could lay it upon the animal's head, as he intended doing, Leo gave a low, savage growl and drew back, showing his white, cruel-looking teeth.

"What is the matter with him?" said Muriel, almost frightened by Leo's very unusual behavior. "I never heard him growl like that before, and at you; can it be that he has forgotten you, Russel? I thought dogs neves forgot."

"He does not evidently feel any great affection for me," said Arundel lightly; "however, I presume he will get accustomed to seeing me around. What are you thinking of, Muriel?" meeting her thoughtful, inquiring gaze.

She flushed a little.

"I am thinking," she said slowly, "that I had never noticed before how, when you smile, it brightens your whole face. I did not know you had such a beautiful smile, Russel."

That rarely beautiful smile of Arundel Anthon's had been always one of his characteristics; people had found it hard to resist that smile; it had won him many friends.

The first day of Arundel's new, false, bright, beautiful life was like a dream of happiness to him; he did not think of the future, of his own black treachery, or of the sin which Muriel must innocently and unconsciously commit by giving him the love of a wife when he was no more her husband than any stranger in the streets. He said to himself:

"I love her as man never loved woman before, and she loves me; even if Russel could come back to her, I know she would love me just the same. If there is a God, that God surely intended us for each other; in the sight of Heaven I take her to be my wife; before God I vow to love her, to be true to her, and surely that is marriage."

The strain upon his nerves had been so great, that now that the struggle was over, and he had yielded to the tempter, a dreamy languor fell upon him; he was mentally too weary to think, conscience seemed to have died, remorse was sleeping. He seemed to drop naturally into the life of love, and happiness, and luxury. Russel had never entertained his friends as easily and gracefully as he did; people said of him, Russel Anthon is a different man since he came home, so much less quiet and reserved, so much more companionable.

He talked over all his business affairs with Mr. Trowbridge, and won that gentleman's heart by asking his advice upon all important matters.

"You do not know, Anthon, how glad I am that you talk to me as you do now," Graham Trowbridge said, one evening when the two men were sitting alone together in the cheerful library of the Trowbridge house. "Before you went to Mexico, in fact ever since I first met you, I thought you were almost too reserved; it used to sometimes seem to me like a lack of confidence, and I dare say I was foolish, but it did hurt me. Come to me whenever you want any advice, I shall always be glad to give it to you."

"Thank you," said Arundel, warmly; "I am sure I don't know what I would do without you to comp to for advice; it is almost as hard to take care of money as it is to make it. Since I had the fever out there in Mexico, my head often troubles me, I cannot understand things as quickly as I did once, and without you I should be all at sea."

He spoke the truth, he could not have managed the fortune which had come so suddenly into his hands, had it not been for Mr. Trowbridge.

And Muriel was perfectly happy. She often wondered why it was, this great passion of love which she felt for her husband, had come so suddenly into her heart.

"How strange that I could once let him go away from me, when now I do not think I could live without him," she said to herself. "Did he change while he was away in Mexico, or did I? He used to seem so far above me, I was always afraid he could not quite understand me; he used to be so much better than I was, so much higher every way; now," and Muriel laughed merrily at the thought, "he seems to be just as earthy as I am, I am not afraid any more that he will not understand me. One thing I am certain of, either he has stooped down to me, or I have climbed up to him, for I know we are standing together upon the same level."

Seeing her so happy, Mr. Trowbridge laughed heartily when he thought of the evening when she had told him so seriously that she knew she did not love Russel Anthon as a true woman should love her husband.

"Do you remember the night you told me eagles did not mate with little brown thrushes?" he said, laughingly to her one day. "My little brown thrush seems to get along very well with her eagle."

"But, papa, he is such a tender, considerate eagle," she answered, gleefull. "He does not go soaring up to the mountain-tops where his little brown thrush cannot follow him, he stays by her, and makes himself her equal when he can, and shelters her with his stately wings.

Ah, that was just it. Russel Anthon could not make himself little, he was fashioned on too grand and noble a scale for that.

Though the eagle is the king of birds, his life is far more lonely and isolated than the tiny chirping sparrow upon the ground, for he flies by instinct to the mountain-tops, where all is silent and lonely. And those grand magnificent natures which God sometimes allows to come into the world that we may know what the angels are, may well be likened to eagles, for by instinct, also, they soar to the mountain tops, which are the highest points of earthly goodness and truth, and their lives are always lonely.

Early in July Mr. Trowbridge found it would be necessary for him to go abroad on business—of course he would take his wife with him—and when Muriel found her parents were going to Europe, a sudden desire seized her to go too.

"We can go just as well as not," she said to Arundel; "the change will do us both good: and instead of travelling around, Russel we will take a lovely little villa somewhere. Then, in the fall, if I do not feel like coming home, we will go to Paris, and afterward to Nice, where we will spend the winter."

So it was all arranged, and the second week in July the party sailed for Europe.

CHAPTER XIV.

It was past sunset, and the purple shadows of evening were beginning to fall darkly and heavily over the mountains. The western sky still glowed faintly, but the pale rose and violet tints were fast fading into ashen gray, and already a few stars had blossomed in the vast blue fields of heaven. In the woods it was dark and gloomy, the night birds were beginning to call to each other, and the trees bending and swaying as the night-wind passed over them, seemed to be moaning and sobbing bitterly.

Far up the mountains, miles above the plain, columns of smoke were rising toward the clear evening sky, and the red light of fires gleaming brightly through the trees would have told a wanderer in the vicinity that he was near an encampment; but if he had been a white man, then woe betide him if he venture nearer the red light, for the dark forms grouped about the brightly burning camp-fires were Indians.

There were fifty of them, perhaps, beside women and children; the former busily preparing supper, the latter running about gathering firewood, and grass for the horses, while the men were idle, some of them talking together gravely, others smoking in silence, staring solitary into the crackling fires.

A little apart from the rest, his face turned away from the fires, a blanket wrapped closely around him, a man was lying, as silent and motionless as a dead man. He paid no attention to what was going on around him; he had drawn the blanket half over his head and had covered his eyes with one hand. So he lay there until a young Indian boy approached bearing a rude wooden bowl in his hands, and as the boy, pausing beside him, addressed him, he raised himself slowly, wearily, as though the movement, slight as it was, caused him pain; as he turned his head the flickering firelight fell upon his face—it was the face of Russel Anthon.

But, oh, how changed it was; it did not seem as if it was possible for a human face to change as his had done, and yet sickness, privations, anxiety, and lack of freedom can work terrible changes in even a few short months. He looked by twenty years older than he had done that wild March day, when in his pleasant library he had read his brother's letter. The hair which fell long and disordered upon his hollow temples, was thin and gray; it matched in color the untrimmed beard which covered his mouth and chin. The colorless skin lay in loose, wrinkled folds upon his face, the features of which were pinched almost as if death had touched them, and the sunken eyes once so gentle and kindly in their expression, were filled with despair. Even the tall figure, so stately and upright once, was bent and stooping, and never again would Russel Anthon walk with his old firm, rapid tread, for in a vain effort to escape from his pitiless captors he had been shot in the right leg, and though it had not been necessary to amputate the limb, still it was injured to such an extent that he knew he must walk lame to his grave.

Taking the bowl from the young Indian's hand, he swallowed a few mouthfuls of the mixture it contained, then lay down again.

The wind was rising and the dreary moaning of the trees seemed to find an echo in his heart, for the misery of his eyes deepened into agony as, clasping his thin hands, together despairingly, he moaned, "Muriel! Muriel!"

Do you wonder that it seemed sometimes to this man that his God had either forgotten or forsaken him? that there were times when he cried out in fierce, intolerable anguish, "Surely, if God is just and pitiful, He would not deal with me as he has done?"

When the Indians reached the little hut from which Arundel Anthon had ridden away, they found not a corpse, as Arundel had supposed they would, but a man unconscious, motionless, but still alive. From the Mexican boy who had been Russel's guide, and who was with them, they learned that the white stranger was a rich man in his own country, and thinking he would be ransomed by his friends, they decided to save his life if it was possible. Strange as it may be, Russel survived the journey to the camp among the mountains; there they took care of him with a lack of all tenderness, giving him their simple medicines, leaving the rest to Nature—and he lived.

At first the brain was clouded, his powers of reasoning impaired; he could not understand how he came to be there; he would look wonderingly up into the dark Indian faces, and would beg his attendants to go and fetch Muriel to him. Then, as he slowly gained in strength, things began to grow clearer, the mists rolled away from his brain, the mind reasserted itself, and finally he understood it all—knew that he was a prisoner in the hands of the Indians, and that Muriel was far away from him.

But where was Arundel? He asked himself that over and over again, and Muriel, what of her? Did she think her absent husband was dead—was she mourning for him, hoping against hope that he would come back to her? Muriel and Arundel, they were in his thoughts constantly, those two; where were they, what were they doing?

Lying there wrapped in his blanket, unable to rise from weakness, while the slow days of his convalescence dragged by, it seemed sometimes as if the cruel suspense of not knowing what had become of his loved ones would madden him. Oh, to be home again, out of the sight of the dark Indian faces, away from the sound of the wind in the trees; to feel Muriel's arms around him, her kisses on his lips. His very heart was sick and faint with longing, and his own weakness was like a chain of iron upon him; binding him hand and foot; and this his captors knew just as he did. They smiled grimly when one day one of them suggested that their prisoner be more closely watched: they knew he had no strength as yet to escape from them.

He had nearly decided with the chiefs as to the amount of his ransom, was quite hopeful, when rumors came to the camp that there were soldiers on their track, and thinking that Russel might betray the whereabouts of their camping grounds, the Indians decided not to let him go yet; so they took him with them when he moved further up in the mountains to an old camp, and it was not long after their arrival there that he had made that desperate effort to escape, and had been wounded and recaptured.

As he lay there now while the Indians were smoking and eating around the fires, and the night shadows deepened and darkened, he was planning an escape, for to escape he had determined. Since that ineffectual attempt to get away from his hated captors he had been closely watched, but he had a plan now by which he thought eventually elude them.

His wounded limb still pained and troubled him, but not nearly so much as he gave them to understand. They thought he could not bear his weight upon it, could not use it at all, and that was what he wished them to think. In a few days he knew they were to leave the camp, to move toward the coast, and he hoped during the journey, to be able to get away from them; of course, if he was unable to put his foot to the ground, they would not guard him so closely. Once free, he would gain the coast, cross the gulf into California, then home and Muriel.

Home and Muriel; those two words seemed to inspire him with hope; they set his pulses beating quicker, and brought a flush upon his ashen face, a light into his sunken eyes. He could not sleep that night for thinking: all night long he lay with wide-open eyes, gazing up at the stars shining so peacefully in the deep blue sky above him, listening to the sighing and sobbing of the night-wind in the trees while Muriel's face came and went before him, her lovely eyes looking into his. How would he first see her? Would he go softly up the stairs into her pretty boudoir, and find her lying on the little velvet couch asleep, perhaps dreaming of him, her long lashes wet with tears? And she would awake, and seeing him, would nestle in his arms with a low, glad cry; he would fold her to his heart, and the passionate longing, the unrest, the fever, would all be gone. Or would he find her in the pleasant library, standing lonely in one of the lace-draped windows, her little hands clasped loosely together, her beautiful eyes sorrowful and weary with watching, misty with unshed tears? He would kiss them away, those tears; he would take the little hands in his own, draw the lovely, tired head upon his breast, and whisper tenderly that never again should they be separated.

So all that night hope grew stronger in Russel Anthon's breast, and when the day dawned there was a look almost eager in his eyes, an expression of earnest hopefulness upon his thin, white face.

A few days after the Indians left the camp and moved toward the coast, committing robberies and murders as they went; and one dark night Russel, who had carefully and cautiously bided his time, slipped away unobserved and made his escape.

It was a long and terrible tramp down to the nearest town on the coast, especially to a man in as physically weak a condition as was Russel Anthon. His wounded limb troubled him, he suffered from hunger and thirst, pain and weariness, yet the brave heart did not falter, and it was like heaven to be free again and to know he was on the way to Muriel.

Once the thought came to him, bringing a sharp pain with it. Would his young wife love him any the less because he went back to her a prematurely aged man, lame and bent, his hair gray, his face bearing the indelible marks of pain and care? How strangely they would look together, she so young and lovely, he old before his time, broken down by sickness and terrible experiences. Would strangers wonder how it came about that she had married him? Would they say she was too fair and young for him? And then the strong, patient heart grew faint as he thought:

"Perhaps she is too young for me; she might have been happier, perhaps, with a man less grave, not so old as I am. It was a mistake for me to marry her; and yet, Muriel, my darling, no man in all the world could love you better than I do; I know that if I could buy your happiness only at the cost of my own life, I would, because of my love for you, die so willingly."

Ah, God pity him! he had yet to learn that life holds things far more terrible than death; that living sometimes is so much harder than dying. We are all apt to think that the voluntary giving up of life is the greatest sacrifice, of which a human being can be capable, and in many instances it is, but not always; there are times and times when to live is a sacrifice greater by far than to die would be.

One morning it was just after sunrise, and he was toiling slowly and painfully on his way to Guaymas, when he came up with a stranger travelling also in the same direction, like him weary and footsore. He was a remarkably fine-looking man—a gentleman born, that was evident; there was an air of dignity and grace about the tall figure, though it was clad in rough, well-worn clothes, and the face, though it bore traces of recent illness, and was stamped with the unmistakable marks of care and pain, was a handsome, high-bred one, with regular features, and earnest, thoughtful eyes.

So these two men, who had never seen each other before, who did not know one another's names, went along together, strangers in a strange land; both were grave and silent, busy with their own thoughts, yet each one was in his heart thankful for the companionship of the other. The stranger seemed to be as quiet and reserved by nature as was Russel Anthon; his thoughts seemed to be equally absorbing, and in his eyes was the same wistful, longing expression which made Russel's eyes such sad ones. All day they travelled together, speaking but little of their own lives, but when they camped for the night, and having made a fire lay down near it, the darkness and loneliness of the moonless night settling over them, both men grew more communicative, and spoke freely of themselves, telling each other of their lives, and how it was they chanced to be so far away from home and friends.

In a few hours an intimacy sprang up between these two men so strangely thrown together, and when at daybreak they resumed their journey, they seemed and felt more like two old friends than strangers who, forty-eight hours previously, had not known of each other's existence.

The next night, lying beside the camp-fire, which threw its flickering light upon his face, the stranger, who called himself Henry Glenmore, told Russel Anthon in a voice which, though calm and quiet, had in it an undertone of great bitterness, that which filled Russel's heart with deepest pity.

He was dying—that tall, grave, stately man—dying of one of those terrible internal organic diseases which, when they once seize hold upon a man, slowly and surely sap his life. He knew it, had known it for some time past, and now fully aware that death was rapidly approaching, had only one hope, one wish, one prayer—that he might live long enough to go back to his little motherless four-year-old boy, who was living with a nurse up in New Hampshire, that he might die with his child's soft arms around his neck, the innocent baby lips pressed close to his; and the bitterness in the low voice deepened into passionate agony as he said, brokenly:

"I have no one in all the world but him, my baby-boy, my little Roy; his mother, the woman who loved me so dearly, for the sake of whose love I gave up all—all—died at his birth. It was for the child that I came out here to dig for gold—that I might have money to give him—her baby—every luxury, every comfort. For the child I have worked and toiled early and late"—laughing a low, bitter laugh—"worning like a day-laborer, until my hands were blistered and hard. Even when I knew this fatal disease had grasped me, and they told me to go back, that I must not work, I only worked the harder, for I knew I must die and leave him; and what would he do—that little child—penniless as well as fatherless, motherless, friendless? So for a year now I have been fighting death and working—well, I have been more than successful; I am a rich man now, and a dying one: death is gaining on me, I cannot fight it off much longer—and my boy will be alone."

Before the sound of the low, agonized voice had died, Russel Anthon had taken one of Henry Glenmore's hands in his own.

"Give me your boy," he said, simply, "I will take care of him."

Almost blankly the other looked at him.

"You take my boy?" he said slowly. "You are a stranger—you do not know who I am, yet you offer to take my child?"

"I know that you are a suffering man," Russel Anthon answered; "I know how terrible it must be to feel oneself slipping away from life, knowing that a frail, dearly loved one must be left alone—and that is enough to know. I say again, give me your child."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Mr. Joseph Morgan sold a herd of four thousand cattle for one hundred thousand dollars recently, although he started on a ranch in Kansas twelve years ago on borrowed capital.

SOME TABLE DI...

CUSTARD WITHOUT MILK.—...pint of water two heaping ... boil well, and when cold, ... piece of butter half the size of ... cup of sugar, salt to taste, and ... lemon or vanilla.

HICKORY-NUT MACAROONS.—...ing as for cake; stir in enough ... hickory-nut meats; with ... spice to taste, to make convenient ... Flour the hands and form the ... little balls. Place on buttered ... lowing room to spread, and bake ... oven.

CRUME PUDDING.—One pint of ... crumbs, one quart of sweet rich ... cup of sugar, the yolks of four ... with a little lemon to flavor, and ... spoons of butter. Bake until ... watery; spread over this a layer ... whip the whites of the eggs to a ... add one cup of sugar and the juice ... on; pour this frosting over the ... turn to the oven until a light brown ... eaten cold, with cream and sugar.

BOILED SALMON.—The middle ... mon is the best. Sew up neatly in ... quito-net bag, and boil a quarter ... hour to the pound in hot, salted ... When done, unwrap with care, ... on a hot dish, taking care not to ... Have ready a large cupful of drawn ... very rich, in which has been stirred ... spoonful of minced parsley and the ... a lemon. Pour half upon the salmon, ... serve the rest in a boat. Garnish ... parsley and sliced eggs.

NEW WAY TO COOK CHICKEN.—... chicken up, put it in a pan and cover ... with water; let it stew as usual, ... done make a thickening of cream, ... adding a piece of butter, and pepper ... salt. Have made and bake a paste ... cakes, made as for pie-crust, but ... and cut in small squares. This is better than chicken pie and more easily ... make. The crusts should be laid ... and the chicken gravy poured over ... both are hot.

MOCK LEMON PIE.—One cup of ... heaping tablespoonful of flour, the ... two eggs (save the whites for the ... pie), one teaspoonful of extract of ... two-thirds of a cup of stewed ... mix the sugar, flour, eggs and extract ... gether; then pour on the water, ... pie-plant; bake with one crust; ... beat the whites to a stiff froth and ... it over the pie, setting it back in ... for four minutes.

AN OLD DISH.—A dish equal to ... steak and cheap enough for any man ... pared from the shank of a beef with ... meat on it. Have the bone well ... wash carefully to remove bits of bone ... with cold water; watch when the ... begins and take off the scum that ... Stew five or six hours till the meat is ... dissolved, break the meat small with ... —far better than chopping—put in ... bread pan, boil down the gravy till ... ing it will turn to a stiff jelly. When ... is done, gelatine is quite superfluous ... salt, and, if liked, other seasoning, ... pour it hot upon the meat: stir ... and set aside over night, when it will ... into handsome mottled slices for tea ... or supper.

OYSTER OMELET.—Twelve ... large, double the number if small; ... one cup of milk, one tablespoonful ... chopped parsley, salt and pepper; ... oysters very fine; beat the yolks and ... of the eggs separately, as for nice ... whites until they stand in a heap; ... three tablespoonsful of butter in a ... and heat while you are mixing the ... Stir the milk in a deep dish, with salt ... and seasoning. Next add the ... oysters, heating them well as you ... ually. When thoroughly mixed ... melted butter, and finally whip ... whites as lightly as possible. Have ... ter in the pan very hot, and pour ... mixture. Do not stir it, but when ... gins to stiffen, slip a broad-bladed ... around the sides and cautiously ... omelet, that the butter may reach ... part. As soon as the centre is firm ... and the bottom brown, turn out ... dish. Lay the dark bottom upward ... the frying-pan, which must be ... side down dexterously. This ... brown side of the omelet uppermost ... is a delicious breakfast or supper ...

Stern Law against Smoki...

The progress of smoking in Sou... tralia has been so great within ... that it has been thought advisable ... tempt to check its growth among ... A measure has therefore been ... into the House of Assembly to ... that any person under the age of ... who shall smoke any pipe, cigar or ... shall be guilty of an offence, and on ... tion, shall be liable to a penalty of ... than 5s. nor more than £5; and in ... of payment, may be imprisoned ... time not exceeding one month. ... any person shall be charged, the ... proving the age shall in all cases lie on ... son so charged. One half of every ... imposed is to be paid to the informer ... remainder to the treasurer for the ... uses of the province.

Extraordinary Death of a Tra...

An extraordinary fatality has ... British Guiana, where an inexperi... eller, having, as is the custom in ... countries, taken a refreshing draught ... the stem of one of the many water ... plants which thrive in the forests, ... his cold refreshment by a "nip" of ... Shortly afterward he died in ex... agony, and a post-mortem ... showed that his internal organs were ... ally sealed up with India rubber. He ... imbibed the sap of the Mimusops ... the juice of which coagulates and ... alchol and rum had had its usual ... the poor man's stomach, with ... rily fatal results.

The German Goernment has rej... Lay torpedo. The Torpedo Com... decided that the nets employed by ... lish navy render Lay and Whit... pedoes harmless, but prove an ob... the Berdan torpedoes, which are ... manufactured in Constantinople.

Seven Epigrams.

no heroine without a hero; n away, her courage drops to zero oubtless inconsistencies man's acts disclose;
s the hand that would caress
isses gives for blows.

t from pity is not exempt arriage oft turns to contempt.
e many widows who've found first experiment cursed;
ied a second husband
enge themselves on their first.

d of life in society;
block I sought for distraction;
I confess it, satiety, mehow found not—satisfaction.

wife has a secret to tell, sure as fate her husband possesses her hate.

ct of their marriage is queer some men—quite turning the head—all women lovely appear ting the one they have wed.
From the French of Mme. Ratazzi.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

Weeons Matters Entertainingly Arranged for Short Sittings.

ilge, England, has nineteen New ndergraduates.

ish in the British army are slightly n one-twelfth of the entire forces.

oyal Marines, out of uniform, are to aid the Dublin police. They ted because the corps has not ren Ireland for years.

ent judges estimate that the erman war cost France two provillion of lives, and $3 000,000,000.
$2,000,000,000 to the debt.

fred Blunt, Arabi's friend, is a ing man of 44. His wife is Byron's ughter. She is an original char-
Mr. Blunt is a Sussex Squire and a tholic.

. Sixe now lives in Albany with nd is a helpless sufferer from neu-d dyspepsia. It is denied that his trength is impaired, or that he is from softening of the brain.

Street, architect on the new Law
London, died before they were com-

In the address presented to the the workmen this was feelingly to. Seats were allotted to 450 at the opening.

rear is rather larger than France.
almost virgin forest runs around
d. The population is about four and the soil will easily support illions. India rubber is a princi-
. The mineral wealth is enor-cribed project for the submarine etween Italy and Sicily has been and will soon be submitted for ent approbation. The length of will be about eight and a half

The expense is calculated at $14,- racy in musical in England will be a ccess. Already something like has been subscribed to perpetuate of the great High Churchman; and ittle doubt that the £50,000 for Lisdon asks will be placed in s.

cent fete day at Monaco, a treexplosion scared every one in the rooms. It seems to have been by a dynamite bomb, with the ob-grabbing up the gold on the tables the scare. The croupiers, however, to the gudgeon.

recent speech Archdeacon Denison, of the late speaker of the House of s, said that Oxford had trampled Dominus illuminatio mea, under
. When he was a fellow of Oriel, years ago, sixteen clergymen and men held the fellowship; now fellowship is held by a clergy precents international ed to produce nothing but understandings, and mutual Every amateur match be-glish and American athletes has to some unpleasantness. When vard four came here in 1879 they cent of the dread of being pois-

Texas stock men to was derided at first, making considerable stock men announced would not employ any-cowhide as a body weapon. It was that they could soon be compelled but the Stock Journal
they had no difficulty in getting employees, and that, as soon as is put on trial on adjoining ranches, will become its strongest advo-

source of unhappiness to Blanc, the French statesman and agi-who died the other day, was his dwarf-
The wife of an English church ry once almost drove him to a state cial frenzy by asking him, when detained in her country house by whether he would mind sleeping in a bed. Another day, at Brighton, he entered supremely wretched because s taken at the Pavilion for Gen. Tom . An old lady said to him, "You g! I really must kiss you." He took et statuette from the Corsican side of the Rev. H. O. Pratt was formerly a law-th an extensive practice in Ohio, a r political orator, and for two terms ber of Congress. He told a Metho-ministers' convention the other day that just before his conversion he was not in sympathy with the teachings of the and tried hard to make himself a mel skeptic. Nothing occurred in his ence while in Congress to direct his in particular to religion, and he was side of a church during a whole winter shington; but that was the very time the subject of his personal salvation into his mind, and he could not drive

ay. He would often leave his seat in ouse of Representatives, he said, and the street to gain relief, but all to rpose. On his return home he learned there had been considerable religious est in town, and that his wife and er Christian woman had unitedly ed daily for several weeks for his con-on. His experience in Washington no longer a mystery to him, and from moment he believed in the efficacy of er. He abandoned law, turned his back his political prospects, and entered inistry.

Another Great Lake in Africa.

The existence of another equatorical lake in Central Africa, far to the west of Albert Nyanza, rumors of which have reached Europe from time to time since Sir Samuel Baker's first journey, is again reported, this time in a much more definite form. Mr. F. Lupton, Govereor of the Egyptian province of Bahr el Ghazal, writes to us from his station, Dehm Siber, on the 27th of July, to the effect that Rafai Aga, an employee under his command, on his return from an expedition toward the Uelle, told him that he and some of the members of the expedition had seen a great lake in the country of the Barboa, a wonderful copper-colored tribe clothed with a peculiar grass-cloth (of which Mr. Lupton sends a specimen in his letter.) Mr. Lupton gathered that the position of the lake was in about 3 degrees 40 minutes north latitude, and 23 degrees east longitude, and that it was quite as large as Victoria Nyanza. When the weather permits the Barboas cross the lake in large open boats made out of a single tree, the voyage taking three days, and they obtain from the people living on the western side (their own country being east of the lake) articles of European manufacture, such as blue beads and brass wire. Mr. Lupton adds Rafai Aga's own account of the route to the lake: Started from Dehm Bekeer, marched six days southwest to Zeriba el Douleb, then four days south-southwest to Bengler; four days southwest to Zeriba Warendema; six days southwest by west to the Bahr el Makwar, which he crossed after visiting several very large islands inhabited by a people who call themselves Basango. The Makwar is called by the Arabs Bahr el Warshal, and Uelle, but is a much larger stream; both flow in a west-southwest direction. After crossing the Makwar Rafai marched ten days south-southwest and reached the residence of the "Sultan" of Barboa, by whom he was well received; the lake is situated four days' march to the southwest of the Sultan's residence. Mr. Lupton concludes by saying, "I feel I should not be doing right in keeping dark this information, which, when looked into by competent persons, may throw some light on the famous Congo and Uelle rivers. I believe that the Uelle flows into the lake discovered by Rafai Aga and that the stream which is said to flow out of the lake probably joins the Congo." Mr. Lupton further informs us that he is engaged in preparing a map of this province and that he was about to start in a few days on a journey to a country called Umbungu, some fifteen days' march to the west of Dehm Siber.—London Times.

O'Donovan Rossa's Opinion.

O'Donovan Rossa, speaking of the Great German Remedy to a friend, said: "Mrs. Rossa has been cured of a very severe attack of neuralgia by St Jacobs Oil, as she will gladly tell you, if you call at my residence, 879 Bushwick ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.'—New York Graphic.

Dr. Corvisart, an eminent physician in Paris, is dead. It is stated that he never recovered from the shock caused by the death of the Prince Imperial in Zululand.

Many sink into an early grave by not giving immediate attention to a slight cough which could be stopped in time by the use of a twenty-five cent bottle of Dr. Wistar's Pulmonic Syrup.

Sir Arthur Gordon has refused the Governorship of Jamaica.

No one whose blood is impure can feel well. There is a weary, languid feeling, and often a sense of discouragement and despondency. Persons having this feeling of lassitude and depression, should take Ayer's Sarsaparilla to purify and vitalize the blood.

The Khedive's decree degrading Arabi and other rebel Pashas has been published.

The Very Latest News.

"Have you heard the latest news?" said one city swell to another. "No, do tell me what it is." "Well, I have at last got rid of my corns by one trial of Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor, and I know yours were even worse than mine were, I couldn't pass without telling you to get a bottle at your druggists. I'll guarantee it will fix 'em completely." It is sure, prompt and painless, taking the corns out at once. Sold every where. Beware of substitutes and imitations.

A young woman teaching in a public school in Bloomington, Ill., is in trouble because she stripped off a boy's shirt and whipped his bare back with a rawhide.

Come all who wish white Teeth of pearl,
To set off lips of cherry;
A fragrant Breath for the boy and girl
Who purchases "TEABERRY."

M. De Lesseps, at a banquet given by contractors on public works, announced that the scheme for the creation of an inland sea in Africa would be resumed by private enterprise.

Deacon Smith buys Carboline, the deodorized petroleum hair renewer and restorer, and since its improvement, recommends it to all his friends as the perfection of all hair preparations. This shows that the Deacon is a wise man and knows what is what.

There is a renewal of the demonstrations which followed the hanging of Overdank. It was necessary to surround the Austrian consulate in Turin with troops to protect it from the mob which gathered, crying "Down with Austria!"

VEGETINE.—For eradicating all impurities of the blood from the system, it has no equal. It has never failed to effect a cure, giving tone and strength to the system debilitated by diseases.

Great consternation is caused in the Bernese Oberland by the suspension of the Interlachen Comptoir Escompte. The Manager, who is a member of the Cantonal Government, has absconded.

IT'S EVERY ONE'S DUTY—To improve the opportunities presented for health, cheerfulness, and comfort. See to it, that ZOPESA is used in your family for Dyspepsia and Biliousness. It is guaranteed to remove them.

The man who travels under an alias may boast that he has made a name for himself.

Testimonial from Mr. W. S. Wisner, of J. O. Wisner & Son, Manufacturers of Agricultural Implements:—

Brantford, Ont., July 28th, 1882.

J. N. Sutherland, Esq.: Dear Sir—I take pleasure in bearing testimony to the efficacy of your Rheumatine. Last spring I was completely disabled with Rheumatism, and tried various remedies, baths, etc., and finally heard of your cure. I purchased and used three bottles of it and it effected a complete cure, for I have not had a return of the disease since.

Yours truly, W. S. WISNER.

A Fatal Mistake.

would be not to take Dr. R. V. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" if you are bilious, suffering from impure blood, or fearing consumption (scrofulous disease of the lungs). Sold by all druggists.

It is reported from St. Petersburg that much alarm is felt in consequence of recent developments showing the rapid spread of Nihilism in the Russian army.

Functional derangement of the female system is quickly cured by the use of Dr. R. V. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription.' It removes pain and restores health and strength. By all druggists.

The British ship "Pioneer" has bombarded and burned a vellage on the west coast of Africa in consequence of the natives having attacked the British factory and killed the agent and several workmen.

Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets" are sugar coated and inclosed in glass bottles, their virtues being thereby preserved unimpaired for any length of time, in any climate, so that they are always fresh and reliable. No cheap wooden or pasteboard boxes. By druggists.

Count Andrassy had a long interview with the Emperor of Austria which is supposed to imply that he will shortly be again called to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

An Admonition.

To neglect a cough or cold, is but to invite consumption, that destroyer of the human race. Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam will cure the cough and allay all irritation of the bronchial tubes and lungs, and effectually remedy all pulmonary complaints, such as Asthma, Bronchitis, Whooping Cough, &c. 17.

"A. P." 106

THE GREAT GERMAN REMEDY FOR PAIN.
CURES
Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica,
Lumbago, Backache, Headache, Toothache,
Sore Throat, Swellings, Sprains, Bruises,
Burns, Scalds, Frost Bites,
AND ALL OTHER BODILY PAINS AND ACHES.
Sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhere. Fifty Cents a bottle.
Directions in 11 Languages.
THE CHARLES A. VOGELER CO.
(Successors to A. VOGELER & CO.) Baltimore, Md., U. S. A.

PROFESSIONAL.

MR. FORSTER, ARTIST, HAS RETURNED from Europe and opened a Studio, 81 King-st. East. Portraits in oil life size.

$5 PER DAY can be made by agents, male or female. C. W. DENNIS, Toronto.

RUBBER STAMPS.—ADDRESS R. H. COX 4 King St. East, Toronto. Agents wanted

WATCHES repaired. Trade work a specialty. A. BALLARBY, 8 King St. E., Toronto

CHRIS. SHEPPARD, Manufr of Masonic and other Society Jewels, 154 King E., Toronto

PRICE TICKETS, SHOW CARDS, WINDOW SHADES. Newest designs. Send for price list. F. WILLIAMS, 4 King E., Toronto.

SHIPWRIGHTS.—WANTED FORTY—AT the Owen Sound dry dock. Steady employment until spring. Wages two dollars.

ILLUSTRATED RELIGIOUS WEEKLY story paper—containing Spurgeon's and Talmage's sermons—$1.50 per year; specimens free. Box 383, Port Hope.

DOBYN'S SURE CURE IS THE BEST remedy known for Catarrh. One dollar for single box, or three boxes for $2. C. POMEROY & Co., 85 King-st, West, Toronto.

CANADIAN MUTUAL AID ASSOCIATION Co-operative Life Assurance. Provide for families in case of death. W. PEMBERTON PAGE, Sec., 87 King St. West, Toronto. Agents wanted.

ONTARIO VETERINARY COLLEGE, TORONTO. Students can enter from October until January. PROF. SMITH, V. S. Edin. Principal. Fees, fifty dollars.

TAGS. Patent cyclet, smooth surface, heavy and very tough. Send for new price list. J. C. WOODLAND & CO., Printers, Toronto.

CARDS Christmas, New Year, Birthday and other Cards, at H. J. MATTHEWS & BROS. art depot, Toronto

WANTED PARTIES OWNING A PORTABLE Saw Mill to tender for sawing the lumber off 200 acres of bush land. For particulars address, AUTHORS & COX, Manufacturers of Artificial Limbs, 91 Church street, Toronto.

SOMETHING NEW.—PATENT CIGAR, made of good stock each cigar containing its own holder. Samples will be sent for seventy-five cents per box. G. B. HUNT, 91 Church-st. Toronto.

THE ONTARIO WIRE WORKS IS THE place to get Wire Cloth for Fanning Mills, etc. Window Guards and every description of wire work. PARTRIDGE & SABISTON, 116 Bay Street, Toronto.

THOSE WISHING TO DISPOSE OF OR purchase a business of any description in the city or elsewhere should call or send particulars to C. J. PALIN, 53 and 55 King-street East. Business Agent and Valuer.

FOR SALE—FARM OF 117 ACRES IN Oro, being parts of lots 22 in 13th and 14th concessions—fronts on Carthew's Bay, Lake Simcoe, and is beautifully situated; 80 acres cleared, balance in good hardwood; fine large two-story frame house 46 x 40, and another 20 x 30, kitchen attached; barn 50 x 30; terms easy. CROOKS, KINGSMILL, & CATTANACH, Toronto.

FARM FOR SALE—BEING LOT 106 Gwillimbury, adjoining town of Holland Landing 212 acres, Northern R. R. Station situated on corner of this Lot, the land is high rolling clay loam Brick house frame Bank Barn. J. W. G WHITNEY, Estate Agent-25 Toronto-st. Toronto.

THE BELL TELEPHONE CO. OF CANADA having purchased patents of Telephones which can be rented at reduced rates for private line purposes, parties desiring to obtain same will be furnished on application to the Company at its Head Office, Montreal, or to agents, or Manager of Ontario Department Bell Telephone Co., Hamilton.

AGENTS WANTED TO SELL DR. RYERSON'S "The Story of My Life; edited by Rev. John Potts, D.D., Rev. S. S. Nelles, LL.D., and J. Geo. Hodgins, Esq., LL.D., Principal Editor, with estimates of character, etc., by Dr. Ormiston, Dean Grasett, Bishop of Manchester, Dr. Dewart, Dr. Withrow, etc.; prospectuses now ready. Also, for the best Family Bible published. Send for circulars to WILLIAM BRIGGS, Publisher, 78 and 80 King street east, Toronto.

E. E. KNOTT'S Speculators' Mart, 48 Adelaide St. East, Toronto. All kinds of real estate sold or exchanged on commission. Money loaned on all kinds of real estate at lowest rates of interest. Applications for money from farmers a specialty. Rents collected and estates managed in town or country. N.B.—Best of references on application.

Davy & Clark, Druggists, Renfrew, date of June 3rd, write," Burdock Blood Bitters though comparatively a new preparation, has taken the lead in this locality as a blood purifier, our sales of it being equal to that of all other medicines used for the purpose during the last year." 18.

Narrow-chested and soft-armed students at Harvard are coming to the front in the Hemenway gymnasium. They are contestants for the prizes offered to the men achieving the best general development of muscle and form during the year.

What is beautiful? Why, Carboline, a deodorized extract of petroleum, as now improved and perfected. Clear as spring water, delightfully perfumed and will not soil the finest linen fabric—a perfect toilet preparation and absolutely makes the hair grow on bald heads.

Vegetine.

Was Laid up Six Months with Rheumatism.

VEGETINE CURED ME.

MONTREAL, P. Q., Oct. 23, 1879.

MR. H. R. STEVENS:

Dear Sir—I have been a great sufferer from Rheumatism, and was very much run down with general debility, and had been unable to work for six months or more, but after using two bottles of VEGETINE, I was able to go to work again. I have not been troubled with Rheumatism since, and think there is nothing equal to VEGETINE.

Yours truly,
W. F. MYERS,
Employed by G. T. R. R.

A Sovereign Remedy for Rheumatism.

MONTREAL, P. Q. Oct. 17, 1879.

MR. H. R. STEVENS:—

Dear Sir,—I most cheerfully add my testimonial to the great number you are daily receiving in favor of your Vegetine I have been troubled with rheumatism for several years; also with blotches and pimples breaking out upon my neck.

A friend reccommended VEGETINE and, after using several bottles, I have had no more trouble with rheumatism, and the blotches on my face and neck have disappeared. I have recommended VEGETINE to some of my friends who were troubled with rheumatism, and they have used it with good success, and I will recommend it to all who are troubled in the same way.

Yours truly, VICTOR PIGEON, Passenger Conductor Grand Trunk Railroad.

Always Gives Satisfaction.

MEDICAL HALL, HALIFAX, N. S. July 1, 1880.

H. R. STEVENS, ESQ:—

Dear Sir,—I sell more Vegetine than any other blood purifier. It always gives satisfaction.

Yours respectfully,
AVERY F. BUCKLEY,
Chemist and Druggist.

Vegetine is Sold by All Druggists.

MUSIC. THREE SONGS—The latest and best things out. Immensely popular. I full size sheet music form for FIVE CENTS per copy or the three for ten cents. S. FRANK WILSON, "TRUTH" Office, 33 & 35 Adelaide St. West, Toronto.

$6.25 FOR 39 CTS.

Any person sending me 39 cents and the addresses of 10 acquaintances will receive by return mail goods (not recipes) that net $6.25. This is an honest offer to introduce staple goods. If you want a fortune, act now. J. D. HENRY. P. O. Box 127, Buffalo, N.Y.

Burdock BLOOD BITTERS

WHY do a great many ladies still pay from two to four dollars per year for high priced American fashion papers when they can get the Ladies' Journal one year for fifty cents? The Ladies' Journal is a 16 page monthly fashion paper, containing the sum and substance of all the latest American high priced fashion magazines. Large full page illustrations of all the newest styles, useful household hints, short stories, poetry, miscellaneous selections, and lots of other interesting matter, also one full sized piece of sheet music in each number, always the latest and most popular thing out. To every person who sends me fifty cents for one years' subscription I'll mail postpaid at once an Elegant Silver Plated Butter Knife or Pickle Fork with ivory handle, ordinarily retailed at one dollar. Don't forget to tell your friends that the Ladies' Journal contains besides the fashion illustrations, &c., at least three to five dollars' worth of new music in the course of the year, and fifty cents will pay for one year's subscription and one dollar will pay for three years, and an elegant silver-plated butter-knife with ivory handle with either one or three years' subscription. S. FRANK WILSON, 33 & 35 Adelaide-St., West, Toronto.

Mack's Magnetic Medicine.

Positively cures Nervousness in all its stages, Weak Memory, Loss of Brain Power, Night Sweats, Barrenness, Weakness and General Loss of Power. It repairs Nervous Waste, rejuvenates the Jaded Intellect, strengthens the Enfeebled Brain and restores surprising tone and vigor to the Exhausted Generative Organs in either sex. With each order for Twelve packages, accompanied with five dollars, we will send our written Guarantee to refund the money if the treatment does not effect a cure. It is the Cheapest and Best Medicine in the market. Pamphlet sent free by mail to any address.

Mack's Magnetic Medicine is sold by druggists at 50 cents per box, or 6 boxes for $2.50, or will be mailed free of postage, on receipt of money, by addressing Mack's Magnetic Medicine Co., Windsor, Ont., Canada. Sold by all druggists in Canada.

Old and young should use "TEABERRY, Then your laugh may be quite merry Fragrant Breath shall pass your lips, And your Teeth shall pearls eclipse.

BRACE UP—Your system for work. ZOPESA, the new Dyspepsia and Liver Remedy, tends strictly to business in correcting the Stomach, Liver, and Kidneys. Sample bottles 10 cents; large bottles 75 cents.

$5.000.000 WORTH OF FARMING and other property in Ontario for sale by the CANADA WEST LAND AGENCY COMPANY, 14 Adelaide-st East, Toronto. Send for list

DYSPEPSIA!

And the severer forms of INDIGESTION. A small pamphlet on the above most distressing maladies and their complete cures, post free, 5 cents in stamps. By R. KING, Esq., Staff Surgeon, Royal Navy, England.

Apply to RICHARD KING, Box 346, Windsor, Ont.

"A Merciful Man is Merciful to his Beast.

AGENTS HORSE BOOK.

Send 15 cents TO TRUTH OFFICE, Toronto, for a sample copy of a new HORSE BOOK It treats all diseases of the horse and has a large number of receipts and is pronounced the best book ever printed for the price. Profusely illustrated and sells, at sight. Agents claim it to be the best selling book they ever canvassed with. 9 copies for one dollar or to agents 85 cents per dozen. Try it.

Agents Wanted

Valuable New Grape Vines By Mail.

The undersigned will send by mail to any part of Ontario or Quebec, and guarantee them to come in good order, good, strong, well rooted Vines of the following new and valuable varieties of Grapes at the annexed prices:

Brighton, Burnett, Lady, Moor's Early or Worden, 50 cts each, or 5 for $2.

Belinda, Duchess, Jefferson, Pocklington, Prentis, or Vergenes, $1,00 each, 6 for $5.

Also, a large assortment of other varieties of GRAPES, GOOSEBERRIES, CURRANTS, RASPBERRIES, BLACKBERRIES, STRAWBERRIES, ETC., cheap by mail or express.

Also, Fruit & Ornamental Trees.

Send for catalogue. Address
A. M. SMITH,
Box 571, St. Catharines, Ont.

P. S.—The proprietor of any paper sending a special notice of this advertisement in his paper to the undersigned will receive $1 worth of Vines. A. M. SMITH.

THE GREAT CURE FOR RHEUMATISM

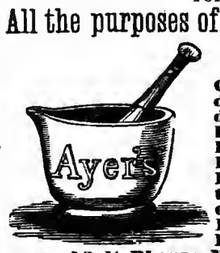
And all complaints of a Rheumatic nature,

RHEUMATINE is not a sovereign remedy for "all the ills that flesh is heir to," but for NEURALGIA, SCIATICA, RHEUMATISM, and complaints of Rheumatic nature,

IT IS A SURE CURE.



Sold by all druggists. The Rheumatine Manufacturing Co., St. Catherines, Ont, Messrs. Northrop & Lyman, Wholesale Agts., Toronto

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

FOR

All the purposes of a Family Physic,

CURING

Costiveness, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Dysentery, Foul Stomach and Breath, Headache, Erysipelas, Piles, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Tetter, Tumors and Salt Rheum, Worms, Gout, Neuralgia, as a Dinner Pill, and Purifying the Blood, are the most congenial purgative yet perfected. Their effects abundantly show how much they excel all other Pills. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. They purge out the foul humors of the blood; they stimulate the sluggish or disorded organs into action; and they impart health and tone to the whole being. They cure not only the every day complaints of every body, but formidable and dangerous diseases. Most skilful physicians, most eminent clergymen, and our best citizens send certificates of cures performed, and of great benefits derived from these Pills. They are the safest and best physic for children, because mild as well as effectual. Being sugar coated, they are easy to take; and being purely vegetable they are entirely harmless.

PREPARED BY

Dr. J. C. Ayer & CO.,

LOWELL, MASS.,

PRACTICAL AND ANALYTICAL CHEMISTS.

Sold by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine

The Standard.

MARKDALE, JAN. 4TH, 1883.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH DEDICATION IN MARKDALE.

This church is built of brick, and plainly finished and beautifully situated, being in an elevated position, fronting on George street. It is intended for a school and lecture room, (hence the plain finish,) but will be used as a church in the mean time.

On Sabbath, 31st Dec., according to announcement by advertisement and otherwise, the dedication services were held. Rev. Dr. Gregg, of Knox College, Toronto, preached in the morning to a large and appreciative audience, taking for his text the 5th chapter of Revelations and 6th verse. The Dr. is quite an aged gentleman, but retains the mental vigor of less advanced years; he has a clear voice and a good delivery, and preached a very instructive and interesting sermon.

There was also a good audience in the afternoon. Rev. Mr. McLeod who was to conduct the service being unavoidably detained, Dr. Gregg again preached. his text being the 5th verse of the 16th Psalm, giving a very interesting and profitable discourse.

In the evening the house was literally crowded. many not having room to sit, yet the best of order prevailed, when the Rev. D. McLeod preached an able sermon.

There was good music by the choir at each service. The collections of the day amounted to over $53.

The tea-meeting, which was held on the evening following, was largely attended, the church being crowded to its utmost capacity. There was an abundance of eatables of excellent quality. the serving of which was no easy task owing to the immense throng. After nature's wants in this line were satisfied, the Rev. Mr. Wilson called the assembly to order, when a varied and interesting programme was gone through with. Space will not permit us to particularize. Good order was maintained throughout, and a pleasant and successful entertainment was brought to a close shortly after nine o'clock. Proceeds $94, making over $150 in all.

ELECTIONS FOR 1883.

COLLINGWOOD.—Mayor, A. Dudgeon; Reeve, Geo. Moberly; Deputy Reeve, A. Lockerby; Councillors—East Ward—E. B. Bennett, Robert Wright, Geo. Buck. Centre Ward—W. J. Frame, E. McDermid, J. Blue. West Ward—J. Birnie, R. Horton, F. F. Telfer.

DURHAM.—Reeve, McKechnie. Councillors—East Ward, T. Brown, H. Story and Mackenzie; West Ward, Dr. Jamieson, O. Gaynor, and R. Horn.

HOLLAND TOWNSHIP.—Grey County—Reeve, John Cameron, (acclamation); Deputy Reeve, A. Shute. Councillors—Jas. Galbraith, J. Deavitt, R. McKinnet.

MEAFORD.—Reeve, Charles Watt. Councillors—West Ward, D. L. Layton, R. Agnew. H. McDonald; North Ward, G. P. McIntosh, D. McCann, J. Hill.

OSPREY TOWNSHIP.—Reeve, A. McGirr; Deputy Reeve, A. McIntyre. Councillors—T. Johnston, Speers and Taylor.

OWEN SOUND.—First Deputy Reeve, J. W. Frost; Second Deputy Reeve, James C. Miller. Councillors—Centre Ward—T. B. Dowsley, W. J. Paterson, Jas. Sanderson. River Ward—Jacob Speers, Owen Vandusen. S. McClean. Mayor, Reeve, and Councillors for Bay Ward elected by acclamation.

SHELBURNE.—Councillors—J. F. Belfry, E. Berwick, F. A. Campbell, John Wilson.

ARTEMESIA.—W. T. McKee was elected for Ward No. 4. by 4 majority. This was the only Ward contested.

EGREMONT.—Deputy Reeve. James Paul (acclamation. Councillors—J. Allen, J. Dawson, and D. McCormack.

ST. VINCENT.—Reeve, Jas. Bowels; Deputy Reeve, Nicholas Reid Councillors—T. McIntosh, R. F. Street, J Montgomery.

The following are the total number of votes polled for the several candidates in Glenelg Municipal election for Deputy Reeve, Mullarky, 352. Binnie, 230. Majority for Mullarkey 122. Councillors—Davis, 280; McMillan, 253; Dinsmore, 210; Neil, 197; McCuaig, 160; Boyce, 121; Lauder, 96; Mutley, 24.

EUPHRASIA.—Reeve, Myles, majority 28; Deputy Reeve, Erskine, majority 39; Councillors elected, Patterson, Boyd, and Ellis.

TIMOTHY HOOLIGAN'S POETHRY.

ON THE BEST PLACE TIL DALE.

Whin ye come into Markdale, I'd have ye til know,
That til THRIMBLE & WRIGHT'S is the besht place til go,
For they think it no thruble thare gudes fur til show,
An' they'll give ye the worth av yer money.
Och, sich lashins uv gudes piled all over the shtore,
Boots and shoes be the hundred, and dhry goods gilyore;
While thare clothin' cums in by the car (more or less,)
Och, the soight wud surprise ye, me honey.

Thin thare's jacknives, spoons, scissors, pins, thimbles and rings,
Silks, ribbons, gloves, laces, ties, tassels an' strings,
Fringe, fithers, an' al av winderful things,
Til yer farely bewildhered and tired lukin.
An' ye need not be shtarvin' fur thare's biscuits and chaise.
Herrins, caudfish, paches, tomates and maize,
If yer apetite's fair ye'll find somethin' til plase,
Bum cook'd an' more ready for cookin'.

Sich a site as thare groceries niver was seen,
For thare's rows of tay chists—Japan, black and green—
All at prices that bate competashin so clane
That it's useles til thry til oppose thim.
For thare bound by thare bargains the wuild til amaise,
An' thare doin' it now wid the gratest of aise,
For Jamee an' Dav are the boys that can plase
Every son of his muther that noes thim.

While me ganiel friend Anderson shtands til ther back,
Who kin shame all yer gas-puffin clarks off the thrack,
While al goods bot from Cunninghame prove just the whack,
Quite as good as towld ye or bether.
So ye'd bether drap in widout any delay,
And thry ther notorious 30c. TAY,
Whin ye'll find (loike in saying things its by the way,)
Al ther pledges fulfilled til the lether.

TIM HOOLIGAN.

Jan. the one, eighty 3.

We have a speedy and positive cure, for Catarah, Diphtheria, Canker mouth and Head Ache, in SHHILOH'S CATARRH REMEDY. A nasal Injector free with each bottle Use it if you desire health and sweet breath. Price 50 cents. Sold at Wm. Brown's General Store, Markdale.

BIRTHS.

SINCLAIR—In Holland, on the 16th ult., the wife of Mr. Geo. C. Sinclair of a daughter. This is the sixteenth child.

MARRIAGES.

HOWEY—WHITE—On the 26th ult., by Rev. J Hart, at the residence of the bride's father, Miss Howey, daughter of W. Howey, Esq., ex-Reeve of Holland, to Henry White, Esq.

EDGE—BINNIE—At the residence of the bride's father, on the 28th ult., by Rev. D. McLeod, Mr. Daniel Edge to Miss Isabella, daughter of Thos. Binnie, Esq., all of Glenelg.

DIED.

WRIGHT.—In Euphrasia, on 29 Dec., Miss Margaret, daughter of Mr. Samuel Wright, aged 22 yrs, 20 days.

FLEMING.—In Holland, on the 1st inst., Margaret, relict of the late John Fleming, aged 75 years.

T. C. & B. RAILWAY.

TIME TABLE.

Change of Time.

On and after Monday, Nov. 20th, 1882, trains will run as follows:

GOING NTH.			GOING SOUTH
Read Down.			Read Up.
A.M.	P.M.		A.M.	P.M.
7 30	4 25	TORONTO	10 45	9 10
9 05	6 00	CARDWELL JUNC.	9 05	7 31
9 55	6 45	ORANGEVILLE...	8 27	6 50
12 20	8 44	MOUNT FOREST..	6 30	4 30
12 06	8 45	MARKDALE,.....	6 27	4 30
2 25	0 15	TEESWATER.....	5 00	2 45
11 50	- 0	FLESHERTON	6 43	4 47
1 30	9 55	OWEN SOUND....	5 15	3 10
P.M.	P.M.		A.M.	P.M.

A Mixed Train will also run between Toronto and Owen Sound. See Time Table.

D. McNICOLL, Gen. Pass. Agt. EDMUND WRAGGE, General Manager.

MARKDALE MARKETS.

Fall Wheat, $0.70 to $0.80; Spring $0.80 to $0 85 Barley, 45c; Peas, 69t; Oats, 35c Butter, 17c; Eggs, 22c; Potatoes, 40c; Hay, $9.00; Pork, 7.40 to 7.60.

FLESHERTON MARKETS.

Fall Wheat, $0.70 to $0.80; Spring, $0.84 to $0.85 Barley, 43c; Peas, 69c; Oats, 35c; Butter, 17c; Eggs, 22c; Potatoes, 45 c; Hay, $9.00; Pork, $7.00 to $7 50

TORONTO MARKETS.

Fall Wheat, $0.90 to $0.94; Spring, $0.97 to $0 98; Barley, 56c to 72c; Oats, 41c to 42c Peas, 70c to 74c; Hogs, $7.50 to $.750; Potatoes, per bag, 75c to 80c; Butter, dairy, 17c to 20c; eggs 23c to 24c.

ESTRAY.

CAME on to the premises of the undersigned, lot 21, concession 12, Holland, about the middle of November, one red Steer, and two red and white Heifers rising three years old. The owner is requested to prove property, pay expenses and take them away.

W. WAIT.

Holland, Dec. 30th, 1882. 119-4t*

Trimble AND Wright's GRAND CLEARING SALE FOR 30 Days! ONLY.

We will offer our enormous stock of Goods at a great sacrifice for the next 30 days, as they must be sold. No reasonable offer will be refused for any article during the sale. A special line of new, fresh Dress Goods!

All shades, just to hand, which are great value for 25c., are being sold off at 15c. Ladies' Mantles made to order for one half what they can be purchased elsewhere.

Mantle Cloths

at your own prices. In

TWEEDS

we are over-stocked, and will offer suits made to order, guaranteed to fit or no sale, from $11 to $16, which are worth from $15 to $25. In our stock is large.

Ready-Made Clothing

Good Suits.....	from	$4.75 to	$10.00
Splendid Coats.....	from	2.75 to	5 50
Extra Pants.....	from	1.75 to	2.50
Vests.....	from	0.75 to	1.50

Millinery & Hat Shapes

will positively be sold off at 25 cents on the dollar during the sale. As we are going out of that line it must and will be sold at quarter what it cost wholesale. A great slaughter may be expected.

Hats and Caps!

We have a large stock on hand which are new and stylish, and cheaper than ever. As the Winter is advancing we will clear out our stock of caps at less than wholsale prices.

Beautiful

GRAY DOUBLE-TWISTED YARNS

at 45c. per lb., usually sold at 60c. Our Grocery Department!

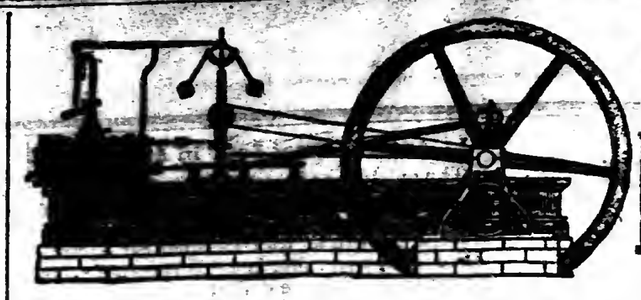
is, as usual, filled to the top with the freshest and best of the season, and at prices that are unequalled. Our 30c. Tea is taking the lead, and don't you forget it. Your money refunded if it don't suit you.

Don't fail to call and see us!



before purchasing elsewhere. We will make it interesting to you.

TRIMBLE & WRIGHT,

Dealers in Bankrupt Stock,

REID'S BLOCK,

MARKDALE.

MOFFAT M'rkdale

MAFUFACTURERS OF

Steam Engines & Shafting

Pulleys, Hangers, Gear Woeels. Shingle Jointers, &c, Also Kinds of Mill Repairing.

PLOWS and POINTS A SPECIALTY

MANGLES, GRATINGS, CRESTINGS, PITLERS--IRON AND BRASS CASTINGS OF EVERY DESCRIPTION.

BILLIARD ROOM

D. M. HOGAN, PROPRIETOR.

Next door to Trimble & Wright's, Reid's Blk.

First-class tables. Cigars and temperance drinks to be had. 116-1y.

Fruit, Pound and Plum Cake

either plain or iced and ornamented. Also Brides' Cakes got up in the best style that can be done this side of Toronto.

Bread, Buns and Cakes!

in great variety. All these are manufactured on his own premises by himself, besides Biscuit of every description from the best manufacturers in Ontario.

CHOICEST CONFECTIONERY

in great variety. Tea Meetings, Socials, and other parties supplied on the shortest notice and on the most reasonable terms.

JOHN MONTGOMERY.

Markdale, Nov. 22nd, 1882. 115-3m

W. H. CAMPAIGNE,

LICENSED Auctioneer for the County of Grey. Sales attended in town or country on the shortest notice. Charges reasonable.

Orders left at the STANDARD office will receive prompt attention. 117-3m

CABINETS

$3 per Dozen.

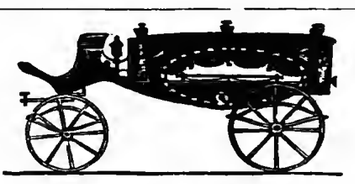
PANELS

$4 per Doz.

For the Holidays Only

—AT—

J. L. BROWNE'S



OVER THE STANDARD OFFICE.

SUFFOLK BOAR.

A WELL BRED Suffolk Boar for service on Lot 6, Concession 7, Euphrasia. Also a Poland China Boar. Charges for either $1 at time of service.

D. R. ELLIS.

Dec. 16th. 1882. 119-6w.

Undertaking.

Coffins,
Caskets,
Burial Pobes,
Gloves,
Crapes,

—AND—

All Furnishings for Funerals

May be had on Shortest Notice, and at All Hours from

GEO. GRANT,

MARKDALE.

Also a well assorted stock of

FURNITURE

from plain to fine quality, all at moderate prices. 119tf.

J. W. FORD

MARKDALE

FLOUR MILL

A. HILL

TAILOR.

Over McFarland's Store

MARKDALE.

Special attention to Cutting.

If you want a Perfect Fit leave your Order with

A. HILL.

September 20th 1882. 106.

Auction Sale OF PROPERTY

Situated in the Village of Priceville and Township of Proton, County of Grey.

Pursuant to the Power of Sale contained in a certain mortgage there will be sold by public auction at the Crown Hotel, in the Village of Priceville, on

MONDAY, THE 15TH DAY OF JANUARY, 1883,

at one o'clock in the afternoon.

PARCEL 1.—Lot 9, south side Kinross street; Lot 9, north side Torry street, Priceville, containing one acre, more or less. This is a good acre of land, well fenced, without any buildings on it.

PARCEL 2.—Lots 11, 12 and 13 on south side of Kinross street; and lots 11, 12 and 13 on the north side of Torry street, Priceville, containing three acres more or less.

Upon this property is erected a rough-cast house 18x24, with an extension 12x9, and wood shed in fair repair also a stble 20x30. There is also a very nice orchard consisting of apple, plum, cherry, and crab trees, also currant and gooseberry bushes. There is also a well upon the premises. The property is well fenced.

PARCEL 3.—Also at the same time and place there will be sold lot 3, north side of Elgin street, and lot 3, south side of Harvey street, Priceville, containing one acre more or less.

Upon this property is erected a house 18x24 with an extension 10x24, and the property is fairly fenced.

PARCEL 4.—Also lot 17, concession 8, Township of Proton, containing 100 acres more or less.

Terms and conditions of sale very favorable and will be made known at time of sale.

The Vendors reserve to themselves the right of one bid for each parcel.

For further particulars apply to

SMITH, SMITH & RAE,
Vendors' Solicitors,
3 Building and Loan Chambers,
Toronto St., Toronto.

119td

FARM FOR SALE.

LOT 6 CON. 3 E. G. RD., HOLLAND, 100 acres, 70 acres cleared, well watered, good orchard bearing good log house and barn. Situated 2 half miles from Chatsworth. A bargain will be given in the above property, for particulars apply to Geo. Noble, Markdale, or to Chas. King, Shelburne. 120-4t

Wishing You

HAPPY NEW YEAR.

oll & Brown

THE PEOPLE'S

EWELERS,

At Markdale.

Local Items.

O.S. Advertiser is 20 years old; it is age well.

Wilcox, Beausejour, (C. P. R.) Manitoba, please accept our thanks for $1, subscription for the STANDARD for 1883

Imons & Co. bankers, Markdale $200,000.00 to loan on ... Straight loan system. No ... interest; moderate charges.

... On Thursday of last week a ... Samuel Bowles, of Artemesia, accidentally cut himself with an axe, inflicting a ... three inches in length on his

... Cameron, from the London ... has been appointed editor of the ... of Mr. Gordon Brown. Hon. ... becomes editor of the London Advertiser.

... BOAR.—Mr. C. Little, ... two miles south of Markdale, has a fine breed Berkshire boar at his farm this season. 75 ..., $1 if not so paid. 118-123

... day passed off very quietly in Markdale, the chief amusement being "on ice." A great number took advantage in the fine weather for recreation-skating. In the evening the crowd congregated at the ... in the Presbyterian church, ... is given elsewhere.

... SCHOOL.—A local exchange ... some timely remarks:—Profanity is a growing vice among our boys. The other day about a dozen ... were engaged near the Huron ... swearing at each other. Where ... get their stock of foul words? ... Oh! it must be at home. ... a warning to parents to bridle ... tongues before children at any rate. ... boys deem it necessary to warn ... against the vulgarity of profanity as ... wickedness. No boy who ... for himself or his parents ... himself by indulging in ... blasphemous language.

... GRANGE.—The annual meeting ... Grange was held in their hall ... 20th inst. The auditors ... adopted, which showed ... and sale-factory business had ... during the year. The following were then elected for the ensuing year: Bro. Geo. Binnie, Master; C. ... Overseer; James Edge, See; Robt. ... John Black, Steward; Thos. ... Steward; Hugh McNab, ... John Weir, Lecturer; J. Staples, ... Sister Ellen Ritchie, Ceres; ... Flora; Mrs. R. Moffat, Pomona; ... Stewardess. The members ... 78.—Review.

... REFORM ASSOCIATION.—A meeting of the Reform Association of the Township was held at the McAlister ... Durham, on Saturday last, the 23rd ... President, John Nichol, Esq., in the chair. The following officers were elected: ... John Nichol; Vice President, ... Glenerosa; Secretary, George ... Treasurer, Charles Moffat. Delegates to Central Association,—Ward No. 1, ... John Weir; Ward No. 2, John ... George Binnie; Ward No. 3, J. G. ... Doland; Ward No. 4, Wm. ... and Thos. Jack. Delegates to attend Convension in Toronto were also ... —Review.

Mr. A. Hill has gone to Staynor to spend the holidays at his home.

After the storm comes a calm, and after the tea-meeting comes the social.

Shovel the snow off your side walks or we shall be compelled to use snow-shoes.

Water is very low and our mills have not sufficient power to do the work required of them.

If you want to enjoy a lunch "served on the continental plan," go to the masquerade on Friday evening.

The by-laws for the establishment of free libraries in Toronto and Guelph were carried by large majorities.

A social will be held at Mr. Stinson's, 11th line Euphrasia, on Friday evening the 5th. Admission 15 cents.

The semi-annual meeting of Grey Division Grange No. 2 will meet in Owen Sound on the 25th January for general business.

After a close and keen contest the polling for Mayor in Toronto resulted in the election of Mr. Boswell by a majority of thirteen.

There were four men in this Ward who voted against Mullarkey. They must have made a mistake in marking the Ballot Paper.

The Flesherton Methodist Sunday School held their annual Anniversary on New Year's evening. The entertainment was the best for years. Proceeds $100.

It will need just about seventeen more pitch holes on the side road west from this village to make it interesting, as yet there are only 136 in the first mile.

We forgot to notice last week the improvement in the Advance, which is enlarged four columns and comes out in a new dress. We compliment you, brother, in your forward move.

The young man who took the two whips out of my driving shed, on the night of the 27th, had better return them if he, does not want to be exposed, as he was seen.—T. MATHEWS.

Osprey Agricultural Society will hold their annual meeting at Maxwell, on Thursday, January 11th, at 2 p. m.; Euphrasia the same day and hour at Rocklyn; and Holland at Chatsworth.

Farmers and others desiring a genteel, lucrative agency business, by which $5 to $20 a day can be earned, send address at once, on postal, to H. C. WILKINSON & Co., 195 and 197 Fulton Street, New York. 121-6m

It is not necessary to wait for fine weather when you can have your Photos taken at Brown's (by the newest and most rapid process known to the Art) in dull days just as well as the brightest weather.

Our Little Ones for January is to hand and is just the thing for the little folks. The many comical illustrations arouses the mirthful propensities of the young, and cannot fail to be beneficial in the family; $1.50 per year; 149 Tremont St. Boston, Mass.

One of our hotel keepers kept his bar closed on New Year's as it was election day. In the evening some one told him that the law on this subject only referred to parliamentary elections. Then that hotelkeeper stood up and solemnly said well by * *

The annual meeting of the Glenelg Agricultural Society will be held in Dufferin Hall, on Thursday, the 11th January, at 2 o'clock p. m. A full attendance is expected, as there is important business, owing to the purchase of grounds, &c., during the past year.

M. Gambetta died at midnight on Sunday after suffering acutely for two hours. The news of his decease created a profound sensation in Paris, and was received with a general feeling of sorrow by the republican party. The deceased statesman will be buried at Nice by the side of his mother.

The American Agriculturist for January is before us, and is filled with useful information for everybody, and though an Agricultural Journal, it is almost indispensible in any family. It is profusely illustrated and cannot fail to prove a profitable investment to the subscriber. Published by Orange Judd Co., 751 Broadway, N. Y., at $1.50 per year.

The many friends of Mr. E. D. Wilcox, (late of Markdale) will be pleased to hear that he is doing well in the North West, being agent on the C. P. R. at Beausejour. His unquestioned integrity, together with close application to business principles, fit him for positions of trust and emolument, and we have no doubt will entitle him to promotion to a very responsible position ere long.

A horrible series of murders is reported from Little Rideau, East Hawkesbury, Prescott county. A hired man made a desperate assault upon the family of his employer, and succeeded in killing his master and mistress and their eldest daughter and fourth son. The other members of the family escaped with severe wounds. The murderer is still at large.

SERVED HIM RIGHT.—Recently a passenger on the T. G. & B. railway between Orangeville and Toronto became disorderly, and the conductor had to interfere in order to maintain peace. Afterwards, in the course of the journey, this passenger used threatening language to the conductor, when asked for his ticket, and on arrival at Toronto was arrested, fined $50 and costs for using threats, and carrying a revolver.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.

The advertiser, having been permanently cured of that dread disease, Consumption, by a simple remedy, is anxious to make known to his fellow sufferers the means of cure. To all who desire it, he will send a copy of the prescription used, (free of charge,) with he directions for prepairing and using the same which they will find a SURE CURE for CONSUMPTION, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, &c.

Parties wishing the Prescription, will please address, Rev. E. A. Wilson, 149 Penn st., Williamsburgh, N. Y. 75-127

AGENTS WANTED.—Big pay.—Light Work. Steady Employment. Samples free. Address, M. L. BYRN, 46 Nassau stree New York. 20

Land for Sale.

100 ACRES; about 80 of which is cleared, being composed of the E. half of Lot 11, in the 8th concession of the Township of Euphrasia. Apply at this office, or to ROBERT DUNLOP, Township Clerk of Euphrasia, Griersville P. O. 117-tf.

Just Arrived!

A LARGE STOCK OF

NEW AND FASHIONABTE

DRY GOODS,

Boots and Shoes,

NEW GROCERIES,

At prices which will astonish you. Call and see.

Highest price paid for Butter and Eggs or any kind of Fowl at the CHEAP STORE.

JOHN DOUPE,
Flesherton Station.

Nov. 15th, 1882. 114-3m.

TO SELL OR RENT.

LOT 15, CON. 12, HOLLAND, 122 acres, 100 cleared, good buildings thereon. Terms easy. Apply to James Logan, Postmaster, near the premises, or to M. S. KELLOW, Tara P. O.

November 14th, 1882 114-tf.

Health is Wealth!

DR. E. C. WEST'S NERVE AND BRAIN TREATMENT, a guaranteed specific for Hysteria, Dizziness, Convulsions, Fits, Nervous Neuralgia, Headache, Nervous Prostration caused by the use of alcohol or tobacco, Wakefulness, Mental Depression, Softening of the Brain, resulting in Insanity and leading to misery, decay and death, Premature Old Age, Barrenness, Loss of Power in either sex, Involuntary losses and Spermatorrhœa, caused by over-exertion of the brain, self abuse or over-indulgence. One box will cure recent cases. Each box contains one month's treatment. One dollar a box, or six boxes for five dollars; sent by mail prepaid on receipt of price. We guarantee six boxes to cure any case. With each order received by us for six boxes, accompanied with five dollars, we will send the purchaser a written guarantee to refund the money if the treatment does not effect a cure. Guarantees issued only by A. Turner & Co., sole authorized Agent for Markdale Ont. John C. West & Co. sole proprietor, Toronto, Ont.

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE TOWNSHIP OF EUPHRASIA.

GENTLEMEN,—I have been waited on and earnestly entreated by a large number of influential ratepayers of the Township and have consented to become a candidate for the office of Deputy-Reeve for the year 1883. Your vote and influence is respectfully solicited. Should you place me at the head of the poll I pledge my honor to use my best endeavors for the best interest of the Township regardless of locality or party.

JAMES ERSKINE.

Rocklyn, Dec. 16th, 1882. 119-2

Re-Fresh-ing

In the cool assertion of some people that they can sell below cost, &c., it may not be amiss to let the public of Markdale and surrounding country know that

Wilson Benson,

of the "BELFAST HOUSE," MARKDALE, can sell "cheaper than the cheapest," and "better than the best," all kinds of

Groceries, Liquors, &c.

Consisting of

TEAS, TOBACCOS, SPICES, CANNED FISH, ETC.,

And for those wishing pure Wine for sacramental purposes, will find a brand that will equal anything on this side the Atlantic.

Other Liquors equally pure.

SPECIAL! Pure Holland Gin.

Cheese from the best manufactories.

Our Whiskies are from the firm of Gooderham & Worts, Toronto, and the public may rely on receiving them as they are sent.

FLOUR, POTATOES, and everything in the household line kept constantly on hand.

Henceforth my Store will be supplied with Fruits of all kinds, such as APPLES, PEARS, PLUMS, &c.

FRUIT CAKES of all kinds always kept on hand.

Essences, Hair Oils, and Perfumery of the choicest nectars.

TOILET & FANCY SOAPS, better than the best.

CANADIAN & WESTERN PORK, of first quality.

Everything in the Grocery Line kept on a fuller and more complete scale than at any other place in Markdale.

WILSON BENSON.

PIMPLES.

I will mail (Free) the recipe for a simple VEGETABLE BALM that will remove TAN-FRECKLES, PIMPLES and BLOTCHES, leaving the skin soft, clear and beautiful; also instructions for producing a luxuriant growth of hair on a bald head or smooth face. Address, enclosing a 3c. stamp, Ben. Vandelf & Co., 5 Beekman st., N. Y. 75-127

ERRORS OF YOUTH.

A GENTLEMAN who suffered for years from NERVOUS DEBILITY, PREMATURE DECAY, and all the effects of youthful indiscretion will, for the sake of suffering humanity, send free to all who need it, the recipe and directions for making the simple remedy by which he was cured. Sufferers wishing to profit by the advertiser's experience can do so by addressing in perfect confidence, JOHN B. OGDEN, 75-127 42 Cedar St., New York.

Gold Great chance to make money. Those who always take advantage of the good chances for making money that are offered, generally become wealthy, while those who do not improve such chances remain in poverty. We want many men, women, boys and girls to work for us right in their own localities. Any one can do the work properly from the first start. The business will pay more than ten times ordinary wages. Expensive outfit furnished free. No one who engages fails to make money rapidly. You can devote your whole time in the work, or only your spare moments. Full information and all that is needed sent free. Addres. STINSON & Co., Portland Maine. 71-126

MANHOOD

HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED

SEAL We have recently published a new edition of Dr. CULVERWELL'S CELEBRATED ESSAY on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, &c., resulting from excesses.

☞ Price, in sealed envelope, only 6 cents, or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

☞ This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Address

The Culverwell Medical Co,.

P.O. box 450 41 Ann St., New York

$500 Reward!

We will pay the above reward for any case of Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Indigestion. Constipation or Costiveness we cannot cure with West's Vegetable Liver Pills, when the directions are strictly complied with. They are purely Vegetable, and never fail to give satisfaction. Sugar Coated, Large Boxes, containing 30 Pills, 25 cts. For sale by all Druggists. Beware of counterfeits and immitations. The genuine manufactured only by JOHN C. WEST & CO., "The Pill Makers," 81 & 83 King St. East, Toronto, Ont. Free trial package sent by mail prepaid on receipt of a 3 cent stamp. For sale at Turner & Co. Drug Store.

Mothers! Mothers! Mothers!

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the excruciating pain of cutting teeth! If so, go at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately—depend upon it; there is no mistake about it. There is not a mother upon earth who has ever used it, who will not tell you at once that it will regulate the bowels, and give rest to the mother, and relief and health to the child, operating like magic. It is perfectly safe to use in all cases, and pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Sold everywhere at 25 cents a bottle.

MARKDALE Meat Market.

A constant supply of

Fresh Meats!

on hand, at the

Lowest Living Prices.

Orders solicited, and delivered free to all parts of the Town.

Farmers having fat stock to dispose of, will please leave their addresses.

TERMS, STRICTLY CASH.

FRED. SARJEANT.

Markdale March 23, 1882. 80-1y

SEEING IS BELIEVING.

GENTLEMEN,—
If you want a first-class

Buggie or Wagon

call at

MCKENNA & MASON'S

CARRIAGE WORKS

MARKDALE.

They can supply you with anything from a

Lumber Wagon

up to

Extension Top Phæton.

To buy from them is to

SAVE MONEY!

They are both practical workmen, and employ none but

PRACTICAL WORKMEN

They guarantee their work Second to none for Lightness of Draught and Superiority of Finish.

They use nothing but First-class White Oak for Wagons, and thrice Extra Second Growth Hickory for light work.

The immense amount of work turned out of McKenna & Mason's shop is sufficient proof of the wide reputation they enjoy for doing good work.

THE BEST IS THE CHEAPEST IN THE END

Poor cheap work we positively will not take.

Special attention given to Re-Trimming and Repainting all classes of Carriage Work.

Satisfaction guaranteed (or No Pay) in

HORSESHOEING

SHOP—On Mill Street opposite to Sproule's Hotel.

McKENNA & MASON.

THOS. MATHEWS,

Harness Establishment!

MARKDALE.

EVERYTHING IN OUR LINE KEPT ON HAND OR MADE TO ORDER ON SHORT NOTICE.

LIVERY!

IN CONNECTION.

GEORGE WILSON,

Wholesale and Retail

{BUTCHER!}

BEEF, PORK OR MUTTON SUPPLIED. from a single pound to a whole carcass, at the lowest market prices.

FISH & FOWL IN THEIR SEASON

Farmers having Fat Cattle, Sheep, or Pigs to dispose of will do well to call at No. 3 Burns' Block, opposite the new Union Block.

Markdale, Oct. 25th, 1881

Nothing Like Leather.

M. M. M'LEOD,

MARKDALE.

NOT TO BE BEATEN!

All those who may have had the misfortune to have been born barefooted will bear in mind that we have just received the largest and best stock of leather ever before brought into Markdale, consisting of Spanish Sole, French Kip and Calf, and are now prepared to manufacture Ladies, Gents, Youths and Misses boots and shoes, from the stock to the finest kid and prunella.

Sewed Work a Specialty.

All work warranted. Invisible patching also done here.

M. M. McLEOD,

Markdale, Sept. 19th, 1881.

The Man Who Never Advertises.

Sing, business muse, the dark and doleful fate
Of him whose labors but that he may wait;
The piles of goods heaped up within his store,
Which can't be less, and never may be more;
The man whose life has lost all fortune's prizes;
In fact, the man who never advertises.

Sing of his start, his great ambition's scope,
The capital that gave him cause to hope,
His credit large, his full and ample stock,
His bank account as solid as a rock;
Then tell the doom to which the man was fated
Who never advertised, but simply waited.

So simply, and so vainly! Splendid signs
Which basement art irradiates and refines,
Plate glass show windows elegantly dressed,
Such lovely clerks, cashiers, and all the rest
Served but to show him how the public sizes
The style of him who never advertises.

He waited, and all waited; clerks, cashiers,
Salesmen, saleswomen, such delightful dears,
Impatient waited all the season through,
With precious little for the crowd to do.
The public saw—that fact there's no denying—
But passed the store without a thought of buying.

Business was dull, but salaries and rent
Went on till cash and credit both were spent;
The silly merchant hoped his luck would turn,
Until the Sheriff closed the whole concern.
Now, at a pittance which his soul despises,
He works for one who always advertises.

LATE CANADIAN NOTES.

Readable Items from all Over This Great Country.

QUEBEC.

Cariboo has been shot at Kingsey.

A Bolton hunter has caught forty foxes this season.

The ice bridge at Richmond is now firm, and has been used about ten days.

Coal oil is a favorite article with the bad bold men who smuggle contraband goods into Canada.

Diphtheria, of which there have been several cases at Bolton Centre, is now about stamped out there.

A knitting factory is being started at Bolton by a couple of energetic young men, which it is to be hoped will prove a success.

The Granby Rubber Company will apply for incorporation at the approaching session of the Legislature. The capital will be $100,000.

An overdose of morphine taken the other day by a Dunham young man named Clement, who was suffering from insomnia, nearly killed him. The mistake was discovered in time, and by prompt treatment his life was saved.

The Temperance question is being freely discussed at Laurenceville, and quite an active interest is being taken by a number of the prominent men of the immediate vicinity. Enthusiastic meetings have been recently held there, and it is said that the field seems to be "white unto the harvest."

The butter-tub machinery was put in Messrs. Lawrence & Kimball's factory, at Lawrenceville, last week. The Waterloo Advertiser says that it is, without doubt, the finest machinery of the kind in Canada. Messrs. Lawrence & Co. purpose making a tub with split staves, planed both inside and out. The merits of this kind of a tub over the ordinary turned one are too well known to require comment.

ONTARIO.

The Edison Electric Light Company, will, it is said, establish its Canadian branch in Toronto.

The letter carriers of Toronto were compelled to make two deliveries on Christmas and New Year's day on account of the great crush of mail matter.

Overcrowding of omnibuses is being loudly complained of in the "Queen City." Conductors pack in passengers as if they were sardines.

Preparations are being made for the erection of a cheese factory in the village of Glammis during the coming spring. Quantities of timber and lumber have already been hauled to the site.

A strange accident happened to Mr. John Robertson, of Wiarton, the other day. He was out hunting, when he stumbled, and a small stick pierced the drum of his ear and broke off. He went to Owen Sound to submit to an operation.

Fred. Johnson, a son of the late James Johnson, was kicked in the head by a horse on Sunday at the farm of Elijah Joyner, township of Kingston, in whose family he was visiting. For many hours he was insensible and is still in a critical state.

MANITOBA AND THE NORTH-WEST.

A meteorological observatory has been opened at Minnedosa, and will be in charge of the Rev. Mr. Wellwood.

Farmers are generally complaining of the low price of wheat, and wonder why it is seeing that flour retails at $4 per sack in Winnipeg.

Rapid City can now boast of three literary organizations, viz., the R. C. Mutual Improvements, the R. C. Academy and the Prairie College Societies.

A number of dentists intend applying at the next session of the Legislature, for an act incorporating a dental association for the province of Manitoba.

Mr. G. R. McLean, of Gladstone, in boring a well on his farm has "struck oil"—or rather has touched an oil-bearing rock in quantities that assure him that its working would be a paying investment.

One thousand Mennonites—600 at Emerson and 400 at Winnipeg—have just been made subjects of her Majesty by naturalization. These men will at once obtain the patents for their homesteads.

J. D. McBurnie, of Branden has purchased a steam plough that is said to be capable of turning over a 100 acres a day. This will prove a great boon to settlers in the district of Brandon.

Sixty lodges of North Piegans sold $7,000 worth of potatoes at Fort Macleod recently, being the surplus of their year's crop, after retaining sufficient for their own use.

The first number of the Herald, a new weekly journal to be published in the interests of the Roman Catholic peopl of Manitoba and the North-West, has made its appearance in Winnipeg.

The total assessment of Emerson for 1882 is $1,626,970, and a rate of two cents on the dollar would leave the Council about $5,000 short. This difficulty will probably have to be met by a special rate.

Traffic business is seriously interfered with on the C. P. R., owing to the lack of sufficient locomotive power. The snow storms, too, render it impossible to haul such heavy trains as in the early part of the month. There are at present 505 cars laden with freight in the C. P. R. yard. The company has not got sufficient men to unload the freight. This blockade has locked up so much of the rolling stock that traffic is seriously interfered with.

A citizen of Brandon while digging a well some time ago got into a bed of sulphate producing very bitter water, a sample of which was forwarded to a noted chemist in Montreal, who after careful analysis says that in an Imperial gallon of the water there are 794 grains of solids, 615 being Epsom salts, i. e., sulphate of magnesia, with its waters of crystallization. There are some chlorides chiefly of Sodium. It is altogether somewhat stronger than the celebrated "Pullna waters waters" of Germany.

A practice is now being largely indulged in of adulterating milk. A complaint has been lodged against one individual, and if followed up some revelations may be looked for as to the modus operandi. Milk men are, to some extent, abandoning the good-old system of delivering it from door to door, and selling it in large quantities to middle men. This has resulted not only in the increase in price of the lacteal, but in a number of instances milk of inferior quality is sold as a result of adulteration by water and in some cases by corn starch.—Winnipeg Sun.

BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Victorians can boast of having some turnips, that reached the enormous weight of 48 pounds, and a squash raised on the Bonaparte, at Mr. Harper's mill reached the amazing weight of 130 pounds.

A large number of Chinese railway hands on the Gregon and California road, have been poisoned by the poisoned oak, and several deaths have taken place, according to a Chinese physician.

Troubles at the Metlakathla Indian mission continue and the situation is regarded as threatening. Bishop Ridley has been served with a notice to quit the mission by the Indians, but he tore the notice up and defies the natives.

A log cut on the Shagit last week measured nine feet at the stump. The first cut was over 24 feet in length, and measured 84 inches; the next log 32 feet long and 76 inches at the top; the third log was 36 feet long and measured 63 inches. Ninety-two feet of saw logs were cut from the tree, the average diameter being 74 inches. This tree would probably scale about 12,000 feet.

Just at present the demand for Nanaimo coal is in excess of the supply. This is caused by two reasons: First a number of steamships unexpectedly arrived from China with coolies and merchandise and want to take a return cargo of B. C. coal. On the other hand the mines of this district are not turning out so much coal as formerly. This is caused by the lower levels of the Vancouver Coal Company's Chase River mine being partially flooded with water owing to the pumps giving out when they were most needed.

Married Women in the English Mills.

Married women seldom think of forsaking the mill while their family is increasing, unless, indeed, the number of little children—who must not be left altogether without some one to take care of them—should be so large as to make it as cheap to stay at home as to pay a substitute, and their only hope of release is from some of the elder children being able to supply their mother's place. I could name more than one case where the aggregate yearly earnings of the family are nearer £300 than £200. Still the mother trudges off to the mill daily along with her husband and her grown-up sons and daughters. The other day, in my pastoral rounds, I called on a woman who had lost her daughter from dyspepsia—a very common ailment among the families of the mill hands—and in the course of conversation it came out that her age was 48 (of which 40 had been spent in the mill,) and that the death of the girl had disappointed a long cherished hope of release from her life long drudgery, which was now indefinitely postponed until at least a little girl of 10 had grown old enough to take her place. The mill is the unfailing resort for employment, and is much preferred by the female section of the community to domestic service, on account of the greater freedom and better pay, for a smart young weaver or spinner is soon expert enough to earn 18s. or 21s. per week, besides having her evenings and Sundays all to herself. Talk of money-hunters in the better classes of society, the "lass" with the sturdy frame and the deft hand to earn big wages, like the boy with the cake, will have many friends, anxious to be placed on even a more familiar footing.

The Order of Nature.

If you shake up a basket of fruit or of graved the smaller portions will go toward the bottom, the larger ones will come toward the top. This is the order of nature. There is no way of evading it. And the same order prevails in the basket of human life. The world's shaking will send the small characters downward and bring the larger ones toward the top. The larger ones are not to blame for this. The smaller ones have no right to complain of it. It is the shaking that does the business.

The Poor Curate's Family.

"I dined at Montagu House recently, and had the pleasure of meeting the Bishop of Oxford, (Samuel Wilberforce.) I was told a funny story about him the other day, viz., that when he was dining with a large party, a poor curate who was deploring the large family he had to educate with a very small income, said: 'Do you know, my lord, I have 19 children?' Upon which a very red-faced woman with a squeaky voice exclaimed: 'Only 14 by me, Mr. Jones?'"—Reminiscences, &c.—Baroness Bloomfield.

The Cossacks now serving in the Russian army number 305,000, their officers 3,942, MARVEL OF SURGERY.

A Man Breathing for Five Years Through an Opening in his Throat.

The students of the Hospital of Oral Surgery, at Tenth and Arch streets, were shown a patient at Saturday's clinic whose throat had been cut from ear to ear, and who had then been hung by the neck, but still survived his injuries. He breathes through a silver tube in his throat, and for six months was nourished entirely by enemata. The man's name is Simon Ladenski, a native of Roumania. In the winter of 1877, he then being twenty-three years old, Ladenski was one of a party of ten men whose throats were cut by a band of gypsies on the road from Varsloe. Ladenski was not killed, and on regaining consciousness and finding the robbers quarrelling over the division of the plunder, he attempted to crawl into some bushes by the wayside. Being detected he was strung up to a tree by the neck, and when again unconscious he was cut down and thrown among the bodies of his companions, but not until he had been stabbed in the abdomen and cut in the cheek. Two days later the bodies were found by Professor Russ, of Jassy, and Ladenski and a companion, who were still alive, were removed to town. The latter soon died, and then Professor Russ removed his patient to Vienna. There Ladenski was placed under the care of the most eminent Austrian surgeons. It was found that the windpipe was closed, and for two years the man was unable to utter a word. He breathed through an opening in the neck After many efforts a large threaded needle was passed up through the trachea and into the mouth. Small beads were then drawn through, being daily increased in size in order to effect a permanent enlargement of the obstruction. The man is still obliged to practice this device, and wears the instrument in his windpipe during the night, being able to breathe when in an upright position without its aid. He has been examined by the leading surgeons of Berlin. Paris and London, and it is expected that some day it will be possible to close up the opening in the throat.—Philadelphia Record.

What a Deer Sees and Hears.

When a deer is much hunted his ears become exceedingly acute. Mr. Van Dyke has seen one spring from his bed and run away at rabe-horse speed before he was within two hundred yards of the animal, although he had touched not a single bush or twig in approaching the game, and although he was positive that a man could not at twenty yards distance have heard the soft tread of moccasins on the light snow. Deer, too, are able to measure with intuitive correctness the distance and character of sounds. They will often lie all day within hearing of the normal sounds of a settler's cabin, the sound of the woodman's axe and the shouts of the teamster. As a rule, too, the crash of a squirrel's jump, the roar of thunder, the snapping of trees with frost, their creaking or falling in the wind, does not alarm them in the least. Yet the faintest pressing of the leaves beneath the hunter's moccasin may instantly send them flying. A deer can also see a long way. On one occasion Mr. Van Dyke saw one watching a brother sportsman nearly a mile away, whose motions he could hardly himself make out. It is true that for recognizing an object that rest, the eyes of a deer are about as dull as those of a dog. If unalarmed, he will not distinguish a man from a stump on open ground, if the man is seated and perfectly motionless. On the other hand, to catch a motion, a deer's eyes are marvelously quick, and the fact that he is generally at rest while the hunter is moving gives him an immense advantage. Even the slow lifting of your head over a ridge, or the slow dragging of your limbs over the trunks of trees, or the slow advance of your creeping body along the ground, is almost instantly detected, unless the motion happens to be made while the deer have their heads down, feeding or walking.

Prompt Payment.

A wealthy banker in one of our large cities, who is noted for his large subscriptions to charities, and for his kindly habits of private benevolence, was called on one evening, and asked to go to the help of a man who had attempted suicide. He found the man in a wretched house, in an alley not far from the banker's dwelling. The front room was a cobbler's shop; behind it, on a miserable bed in the kitchen, lay the poor shoemaker, with a gaping gash in his throat, while his wife and children were gathered about him.

"We had been without food for days," said the woman, "when he returned. It is not my husband's fault. He is a hard-working, sober man. But he could neither get work, nor the pay for that which he had done. To-day he went for the last time to collect a debt due him by a rich family, but the gentleman was not at home. My husband was weak from fasting, and seeing us starving drove him mad. So it ended that way," turning to the fainting, motionless figure on the bed.

The banker, having warmed and fed the family, hurried home, opened his desk, and took out a file of little bills. All his debts were promptly met, but he was apt to be careless about the accounts of milk, bread, etc, because they were so petty. He found there was a bill of Michael Goodlow's for repairing children's shoes, $10. Michael Goodlow was the suicide. It was the banker's unpaid debt which had brought these people to the verge of the grave and driven this man to desperation, while at the very time the banker had given away thousands in charity.

Worship.

I am tired of hearing people say that they prefer to worship God in the fields in the summer, by the side of some babbling brook. What if they do? We are not permitted to live for our own pleasure, but for the glory of God and the good of the world. United worship in the sanctuary makes the world better. Therefore we have no choice in the matter. It is our duty to attend the house of God regularly.—Rev. E. E. Hale.

The state of siege proclaimed in some Turkish districts in Roumania in consequence of the prevalence of brigandage, has been raised.

LATEST NEWS NOTES

From all Over the World—What the Wires Bring.

TRANSATLANTIC.

The object of the military expedition to Zululand, besides reinstating Cetewayo, is said in Pietermaritzburg to be to secure the annexation of a large tract of Zululand adjoining Natal.

Australian advices report that Larry Morrit, whom the Government sent out three years ago, after he had given evidrnce in the case of the murder of a justice of the peace at Castlerea, has been shot dead, it is believed by an agent of a secret society.

There was a serious riot on Sunday among the soldiers belonging to the Enniskillen Buffs stationed at Canterbury. Nearly two hundred men were fiercely engaged for an hour, using belts and bayonets, and many were injured. The men were finally confined to their barracks.

The new plans for the Channel tunnel just issued are said to meet with the approval of the military critics. They bring the entrance and approach of the tunnel three miles inland, within the range of the defence of Dover garrison.

It is believed the appointment of Sir Charles Dilke as Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster will be announced before the end of the year, and Lord Edmond Fitzmaurice will succeed him as Under Foreign Secretary.

The News states that Sir Charles Dilke will enter the Cabinet as President of the Local Government Board, Mr. Dodson becoming Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster.

There is a great stir among the German press in consequence of the arrest at Vienna of a Berlin journalist who fled to Austria to avoid the fulfilment of a sentence of eight months' imprisonment for libelling Prince Bismarck.

THE FRENCH REPUBLIC.

The report that M. Gambetta had a relapse is unfounded. His friends state that he remains in bed only by way of precaution, as he still suffers from slight circitation of the bowels.

The Marseilles municipality have appointed a committee to decide whether they can accept the offer of the ex-Empress Eugenie of the Chateau Pharo, or whether they shall carry the appeal in the case further.

At a meeting of the Cabinet Council M. Grevy presided. The expedition to Tonquin was discussed. It was decided that details should be brought forward in the Chamber on the opening of the session in January, when they will be definitely settled. Meantime reinforcements will be sent to strengthen the position of the commander at Ha Noi.

Prince Krapotkine has been examined three hours by the Judge. He answered "No" to all questions. The Prince is kept in solitary confinement, not even the police in charge being allowed to speak to him.

AFFAIRS ON THE NILE.

The public degradation of the prisoners was carried out on Christmas Day in presence of two battalions of the new Egyptian army. Only a few Europeans and about one hundred natives were present. The prisoners then started for Suez, whence they will be transported to Ceylon.

A Cairo correspondent writing to Paris reiterates the statement that M. Bredif, by order of the Premier, M. Duclerc, has resumed the duties of French Controller-General.

Shedide reports from the Desert that he has captured Ali Thowyer, and Salim Abu. the former of whom shot Professor Palmer, Colonel Warren has gone to Nackl to examine the prisoners. He thinks Shedide has taken possession of all the waterways, but the rains have supplied the necessities of the Bedouins, and will enable them to show fight from the mountains. The Sheikhs of Jerebir have undertaken to assist in capturing all persons implicated in murders.

It is stated in Paris that England proposes to send a note to the Powers, including France, explaining what she intends doing for the organization of the Government in Egypt. England has decided to send the note because it was evident that M. Duclerc, President of the French Council, influenced by considerations connected with the maintenance of his position, would not otherwise either come to an agreement with England to break the negotiations. It is stated that a great majority of the Powers would be willing to assent to a British protectorate over Egypt.

THE LANDS OF THE DONS.

The Spanish Chamber of Deputies has by 221 to 18, adopted the Ministerial motion, declaring against a change in the constitution of 1876. Only Republicans voted against the motion. The Conservatives of the Dynastic Left abstained from voting, being unwilling to show their small numerical strength. No Cabinet changes are now expected.

The Cuban refugee, Maceo, surrendered by the British authorities at Gibraltar to Spain, is ill. He is not allowed a private doctor.

In the Chamber of Deputies on Saturday, Senor Castelar declared that the object of Marshal Serrano in forming the Dynastic Left was to cause a split in the Liberal party. Castelar announced his intention of carrying on the Republican propaganda from the Tribune and University chair and with his pen. He insisted that national sovereignty should be inscribed in the constitution, and implored his friends not to despair of triumphing by peaceful means.

A horse ran away with a waggon in which sat a little child at La Salle, Ill., and people on the street were greatly excited. A man dashed out with a long board, intending to stop the horse by striking it across the head, but the beast dodged it, and the child received its full force, and was knocked out of the vehicle, with an arm and its nose broken.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

The most successful Remedy ever discovered, as it is certain in its effects and does not blister. READ PROOF BELOW.

Kendall's Spavin Cure

HAMILTON, Mo., June 14, 1881.

B. J. KENDALL & Co.,—Gents:—This is to certify that I have used Kendall's Spavin Cure, and have found it to be all that it is recommended to be and in fact more so. I have removed by using the above: Callous Bone Spavins, Ring-bone, Splints, and can cheerfully tostify and recommend it to be the best thing for any bony substance I have ever used, and have tried many as I have made that my study for years.

Respectfully yours,
P. V. CRIST.

FROM

Col. T. L. Foster,

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, May 10, 1880.

DR B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents:—I had a very valuable Hambletonian colt that I prized very highly, he had a large bone spavin on one joint and a small one on the other which made him very lame; I had him under the charge of two veterinary surgeons which failed to cure him. I was one day reading an advertisement of Kendall's Spavin Cure in the Chicago Express. I determined at once to try it, and got our druggist here to send for it, they ordered three bottles; I took them all and thought I would give it a thorough trial, I used it according to directions and the fourth day the colt ceased to be lame and the lumps have disappeared. I used but one bottle and the colt's limbs are as free from lumps and as smooth as any horse in the state. He is entirely cured. The cure was so remarkable that I let two of my neighbors have the remaining two bottles who are now using it.

Very respectfully,
L. T. FOSTER.

Kendall's Spavin Cure

WINGHAM, Ont., Jan. 17, 1882.

DR. B, J, KENDALL & Co., Gents:—This is to certify that I have used Kendall's Spavin Cure, bought from C. E. Williams, druggist, Wingham, Ont., and do without hesitation pronounce it to be an invaluable remedy for the cure of Spavins, Ringbones, or Curbs. I used it on a bone spavin of several years growth which it completely removed, and I can safely say it will remove any Spavin, Curb or Ringbone it properly used. I have also recommended friends to use it, who have done so with perfect success. I gladly make this public, and will answer any questions by letters sent me.

Yours &c.
GEORGE BRYCE

Kendall's Spavin Cure
ON HUMAN FLESH.

WEST ENOSBURGH, Vt., Feb. 15, 1882.

DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents:—Several months ago I injured my knee joint which caused an enlargement to grow the size of a walnut and caused me very severe pain all the time for four or five weeks, when I began to use Kendall's Spavin Cure with the most satisfactory results. It has entirely removed the enlargement and stopped the lameness and pain. I have long known it to be excellent for horses but now I know it to be the best liniment for human flesh that I am acquainted with.

Yours truly,
T. P. LAWRENCE.

ST. JOHN, P Q Oct. 27, 1881.

DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents:—I have used your Spavin Cure with great success on spavins, curbs and splints. I know it to be a good remedy for ringbones. bone spavins cuts, galls and all kinds of lameness and other difficulties about the horse. One of my men sprained his ankle very badly. I applied Kendall's Spavin Cure and I never saw anything work like it, he was well in a few days. I know it to be good for man as well as beast. I procured one of your Treatise on the Horse by mail for 25cts. and I think it was the means of saving me $100 on one horse that I treated according to the directions given in your book for displaced stifle.

Yours truly,
WM. J. PEARSON.

Send address for Illustrated Circular, which we think gives positive proof of its virtues. No remedy has ever met, with such unqualified success to our knowledge, for beast as well as man.

Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. All druggists have it or can get it for you, or it will be sent to any address on receipt of price by the proprietors. DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

Sold by all Druggists.

LYMAN, SONS & CO., Montreal, P. Q. Wholesale Agents

GEORGE NOBLE,
INSURANCE AND LAND AGENT,
LICENSED AUCTIONEER
For the County of Grey.

AGENT for the following reliable Companies:
CITIZENS', of Montreal,
AGRICULTURAL, of Watertown, and
TRADE & COMMERCE, (Mutual) of Toronto.

A number of Choice Farms for sale. also Village Lots.

Auction Sales conducted in Town or Country on Shortest Notice. Charges moderate. Bills, Blank Notes, and Stamps provided.

GEO. NOBLE.

SPECIALLY FOR LADIES.

Interesting Paragraphs For the Fair Sex.

English Female Devotees.

The cynic who held that the human race is divided into three species—men, women and priests, might, says the Whitehall Review, have proceeded to derive from his theory a plausible explanation of the mutual attraction and reciprocal affinity which has always subsisted between the last two classes. Female devotees have in all ages formed a numerous class; at the present day they are everywhere to be encountered. The causes by which women are rendered peculiarly susceptible to the influence of matters of religion, and which make young ladies in particular so ardent in the pursuit of curates, are perhaps too manifold and complex to be satisfactorily discussed within the narrow limits to which we are confined; but it may yet be possible, and not altogether unprofitable, to glance at one or two reasons which would seem to be specially prominent. Of the existence of the phenomenon there can be no sort of doubt. The rage for embroidering slippers for "interesting" young curates has afforded a congenial theme to innumerable satirists, and the fashion, while tolerably harmless in itself, must, on the whole, be productive of more gratification than embarrassment to the fortunate recipients. Women, it will be admitted, are usually far more religious than men. The clergy are religious by profession. Many young ladies probably think that the next best thing to being the wife is to live in its company. There is an air of sanctity about the curate which may perhaps, impart a faint aroma to his wife. Surely the best chance of leading a virtuous life is to secure as a husband one whose virtue is guaranteed by his cloth. The extent to which such hopes exert an influence and such expectations are in the result fulfilled, we are, of course, unable to surmise; but it is certainly the case that in the clergy, as in other classes, have their matrimonial casualties, they generally succeed in consoling them better than the rest of the world, and almost always manage to avoid those open scandals as to them would be peculiarly ruinous. At the same time, if Darwin's suggestion that the priestly class should consist of superannuated generals, orators, and statesmen, when no longer able to discharge their other duties with efficiency, were ever carried into effect, it is doubtful whether the profession would continue to be equally popular with the fair sex. Theology is the one science for which women, who shudder at the bare mention of jurisprudence, medicine, or political economy, imagine that they have a talent and a call.

The Milanese Beauty.

A writer in the London Spectator says: I cannot help being inflammable, especially in the neighborhood of Milan, which is sure-ly responsible for the prettiest women in the world. With their wavy fingers, nut-brown eyes, marble-veined complexions, and soft black dresses, they would move an anchorite (whatever he means in English) to set about a poet. So it was that I fell in love, in and for ten minutes, under Mrs. Ellis's eyes, at an open-air breakfast on the Villa Bella—and that my passion was returned. We never spoke, but we loved. She was obviously engaged to the gentleman who sat with her, but that did not matter. She was so pleased with my frank, but I trust, respectful adoration from the next table, that she arranged her seat, and put herself, with grace beyond the reach of art, in the light best calculated for me to study her. When she left, she made a Parthian turn, and gave me just one bow and smile, in which the most presumptuous of men could have detected nothing wrong—which were a privilege. I rushed to the strangers' book, and found her name was Antonietta C——, of Milan. Surnames are, as Charles Surface says, too formal to be registered in love's calendar. Besides, the gentlemaa looked on and might see this. And Italians fight well, and I do not. But the surname was even more beautiful than the Christian. And so Antonietta C——, if ever you should see this, remember a poet who for that one glance would go to the world's end for you if he had not so many other things to do, and Mrs. Ellis did not say: "Tom, you are simply foolish!"

The Khedive's Wife.

The wife of the khedive is a remarkable woman, both by descent and for her personal qualities. Her mother was the daughter of a Turkish sultan: her father, the son of an Egyptian khedive and a descendant of Mohammed Ali, the founder of the present dynasty. Tewfik Pasha, who married her ten years ago, when she was only 20, has never given her any rival in his affection or in his household. They have four children, two sons and two daughters, who are educated by English governesses in English way the princess looks more like a European than our idea of an Egyptian lady. She has brown hair, a dazzling white complexion, a pair brown eyes and a queenly carriage. She dresses in the latest Parisian fashion, and does not, like most Oriental ladies, constantly smoke and eat confections. She speaks French fluently, and uses that language when she receives foreigners. Such visitors she greets with a slight inclination of the head and gives them her hand to kiss. Her own countrywomen kneel before her and kiss the hem of her garment till she gives them a sign to rise. She has established a much stricter etiquette than prevailed at the court of Ismail Pasha. Her husband has the greatest confidence in her judgment, and does nothing important with out her approval. Her powers must have been severely taxed during the late events, but at any rate she never lost her courage. After sharing all the perils of the khedive and refusing the shelter offered her on board the English ships has endeared her to the Egyptians.

A Rival of Mrs. Langtry.

Lady Moncton, the wife of London's well married town-clerk, and a "blue-stocking" of the most pronounced type, will shortly make her appearance on the regular boards as a professional actress. Lady Moncton is fairly good looking, though she will never gain a name as a "professional beauty:" but like the Jersey Lily, she is a great favourite of the Prince of Wales, and her amateur performances have been largely patronised by the nobility. Truth to add, the lady is a great imitator of Mrs. Leo Hunter, and her dinners and parties are among the best of the season. Lady Moncton's "professional concert" and "stage lover" will be Sir Charles Young, an eccentric baronet, who has written a score of pieces, and who always represents his own heroes. Sir Charles is not a good actor, but he looks upon himself as Henry Irving, Toole, Kendal, and Charles Wyndham rolled into one. As he is the first "real live Baronet" who has trod the boards since Sir William Don's time, his appearance as an actor will possess a certain amount of interest. It will certainly be followed by a trip to America, that bourne from which so many professionals quickly return.

Patti's Dresses.

Patti, in the ball-room scene in "Traviata says a New York correspondant, wears $220,000 worth of diamonds. They were around her neck, in her hair, on her wrists, in her ears, up and down her breast, all over the front of her dress—in fact, from every part of her they glistened and gleamed so that it hurt your eyes to look at her, and made more than one person wish for a piece of smoked glass through which to watch the third act of the performance. At Tiffany's there is $1,000,000 worth of diamonds displayed in one show case; but Patti, with her $250,000 worth, makes infinitely a better display. She has them so grouped and scattered that they show for even more than they worth. I heard more than one lady say last night that they envied Patti her diamonds more than they did her voice,

Her dresses were elegant, but somehow or another they did not seem to hang gracefully and fit as well as Langtry's or Nilssons. Upon inquiry I found that her clothes were made in Vienna instead of Paris, and that probably accounts for them not being up to the mark by people who consider Worth perfection.

Thy Face.

Such a starved bank of moss
Till that May morn,
Blue ran the flash across:
Violets were born!

Sky—what a scowl of cloud
Till, near and far,
Ray on ray split the shroud;
Splendid, a star!

World—how it walled about Life with disgrace
Till God's own smile came out;
That was thy face!

—Robert Browning.

Queen Margherita.

Queen Margherita of Italy is devotedly fond of literature and the fine arts. Sig. Bonghi, formerly minister of public instruction, an erudite Greek scholar, and the translator of Plato, is an habitue of the Quirinal; as are also Sig. Minghetti, who has been over and over again president of the council; Sig. Massari, a deputy and journalist; the Senator Prati, a poet; and, above all, Baron de Keudall, the German ambassador, who is himself a musical composer, and who has made Queen Margherita an admirer of Mendelssohn and Wagner. Among the ladies who frequent by invitatin the Palace is the Princess Triggano, an American heiress married to the Prince of that name, whose parents, of the bluff Yankee type, create no little amusement among the other ladies of honor. The princess has deservsdly attained a high reputation for beauty and talent at the Italian court.

The Trade in Tropic Woods.

The traffic of this country in tropic timber is annually becoming more important and valuable. Fleets of freight steamers and of fast-sailing schooners and brigs from Boston New York, Philadelphia, and Baltimore pry into every Bay, River and creek along the coasts of intertropical America, and exchange cargoes of western produce and breadstuffs for tropic woods of all descriptions. The dye wood trade was one of the most valuable branches of the vast American commerce monopolized by Spain during the colonial regime. Annual fleets visited the ports at Campeche. TaSasco, Yucatan, Belize, Honduras, Costa Rica, the Isthmus of Panama, and the northern shores of Columbia and Venezuela, and, after discharging their freights of European goods, loaded with tropic products, principally dye and furniture woods. From Spain these articles were re-shipped to different European countries.

Thus for more than two hundred years the forests of the gulf coast of Mexico and the Caaribbean coasts of Central and South America, together with those of Jamaica, of Cuba and of Hayti have yielded to Europe thor rich tributes of tropic timber. But at length the supply, in many places, has begun to diminish, but not the quantity of wood spontaneously produced. The rivers, creeks, and bays that indent the coast, or empty their waters into the gulf or Caribbean have at length become almost denuded of trees. The wood-cutters find their trade less profitable, for as the remaining forests are far from the coast, transportation of logs to the place of shipment has become an important item of expense. For that reason the governments of the several Spanish American republics washed by the gulf and Caribbean sea are bending their efforts toward bringing about rail communication between their seaports and their interior cities, plantations, forests and mines. British Honduras, Gauatemala, Spanish Honduras, Costa Rica, Nicaragua, Columbia, and Venezuela have begun or have projected the construction of railroads which will penetrate the vast forests and bring to the coast, at a minimum rate of freight, cedar, sapodilla, mahogany, zapote, fustic, logwood, and all of the various kinds of dye and furniture woods in use, besides many other classes not yet introduced.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

In the Greek Chamber of Deputies on Monday a proposal was offered to proceed with the discussion of the budget. The Opposition protested on the ground of informality and retired in a body. The Ministerialists then adopted the proposal. M. Tricoupis said if the Opposition persisted in retiring, the Government would ask the Chamber to vote the budget without further debate.

COREA.

The Language and Religion of the Natives.

The language of the Corea is described as being different from the Chinese and the Manchu: although there is no doubt that it has borrowed many words from both languages, especially from the former. Most names of dignities and public functions, many names of professions, trades, and those relating to natural history, instruments, and utensils have been taken from the Chinese, and in the transfer have undergone but little alteration. Indeed, in the spoken language the people combine native words with Chinese to express even the commonest things. The Corean has not adopted many words from the Japanese, although it has a few striking grammatical affinities with that language. The Corean alphabet—and, considering their geographical and political relations, it is rather extraordinary that they should have an alphabet at all, and that they have not initiated the Chinese in their written character—the Corean alphabet has thirteen vowels and fourteen consonants: and, with a linguistic hospitality unknown to the social life of the country, has five other characters, which are used for the transcription of foreign words. The substantives are for the most part composed of only one or two syllables, and the whole language is an illustration of the principle of employing a minimum of inflectione.

It is difficult to arrive at the religion of the Corea, and among the educated classes nearly the only system having any manifest vitality is the worship of their ancestors. Their deities thus being eminently moral deities, the ceremonies of religion group themselves very much around funerals, sepulchres, and mourning. Still the mass of the people are reputed to be adherents of Budhism, which, according to the Corean tradition, was introduced into the peninsula in the fourth century of our era. For a considerable period it had the honor of being the official creed, but gave place in the fourteenth century to the doctrine of Confucius, which continues to the present moment as the established religion. In its main features the Confucianism of Corea is identical with the Chinese system, but its secularism is relieved by its assimilation of various popular superstitions. The belief in evil spirits, for instance, is widespread, and the serpent, as in some other regions of the east, is an object of superstitious respect. Instead of killing it, the Corean feeds it regularly as his domestic animals. Of first importance for the happiness of a family is the preservation of the ancestral fire, and every housewife has all the responsibility and anxiety of a vestal virgin. Corea is the paradise of astrologers and fortune-tellers, who swarm throughout the country. The blind have the reputation of being seers and prophets, endowed with a special aptitude, and it not unnaturally follows that a large proportion of the persons thus afflicted make a market of the superior mental vision with which they are accredited. In the capital these blind seers are formed into a corporation, legally recognized, and their services are in great request for the discovery of secrets, the foretelling of the future, and the exorcising of devils. In performing this latter function they rely mainly on the noise they make to frighten the spirits, whom they ultimately catch in a bottle and carry of in triumph. The bottle would thus appear to be the receptacle for evil spirits all the world over. —London Society.

Parsimony in the Army.

Mark Twain's illustration of meanness must be familiar to a large proportion of English readers. One of the quarry men belonging to a mining company was, he tells us, blown up to a terrific height by an explosion of gunpowder. but, returning to earth comparatively uninjured, had his wages stopped for the time he was in the air. Preposterous and outre as this reads, we venture to think that it has been paralleled within the last two months by the action of the Indian military authorities at a station that shall be nameless, but which we may so far indicate as to say that it is in the province of Oude. It will be best told in a verbatim extract from a private letter from an officer stationed there, which we have been permitted to see. "A curious and rather laughable (in the sequel) thing happened," he says, "during the cholera here; a gunner was at his last gasp, he had no perceptible pulse, and was as black all over as one's shoes; so that the head doctor gave orders for his coffin to be made in order that he might be buried at once, and wrote to the commanding officer of the battery, and told him that the man had about an hour to live, and that he had better make arrangements for the funeral. Well, the C. O. and his sub were playing racquets, and after they had finished they both dressed in uniform, and went off to the man's funeral. But he got well after all, and I'm hanged if they didn't stick him in for the price of his coffin!" We do not, by the way, find the prospect of being subjected to such utterly detestable parsimony as this held out among toe "advantages" of joining the Army detailed in the placards now so conspicuously displayed at every post-office in the kingdom. The unfortunate gunner, whose absolutely true story we have narrated, is unlikely to prove in future a very zealous missionary in the recruiting interest. That a man for whom a successful General has some object in providing should get £500 for bringing home despatches announcing a victory, while the miserable pittance of a private soldier is stopped to pay for a coffin which he (happily) never filled, would seem to indicate that Army Reform is but very superficial even now, after all that has been said and done. At all events, the gross case o which we have given the particulars, should it come under the notice of Lord Hartington, may possibly induce him to institute some enquiry into the spirit in which the Queen's Regulations are interpreted and administered in our Indian Empire.—Echo.

The Boston Journal of Chemistry says that in France manufacturers are using an imitation of gold made of 100 parts of copper, 14 of zinc, 6 of magnesia, 3.6 each of sal ammoniac, limestone, and cream of tartar. The alloy is represented as being fine-grained, taking a high polish, and not easily oxidized.

Developing a Boy's Brain.

A teacher had charge of a school in a country town early in her career, and among her scholars was a boy about 14 years old, who cared very little about study, and showed no interest apparently in anything connected with the school. Day after day he failed in his lessons, and detentions after school hours and notes to his widowed mother had no effect. One day the teacher had sent him to his seat, after a vain effort to get from him a correct answer to questions in grammar, and, feeling somewhat nettled, she watched his conduct. Having taken his seat, he pushed the book impatiently aside, and, espying a fly, caught it with a dexterous sweep of the hand and then betook himself to a close inspection of the insect. For fifteen minutes or more the boy was thus occupied, heedless of surroundings, and the expression of his face told the teacher that it was more than idle curiosity that possessed his mind. A thought struck her, which she put into practice at the first opportunity that day. "Boys," said she, "what can you tell me about flies?" and calling some of the brightest by name, she asked them if they could tell her something of a fly's constitution and habits. They had very little to say about the insect. They often caught one, but only for sport, and did not think it worth while to study so common an insect. Finally she asked the dunce, who had silently, but with kindling eyes, listened to what his schoolmates hesitatingly said. He burst out with a description of the head, eyes, wings and feet of the little creature, so full and enthusiastic that the teacher was astonished and the whole school struck with wonder. He told how it walked and how it ate, and many things which were entirely new to his teacher. So when he had finished she said: "Thank you! You have given us a real lecture on natural history, and you have learned it all yourself."

After the school closed that afternoon she had a long talk with the boy, and found that he was fond of going into the woods and collecting insects and watching birds, but that his mother thought he was wasting his time. The teacher, however, wisely encouraged him in this pursuit, and asked him to bring beetles and butterflies and caterpillars to school, and tell what he knew about them. The boy was delighted by this unexpected turn in affairs, and in a few days the listless dunce was the marked boy of that school. Books on natural history were procured for him and a world of wonder opened to his appreciative eyes. He read and studied and examined; he soon understood the necessity of knowing something of mathematics, geography and grammar for the carrying on of his favorite study, and he made rapid progress in his classes. In short, twenty years later he was eminent as a naturalist, and owed his success, as he never hesitated to acknowledge, to that discerning teacher.t

BUBBLES.

Fritz named his dog Non Sequitur, because he does not follow.

A member of the school board said: "Well, children, you spell well and you reads well, but you hain't sot still."

McStaggert (on his way home, having jumped over the shadows of the lamp-posts, etc., brought up by that of the kirk steeple); "E-h!" (Pauses.) "Ne' mind! 'Sh no help for it! (Pulls up his pants.) Shall we have to wade thish!"

At one of the customary school examinations an urchin was asked, "What is the chief use of bread?" to which he replied, with an archness that implied What a simpleton you must be to ask such a question! "To spread butter upon."

"Oh yes," said the engineer, "I had a chance to become a hero by sticking to my post when the collision came, but when I reflected that my name would be spelled five hundred different ways in the newspapers I changed my mind and jumped."

When a man is excited he is very apt to talk without thinking. An Austin landlord called on his tenant the tenth time for his rent. "I haven't got any money," was the response. "Well, if you haven't got money enough to pay your rent you ought to build yourself a house."

"Gen'lemen. I dont b'lieve in crossin' or changin' de breed of our hogs. De old-fashioned hog is plenty good. I owes the saddest time of my life to a fine hog. Ef he hadn't been a fine hog I wouldnenter paid no' tention to him. Well, I was 'rested on account ob dat fine hog and sent to the penitentiary fur a year. Don't bring no fine breed o' hogs into dis neighborhood."

Bubb Doddington was very lethargic. Falling asleep one day after dinner with Sir Richard Temple and Lord Cobham, the latter reproached Doddingtonn with his drowsiness. Doddington denied having been asleep, and to prove he had not offered to repeat all Lord Cobham had been saying. Cobham challenged him to do so. Doddington repeated a story, and Lord Cobham owned he had been telling it. "Well," said Doddington, "and yet I did not hear a word of it; but I went to sleep because I knew that about this time of day you would tell that story."

Diphtheria in Russia.

The Times correspondent of St Petersburg says:—Very great concern is manifested in St. Petersburg at the enormous increase of mortality arising from epedemic diseases, chiefly diphtheria. The police and the various medical and sanitary bodies have concocted a general plan of energetic action for dealing with the outbreak and disinfecting houses. The Empress came to town this morning for the purpose of opening a new female academy, established as a trial of a new system of practical education for women—a duty hitherto entirely neglected in Russia.

Tipplers Attention!

In each of nearly three dozen samples of "bitters" sold as medicines for disease, the State Assayer of Rhode Island discovered that they contained from seven to forty-three per cent. of alcohol—more than most beer, almost as much as whiskey and heavy wines. Many people who conscientiously abstain from drinking wine or beer, are consumers of "bitters."

LORD CARNARVON.

A Nobleman of Ancient Lineage and Long Descent.

"Yes, sir, that is a famous house," said a Welshman, addressing an Englishman, and pointing to an old tumble-down building. Out of it came the dukes of Beaufort, and the earls of Pembroke, and the earls of Carnarvon, and (which was intended for a climax) the Joneses of Pantglas." The Saxon, a rude churl, asked who lived in the house at that moment. "I," proudly answered his informant. "Then, my dear sir," was the reply, "I strongly advise you to come out of it, too, or it will fall about your ears."

But yet the Briton's instinct was probably the finer, for, after all, we do still recognize the claims of birth, and in heraldic honors the house of Herbert, which is also connected with the noble houses of Somerset and Jones, yields to none.

Henry Howard Molyneux Herbert, fourth earl of Carnarvon, springs from a common ancestor with Lord Pembroke, the head of the Herberts (as far as rank and precedence go), for the duke of Beaufort can claim no more than the honor of being a Herbert on the distaff side, and, as the homely French proverb puts it, la truie n'anoblit pas le cochon. Lord Carnarvon's second Christian name indicates that he has Howard bleod in his veins. Descendants by his second wife will have still more. His first wife was a Stanhope, a sister to the charming young lady to whom Macaulay addressed a valentine, now historic, and who married Lord Beauchamp. She, too, died before her time.

So much for birth. As for breeding, Lord Carnarvon is an Etonian and a house-man. What is more, the honors list of Michaelmas term, 1852, in Literis Humanioribus contined, among other names that of "Carnarvon, Honorabilissimus Comes de," and it was placed in the first ciass. The most notable of Lord Carnarvon's fellow "firsts" was Henry Chanier, of Pembroke. Arthur Wellesley Peel took a "second" at the same time.

We have, then, a veritable noble, of ancient lineage, and a scholar to boot. Why has he been comparatively a failure? "Too clever by half" would be the verdict of the Tory squire—a species by no means extinct, as some persons fondly imagine. "Not quite clever enough," might be the opinion of a philosophic Liberal. For one thing, Lord Carnarvon has not quite had his fairchance. It may be pleasant to become one's own father at 18, especially when such emancipation means the lordship of more than fifty square miles of English soil and the enjoyment of a rental of nearly £400,000 a year; but if one happens to inherit a peerage at the same time, ambitious prospects are apt to be marred. Lord Carnarven never sat in the House of Commons, and it is much to his credit that, in spite of such a disadvantage he managed to push his way so soon into the front rank of politicians. Possibly the late Lord Derby counted for something in the matter. He took a fancy to Lord Carnarvon after hearing the latter's maiden speech in the upper house. Disraeli hardly shared his chief's opinion, but "we'll just try him," he said, at last,—that is, in 1858, when was formed the second of those wonderful Conservative ministries which solved the problem of governing the country awhile by means of a minority of the House of Commons. Lord Carnarvon, who was not quite 27, was named under secretary for the colonies. He had scarcely any opportunity of making a blunder in 1858-9; and in 1866, the year of the third "miraculous" cabinet, he found himself at the head of his old department. In a very few months the clever man managed to quarrel with his colleagues—the subject is one which excited a good many persons at the time, but which is now rather to be laughed at. Disraeli, if I remember rightly, wanted to give the suffrage to £6 householders, while Lord Carnarvon had a conscientious objection to going beyond £5 19s. 11d. Then Disraeli lost patience and gave us the pretty measure of reform by which we still profit. Lord Carnarvon, in his turn, parted with taet and temper. "I fancied I had been acting with gentlemen," he exclaimed. But he accepted office again with these persons, who were less than his ideal of gentlemen, a few years later. By and by he resigned a second time—after a terrible wiggling, administered him by the prime minister in full cabinet. A satirist of the day represented Lord Carnarvon as expressing a heartfelt aversion for Lord Beaconsfield, and for a notable reason:

Why, he frowns if I publicly Stand on my head!

—London Truth.

Type Size.

Originally there were but seven sizes. The first was called prima. It is now known as two-line English. The second was secunda, now ourdouble pica—in France, great paragon. The third was tertia, at present our great primer. Then there was a middle size, ssill called in German mittel, but it is now our English. After there came the three sizes on the opposite side of the scale—pica, long primer, and brevier: in Germany the name secunda, tertia, and mittel are still retained.

Pica, in France and Germany, is called Cicero, because the works of that author were originally printed in it. English printers so styled it from being the type in which the Ordinal, or Service Book of the Roman Church was originally set. The Ordinal was also at first called the Pica. Bourgeoise was so named because it was introduced into the country from France, where it was originaly dedicated to the "bourgeoise" or citizen printers of that capital. Brevier obtained its name from having been first used for printing the Breviary or Roman Catholic abbreviated Church Service Book. Minion is also of French origin, and was so termed owing to having rapidly become a special favorite on its introduction in that country. La Mignone, is "the darling." Nonpariel was so named because at the time of its introduction, it had "no equal," being the smallest and finest type than produced. Pearl is of English origin. The French have a type of the same size which they call "Parisienne." It is a smaller type than the nonpareil, and was thought "the pearl of type." Diamond is another fancy name given to what was regarded at the time of its origin, as the ultima thule of letter foundry achievement.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

INTERESTING ITEMS GATHERED FROM OUR EXCHANGES AND OTHERWISE FOR THE READERS OF THE "STANDARD."

Priceville.

Christmas and New Year's passed off pleasantly, the surrounding country being well represented by pleasure seekers.

The new grist mill is rapidly approaching completion, there being four millwrights constantly at work, and when completed will be second to none in the county of Grey for excellency of machinery and durability of workmanship. A rumor gained currency that the saw mill would not be put in operation this coming season, and was a source of regret to many, but I am now happy to be able to inform your numerous readers in this town that Mr. John McLeod has again the mill, and is now busily engaged in putting it into thorough repair with his usual energy in everything he undertakes; and from his prompt disposition in filling lumber orders courteous manner to all, and upright dealing in the past, we have reason to doubt but that all who favor him with their patronage in the future will receive satisfactory treatment at his hands.

It is general rumor that Mr. McCowan will convert the old grist mill into a carding mill next season, and eventually into a woollen factory; and if so will supply a want long felt in the surrounding country.

Mr. James Tyson has opened a grocery and provision store opposite the Brown hotel.

Numerous building enterprises are spoken of for next season, among others that of a cabinet factory. So mote it be.

Our streets presented quite a lively appearance on Christmas day with numerous merry sleighing parties.

The fourth new powerful turbine wheel was lowered one day last week into the new flouring mill. It will also be supplied with steam at low water.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Henderson, of Bradford, U. S. A., is spending the holidays with friends here.

Flesherton.

Messrs. H. Hooper, John Whitton, and J. W. Armstrong were elected Public School Trustees by acclamation.

Mr. Elder is going to South Carolina for the good of his health.

Mr. M. Richardson was elected School Trustee.

We understand that Mr. W. H. Brown, the popular watch maker and dentist of this place, will shortly take up his abode in Markdale. Mr. Brown has made many friends during his short stay here, and his removal to another sphere of action will be generally regretted.—Advance.

Flesherton Sabbath School Anniversary Tea meeting, which has long been an established institution of the village, came off as usual on the evening of New Year's day, and was patronized by a large and appreciative audience. The tables were supplied with an abundant supply of the best, to which ample justice was done, after which a lengthy programme was rendered, consisting of music, by the school, recitations and dialogues by the children. Addresses were also delivered by Revs. Messrs. Edmunds and Snowden. Rev D. C. McDowell occupied the chair. The report of the school was read by Mr. J. H. Strain, Secretary of the school, and was most satisfactory and encouraging, showing the school to be in a flourishing condition, thoroughly equipped with a good balance in the treasury, independent of the proceeds of the entertainment, which amounted to one hundred dollars. The entertainment, which was altogether the most successful held for many years, was brought to a close by presenting Miss Christoe, organist, of Flesherton Methodist Church, (on the eve of her departure to attend the Whitby Ladies' College) with an address from the choir and Sabbath School, accompanied by a beautiful gold watch. Miss Christoe has given her services gratuitously as organist for the past six years and in that time we are informed has been absent only five Sabbaths, three of which she was absent from home and two indisposed—a record hard to beat.

P. S.—One Department of the report above referred to, namely that of the librarian, is perhaps unsurpassed, if equaled in the history of Sabbath Schools, the library has been in the charge of Mr. Wm. Clayton for the past eleven years. It contains about 500 volumes, has been freely circulated and in that time only six books have been lost to the school, not one in the last five years. What school can produce an equal record.

SUDDEN DEATH.—An old man named D. Smith, a shoemaker by trade, aged about 75 years, in the employ of Mr. Wm. Barnhouse, of Flesherton, went to work this (Tuesday) morning as usual. Shortly after returning to the house he ate his breakfast and went to the woodshed to split some wood, where after a few minutes he dropped dead of heart disease. The Coroner being called pronounced an inquest unnecessary and he was buried this evening in the Flesherton cemetery. He has no friends in this section of the country.

Robt. S. Rae.

TAILOR,

SYDENHAM STREET,

MARKDALE.

AN IMMENSE STOCK OF

BOOTS & SHOES

JUST ARRIVED AT THE

TORONTO HOUSE

BEST QUALITY AND LOWEST PRICE.

STOCK COMPLETE IN

Dry Goods and Groceries!

PRICES ALWAYS RIGHT.

OUR THIRTY CENT TEA

Is the wonder of the day A trial solicited.

WM. BROWN.

Markdale, Oct. 11th, 1882.

A. M'INTYRE

TEA! TEA! TEA!

A. M'INTYRE

Flour, Flour, Flour.

GROCERIES

McINTYRE'S
LIQUORS! LIQUORS
McINTYRE'S
Cigars, Cigars.
McINTYRE'S
Coffee, Coffee.

McINTYRE'S
MEAL! MEAL! MEAL!
McINTYRE'S
Pork, Pork, Pork.
McINTYRE'S
Teas, Teas.

GROCERIES

And everything kept in a first-class Grocery and Liquor Store. always on hand, CHEAP FOR CASH.

MARKDALE

Sash and Door Factory

SASH, DOORS,
BLINDS
MOULDINGS,
HOLLOW BATTONS,
FRAMES

Lumber, Lath and Shingles,

Always on Hand. Orders Promptly Filled.

The Subscriber wishes to return thanks to the people of Markdale and vicinity, for the very liberal patronage they have given him in the past, and hopes by close attention to business to merit a continuance of the same.

I have now extended my business, and will in future keep a full Stock of

PINE LUMBER.

Direct from the North Shore.

ALL SIZES, DRESSED AND UNDRESSED,

All Kinds of Plain and Fancy Turning

Done in a first class manner.

THOS. McNEA.

Markdale May 27th. 1881. 37-tf

GENERAL

Blacksmithing

Flesherton Station.

The subscriber begs to announce to the inhabitants of Flesherton, Markdale and Priceville, and surrounding country, that he has commenced business at Flesherton Station, where he hopes by satisfactory work and moderate rates to secure a share of public patronage.

HORSE-SHOEING A SPECIALTY.

And guaranteed that in a case of interfereing horses he will cure the defect in two shoeings or no charge will be made for the second shoeing.

A TRIAL SOLICITED.

HENRY WHITE.

Flesherton Station, Oct. 17, 1882. 110

NOTICE TO FARMERS.

BUSINESS STILL INCREASING WITH

W. J. ROWE

—AT THE—

Barrhead Mill

UNDER THE OLD PROCESS.

Gristing and Chopping done every working day. Farmers from a distance can have their stuff home with them the same day.

All orders for Flour and Feed promptly filled.

W. J. ROWE, "Barrhead Mills."

October 26th 1882. 113-126

W. BULMER,

The People's Photograph

FLESHERTON.

Continues to take Pictures,
Do Copying and Enlarging in good

FRAMES and FRAME FIXI

in great variety and latest designs at desperate low prices.

W. BULM

ARTEMESIA WAREHOU

FLESHERTON STATION.

Dry Goods, Hardware, Crockery, Boots and

Groceries, Provisions, &c. Stock kept full and we goods received every week.

Cash paid for all kinds of Grain at the Sta

MY BRANCH STORE AT EUGENIA

replenished with new goods every week. For sale cheap, for c

My Saw Mill, Shingle Factoty, and Lime

AT LITTLE FALLS, ARE IN OPERATION

All kinds Saw Logs bought at the Mill or sawn on

Lumber, Lath, Broom Handles, Shingles and Lime for

WM. HO

November 7th, 1882.

TORONTO HOU

FLESHERTON.

Stock Fully Complete. Unusually

VERY ATTRACTIVE, AND

CHEAPER THAN THE CHEAP

EVERY DEPARTMENT SPECIALLY ATTRA

Variety and Value Unsurpassed

DRY GOODS DEPARMEN

Is this season very complete with a very large stock of Dress Goo prising in part Cashmeres in all colors. Worsted Wool Goo endless variety.

Boot and Shoe Department.

Would call special attention of close buyers as my stock is unusual from the best manufacturers and at rock bottom prices.

ORDERED CLOTHING.

Has been exceedingly brisk this season, on account of which I have the largest and best stock of Tweeds, Coatings, Trowserings, and ings in this section of country. As I have always led the trade in partment buyers will find it to their advantage to call before pur elsewhere.

Millinery Department.

Under the able management of a first-class milliner, with plenty of ance, will be found unusually attractive with the prettiest and most able, and cheapest stock to be found in the county. Ladies, it you good to call and look at the stock.

Hardware and Grocery Department.

Is always fully assorted and complete with the best goods, at the lowe sible price.

☞ I am the only constant and reliable buyer of Grain and Farm duce in Flesherton, and for which I will pay the highest price in any quantity of good dry, sound grain, which I would specially ask to clean well. A call solicited.

R. J. SPROULE

Flesherton, Oct. 3rd, 1882.

Markdale PUMP Factor

J. G. IRVING,

MAKER OF ALL KINDS OF PUMPS,

DROP VALVE PUMPS, CYLINDER PUMPS, CISTERN PU FORCE PUMPS,

Also, ALL KINDS OF IRON PUMPS SUPPLIED.

Satisfaction guaranteed on all my work; the proof of it is found fact that I am doing a larger business now than ever was done in Mar the Pump business. Remember the stand, 1 door north of Rutledge's

Sydenham Street, Markdale.

Markdale Standard

Vol. 2.—No. 18. MARKDALE, ONT., JAN. 11, 1883. No. 122.

Markdale Hotel.

Good Accommodation for Travellers. 'Bus to and from all trains. Charges moderate.
Markdale. A. RUTLEDGE, Prop.

COMMERCIAL HOTEL.

PRICEVILLE, Ont.

Large and commodious Sample Rooms Good Bed Rooms, &c. The Bar and larde well supplied with the best the market affords; good Stabling and attentive Hostler's
THOS. ATKINSON, Proprietor

CHATSWORTH HOUSE

(LATE MORROW HOUSE,)
CHATSWORTH, Ont.

THE undersigned having purchased the above property, has had it thoroughly renovated and refurnished throughout beside making other new improvements, which will greatly add to the comfort and convenience of his guests, would respectfully solicit the patronage of the public generally. The best brands of liquors and cigars always in stock. Good meal and comfortable rooms guaranteed. Good stabling and attentive hostler.
—C. H. MATHEWS, Prop. 114.

Miscellaneous.

John McDonald,
CHATSWORTH,

DIVISION Court Clerk. Issuer of Marriage Licenses, Commissioner in B.R., Conveyancer, &c. Deeds, Mortgages, Wills, &c. attended to promptly, accurately, neatly, and cheaply. Private funds to lend in small sums on easy terms. Notes discounted

MISS LAMB,

DRESS-MAKER. UP-STAIRS IN Douglas' Block. Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges moderate.
Markdale, Nov. 15th, 1882. 114-3m.

R. M. Galbraith,

AUCTIONEER AND GENERAL LAND Agent, Williamsford Station. Auction Sales attended in all parts of the County. Goods sold on commission. Rates moderate. Pianos, Organs, and Sewing Machines; also Fruit and Ornamental Trees, Vines, Agricultural Implemennts, and Machinery of all kinds on sale.
Williamsford, Jan. 27, 1881.

T. E. DAVIS.

BUILDER & CONTRACTOR, (Stone and Brick). After completing 13 buildings his season is still on the track and is still prepared to do all kinds of stone and brick work, plastering and tuck pointing. Those who contemplate building will find it to their advantage to give him a call.
Residence corner of Brown and Sproule Stetes. MARKDALE. 16-v

MISS WELSH,

Dress & Mantlemaker. Charges moderate. Satisfaction guaranteed. Hill's Block, Sydenham street.
Markdale, Nov. 6th, 1882. 113-126

Wm. Brown,

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.
Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.
N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate security.

LOYAL MARKDALE LODGE,

Of C. O. O. F. No. 78, will meet in their hall on Monday evening, Jan. 22nd, at eight o'clock p. m.
108 W. L. YOUNG, Sec'y.

EUCENIA
Grist, Saw and Lath Mills

Having made extensive improvements in my Grist Mill I feel confident I can give good satisfaction.

GOOD FLOUR ALWAYS ON HAND.

Chopping Done Every Day.

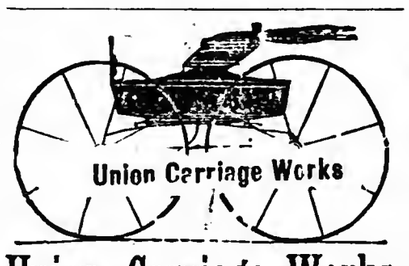
Custom Sawing and Bills Filled on the shortest notice.

LUMBER AND LATH ALWAYS ON HAND.

Cherry, Butternut, White Ash, Black Ash Basswood, Pine and Hemlock Logs wanted
69ly. M. AKITT, Eugenia.

$66 a week in your own town. $5 outfit free. No risk. Everything new. Capital not required. We will furnish you everything. Many are making fortunes. Ladies make as much as men, and boys and girls make great pay. Reader, if you want a business at which you can make great pay all the time you work, write for particulars to H. HALLETT & Co., Portland, Maine. 71-126

$2 Waterv. mass winders $2.25. White metal Hunting Case $3. Imitation gold $3. Solid gold $12. Chronometer and best gold watches proportionately cheap. Valuable cat. free. Your own size or ornamental pamphlet. Watches sent C.O.D. anywhere to be examined before buying. Any watch chain sent by mail for 25c. Jewelry, Key Rings, Charms, Lockets, Studs, Sleeve Buttons, Scarf Pins, Rings, Spectacles, Eye Glasses, Opera Glasses, Telescopes, Pocket Knives, Razors, Shears, Pistols, Guns, Fishing Tackle, Base Ball Goods, Musical Instruments, Drums, Fifes, Accordeons, Harmonicas, Violins, Guitars, Flutes, Clarionets, Cornets, Trombones, Bugles, Sheet Music, Music Books, Strings, Boxes, Rolls, Etc. Etc. Etc. Send for catalogue. Address, THOMAS CLARK, 49 Dey St., New York.



ROBT. ASKIN,
MARKDALE,
Has opened out a First-Class
Furniture!
—AND—
UNDERTKING ESTABLISHMENT,

And therefore has supplied a want long felt, especially in the Undertaking Line.
COFFINS,
CASKETS, SHROUDS,
and all
FUNERAL FURNISHINGS,
supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse
for hire at moderate rates.

FURNITURE!

From the Common to the Best and Latest Styles,
in everything in the line.
Call and see for yourselves.
ROBT. ASKIN.

Union Carriage Works.

All work manufactured from
FIRST CLASS MATERIAL
In the Latest and Best Improved Style, and finished with English Varnish.

Painting & Trimming Rigs
will receive prompt attention.
All Repairs executed in the shortest possible time consistent with good workmanship.
GOOD WORK A SPECIALITY.
Remember the Shop, opposite the Cheapside
D. J. SHANAHAN,
Proprietor.
Markdale, Dec. 2nd, 1881. 64.

HAIR CUTTING AND SHAVING
By T. D. Smith.

Razors, Straps, and Shaving Brushes for sale. Razors sharpened.
☞ Orders filled for Tomb Stones.

STARTLING DISCOVERY!
LOST MANHOOD RESTORED.
A victim of youthful imprudence causing Premature Decay, Nervous Debility, Lost Manhood, etc., having tried in vain every known remedy, has discovered a simple self cure, which he will send FREE to his fellow-sufferers, address J. M. REEVES, 43 Chatham St., N. Y.

WARNING!

There is great danger of taking cold from wet feet If you want to Guard Against Sickness!
Keep your feet dry and warm by procuring your BOOTS!
—FROM—
KAY & THOMAS.

Satisfaction Guaranteed. Medicated Cork Soles, all sizes, kept on hand. Remember the place opposite the new STANDARD Office. 49

Best business now before the public. You can make money faster at work for us than at anything else. Capital not needed. We will start you. $12 a day and upwards made at home by the industrious. Men, women, boys and girls wanted everywhere to work for us. Now is the time. You can work in spare time only or give your whole time to the business. You can live at home and do the work. No other business will pay you nearly as well. No one can fail to make enormous pay by engaging at once. Costly outfit and terms free. Money made fast, easily and honorably. Address TRUE & Co., Augusta, Maine. 71-126

REST AND COMFORT TO THE SUFFERING
Brown's Household Panacea
has no equal for relieving pain, both internal and external. It cures pain in the Side, Back or Bowels, Sore Throat, Rheumatism, Toothache, Lumbago and any kind of a Pain or Ache. "It will most surely quicken the Blood and heal, as its acting power is wonderful." "Brown's Household Panacea," being acknowledged as the great Pain Reliever, and of double the strength of any other Elixer or Liniment in the world, should be in every family handy for use when wanted "as it really is the best remedy in the world for Cramps in the Stomach, and Pains and Aches of all kinds," and is for sale by all Druggists at 25 cents a bottle. 75-127

EARS FOR THE MILLION

HOO CHOO'S BALSAM OF SHARK'S OIL positively Restores the Hearing, and is the Only Absolute Cure for Deafness known. This Oil is abstracted from peculiar species of small White Shark, caught in the Yellow Sea, known as CARCHARODON RONDELETII. Every Chinese fisherman knows it. Its virtues as a restorative of hearing were discovered by a Buddhist Priest were discovered about the year 1410. Its cures were so numerous, and many so seemingly miraculous, that the remedy was officially proclaimed over the entire Empire. Its use became so universal, that for over 300 years no Deafness has existed among the Chinese people. Sent, charges prepaid, to any address at $1.00 per bottle.

Hear what the Deaf say:
It has performed a miracle in my case.
I have no unearthly noises in my head, and hear much better.
I have been greatly benefited.
My deafness helped a great deal—think another bottle will cure me.

Its virtues are unquestionable and its curative character absolute, as the writer can personally testify, both from experience and observation. Write at once to Haylock and Jenney, 7 Dey Street, New York, inclosing $1 and you will receive by return a remedy that will enable you to hear like anybody else, and whose curative effects will be permanent. You will never regret doing so."—EDITOR OF MERCANTILE REVIEW.

☞To avoid loss in the mails, please send money by Registered Letter.
Only imported by HAYLOCK & JENNEY, late Haylock & Co.,
Sole Agents for America. 7 DEY ST NEW YORK
93-145.

Wm. Lucas & Co.,
BANKERS,

Money Loaned
IN large or small amounts, at all times, on good endorsed notes, or on collateral security.

INTEREST AT 6 PER CENT.
Allowed on Savings Deposits.

☞Drafts issued and Collections made on points, at lowest rates.
W.M. LUCAS,
Manager.
September 23. 1880. 2-ly

JOHN NOBLE,

MARKDALE.

GENER'L BLACKSMITH

HORSE SHOEING
A SPECIALTY.

A CARD.

To all who are suffering from the errors and indiscretions of youth, nervous weakness, early decay, loss of manhood, &c., I will send a receipe that will cure you, FREE OF CHARGE. This great Remedy was discovered by a missionary in South America. Send a self-addressed envelope to Rev. JOSEPH T. INMAN, Station D, New York City.

BILLIARD ROOM

D. M. HOGAN, PROPRIETOR.

Next door to Trimble & Wright's, Reid's Blk.

First-class tables. Cigars and temperance drinks to be had. 116.ly.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

INTERESTING ITEMS GATHERED FROM OUR EXCHANGES AND OTHERWISE FOR THE READERS OF THE "STANDARD."

Chatsworth.

The steam grist mill has changed hands, Messrs. Malcolm and Alexander McNabb having purchased it from Messrs. Porteous for $4,000, and will commence business at once.

Mr. Jas. Mitchell, of Sullivan, who left home about three months ago has not been heard of since, and considerable anxiety is felt as to what has become of him.

The Methodist S. S. Christmas tree and concert, which came off on the 29th ult., was a success. Mr. Simpson, Superintendent, was presented with a beautiful family Bible by the school,

Dundalk.

The post office has been removed from Mr. G. R. Middleton's store to that of J. J. Middleton, Esq.

ACCIDENT AT CORBETTON.—On Tuesday last Malcolm Gillies had his left hand very severely injured by a circular saw. It was found necessary to amputate the hand, which was successfully done by Dr. Griffin, of Dundalk, and Dr. Norton, of Shelburne.

G. R. Middleton is doing an extensive business in pork packing.

Flesherton.

Our skating rink opened last week.

Our Alphabetical "Stoney" has skipped, leaving many unsettled accounts.

4th Line.—The Orange Soiree held at the 4th line, Artemesia, on Friday the 29th ult., was a grand success. The Hall was packed. Speeches were delivered by Revs. A. Wilson, Chisholm, Dowler and Dr. Christoe. Music by Miss Christoe and Pedlar Bros. The spread was excelleent. Proceeds $50.—Advance.

Miss Bennet, of Tara, is in town spendin a few days with friends.

Miss E. C. Kirvan has opened a new dres making parlor opposite Clark's baker shop.

Rev. Mr. Wilson (Presbyterian) and Rev. Mr. McDiarmid (Canada Methodist) exchanged pulpits last Sabbath.

ACCIDENT.—On Saturday last Mr. Wm. J. Morrow of Glenelg, met with a serious an possibly fatal accident. While chopping in the bush a tree fell on him, seriously injuring his head and shoulder. He lies in a semi-conscious condition.

The Secretaries of the following Township Agricultural Societies will please let us have a synopsis of their annual meeting, viz:—Artemesia, Holland, Osprey, Euphrasia, and Glenelg.

A farmer while gazing down the hopper in McFarland's elevator lost his balance and took a tumble. He fell headlong about ten feet into a grain bin, but rose up with considerable indignation in his countenance and a gallon of wheat in his mouth.

Our subscribers and others will do us a favor, and assist in making the paper interesting, by sending us particulars of incidents transpiring from time to time in their vicinity. Some times people wonder why such and such a thing did not appear in the paper. Well, we don't often insert items we know nothing about.

Last Friday evening was the time intended for the skating carnival. The rink was there, the ice was there, the Chinese lanterns were there, the refreshments were there, and the proprietor and manager was there, but the maskers came not. True, four or five boys were disguised, one with a white garment better adapted for the silent watches of the night; another gloried in a white hat, borrowed for the occasion. Then Robert marched in with the band, under his arm and gave us the "Blue Alsatian Mountains." Some visitors "dead beat" their way in about nine o'clock. They said the show was no good and demanded refreshments. These were served on the "continental" plan; (not) paid for on the American plan: and swallowed on the Canadian plan. But any who expected to see a good carnival got left worse than a one-armed man at a social.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS.

The New Baby.

"How do you do, little Mary?" said I.

She put her finger in her mouth, but did not speak. I sat on the sofa, holding the new baby. Mary did not like the baby, and that was why she stood ever so far away and frowned.

"Is your dolly pretty well?" I asked.

She blushed and hung her head. Then she ran and climbed upon mamma's bed with that big, wax dolly, and began to cry.

"Dear little Mary!" said mamma, putting her arm around her, and holding her close to her heart. But little Mary only cried the more.

"Oh, Mamma," she said, "I love you, I love pa, I love all the folks, but I don't love the baby! Baby is naughty!"

Mamma looked sad. She knew Mary had not been happy since the little brother came. She did not like to have anyone rock him, or sing to him, or kiss him. She wanted all the kisses herself; and then, too, she was so afraid mamma would forget to love her now that the new baby was here.

Poor little Mary! This was a sad mistake. Her mother's heart was very large,—large enough to hold and love two darling children just as well as one.

I went away, thinking how dear and sweet that baby was, with his soft blue eyes and smiling mouth, and cunning hands; but I did not like to think his sister Mary had frowned at him, and said such unkind words.

Four weeks after this I saw the pretty baby again. He was pale and weak, for he had been very ill; but the doctor said he would soon be well. He lay in his mother's arms, and Mary knelt beside him, kissing his dear little hands, and face, and feet.

"Mary loves her little brother now," said mamma.

"Oh, yes: I knew that the moment I saw her."

"She was very sorry when she thought God was going to take him away," said mamma, "and she means now to be always good to him if God lets him stay here with us."

"Oh, how glad I am!" said I.

And then little Mary hid her face in her baby brother's bosom, and I heard her whisper: "I love mamma, I love papa, I love you, and I love God!"

Tears came to mamma's eyes, but she kissed her little daughter with a tender smile; and I thought I had never, never seen her look so happy before.

SOPHIE MAY.

Playing Gypsies.

Mable and Fay thought it would be nice to play gypsies and steal their baby brother away from mamma. Then they would make her pay piles of money for bringing him back. So they dressed up, and were dreadful-looking gypsies, in slouched hats and long coats. They hid little Georgie carefully on the front porch behind some chairs and an open umbrella.

Mamma was listening, and soon she said: "Where is Georgie! I saw some Gypsies near here to-day; I am afraid they have stolen him." So she looked in all the wrong places she could think of. Then she sent Dinah, the cook, and told her to offer ten dollars for the lost baby.

Presently the two dreadful gypsies came in and asked her if she wished to buy a baby. She paid ten round pieces of guilt paper to the chief of the robbers, which was Fay, and got her dear stolen baby back. Then she "made believe" that she had been very much frightened about Georgie. The gypsies broke down, and one of them wept, because she thought mamma really had been troubled. Then Mrs. Godwin kissed the terrible gypsies and told papa all about it when he came home from the office.

R. W. LOWRIE.

American Fables.

A Fox who was gamboling about had the ill-luck to fall over a cliff, and as he lay on the ground, unable to rise and suffering great pain, along came a Hare.

"Well," said the Fox as he looked up, "the tables are turned. I am your bitter enemy and have often pursued you with intent to murder, but now I am helpless and you can take your revenge."

"Do you expect me to kill you?"

"Naturally I do, and ask the favor that you kill me with a club instead of slowly torturing me to death by singing: 'Only a Pansy Blossom.'"

But the Hare determined to heap coals of fire on his head and prove her own forgiving spirit. She therefore brought him food and water and nursed him until he was quite able to take care of himself. The very next day after they separated the Hare was crossing a field when she found herself pursued by a Fox. After running a long distance she was overtaken, and as she was knocked over she recognized in her assailant the very Fox whose life she had saved.

"Why you are the Fox whom I nursed!" she cried out.

"Is that so?"

"Of course it is! How could you fail to recognize me!"

"Well, fools look so much alike that it is hard to tell who from who. For fear of making a mistake I shall eat you and let the next one go."

THE LION AND THE JACKALS.

One day two Jackals were having a hot dispute as to the origin of man, and were about to come to blows, when along came the Lion, and asked;

"My friends, what seems to be the rumpus here?"

"I claim that man originated from the ape," exclaimed one.

"And I contend that he is descended from the fish," added the other.

"Have either of you any documents or affidavits?"

"None."

"Then I shall claim that man is descended from the giraffe, and being able to roar louder than both of you together, shall carry my point. Be off with you, and as you go remember that arguments on theories test the wind more or as much as they appeal to the head."

The path of duty lies in what is near, and men seek for it in what is remote; the work of duty lies in what is easy, and men seek for it in what is difficult.

TOPICS FOR WOMEN.

Theatre Annoyances.

Who has not sat in a theatre near a bevy of garrulous women? They bring the manners of the street indoor with them, and set their own personal convenience above the rights of persons who have paid for the privilege of silence as well as of secure sitting. A person who desires to be amused or enlightened should not be defrauded by being compelled to hear comments on different persons in the auditorium. Gossip of this or that one of their set, the fashions, etc., run along in uninterrupted succession until one feels like asking them how the usher at the door admitted any one save themselves. Nor are the lords of creation always mindful of the comfort of their fellow-theatregoers. Their system of annoyance, however, is usually of a different nature. Few men at all familiar with the amenities of polite society would crowd past a lady in the drawing-room as it is their custom to do at the theatre, when between the acts they go out into the lobbies to "stretch their legs" or to "see a man." The opening sentence of every act of the play are usually drowned by the tramping of these loungers of the lobby, the view of the stage is effectually cut off as they crowd their way back to their seats. The usher who pounces upon the noisy gallery could direct his attention with good effect to some of the occupants of the parquet who conceive themselves to be the ladies and gentlemen.

A Sunday Sermon.

Who can find a virtuous woman? for her price is far above rubies. Proverbs XXXI., 10.

Her price is far above rubies. She is virtuous; and this means more, far more, than mere personal chastity, and it means that too. A virtuous woman never soils her mouth with foul stories or smutty jokes. She holds aloof from all filthiness, her words are pure and her soul is chaste as her body.

A virtuous woman holds no mean suspicions of other women. She does not hold up her head in horror because she sees something she does not quite understand. A virtuous woman gives every man and woman the benefit of a doubt. Knowing herself pure she believes nothing but good till evil is proven. A virtuous woman is as unsuspicious as a babe. She is not finding insults in every woman's words. If a man does her a kindness or pays her a compliment she is not looking for some evil behind the courtesy. If a man does the same by some lady friend she does not suspect to be or have been paid for in those favors that are legally tender the world over. A virtuous woman believes in virtue, in honor, in truth, in fidelity. And she who does not believe in the possibilities of human purity is only chaste because she is so unattractive that no one has cared to wish her otherwise. Thousands of women who believe themselves paragons of womanly purity, who hurl stones at the unfortunate, who suspect all women of infamy, are only virtuous because their virtue has never been assailed. Incapable of affection or passion, cold, cruel hard and heartless, they are invulnerable where many a better woman falls; but this is not virtue, nor do men recognize it as such. It is a nondescript quality that neither men admire nor women emulate. Don't call yourself a virtuous woman simply because you have never violated the seventh commandment. If your heart holds unclean thoughts, or base suspicions, or if you coin lies to hurt some other woman, or retail unpleasant truths, you are not virtuous, you have no virtue in you. Impure thoughts and bad impressions poison the soul worse than bad actions, that are often only hindered by the speech of people. If you are only virtuous least somebody should know you otherwise, you are not virtuous at all. Be true to your husband, your friends, yourself, and your God.

A Japanese Execution.

The punishment of the rebels who recently attacked the Foreign Legation at Seoul has been a subject of the most intense excitement throughout Japan. A French paper has secured the most authentic account of the ceremony, for it fully deserves such a name. The scene was the Bokwakan, or Government House, in the interior of which the Commander in chief of the Corean army seated himself in full uniform at about five o'clock in the morning. In the background were Corean foot soldiers, and on each side a detachment of Japanese regular soldiers. In the house itself the Commandant was surrounded by officers of the Corean army, armed with bows and arrows. As the time for the great event drew near, the bands composed of drums of all sizes, trumpets and gongs, began to send forth a tremendous and discordant sound. Then two salvos of musketry were fired by the troops. Two standard bearers appeared in the open space, and, after waving their yellow banner with the national arms upon them, retired, leaving the ground clear. Next came the chief executioner, with his assistants, and at last the two culprits arrived, pinioned and sitting in open sedan chairs. The gaolers dragged them by the hair before the Commandant, and, after they had ineffectually pleaded for mercy, they were touched on the head with the fatal arrow. Their faces were sprinkled with water and the ground spread with a white powder, and then finally the signal of attack was given. The executioners rushed upon their victims with drawn swords, of which, however, the edges had been carefully blunted for the occasion. Only at the thirteenth stroke were the two heads severed from the bodies, and, after being shown to the commandant, cast into the ditch destined for a burial place.

Newspaper English.

The newspaper writer is more beset by temptations to indulge in eccentric English than the worker in almost any other field of original composition. The man of culture, surrounded by people who defy the simplest and undeviating rules of grammar, will frequently find his tongue playing tricks with him, often to his great surprise and chagrin. What wonder, then, that the most careful journalist travelling around that affords little time for revision and polishing, and coming constantly in contact with atrocities of language, even in very respectable associations, should sometimes produce work that fails to satisfy the gauge of standard style, and possibly lapse into false syntax?

A BORDER VENDETTA.

AN INCIDENT OF THE AMERICAN REBELLION.

Lynching for Refusing to Volunteer—How A Son Kept a Bloody Oath of Vengeance—Relentless Pursuit of the Lynchers.

At the beginning of the late civil war Abraham Hall lived in one of the thinly settled border counties. He was 70 years old and reputed to be wealthy, owning a large tract of land, great herds of cattle, and a large, but by no means costly residence. He had a family comprising one boy, aged ten, and four girls ranging from 8 to 16 years. Though the State was in a tumult, the old man claimed to be neutral, and while his neighbours were buckling on the armour, Hall remained at home. The South called for every man capable of bearing arms. Texas was scoured. Hall was called on to volunteer, but declined. One night a party of twelve persons rode up to the house and repeated the demand for volunteers. The old man said he preferred death. He was taken from the house to a little ravine two hundred yards away,

A ROPE WAS PUT AROUND HIS NECK,

the end of which was thrown over a limb of a tree, and Hall was once more asked to reconsider his refusal. The old man declined, whereupon he was drawn up and let down senseless. Reviving, again he refused, and again he was drawn up. This horrible scene was continued until the victim ceased to breathe, and the party rode away. The son of Hall had followed the party when they dragged his father from the house, and, hiding himself behind a clump of bushes, the lad was a silent and horrified spectator. He saw everything, and more, he recognized every actor in that cruel affair. When the men galloped away he ran from his hiding-place, cut down the body, and, flinging himself upon it, registered an

OATH TO SLAY EVERY MAN who had taken part in his father's death. Time passed; the war ended; young Hall managed his father's estate and prospered. His sisters aided him in the work. Almost their nearest neighbour was Frank Parker, who led the band that hung old Hall in 1865. Twenty miles east lived John and Thomas Mantooth, two members of the party. The remainder were scattered throughout the State. One day in October, 1878, young Hall bid his sisters good-by forever, saying, "The time for revenge has come," and without further explanation he mounted his horse and rode swiftly away. An hour later he drew rein in front of Frank Parker's dwelling. Parker was in the yard. "I come to ask you why you killed my father," said Hall to him. Parker gave the reason, adding that his conscience had troubled him ever since. Hall asked him if he was armed, and when the man drew a pistol Hall did likewise and fired. Parker dropped in the agonies of death. The next day Hall visited the Mantooths. John Mantooth he shot dead on the open prairie, after explaining the object of his visit. Thomas Mantooth met a similar fate on the public highway. Before spring another of the twelve had been slain, Hall killing his man in a saloon brawl in San Antonio. By this time the remaining members of the band had become alarmed, and Hall suddenly paused in

HIS CAREER OF BLOODSHED.

For more than a year nothing was heard of him, and the surviving objects of his hatred were beginning to think he had perished when he suddenly appeared. This time his victim was named Kindred Rose, one of the twelve, but he died only after a desperate struggle. The men met one afternoon in the winter of 1880, in a little village on the Mexico border. A street fight ensued, and Rose was killed, falling from his house, and dying on the street, while Hall, though wounded in three places, put spurs to his horse and dashed away. The friends of Rose pursued him into Texas. The pursuit was continued three days, friends of his former victims joined in the chase. Hall at last was run to cover in sight of his home, and near the spot where sixteen years before the father had met his death. Here Hall turned upon the pursuing party and fought until he was

RIDDLED WITH BULLETS.

His eldest sister was a horrified spectator of the tragic end of her brother. A year after she met one of the party in a neighbouring town; she was in company with a female friend, and despite the entreaties of her companion, called the man to her, slipping her hand into the pocket of her dress as she did so. "Captain Davis," said she, when the man came up, "you helped to kill my brother; take that!" and drawing a revolver, she fired at him. Davis was seriously wounded, and in the confusion the girl escaped. This act alarmed all who had taken part in the death of young Hall, and they resolved upon the extermination of the entire family of Halls, of whom only three were living—the eldest girl and two sisters. One night after Davis' life had been attempted, the Hall homestead was surrounded by masked men. The barred doors were broken down and the three girls were mercilessly murdered. The assassins then fired the house and disappeared. This tragedy caused a sensation, but the explanation was made by interested parties that Indians or greasers had murdered the girls, plundered the house, and then set it afire. This was generally accepted, and only lately have the facts of the case leaked out.

Pasteur, the French scientist, is described as a man of low stature and powerful frame—spare, angular and weatherbeaten. He is a man of few words, abrupt but clear in speech, and of quick, impetuous gestures. Although his fame rests upon minute material research, he is a steadfast believer in spiritualistic doctrinea. He is genial and hospitable, and has both political and social weight.

Robert Morris, the negro lawyer who lately died in Boston, left property worth $100,000. There was something singular about his profitable clientage. He went to the bar when prejudice against his color was very strong, and yet his clients were for a long time almots entirely among the Irish people, who had great faith in his legal powers. On the other hand, the negroes of the city were rather shy of him, and he never gained much practice from them.

FACTS AND INCIDENTS.

Readable Notes for Short Sittings. Interesting to all.

The Nebraska man who drove his wife out on a cold night, causing her to freeze her feet so badly that they had to be amputated, was tarred and feathered by his neighbours.

The men employed in one department of the Elgin (Ill.) watch factory did not strike on the arrival of a young woman as the first employee of her sex among them, but received her with speeches of welcome and the gift of a toilet set.

The Medical and Surgical Reporter (Philadelphia) records the death at Stonersville, Pa., of Anna Shearer, the child dwarf. She was 10 years of age and weighed fourteen pounds. She was unable to talk or walk. The parents are healthy and full grown, and the father is a blacksmith.

The biggest fool with a gun is probably Mr. Staley, of Marshal, Kan. Having loaded a rifle that he could not discharge, he concluded that it contained a ball but no powder; so he placed the barrel in the fire to melt out the ball, the muzzle being in range with his daughter's ear, which was soon blown off.

There has been some tolerable hunting in Ireland while the frost and snow in England confined the hounds to their kennels. The hostility of the peasants, which threatened at the beginning of the season to be as serious as last year, has subsided to a great extent, and even the Curraghmore have enjoyed some good runs unmolested.

In a paper read before the Imperial German Congress of Surgery the case is described of a woman who, having lost the whole of the biceps with the exception of a thin strip of flesh, was grafted with a piece of muscle taken from a dog. Complete healing took place, and subsequent treatment restored motion to the limb.

According to the Madras Mail several bags of cloves shipped from Zanzibar to London were found to contain a heavy percentage of artificial cloves neatly manufactured by machinery. They were made of pine, stained of a dark color, and had been soaked in an essence of the spice to give them the required odor. The Mail, recalling the wicked wooden nutmeg notion originated in Connecticut, declares the article to be of American manufacture. Can they be dyed and scented shoe pegs?

A watchman in one of the Nevada mines, having no watch, borrowed one for a night, and on returning it next day said that he had made a timekeeper of his own. He unrolled a strip of paper, on which he had marked, as they rose above the horizon, all the fixed stars within a narrow belt, and opposite to each was the time of its appearing. The slip ran on two small rollers in a box, with a sliding lid of glass. As the night wears away and the stars pass over he can turn a crank of his watch and look at the time marked.

A duly qualified French physician became assistant to a medical charlatan who made and sold a secret remedy for cancer. The physician did not know the ingredients of the compound, yet he prescribed it, and the remedy proving injurious, was prosecuted for doing so. The Court held that he was guilty of the illegal practice of medicine. In summing up, the Judge explained that although the defendant was a doctor of medicine, he nevertheless practiced his art in an illegal manner, as he prescribed remedies of which he was entirely ignorant, whereas the possession of his diploma gives him the right to practice the art of cure, but only with such remedies as he can answer for.

Manufacturing Alumina.

An invention which it is believed will effect important changes in the metal trade, not only in this country but throughout the world, has recently been patented in Great Britain and most foreign countries, and is now being sold as an article of commerce. The invention consists of a new method of manufacturing alumina by which nine-tenths of the present cost are saved, while it can be made in immense quantities in the course of a few days, instead of requiring nine months to produce it as was formerly the case. The inventor is Mr. Webster, of Hollywood, near Birmingham, who has been engaged in experiments since 1851, and only succeeded in perfecting his process about twelve months ago, after having expended nearly £30,000 in the experiments. Prior to this invention alumina was only made in France, the attempt to introduce the manufacture into England having failed after the promoters had lost upwards of a million of money. The extent and value of the discovery may be gathered from the fact that a French syndicate have offered no less than nearly half a million for the patent rights in France alone, and companies in the United States have offered £1,000,000 for the rights of manufacture in America, while the Belgians and Germans are also negotiating for the purchase for their respective countries. The ordinary method of making alumina is by precipitation, and the cost is no less than £1,000 a ton, whereas by Mr. Webster's process the cost is reduced to less than £100 a ton. When converted into aluminium and alloyed with copper, tin, and other alloys, it produces a bronze metal, which is considered to be superior to anything in use for ship-fittings, steam propellers and also for the manufacture of artillery. Although it has only just been placed in the market, bronze is in extensive demand by ship-builders, and the British Government are in treaty for a supply of the metal to the Royal Gun factory at Woolwich. A scientific analysis shows that the aluminium bronze has a resisting power of forty-two tons per inch, as compared with twenty-eight for gun-metal and thirty for Bessemer steel. At the same time it is exceedingly ductile and tenacious, and when used for ships will bend rather than break from the force of a collision. The metal is supplied in ingots, rolled into sheets or drawn into wire. In its different forms it may be used for all purposes for which electro-plating is now employed; also for pen-making, nail-making, bell-founding, and even for jewellery. Rings of the albuminum bronze set with precious stones are in vast demand for the United States, and spoons, knives and forks, dish covers, railway carriage door handles and other articles made from the metal are in extensive inquiry in this country.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN C

The most successful R ever discovered, as it is certain in its and does not blister. READ PROOF be

Kendall's Spavin C

HAMILTON, Mo., June 14,

B. J. KENDALL & Co.,—Gents:—I to certify that I have used Kendall's Cure, and have found it to be all recommended to be and in fact more I have removed by using the above: Bone Spavins, Ring-bone, Splints, cheerfu testify and recommend it the best thing for any bony substance ever used, and have tried many as made that my study for years.

Respectfully yours,

P. V. CH

FROM

Col. T. L. Foste

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, May 10,

DR B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents:—I very valuable Hambletonian colt that very highly, he had a large bone spav one joint and a small one on the other made him very lame; I had him und charge of two veterinary surgeons which ed to cure him. I was one day readi advertisement of Kendall's Spavin C the Chicago Express. I determined a to try it, and got our druggist here t for it, they ordered three bottles; I took all and thought I would give it a the trial, I used it according to directions fourth day the colt ceased to be la the lumps have disappeared. I used bottle and the colt's limbs are as fre lumps and as smooth as any horse state. He is entirely cured. The cure so remarkable that I let two of my neig have the remaining two bottles who are using it.

Very respectfully,

L. T. FOSTE

Kendall's Spavin C

WINGHAM, Ont., Jan. 17,

DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents:—I to certify that I have used Kendall's Spavin Cure, bought from C. E. Williams, dr Wingham, Ont., and do without hesi pronounce it to be an invaluable remedy the cure of Spavins, Ringbones, or Curbs used it on a bone spavin of several growth which it completely removed, can safely say it will remove any spa Curb or Ringbone if properly used. I also recommended friends to use it, who done so with perfect success. I gladly this public, and will answer any questio letters sent me.

Yours &c.

GEORGE BRIG

Kendall's Spavin Cu

ON HUMAN FLESH.

WEST ENOSBURGH, Vt., Feb. 15,18

DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents:—Se months ago I injured my knee joint caused an enlargement to grow the si a walnut and caused me very severe pa the time for four or five weeks, when I to use Kendall's Spavin Cure with the satisfactory results. It has entirely re ed the enlargement and stopped the lam and pain. I have long known it to be ex lent for horses but now I know it to be best liniment for human flesh that I am quainted with.

Yours truly,

T. P. LAWREN

ST. JOHN, P.Q Oct. 27, 18

DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents:—I used your Spavin Cure with great succes spavins, curbs and splints. I know it a good remedy for ringbones, bone spav cuts, galls and all kinds of lameness and difficulties about the horse. One of my sprained his ankle very badly. I ap Kendall's Spavin Cure and I never saw thing work like it, he was well in a few I know it to be good for man as well as I procured one of your Treatise on the H by mail for 25cts. and I think it was means of saving me $100 on one horse I treated according to the directions give your book for displaced stifle.

Yours truly,

WM. J. PEARSON

Send address for Illustrated Circular, w we think gives positive proof of its virtue No remedy has ever met with such unqual ed success to our knowledge, for beast as as man.

Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $ All druggists have it or can get it for you or it will be sent to any address on receipt price by the proprietors. DR. B. J. KEND & Co., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

Sold by all Druggists.

LYMAN, SONS & CO., Montreal, P.Q Wholesale Agents

GEORGE NOBLE,

INSURANCE AND LAND AGENT,

LICENSED AUCTIONEER

For the County of Grey.

AGENT for the following reliable Companies:

CITIZENS', of Montreal,

AGRICULTURAL, of Watertown, and

TRADE & COMMERCE, (Mutual) of Toronto.

A number of Choice Farms for sale, also Village Lots.

Auction Sales conducted in Town or Country on Shortest Notice. Charges moderate. Bills, Blank Notes, and Stamps provided.

GEO. NOBLE.

S SACRIFICE:

OR,

For Love of Her.

RGTS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

ssel Anthon, a millionaire, is in love Muriel, the young daughter of Graham ridge, a gentleman of wealth, who r speculation become involved. Muriel, heartily liking and respecting Anthon, not love him, and tells her father so, he urges her to accept him. This she under the impression that her father d him, and that he is willing to ac- what real liking and respect she can him. Her father, however, does not ssel, who believes that Muriel really him. It does not take very long after ge to convince him to the contrary, gh in all respects Muriel endeavors to him a true wife. Believing that he ood from her father what she told she says nothing, and their life passes ntfully enough until Russel receives er from Mexico which necessitates his g her the story of his twin brother del, the scapegrace of his family, who, g in a quarrel over cards accidentally his friend, fled from home, disappear- d was thought dead. The letter from o is, however, from him. Dying of alone among strangers, he implores l to go to him. Muriel bids Russel the vow he made his dying mother friend his brother should he ever have pportunity, and urges him to go to his brother. Russel goes to Mexico, finds rother, nurses him through the sickness, is finally struck down by the fever him-

In the meantime, however, Arundel ound Muriel's picture, which Russe had entally dropped on his bed, falls in love the beautiful unknown face, and is by Russel asleep with the locket d in his hands. Russel tells him e picture it is: and just as they are ing to start for home Russel is struck by the fever. Arundel watches by until there are evident signs that, weak- by his long journey, worn out by his ttendance at his brother's bedside, Rus- e is coming to a close. They are being unded by Indians, and at the last mom- believing that nothing can save Rus- and that it is for Muriel's sake, Arun- athers up every thing of value belong- to his brother, and after some moments resolution, quits the hut, mounts his and flies over the plain. He makes way to Muriel, who to recognize him as husband and, in their first conversation ls that she never loved him as she does and tells him she shortly expects to be other. Meanwhile, Russel Anthon, prisoner by the Indians, recovers from sickness, and after several attempts, es- s from his captors, and broken in health spirits, makes his way home. On his ey he meets a man calling himself ry Glenmore, whose only hope is to live enough to see his boy; whom Russel ly offers t adopt and care for.]

CHAPTER XIV. (CONTINUED.)

he man that called himself Henry Glen- ived his earnest eyes upon his com- on's face.

You are a noble man," he said; "I you my boy, and I can die easier, know- I leave him in your care. It must seem nge to you that I have not a friend nor a ive to whom I could leave my child — my boy has proud, pure blood in his s.

Every life has in it something which ms strange until it is understood," said sel gently.

or a long time that night they talked ther, and though Henry Glenmore did speak much of his past life, he talked reservedly of his boy, and of the little ge among the hills, where he had liv- since he was a tiny baby.

The woman who takes care of him is a rie-hearted countrywoman," he said; she knows nothing of me, save that my e is dead, and that I am out here. I e told you about her, because"—and firm lips quivered a little—"if I should live to get there, you will know all ut it: you can go and find Roy."

Both men were terribly worn and weary en, a few days later, they reached Guay- s. Russel told the American Consul re the story of his capture, then with renewed he began his homeward journey, though his heart was filled with doubts fears with regard to Arundel, still a p thankfulness rose within that he was his way back to Muriel; he could not ream his intense longing to see her again: ery fibre of his being quivered as he ought of the time when he should fold arms around her, feel his head upon her east: he did not murmur against his fate ich had imposed upon him pain, hard- ips, suffering, he only thanked God that had allowed him to live to go home to rael.

ow the man who was trying to live long ough to see his child again, how he strug- d with death. He knew he was doomed; at death was inevitable; and he prayed ly that he might see his boy once more. it it was not to be. Russel knew that life was fast ebbing away; that he would ld live to see the little son he seemed to e so dearly; and one night they stopped a little town, and Herny Glenmore y down upon the bed which was his death- d.

"Leave me, Anthon; you want to get me to your wife. I am not afraid to die ce," he pleaded; but Russel answered No," though he was indeed longing to see uriel. He remained until the end with e man for whom he had come to feel, ring their close companionship, a warm d deep affection.

The death struggle was a long and painful e. It was Russel's hand that wiped from e dying man's brow the icy drops wrung om him by terrible physical agony, Rus- l's voice that prayed for him, that soothed d comforted him.

It was the day he died. He had been ing very quietly for some time, moaning ly now and then in pain, when suddenly e opened his eyes.

"Russel, my dear friend," he said, slow- and with difficulty, "I have told you erything about the money and about Roy, t there is much that I meant to tell you out my life. It is right that you should now; for the child's sake you must know n that box, which I have always carried with me, you will find letters, papers that will tell you everything. Read them carefully. The time may come—no, I will not think of that, I am too near death. You will not know what to do, and Roy must never know, unless—Russel, you will love the boy; you will tell him how much I loved you—that man never had a truer friend than I had in you. And, Russel, you say you are a rich man, that you have no need of any more money; but in this life we cannot tell what may happen, and the time may come when you may need it. If that time ever should come, if you should lose your money, or should be in want of more, will you promise that you will use what I leave you? There is enough for you and Roy—promise me, Russel, promise me!"

One of the terrible paroxysms of pain was coming on again, and to quiet him Russel promised, never thinking the time would come when but for his dying friend's money he would be as utterly without means as the poorest beggar in the streets.

With Russel's name upon his lips Henry Glenmore died, and when he had seen the earth fall upon all that was mortal of the man whose life he knew had held a secret, Russel Anthon went on his way alone.

CHAPTER IV.

It was late in the afternoon of a dreary October day that Russel Anthon arrived in New York. A fine drizzling rain was falling, and there was a penetrating chill in the damp air which made people draw their wraps closer about them, while they thought regretfully of the warm, golden summer days that had passed. As he hurried through the depot he heard one lady say to another, "What an intensely gloomy day," and he smiled a little glad, happy smile. Gloomy, why it seemed to him the very brightest, most beautiful day that ever dawned, for was it not the day which was bringing him home to Muriel? What though the rain was falling, there was sunshine in his heart—sunshine that shone in his eyes, and lighted up the thin, pain-worn face. Even the stoical hackman whose services he engaged to convey him home, noticed the quiver of eagerness in his voice, and was somewhat touched by the wistful earnestness of the deep, patient eyes.

"Shure and it's hurry I will sur, if that's what you be wanting," he said, emphatically, "an me hosses shall travel their lively best!"

Whereu on he jumped on his box, and contrary to his usual custom, whipped up his by no means fiery horses until they went along at what was to them a most extraordinary rate of speed, while the white-faced man inside the carriage leaned back against the cushions, trying to be patient, trying to calm the wild beatings of his heart.

Sometimes before it bursts over their heads men feel the cold, dark shadow of the storm-cloud which is to wreck their dearest hopes and flood their soul's with misery.

Russel Anthon had no such presentiment of any coming evil, there was not a doubt in his mind but that he would find his young wife just as he had left her—his own beautiful, idolized Muriel. From his heart the prayer was going up that there would be only one change in her, this, that during his long absence she had come to love him with a love deeper, more intense than she had given him before he went away from her.

As the carriage drove along through the familiar streets up the well-remembered avenue, he was thinking how he should find her. She would be at home, of course, and he was glad that it was a rainy day, for if it had been bright and clear, Muriel might have gone out calling or shopping; but she never went out on stormy days, she hated cold and darkness and rain. God grant that none of life's pitiless rain should ever fall upon her dear head—it never should, it would be his life-labor to make her happy. She could not bear grief and pain, she was so dainty and tender—his dear little love—and it should never be hers to bear, not so long as she lived.

Perhaps Mrs. Trowbridge was spending the day with her, and he would find them both sitting in Muriel's boudoir: there would be a fire burning on the hearth—Muriel loved open fires—and there would be flowers in the vases on the mantel, and on the table would be her dainty little work-basket filled to overflowing with gay bits of satin, and many-tinted embroidery silks; and Leo would be lying on the hearth, and oh, what a glad, bright, happy home coming it would be!

Then a shadow of sorrow fell upon the noble, unselfish heart. Arundel, poor Arundel! Ah, if he was sitting beside him, going home with him. Where was he?—his poor brother? What a strange journey it had been, that one to Mexico; it seemed as if it had been all in vain, all for naught; he was going home, yet he did not know as much of Arundel as he had done when he had started in search of him. Was he lying dead out there on the plains of Mexico or was he still living his lonely, isolated life?

The carriage stopped, and Russel looking out, saw that it had come to a standstill in front of a dark, gloomy looking house which had every appearance of being shut up and unoccupied; there were no curtains at the windows, the dark green shades were drawn down, the massive vestibule door was closed, This was not his house, the driver had made a mistake, and he told him so when he appeared at the carriage door.

"Well, it's number fifteen, and that's the number you gave me, sur," said the man: cheerfully; "but it looks deserted like, now doan't it? as though the family were away. Shall I go up and see, sur?"

No, he would go himself; and as he went up the broad, stone steps—slowly, because of the injured limb that would never be strong again—Russel Anthon felt for the first time a vague presentiment of coming evil: he knew not what it was, he was only conscious of a curious icy feeling around his heart, and his hand trembled as he pulled the bell.

How loudly it sounded; it seemed to echo through the quiet house; then after a moment he heard a footstep, the heavy door swung open, and a servant-girl appeared who looked at him wonderingly as he inquired for Mrs. Anthon.

"Mrs. and Mr. Russel Anthon are in Europe, they sailed last July," answered the girl.

So the blow fell, just at a thunder-bolt falls from heaven, scorching and unrooting-ing the flowers that a moment before were nodding their pretty heads, all unconscious of the cruel fate awaiting them; and yet God controls nature.

For a second he stood in silence. Was she mad, this girl? She must be, for there was no sense, no reason in what she had just said.

"Mr. and Mrs. Russel Anthon," he repeated, slowly. "Why, what do you mean?"

The girl had been regarding him curiously, wondering who he was, that lame, grey-haired man, whose thin, white face bore so plainly the marks of pain and fatigue; he looked like a gentleman; and probably he was some friend of Mr. Anthon's, and had not known of his absence from the city. So endeavoring to be very explicit, she answered:

"I mean, sir, that soon after Mr. Russel Anthon came home from Mexico, Mrs. Anthon's father and mother had to go abroad. Mr. Towbridge had business there, and Mrs. Anthon she took it into her head to go with them; so they all went over together in the same steamer, Mr. and Mrs. Anthon and Mr. and Mrs. Towbridge, and none of them are home yet, and we don't know when they will be."

He put one hand to his head in a helpless, despairing sort of a way; into his eyes came a look like that which comes into the eyes of a dumb animal wounded unto death, yet not knowing whence came the bullet that has entered its heart; and the girl, half frightened by the strange expression of his pallid face, said quickly:

"Perhaps you would like to see the housekeeper, sir, she knows more about it than I do, and if you come in I'll call her."

Mechanically he followed her, sinking down upon a chair in the darkened parlor, staring about him when she had left him alone, looking at the shrouded pictures and statuary, the furniture covered with brown holland, the draped mirrors. All the exquisite ornaments he remembered so well had been packed away, the bronzes, the parian figures, the costly bric-a-brac; there was a vault-like chill in the house—and this was his home-coming. Where were the flowers, the bright faces? Where was Muriel?

With a low cry he started to his feet. It must be all a dream, he was in the grasp of a horrible nightmare from which he would soon awaken. That girl was surely crazy, for had she not said Mrs. and Mr. Russel Anthon had gone to Europe in July, soon after Mr. Russel Anthon came home from Mexico? What did she mean by saying that—was he not Russel Anthon, standing there in the parlor of his own house?

A sudden thought darted through his half paralyzed brain: could it be that Arundel had come home in his stead? No, no, it could not be, that was too horrible; yet he had read of such things. He remembered a book that he had once read wherein one man had murdered another, and then had taken that other's place in life, bearing his name, ocaupying his position in society, spending his money, playing his infamous part so well that no one had suspected that he was not the man he represented himself to be. The book had been dramatized and he had seen it played upon the stage; it had made a great impression upon him, and at the time he wondered if such a terrible thing could happen in real life—whether it was possible for a living man to deliberately commit such a sin.

Some one was coming along the hall; he heard the rustle of a dress, and he raised his head as a lady entered the room and advanced toward him; a lady rather stout and of about middle age, with iron-grey hair arranged smoothly, who, after waiting a moment for him to speak, said, in a slightly aggrieved tone of voice:

"The servant told me that you did not seem to be aware of the fact that Mr. and Mrs. Anthon were in Europe."

With that same dumb look of entreaty in his hollow eyes he looked at her.

"Mr. Russel Anthon?" he said, slowly.

"Mr. Russel Anthon,' repeated the housekeeper, with dignity, "there is no other Mr. Anthon, I belive. You are a friend of his?"

She was rather at a loss how to treat this palefaced young man, who looked as though he could scarcely stand from weakness.

He bowed his head, he could not speak, it seemed as if icy fingers were clutching his throat.

"Then probably you know that he went to Mexico last March, on business, I believe. I was not here at the time; Mrs. Anthon engaged me a month or two after he had gone; he came back in June, and how glad Mrs Anthon was to see him."

"Glad!"

The word came from the colorless, trembling lips, and the housekeeper thought the strange gentleman had certainly the most curious voice she had ever heard, it had such an odd, muffled sound; altogether he was a most uncomfortable person to talk with, and she heartily wished he would tell her his business and take his departure.

"Certainly, she was glad," she said, quickly, "they are devoted to each other; she seems to worship him; there was not a servant in the house but noticed the change in her after he came home; she was happy as a child, laughing and singing, going everywhere with him, as though she could not bear him out of her sight." But oh, the horrible agony that was fast raging within him! It seemed as if the earth was falling under his feet.

"When are they coming home?"

He wondered at himself that he could ask the question so calmly, when it was as though his heart strings were snapping one after the other. The housekeeper looked at him a little uneasily, wishing he would tell her who he was and what he wanted. Still, he was a gentleman; one glance at him told that—probably some old friend of Mr. Anthon's, and as such had a right, or at least felt that he had, to ask questions regarding him.

"Mr. and Mrs. Trowbridge expect to return next month," she said; "Mr. and Mrs. Anthon will remain abroad until—"

She paused as if uncertain what to say to finish her sentence,

"Until when?"

"Until after the birth of their child."

The climax of agony was reached; earth held no suffering greater than that which he was now enduring. The numb agony was giving way to sharp, acute pain—agony that seemed to be tearing his heart out of him. A bluish tinge like the hue of death crept over his face; he seemed to be losing the power of moving; the blood in his veins seemed to be turning to ice. Surely, if here was ever death in life, then this was it. The housekeeper noticed his death-like pallor, and attributed it to the closeness of the long shut-up apartment.

"Let me open the window," she said; "it is very close in here."

"No, I am going now."

"Will you leave me your name, sir?" she asked, a little anxiously.

He turned his dark mournful eyes upon her. Ah, Heaven, the misery in those eyes!

"No matter about my name," he said; it is enough that I have been here."

Slowly he went out of the house—the house which had once been his home—the housewhichhe had bought and paid for, and and in which now he was a stranger. The carriage which had brought him there was still waiting; he had forgotten to pay and dismiss the driver, who was contentedly sitting on his box, waiting for him, and who jumped down as soon as he saw him descending the steps.

"Where shall I drive you now, sur?" he asked, briskly, as he threw open the carriage door.

Russel Anthon looked at him just as you might imagine a homeless beggar in the streets would look at any one who would ask him where his home was.

"I do not know," he said slowly, in a low, expressionless voice, and then mechanically he allowed himself to be assisted into the carriage, while the driver, having shut the door, ascended to his own seat and shook the reins over his horses.

"He's a stranger in the city, the poor, sick gentleman," he said to himself, "an' since he's lift it to me entirely, I'll take him to the Fifth Avenue Hotel, for it's the most cintrally located and the most convanient; an' if it was meself that was boording at any hotel, that's the one I'd be after choosing. He looks mighty sick, the poor man. There's a quare look in his eyes that I doan't like, an' I am thinking its much thruble he's seen in his life."

As the housekeeper stood in the doorway looking after the carriage as it drove away, wondering to herself who the pale-faced sad-eyed man was, she was joined by the housemaid, who had opened the door for him, and who had a great curiosity to know who he was.

"And didn't he tell you his name, Mrs. Andrews?" she said, with real disappointment in her voice. "I wonder who he is; he acted so strange, and there was a queer look in hie eyes. Do you think he is all right in his head, Mrs. Andrews?"

The housekeeper shook her head musingly.

"I think his head is all right, but I'm afraid his heart isn't," she answered gravely. "I wish he had told me his name."

And if he had, would she have believed him? If he had said to her, "My name is Russel Anthon," would she not have thought like the housemaid, that his head was not right? As it was, she thought that all was not right with his heart. Ah, that tortured, agonized heart, would it ever in this world be right again?

CHAPTER XVI

Russel Anthon never really knew how he reached his room in the hotel. He had, as long as life lasted, a dim recollection of being whirled along through the streets, of stepping out of the carriage and paying the man what he asked, of being shown to a room, and sinking down heavily upon the first chair he happened to see. But once alone in that silent room, with the door closed between him and the world, with the hum of the great, busy city coming faintly to his ears, a realizing sense of his own horrible misery swept over him, and he writhed in a great voiceless agony as, plainly and clearly he saw it all—his brother's treachery, Muriel's mistake, his own terrible position.

Men and women suffer in proportion to the strength of their natures. Russel Anthon's nature was an exceptionally strong one, and his sufferings were fearful. Accustomed to look things full in the face, to give small matters the same thought and consideration as the larger ones, it was impossible now for him to pass over any detail of the terrible thing that had come upon him. It was all there plain before him—would to God it had not been quite so plain, it would have been better had it come upon him more gradually.

When he first realized what Arundel had done, when the conviction that his brother—the twin brother he had so dearly loved—had done him the foulest wrong that man ever did another, a fierce indignation had swept over him, and his thoughts had been to go in search of him to accuse him to his face of having committed a sin, which considering all the circumstances connected with it, was almost unparalleled, to brand him in the eyes of the world as a man who had been a traitor to honor, truth, faith, everything that serves to make men worthy of their Maker. But that indignation had been short-lived, it had been crushed into nothingness by the agony that fell upon him, as listening to the housekeeper, he had understood that Arundel, in his place, bearing his name, had won what he had failed to win—Muriel's love.

She had never clung to him as he felt she clung now to his false brother, she had never followed him about as though she could not bear him out of her sight. By means of that wonderful power of winning love which he had always possessed to such a marvellous degree, Arundel had awakened in Muriel's heart the passionate love which Russel had always felt was slumbering there, and which he had prayerfully hoped that he would some day awaken.

And Muriel, loving him—the man she thought was her lawful husband!—was happy, gladly, joyfully happy, as she had not been with him. Ah, pitiful heaven, the thought was more bitter than death! And if he should go and find them together, and should hurl that accusation against Arundel, earth would hold no more happiness for Muriel, the sunshine would be forever gone out of her life, she would droop and fade and die, and he, who loved her so, would have dealt her the death blow.

"Until after the birth of her child."

How the words rang in his ears! He had hoped that some day a child would lie upon Muriel's breast—his child—and now a child was coming to her, not his, but his brother's—his brother, who had stolen everything that made life dear. Muriel's child, and Arundel's—a child that would be a tie between them, binding them closer together.

And suppose Muriel should ever come to know that she had been innocently guilty of the blackest sin it is possible for a woman to commit—that she had given the love of a wife to a man who was not her lawful husband—that she was the mother of a child whose father was not legally bound to her! That knowledge would surely kill her; she would never survive the shame and anguish of knowing that.

He flung up his arms with a gesture of hopeless, intolerable despair. God in heaven, she should never know it! Though it were a sin ten times more terrible than it was for her to live as she was doing with Arundel, he could not tell her. God knew that if she sinned she did it in innocence: He knew that there lived no woman purer by nature than she was, nor one whose heart was more free from any taint of evil.

He remembered the many times he had said to himself that for the sake of Muriel's happiness he would give up anything, everything, if it need be, in the world; that if he could buy her joy and gladness only at the cost of his own life, he would die without a murmur. But he had never thought the time would come when his love for her would be put to the test; the time had come, he held her happiness in his hands; a word from him, and joy and gladness would go out of her life, in their place would come misery and bitter pain, and the consciousness of sin and shame.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

A Few Simple Remedies.

For croup, administer a teaspoonful of alum water: repeat the dose every fifteen minutes until free vomiting occurs. Put the feet and limbs in hot water, and then wrap up in flannel: place on the chest a poultice of corn-meal sprinkled with mustard. Beware of cold draughts. As the attack departs administer a dose of magnesia, rhubarb or castor oil. When children are liable to croup, always keep the alum-water solution ready on the washstand.

Toothache may be speedily ended by the application of a small bit of cotton saturated with ammonia to the defective tooth.

It may be useful to know that hoarseness may be relieved by using the white of an egg thoroughly beaten, mixed with lemon juice and sugar. A teaspoonful taken occasionally is the dose.

There is scarcely an ache to which children are subject so hard to bear and so difficult to cure as an earache. A remedy which never fails is a pinch of black pepper gathered up in a bit of cotton batting, wet in sweet oil and inserted in the ear. It will give immediate relief.

Remedy for chilblains—Take a piece of lime the size of your double fist; put it in warm water and soak the feet in it as warm as can be borne for half an hour.

For a scald or burn apply immediately pulverized charcoal and oil. Lamp oil will do but linseed is better. The effect is miraculous.

For chapped lips, mix two tablespoonfuls of clarified honey, with a few drops of lavender water, or any other perfume, and anoint the lips frequently.

To remove warts, get a little bullock gall, and keep it in a bottle, rub a little on the warts two or three times a day, and in a short time they will disappear.

To remove coldsores, rub the first finger behind the ear and close to the part which is joined to the head, and then rub the sore. The secretion removes the sore in a short time if applied every twenty minutes.

To make a good sticking plaster, put two spoonsful of balsam of Peru to six of isinglass, melted with very little water, and strained. Mix these well together in a stone jar over the fire. Pin out some black Persian or sarsenet on a board, and dipping the brush in the mixture pass it over the silk five or six times; then hold it to the fire, but not very near, and it will soon become black and shining.

Did the Clergyman Poisen the Girl?

An inquiry was opened at West Malling on Saturday, Dec 16, by one of the Coroners for Kent, into the death of a young woman named Sarah Ann Wright. The mother of the deceased deposed that her daughter was only 16 years of age. On Thursday morning last the deceased told her that she had vomited some blood during the night. The vicar of the parish (the Rev. S. H. Timins) visited her occasionally and prayed with her. He came on Thursday morning, and asked deceased how she was, and she replied that she was a little better, although she had a very bad night, and spat up a quantity of blood. After some conversation he examined her throat, which had grown out a little.

He next patted her chest and said, "My dear girl, you will get better." Next he asked witness for some water, and she gave him a wine glass half full. He took from his pocket a little bottle which looked as if it contained whiskey, and then asked for a teaspoon. Witness could not say that what he poured from the bottle into the spoon he placed in the glass, but she could swear that at the time she noticed a very strong smell of almonds. Less than five minutes afterward her daughter, with a horrible screech, said. "Oh Mr. Timins!" three times, and Mr. Timins took hold of her and sat her on the sofa, laying her head on his shoulder. At that time he offered witness something to drink out of the wine glass, but it was declined, and he then said, "Oh I am not afraid to drink it," and promply swallowed it.

He left soon after, and then her daughter cried for her and began to retch. She became black in the face and mouth, and after that witness went into hysterics, and remembered very little else. She believed that Dr. Pope was sent for soon after, but when he arrived the poor girl was dead. A surgeon deposed that he was summoned to the deceased, but found her already dead. Mr. Pound deposed to making a post-mortem examination of the body and finding a distinct almond effluvium. Parts of the body had been handed over to an analsyt. The inquiry was then adjourned until Jan. 19th.

The Standard.

MARKDALE, JAN. 11TH, 1883.

HORRIBLE MURDER.

Four People Brutally Butchered.

THE MURDERER ONLY 17 YEARS OLD.

COMPETITORS FOR THE HONOR OF HANGING HIM.

One of the most horrible murders that has been known for some time took place last Tuesday morning in Little Rideau, about ten or twelve miles from Ottawa. The murderer is a mere boy, being only 17 years of age. The following is the one of the unfortunate family, who was badly wounded.

DEPOSITION OF WILLIE COOKE

Mr. Dartnell, Crown Attorney, and Mr. E. Johnston, county official, visited the sick chamber yesterday. Willie Cooke, although weak from loss of blood and nervous exhaustion, was able to give in a clear and concise way the particulars of the terrible tragedy, so far as he knew. His evidence is substantially as follows:—On Tuesday morning he was awakened by the cries of his brother, who occupied a bed in the same room as himself. He immediately sat up in the bed, when he boserved young Mann approaching him with an axe in his hand. He asked Mann what he meant, when the latter ran towards him, and raising the weapon aimed a blow at his head. He dodged in time to escape the blow, when he received another in the thigh, which fractured his left leg. Finding that there was no means of grappling with the murdeous villain, armed as he was with such a deadly weapon, he got under the bed. He experienced some difficulty, as may well be imagined, in moving dexterously with a fractured limb, but he knew he had to make a bold struggle for life, and accomplished the feat just as Mann had raised the axe to strike him the third blow. Just as he was dropping out of bed, however, the murderous weapon was embedded again in his left leg, this time in the calf. Nothing daunted he crawled under, the blood spurting out of his painful wounds as freely as water from a fountain. Acting on first impulse, he seized the villain, who was then standing close to the bed, by the bottom of the pants in hope of throwing him to the floor and dispossessing him of the axe. This he did not succeed in doing, but gradually got up to the brute's neck, and seized him by the throat. It was at this juncture that the two girls came rushing into the room, having been attracted by the moans of their brother George and the noise consequent upon the desperate struggle that was going on. Fannie was the first to advance With a nerve that would do credit to the bravest of the sterner sex, she rushed into the valley of the shadow of death "Stand back, or I'll brain you,"

SHOUTED THE INFURIATED VILLAIN, and his eyes flashed with a ferocity that almost made her succumb. Nerving herself, however, for the occasion, she did not stand back, but rushed at him with the determination to do or die. Tiger-like, she fairly leaped at him, and as she came within range was able to ayert the blow aimed at her head. Following this, however, came another, which took effect in the back of her shoulder. Her sister Maggie, in the meantime, had bravely rushed in, and seizing the uplifted axe, wrenched it from the villain's hand, but not before another gash had been made in her sister's breast. Mann then fled. The neighbours were at once alarmed, when the enormity of the crime was disclosed, and a thrill of horror was sent through the country such as has never before been experienced in the annals of Ottawa Valley history.

ANOTHER VERSION OF THE CRIME.

Your correspondent to-day met Mr. Kirby of Ottawa county, who was just returning from the scene of the tragedy. Mr. Kirby is related to the Cooke family, and gives perhaps a more correct detail of the revolting crime than has yet appeared. Mr. Kirby's version is that Emma Cooke got up at six o'clock Wednesday morning, and as was part of her daily duty, visited the granary immediately in rear of the kitchen, to get some grain for the fowls. While there Mann entered and attempted to take improper liberties with her. She resisted, and he resorted to a process of strangulation to enable him to accomplish his hellish purpose. In order to carry out the idea successfuly he tied a piece of rope around the girl's neck, and drew it tighter and tighter until she became exhausted and could offer no further resistance. The probability is that she screamed during the operation, and it was this noise that attracted her mother to the granary. Mann, then realizing that he had been detected in his terrible crime, conceived the idea of EXTERMINATING THE ENTIRE HOUSEHOLD.

Mrs. Cooke bears a mark on her forehead, and the probability is that Mann stunned her with a blow from some blunt instrument, and whilst lying unconscious on the floor removed the rope from the lifeless form of Emma and used it on her mother. When Mrs. Cooke's body was found the rope was tightly drawn around her neck and the end tied to the leg of a table, which stood in the centre of the granary. From here he appears to have traced his steps to a shed adjoining the barn, where Mr. Cooke was feeding the swine. He must have come unto the old gentleman by surprise, and hacked his head to pieces. From there he made his way back to the house and went up the kitchen stairs to the room occupied by the boys, intending to get quietly rid of them, and leaving the two young ladies for the last. How well these intentions were thwarted, the brave conduct of the girls will explain.

SERVICES VOLUNTEERED.

Sheriff Merrick will certainly experience no difficulty in getting a man to execute the death sentence, for he had already several applications from well-known residents of both L'Orignal and Hawkesbury, who have tendered their services. One man said he would esteem it a great favor to be accorded the privilege, and promised to appear on the scaffold unmasked. Whether he will carry out this idea when the day of execution arrives or not is a matter for him to establish. There is one thing certain, however, the sheriff need not seek the services of a professional executioner.

PRESENSATION TO MARKDALE L. O. L. No. 1045.

BRETHREN,—Allow me to present your worshipful lodge with an Orange Chart as a small token of respect and esteem for the illustrious Order with which we are identified. 'Tis not the intrinsic value of the chart that would cause you to accept but as a momento of the tie that binds us, so that when you open the chest you will remember that the giver is, and always will be, one of the fraternity whose motto is "No Surrender."

Yours fraternally,

JAMES ELLIOTT, W. M.

Markdale, Dec. 22nd. 1882.

REPLY.

DEAR BRO. ELLIOTT,—I have much pleasure in tendering you our thanks for your kind gift which we accept. Your position in our lodge as Master for three years shows that we all hold you in the highest esteem, and we hope that you may long remain a member of our noble order.

WM. BRADY, D. M.

A large variety of Candies and Nuts just arrived at Montgomery's bakery.

Mr. R. Davis, Flesherton, intends starting for Atcheson City, Kansas, on Friday.

Colored Damask Table Covers at half the usual price of such goods at M. Richardson's, Flesherton

A grand assortment of fresh Oranges and Oysters of the best brands, full cans, just arrived at Montgomery's bakery.

M. Richardson, Flesherton, has the largest range of Dress Goods at lowest prices. See them before purchasing.

A call solicited at Doll & Brown's. A lot of splendid Wedding Rings to hand.

We are glad to learn that Mr. Brown, dentist, of Flesherton, has decided to take up his abode in Markdale. He is highly respected there and will no doubt be a good citizen here.

First-class Watch Work at Doll & Brown's a specialty. All work guaranteed for one year.

The first meeting of the several municipal councils will take place on the third Monday in January (next Monday.) The County Councils on the fourth Tuesday.

Goods will be found as represented or money refunded, at Doll & Brown's, Markdale only.

SAMUEL WARDELL,

WELL DIGGER AND DRILLER. ALL orders promptly attended to. Residence—Snider's Hill, Owen Sound. 122-35

EUPHRASIA COUNCIL.

A meeting of the Township Council of the Township of Euphrasia was held pursuant to adjournment on the 21st Dec., 1882.

Members all present.

Minutes of last session of council read and confirmed.

The report of the Reeve, relative to the cost of suit between Clark and this corporation, laid before council and accepted, and a copy of said report handed to the Treasurer, the resignation of John Clugston, as assessor for the year 1882, was accepted.

By-law No. 325, fixing indemnity of council was carried through the different stages and passed. The Reeve's orders were issued on the Treasurer to pay as follows, viz:

To Wilson Boyd, $39 for work on S. L. 6 and 7 con. 9; W. H. Dodson, $36 for 6 road scrapers; James Falcs $17.50 for care of Hall, furnishing lamps, &c; Robert Dunlop, $20 for postage and $130 being balance of salary, payment for extra services on school business, &c.

On motion being made and seconded, the council arose.

ROBERT DUNLOP, Clerk.

Those cheap Tweeds—good wool, good weights, and good patterns—are just the thing wanted; 50c, 52½c, and 55c per yard, to be had only at M. Richardson's, Flesherton.

THE SPRINGS DID NO GOOD.

The following item is given for the consideration of those of our readers who are in search of just such an article as that referred to in the following statement of Mrs. Geo. A. Clark, a well known lady of St. Catherines: "I cannot refrain," says Mrs C., "from bearing testimony to the wonderful effects produced by the use of the very best remedy in the world, St. Jacob's Oil for rheumatism. I had rheumatism and dropsy and did not walk a step for fifteen years, I tried nearly everything our most skillful physician prescribed,—Clifton Springs,—St. Catherine Springs, etc., residing with a celebrated German doctor who pronounced my case incurable. Thinking everything of no use I was induced to try St. Jacobs Oil, and it has certainly done wonders for me. I heartily recommend it to any who may be suffering as I did. I have not had any use of my right arm for more than a year: now, however, I can raise it nearly to my head."

Do you want an Overcoat? If so now is your chance to secure a good bargain. Where? At M. Richardson's, Flesherton.

MISERABLE FOR THIRTEEN YEARS.

In order to acquire the rights of full citizenship in the United States, the native born must have reached the age of 21 years, and have gone through two full, but short courses—of Rheumatism, says a growler at our elbow. In Canada, however, the courses of Rheumatism are not so short, running, it would seem, as long as 13 years;—at least in one instance, that of Mr. James Mahoney, Sr, of Orillia, Ont., who says: "I have been a sufferer with Rheumatism for the past thirteen years, and have tried, during that time, very many of the remedies advertised for it, but all without effect. Upon recommendation I was induced to buy a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil. The first aplication relieved me, and upon the second application the pain disappeared entirely and has not since returned. It affords me much pleasure to make this statement of my experience with St. Jacobs Oil and I sincerely wish that every sufferer could know of its wonderful virtues."

BIRTHS.

MONTGOMERY.—In Markdale, on the 4th inst., the wife of Mr. Robert Montgomery, of a daughter.

FLEMING.—In Markdale, on the 5th inst., the wife of Mr. William Fleming, of a daughter.

SARJEANT—In Markdale, on the 7th inst., the wife of Mr. F. Sarjeant, of a daughter.

MARRIAGES.

RUNDLE—MONTGOMERY—By the Rev. T. J. Snowdon, on the 27th of Dec., 1882, at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. S. P. Rundle to Miss Lettie Montgomery, both of Melancthon.

WELLAR—GUY—By the Rev. T. J. Snowden, on the 27th Dec., 1882, at the residence of the bride's parents, Maxwell. Mr. Robert Wellar, of King, to Miss Priscilla Guy, of Maxwell.

MARKLE—DONEY—By the Rev. T. J. Snowdon, on the 1st of January, 1883, at the Methodist Parsonage, Dundalk, Mr. E. Markle to Miss Annie Doney, both of Riverview.

WYVILL—BLAIR—By the Rev. J. S. Corcoran, on New Year's day, at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. Henry Wyval to Miss Ann Blair all of Euphrasia.

CARSON—KENNEDY—On the 3rd inst, by the Rev. A Wilson, at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. J. G. Carson to Miss Mary Elizabeth Kennedy, all of Artemesia.

DIED.

BLACKSTOCK—In Alliston, on 31st Dec., Ida Jane, second daughter of Mr. E. Blackstock, aged 7 years.

Wyvill—In Euphrasia, on the 5th inst., Mr. Geo. Wyvill, aged 66 yrs., 3 mon.

TO LET.

BLACKSMITH SHOP. Good opening. Terms easy. Apply at the office of this paper.

January 6th, 1881. 122-tf

J. P. MARSHALL, L.D.S.

DENTIST,

GRADUATE OF TORONTO SCHOOL of Dentistry, will be at Butledge's Hotel, Markdale, on the third Wednesday of each month for the practice of his profession.

January 9th, 1883. 122-tf

Overcoats reduced at McFarland's.

Shawls and Mantles reduced at McFarland's.

Wool Squares and Clouds reduced at McFarland's.

Mr. W. J. McFarland received lately the largest shipment of Tea ever received in Markdale, or any other town on the line of the Toronto, Grey & Bruce.

T. G. & B. RAILWAY.

TIME TABLE.

Change of Time.

On and after Monday, Nov. 20th, 1882, trains will run as follows:

GOING NTH. Read Down. A.M.	P.M.		GOING SOUTH Read Up. A.M.	P.M.
7 30	4 25	TORONTO	10 45	9 10
9 05	6 00	CARDWELL JUNC.	9 05	7 31
9 55	6 45	ORANGEVILLE...	8 27	6 50
12 20	8 44	MOUNT FOREST..	6 30	4 30
12 06	8 45	MARKDALE,.....	6 27	4 30
2 25	0 15	TEESWATER	5 00	2 45
11 50	0	FLESHERTON	6 43	4 47
1 30	9 55	OWEN SOUND....	5 15	3 10
P.M	P.M.		A.M.	P.M.

A Mixed Train will also run between Toronto and Owen Sound. See Time Table.

D. McNICOLL, Gen. Pass. Agt. EDMUND WRAGGE. General Manager.

MARKDALE MARKETS.

Fall Wheat, $0.80 to $0.84; Spring $0.82 to $0 86 Barley, 50c; Peas, 68t; Oats, 34c Butter, 18c; Eggs, 20c; Potatoes, 40c; Hay, $10.00; Pork, 7.75 to 7.75.

FLESHERTON MARKETS.

Fall Wheat, $0.78 to $0.82; Spring, $0.80 to $0.84 Barley, 40c; Peas, 68c; Oats, 34c; Butter, 17c; Eggs, 20c; Potatoes, 40 c; Hay, $9.00; Pork, $7.00 to $7 65

TORONTO MARKETS.

Fall Wheat, $0.90 to $0.95. Spring, $0.90 to $0.95; Barley, 48 to 70c; Oats, 40c to 41c Peas, 69c to 71c; Hogs, $8.20 to $8.30; Potatoes, per bag, 60c to 65c; Butter, dairy, 17c to 20c; eggs 26c to 28c.

ESTRAY.

CAME on to the premises of the undersigned, lot 21, concession 12, Holland, about the middle of November, one red Steer, and two red and white Heifers rising three years old. The owner is requested to prove property, pay expenses and take them away.

W. WAIT.

Holland, Dec. 20th, 1882. 119-4t*

JNO. MONTGOMERY,

BAKER.

Begs to tender his thanks to the inhabitants of Markdale and surrounding country for past patronage, and to intimate to them that he is prepared to supply the public with

Fruit, Pound and Plum Cake

either plain or iced and ornamented. Also Brides' Cakes got up in the best style that can be done this side of Toronto.

Bread, Buns and Cakes!

in great variety. All these are manufactured on his own premises by himself, besides Biscuit of every description from the best manufacturers in Ontario.

CHOICEST CONFECTIONERY

in great variety. Tea Meetings, Socials, and other parties supplied on the shortest notice and on the most reasonable terms.

JOHN MONTGOMERY.

Markdale, Nov. 22nd, 1882. 115-3m

W. H. CAMPAIGNE,

LICENSED Auctioneer for the County of Grey. Sales attended in town or country on the shortest notice. Charges reasonable.

Orders left at the STANDARD office will receive prompt attention. 117-3m

SUFFOLK BOAR.

A WELL BRED Suffolk Boar for service on Lot 6, Concession 7, Euphrasia. Also a Poland China Boar. Charges for either $1 at time of service.

D. R. ELLIS.

Dec. 16th, 1882. 119-3w.

PATENTS.

We continue to act as solicitors for patents, caveats, trade-marks, copyrights, etc., for the United States, and to obtain patents in Canada, England, France, Germany, and all other countries. Thirty-six years' practice.

No charge for examination of models or drawings. Advice by mail free.

Patents obtained through us are noticed in the Scientific American, which has the largest circulation, and is the most influ. ental newspaper of its kind published in the world. The advantages of such a notice eevry patentee understands.

This large and splendidly illustrated paper is published weekly at $3.20 a year, and it is admitted to be the best paper devoted to science, mechanics, inventions, engineering works, and other departments of industrial progress, published in any country. Single copies by mail, 10 cents. Sold by all newsdealers.

Address, Munn & Co., publishers of Scientific American, 261 Broadway, New York.

Handbook about patents mailed free.

Undertaki

Coffins,

Caskets,

Burial Robe

Gloves,

Cra

—AND—

All Furnishings for F

May be had on Shortest Notice, Hours from

GEO. GRA

MARKDALE.

Also a well assorted stock

FURNITU

from plain to fine quality, all at prices.

J. W. FOR

MARKDALE

FLOUR MI

A. HIL

TAILOR.

Over McFarland's St

MARKDALE.

Special attention to Cutting

If you want a Perfect Fit your Order will.

A. HIL

September 20th 1882. 16

Auction Sa

OF PROPERTY

Situated in the Village of Price Township of Proton, County of

Pursuant to the Power of Sale in a certain mortgage there will be public auction at the Crown Hotel Village of Priceville, on MONDAY, THE 15TH DAY OF UARY, 1883,

at one o'clock in the afternoon.

PARCEL 1.—Lot 9, south side street; Lot 9, north side Torry street ville, containing one acre, more or less is a good acre of land, well fenced, any buildings on it.

PARCEL 2.—Lots 11, 12 and 13 on side of Kinross street; and lots 11, 13 on the north side of Torry street ville, containing three acres more or Upon this property is erected a house 18x24, with an extension and wood shed in fair repair a stble 20x30. There is also a nice orchard consisting of apple, cherry, and crab trees, also currant gooseberry bushes. There is also a on the premises. The property is fenced.

PARCEL 3.—Also at the same time place there will be sold lot 3, north Elgin street, and lot 3, south side of street, Priceville, containing one acre or less.

Upon this property is erected a 24 with an extension 10x24, and the is fairly fenced.

PARCEL 4.—Also lot 17, concession Township of Proton, containing 100 more or less.

Terms and conditions of sale very able and will be made known at time of

The Vendors reserve to themselves right of one bid for each parcel.

For further particulars apply to

SMITH, SMITH & RAE, Vendors' Solicitors.

3 Building and Loan Chambers, Toronto St., Toronto.

119td

Doll & Brown

As Mr. Doll is leaving Markdale to go into the Wholesale Jewellery Business in Toronto, and not wishing to leave Markdale altogether,) he has entered into partnership with Mr. W. BROWN, late of Flesherton, who is a practical watchmaker and jeweller of over 15 years experience, and comes with the best of recommendations from some of the leading watchmakers in the Dominion.

Mr. Brown will carry on the business in Markdale.

All work entrusted to him will be done in a workmanlike manner.

All work will be guaranteed, and all goods sold will be found as represented, or money refunded at

Doll & Brown's,

The People's Watchmakers & Jewellers,

Hill's Block,

MARKDALE ONLY.

Local Items.

Brown's is the place te get your photos taken.

Dr. T. F Brown, L. D. S., of Woodstock, will be in Markdale on the 15th inst., and remain at least two weeks.

The manner in which subscriptions have been coming in the past two weeks is very pleasing and satisfactory. Keep it up friend.

A complimentary supper was given Mr. and Mrs. McAlear, of the Railroad Hotel, Flesherton Station, last Friday evening, the first. The proceedings were highly satisfactory, and an enjoyable evening spent.

The sleighing is excellent and an immense business is being done in marketing grain, firewood, ties, telegraph poles, cedar posts, fence bolts, tan bark, &c., making our streets alive with teams, and business men merry.

Another Wildcat Shot.—The week before last Mr. Townsend, of Glenelg, shot a wildcat that had previously killed two of his sheep. It is a matter of surprise that so many of these ferocious animals exist in such a well settled part as South Grey.—Chronicle.

Markdale L. O. L. No. 1045.—At the December meeting the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:—W. M., James Elliott; D. M., Wm. Brady; Chap., J. W. Ford. Sec., A. McDougall; Treas., T. Elliott; Master of Ceremonies, Jos. Dormer; Lect Com Man., John Shea.

The Dakota Potato Beaten—Mr. Wm. Firth, of Glenelg, raised last season an "early rose" potato which weighed 6½ lbs.; this, however, was not an exceptional one as seven of the same kind weighed 42 lbs. Nothing like home production yet in the way of potatoes, and isolated specimens from the States are unnecessary in South Grey.—Chronicle.

Last night about seven o'clock, a fire broke out in the building occupied by Mr. James Bryan, on the south side of Main street. It was feared at first that the whole block would be destroyed, but owing to the exertions of a number of our citizens, whose well-directed efforts merit the highest praise, the fire was obtained in a short time, although some damage was done to the building.—Melbourne Free Press.

Harraway Grange.—The eighth annual meeting was held when the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:—Master, Peter Smith; Overseer, Henry Hamilton; Lecturer, P. Lyons; Steward, W. Carbet; Asst. Steward, David Squire; Chaplain, G. Bellomy; Treasurer, Robt. Elliott; Secretary, E. W. Moore; Gatekeeper, J. Thompson; Ceres, Mrs. P. Smith; Pomona, Mrs. E. W. Moore; Flora, Mrs. H. Hamilton; Lady Asst. Steward, Miss A. Smith.

Church Opening.—Last Sabbath the opening services were held in Knox Church. The Rev. Dr. McLaren, Professor of Divinity at Knox College, conducted the morning and evening services, and in the afternoon Mr. McDiarmid, of Latona, preached. The congregations were very large and especially so in the evening, the capacity of the church was tared to the utmost. Dr. McLaren's sermons being masterpieces of eloquence. The English and Methodist churches were closed in the morning and the Baptist church all day. The collections amounted to $114. Such a propitious inauguration is a bright omen and should stimulate the congregation to renewed effort in well doing.—Chronicle.

Don't forget the Carnival to-morrow night.

Blacksmith shop to rent. Apply at this office.

A shock of earthquake was felt at Belleville on Friday last.

The Carnival on Friday night last was a grand success (ful failure.)

Mr. and Mrs. Arch. Speers took their departure for Alexandria, Minn., on Monday last.

Another wanderer has returned. Sam'l Morrow arrived home from Michigan last week.

McAllister, of Durham, treated his friends on New Year's eve out of a silver pitcher 220 years old.

We understand it is the intention of some of our young men to form a string band. We wish them success.

The social at Stinson's on Friday evening was well attended, and a good time was spent. Proceeds about $13.

The nature of a dog is very far removed from that of a man, because a dog is counted mad when he refuses to drink.

Hotel to Rent.—Mansion House, Markdale. Apply C. M. Reynolds, Markdale P. O. Possession given 10th February.

Not a single bushel of grain was shipped from New York to Europe in a vessel bearing the American flag during 1882.

East Grey Conservative Association met in the Town Hall, Flesherton, on Wednesday the 3rd. All the old office-bearers were re-elected.

The traffic return of the Toronto, Grey, & Bruce Railway for the week ending Dec. 30, 1882, were $9,807, an increase of $1,187 39 over last year.

In Watertown, Wis., John, Annie and Lousia Kodisch murdered their mother on the 13th ult. It is supposed they desired to obtain her property.

The traffic return of the Toronto, Grey & Bruce for the week ending Dec. 26, was $6,275, an increase of $2,369 over the corresponding week of last year.

Farmers and others desiring a genteel, lucrative agency business, by which $5 to $20 a day can be earned, send address at once. on postal, to H. C. Wilkinson & Co., 195 and 197 Fulton Street, New York. 121-6m

What has happened our defunct fire brigade? Has all their enthusiasm oozed out at their finger ends, or will it need another great destruction of property to resurrect that formidable organization known as the "Markdale Fire Brigade."

Auction Sale.—Geo. Noble, Auctioneer, has received instructions from Mr, Jos. Galbraith to sell at the Revere House, on Saturday, the 13th inst., his farm stock implements, household furniture, &c. Sale commences at 10 a. m.; 10 months credit.

A sleighing party, comprising 44 of our village people drove, out a distance of 9 miles to Mr. James Erskine's in Euphrasia on Friday evening last and had a splendid time. Mr. and Mrs. Erskine treated them with the greatest hospitality making all feel perfectly at home.

The Commercial, printed and published in Winnipeg, in magazine form, printed on good paper, giving the various departments, is issued weekly at $2 per annum. Parties having interests in the North-West ought to have it. Steen & Boyce publishers, 16 James St. E., Winnipeg.

J. P. Marshall, dentist, who has been practising with Dr. Frank, of Orangeville, for some years, and who is also a graduate of Toronto School of Dentistry, intends visiting Markdale on the third Wednesday in each month, and will be at Rutledge's hotel on Wednesday, the 17th Jan., 1883, for the practice of dentistry in all its branches.

The liberal-Conservative Association for North Grey held its annual meeting at Owen Sound on Monday. The following officers were elected:—James Mason, Owen Sound, president; J. J. Johnston, St. Vincent, first vice president; Wm. Toppen, Keppel, second vice-president; G. P. Creighton, Owen Sound, recording secretary; H. W. Jenkins, Owen Sound, corresponding secretary; H. Robinson, Owen Sound, treasurer.

A very successful tea-meeting was held in the McIntyre Presbyterian church last Thursday evening. The church was literally crowded. An entertainment was held in the interests of the Sabbath School children of McIntyre on New Years evening. A Christmas tree was the feature of the evening, on which there was a large number of valuable presents. Excellent music was provide by Messers. Annie McKinnon, Lizzie McGirr, and Teany Grey, and Mr. William Inkster.—Enterprise.

At a special meeting of Markdale Grange No. 336 the following officers were elected for the year 1883:—Thos. Mann, W. M.; G. Richardson, Overseer; Thos. Elliott, Sec.; A. Elliott, Lecturer; B. Coleman, Chaplain; S. J. Coleman, Treasurer; S. Douglas, Steward: Edward Lomas, Gatekeeper; Sister E. Drew, Ceres; Sister Jane Walker, Pomona; Sister Alice Drew, Flora; Sister Mary Walker, Lady Asst. Stewardess. Geo. Richardson delegate to Division Grange. The above lodge purpose having an oyster supper at its next regular meeting.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.

The advertiser, having been permanently cured of that dread disease, Consumption, by a simple remedy, is anxious to make known to his fellow sufferers the means of cure. To all who desire it, he will send a copy of the prescription used, (free of charge,) with the directions for prepairing and using the same which they will find a sure Cure for Consumption, Asthma, Bronchitis, &c.

Parties wishing the Prescription, will please address, Rev. E. A. Wilson, 149 Penn st., Williamsburgh, N. Y. 75-127

AGENTS WANTED.—Big pay.—Light Work. Steady Employment. Samples free. Address, M. L. BYRN, 46 Nassau stree New York. 20

Land for Sale.

100 ACRES; about 30 of which is cleared, being composed of the E. half of Lot 19, in the 8th concession of the Township of Euphrasia. Apply at this office, or to Robert Dunlop, Township Clerk of Euphrasia, Griersville P. O. 117-tf.

Just Arrived!

A LARGE STOCK OF

NEW AND FASHIONABTE

DRY GOODS,

Boots and Shoes,

NEW GROCERIES,

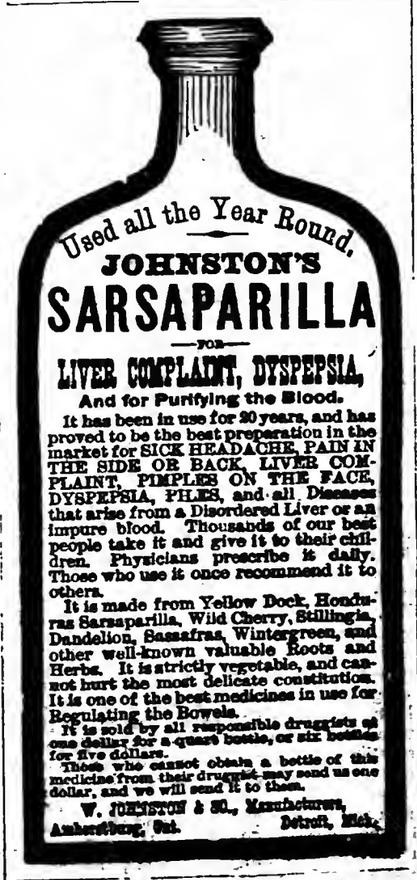
At prices which will astonish you. Call and see.

Highest price paid for Butter and Eggs or any kind of Fowl at the Cheap Store.

JOHN DOUPE,
Flesherton Station.

Nov. 15th, 1882. 114-3m.

TO SELL OR RENT.



LOT 15, CON. 12, HOLLAND, 122 acres, 100 cleared, good buildings thereon. Terms easy. Apply to James Logan, Postmaster, near the premises, or to M. S. KELLOW, Tara P. O.

November 14th, 1882. 114-tf.

Health is Wealth!

Dr. E. C. West's Nerve and Brain Treatment, a guaranteed specific for Hysteria, Dizziness, Convulsions, Fits, Nervous Neuralgia, Headache, Nervous Prostration caused by the use of alcohol or tobacco, Wakefulness, Mental Depression, Softening of the Brain, resulting in Insanity and leading to misery, decay and death, Premature Old Age, Barrenness, Loss of Power in either sex, Involuntary losses and Spermatorrhœa, caused by over-exertion of the brain, self abuse or over-indulgence. One box will cure recent cases. Each box contains one month's treatment. One dollar a box, or six boxes for five dollars; sent by mail prepaid on receipt of price. We guarantee six boxes to cure any case. With each order received by us for six boxes, accompanied with five dollars, we will send the purchaser a written guarantee to refund the money if the treatment does not effect a cure. Guarantees issued only by A. Turner & Co., sole authorized Agent for Markdale Ont. John C. West & Co. sole proprietor, Toronto, Ont.

FARM FOR SALE.

LOT 6 CON. 3 E. G. RD. HOLLAND, 100 acres, 70 acres cleared, well, watered, good orchard bearing good log house and barn. Situated 2 half miles from Chatsworth. A bargain will be given in the above property, for particulars apply to Geo. Noble, Markdale, or to Chas. King, Shelburne. 120-tf.

Re-Fresh-ing

In the cool assertion of some people that they can sell below cost, &c, it may not be amiss to let the public of Markdale and surrounding country know that

Wilson Benson,

of the "BELFAST HOUSE." MARKDALE, can sell "cheaper than the cheapest," and "better than the best," all kinds of

Groceries, Liquors, &c.

Consisting of

TEAS, TOBACCOS, SPICES, CANNED FISH, ETC.,

And for those wishing pure Wine for sacramental purposes, will find a brand that will equal anything on this side the Atlantic.

Other Liquors equally pure.

Special! Pure Holland Gin.

Cheese from the best manufactories.

Our Whiskies are from the firm of Gooderham & Worts, Toronto, and the public may rely on receiving them as they are sent.

FLOUR, POTATOES, and everything in the household line kept constantly on hand.

Henceforth my Store will be supplied with Fruits of all kinds, such as

APPLES. PEARS, PLUMS, &c.

FRUIT CAKES of all kinds always kept on hand.

Essences, Hair Oils, and Perfumery of the choicest nectars.

TOILET & FANCY SOAPS, better than the best.

CANADIAN & WESTERN PORK, of first quality.

Everything in the Grocery Line kept on a fuller and more complete scale than at any other place in Markdale.

WILSON BENSON.

PIMPLES.

I will mail (Free) the recipe for a simple Vegetable Balm that will remove Tan-Freckles, Pimples and Blotches, leaving the skin soft, clear and beautiful; also instructions for producing a luxuriant growth of hair on a bald head or smooth face. Address, enclosing a 3c. stamp, Ben. Vandelf & Co., 5 Beekman st., N. Y. 75-127

ERRORS OF YOUTH.

A GENTLEMAN who suffered for years from NERVOUS DEBILITY, PREMATURE DECAY, and all the effects of youthful indiscretion will, for the sake of suffering humanity, send free to all who need it, the recipe and directions for making the simple remedy by which he was cured. Sufferers wishing to profit by the advertiser's experience can do so by addressing in perfect confidence, JOHN B. OGDEN,
75-127 42 Cedar St., New York.

Cold Great chance to make money. Those who always take advantage of the good chances for making money that are offered, generally become wealthy, while those who do not improve such chances remain in poverty. We want many men, women, boys and girls to work for us right in their own localities. Any one can do the work properly from the first start. The business will pay more than ten times ordinary wages. Expensive outfit furnished free. No one who engages fails to make money rapidly You can devote your whole time in the work, or only your spare moments. Full information and all that is needed sent free. Addres. Stinson & Co., Portland Maine. 71-126

MANHOOD

HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED

SEAL We have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, &c., resulting from excesses.

☞ Price, in sealed envelope, only 6 cents, or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

☞ This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Address

The Culverwell Medical Co.,
P.O. box 450 41 Ann St., New York

$500 Reward!

We will pay the above reward for any case of Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Indigestion. Constipation or Costiveness we cannot cure with West's Vegetable Liver Pills, when the directions are strictly complied with. They are purely Vegetable, and never fail to give satisfaction. Sugar Coated, Large Boxes, containing 30 Pills, 25 cts. For sale by all Druggists. Beware of counterfeits and immitations. The genuine manufactured only by JOHN C. WEST & CO., "The Pill Makers," 21 & 83 King St. East, Toronto, Ont. Free trial package sent by mail prepaid on receipt of a 3 cent stamp. For sale at Turner & Co. Drug Store.

Mothers! Mothers! Mothers!

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the excruciating pain of cutting teeth? If so, go at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately—depend upon it; there is no mistake about it. There is not a mother upon earth who has ever used it, who will not tell you at once that it will regulate the bowels, and give rest to the mother, and relief and health to the child, operating like magic. It is perfectly safe to use in all cases, and pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Sold everywhere at 25 cents a bottle.

MARKDALE Meat Market.

A constant supply of

Fresh Meats!

on hand, at the

Lowest Living Prices.

Orders solicited, and delivered free to all parts of the Town.

Farmers having fat stock to dispose of, will please leave their addresses.

TERMS, STRICTLY CASH.

FRED. SARJEANT.

Markdale March 23, 1882. 80-1y

SEEING IS BELIEVING.

GENTLEMEN,—

If you want a first-class

Buggie or Wagon

call at

MCKENNA & MASON'S

CARRIAGE WORKS

MARKDALE.

They can supply you with anything from a

Lumber Wagon

up to

Extension Top Phæton.

To buy from them is to

SAVE MONEY!

They are both practical workmen, and employ none but

PRACTICAL WORKMEN.

They guarantee their work Second to none for Lightness of Draught and Superiority of Finish.

They use nothing but First-class White Oak for Wagons, and thrice Extra Second Growth Hickory for light work.

The immense amount of work turned out of McKenna & Mason's shop is sufficient proof of the wide reputation they enjoy for doing good work.

The BEST is the CHEAPEST in the END Poor cheap work we positively will not take.

Special attention given to Re-Trimming and Repainting all classes of Carriage Work.

Satisfaction guaranteed (or No Pay) in

HORSESHOEING

SHOP—On Mill Street opposite to Sproule's Hotel.

McKENNA & MASON.

THOS. MATHEWS,

Harness Establishment!

MARKDALE.

EVERYTHING IN OUR LINE KEPT ON HAND OR MADE TO ORDER ON SHORT NOTICE.

LIVERY!

IN CONNECTION.

GEORGE WILSON,

Wholesale and Retail

BUTCHER!

BEEF, PORK OR MUTTON SUPPLIED. from a single pound to a whole carcass, at the lowest market prices.

FISH & FOWL IN THEIR SEASON

Farmers having Fat Cattle, Sheep, or Pigs to dispose of will do well to call at No. 3 Burns' Block, opposite the new Union Block.

Markdale, Oct. 25th, 1881

Nothing Like Leather.

M. M. M'LEOD,

MARKDALE.

NOT TO BE BEATEN!

All those who may have had the misfortune to have been born barefooted will bear in mind that we have just received the largest and best stock of leather ever before brought into Markdale, consisting of Spanish Sole, French Kip and Calf, and are now prepared to manufacture Ladies, Gents, Youths and Misses boots and shoes, from the stoga to the finest kid and prunella.

Sewed Work a Specialty.

All work warranted. Invisible patching also done here.

M. M. McLEOD.

Markdale, Sept. 19th, 1881.

A Romance of a Pair of Skates.

A Seasonable Story.

BY

COLLIE WILKINS.

On a superbly upholstered lounge, rivalling in its magnificence the erstwhite celebrated "Canoe Couch damask" of the Ontario Agricultural Department, with her fair head supported by silken pillows reclined Miss Iolanthe De Bellevoir. Iolanthe, though possessed of a graceful form and lovely face, was a confirmed invalid. Although apparently in good health the young lady was afflicted with a constitutional weakness which necessitated a continued recumbent position, and with the exception of an occasional drive around the Queen's Park in her father's carriage, she passed most of the time on the sofa reading the latest novels, and the standard British poets, not excepting the works of the much abused "Wizard of the North," of course taboring the objectionable Marmion.

Some of the more curious of her young lady "dearest friends" maliciously assumed and secretly expressed that her constitutional weakness partook very much of the nature of laziness, and that she naturally on that account preferred to recline gracefully on a sofa, reading novels, to assisting her maternal relative and younger sisters in the ordinary duties of the household. These base insinuations were treated with the scorn they deserved, not only by herself, but by all her true friends, among whom figured conspicuously a certain young gentleman who scouted with indignation anything that would tend to injure or reflect upon the adorable Miss De Bellevoir.

This young gentleman rejoiced in the name of Roderick Malcolm McGregor, and was a B.A., a gold medallist and a student of Divinity. It is not of any moment, nor does it come within the province of this tale to say what college had the honor of being his Alma Mater. He might be an iron clad Presbyterian of Knox's, a Scotch student of prelatist proclivities like the late Rt. Reverend Dr. Strachan, and have taken his degree in Trinity, or a Broad churchman of the Wycliff school, it mattereth not. It is sufficient for the purposes of this story to know that he was a most exemplary young man, and withal a most devoted admirer of the fair Iolanthe.

On the evening our story opens our heroine was in a most pronounced state of ennui, or in other words, she was suffering from an acute fit of the "blues." The novels no longer interested her and poetry had lost its charms. She was trying in vain to wrestle with Scott, and on arriving at the passage,

> "Oh, Caledonia! stern and wild > Meet nurse for a poetic child."

he threw the volume from her petulantly, and, with a voice quivering with emotion murmured, "I wish to goodnes gracious that some fellow would come and nurse me, even if he were stern and wild. Anything would be preferable to this horrid monotony." Scarcely had she uttered the sentence when Mr. McGregor was announced, and in a few moments thereafter, was seated by her side.

"Hoo's a in' ye the day Iolanthy? It's a vera great pity ye can no tak a wee bit o' air," said the young gentleman sympathizingly.

"Oh, Roderick!" replied the poor languishing lady. "Could I but do so, how gladly would I avail myself of every possible opportunity to drive out in the air. And now that we have snow, I pine for a nice cutter ride."

"Hoot, toot!" interrupted Roderick, who, although quite an admirer of the fair sex in general, and desperately enamoured with Iolanthe in particular, had a very dogmatic, not to say John Brownish manner in addressing them. "Hoot toot, I ssie! I wud na gie' a bawbee for a' the guid asleigh drive will do ye. Ye might as wul be lyin' here as lolling in a cutter wi' a heap of buffalo claes on ye, and ablins ye may get yer two lugs frozen. Noo gin ye tak my advice ye'll try and make an effort and indulge in a wee walk. It will stretch yer legs for ye."

"Spare me, I beg, Mr. McGregor," said the now indignant young lady—"Spare me your advice and somewhat rude expressions. How can I ever attempt to walk when my poor le—limbs almost refuse to support me? Why if I could walk I could skate, and skating used to be my favorite pastime years ago—before I was—was—smitten."

"Weel I'm richt glad o' that, for in my opinion ye'd better take a sma' walk wi' me every day and I wager ye'll soon be able to skate," said the confidant Mac. "I recollect," continued he, "taking many a long walk through the hills of Argyleshire and found them vera beneficial for my health, And while in Holland I could na help admirin' the bonny figures of the braw Dutch lasses, which I'm tauld is the result of skating wi' bundles on their heads. Yes," said the philosophic Mac, "I certainly recommend skating for ye."

Urged by the solicitations of her importunate lover, Iolanthe "made an effort" and aided by his strong arm gradually shook off her torpor and became quite a pedestrienne, and each evening she astounded her affectionate family by her wonted skill in overcoming any number of buck wheat pancakes and other luxuries at the tea table, for she was determined to skate. After some time she felt convinced that she was now able to perform the evolutions she had practised in her younger days on the ice. Accordingly she, as the lawyers say, "made search as to" and from amidst the debris of the garret she dragged out her old pair of skates and proceeded to the Rink, accompanied by a young brother, Master Hildebrand Perceval Percy Bellevoir, who assisted her in putting on the long neglected "irons."

Many were the remarks, and odious the comparisons that were made by the on-looking damsels on the skates.

"Did you ever see such an old-fashioned pair?" said one.

"Never," said another.

"Hardly ever," said a third.

"I wonder where she got 'em?"

"She ought to get them cast over again at a foundry."

"They must have belonged to her grandmamma," &c., &c.

All this did poor Iolanthe hear, and was so mortified that she took off her skates and went home, laid down on her favorite lounge, and wept bitterly.

Next morning she looked over the matter with more clearness, and said to herself, "It was not I after all that caused such invidious remarks, it was these horrid old fashioned skates. I'll go down town this very day and buy a new pair," so she did. She bought a pair and again sought the Rink. Hildebrand buckled them on securely, and she glided gracefully to the centre of the rink. She then, so to speak, "put on more steam," when horror! one of the skates and its corresponding foot flew upward till it pointed to the zenith, while the other described a semi-circle on the ice, and Iolanthe fell with tremendous force on the glassy surface of the rink. Fortunately she had on one of those extremely tasteful and much admired head dress known to the theatre going public as the Gainsborough Hat, for providentially the rim of it, coming first in contact with the ice, gradually bent and allowed her head to come gently though firmly to its surface.

Again she removed her skates, went home, betook herself again to the grateful repose of the sofa, and wept more bitterly than ever.

She had not long resumed her old position when her lover and whilome monitor McGregor stalked into the room. She neither raised her eyes or bade him welcome.

"What's wrang wi' ye, Iolanthe?" said he. "Ye look as cross as a bear wi' a sore head!"

"Its nothin' to you anyway," replied the young lady with asperity, and forgetting her company manners.

"Oh, yes, its a vera great deal to me," said the Caledonian soothingly. "Ablins ye have na walked oot the day."

"Yes, thanks to you, I have walked and skated too, and almost broke my neck," she replied satirically.

"Skating!" said the astonished lover.

"Yes." I first tried my old skates and the girls guyed and "Pinafored" me because they were so old fashioned," said the lady sobbing. 'Then I bought a new pair at Moses Mordecais' on Queen street, and I came near breaking my neck. Oh, oh! (sobs and tears) I never want to speak to you again!"

"Oh, I see it a' the noo," said the undaunted Mac. "Why but ye get a guid pair and a' will be richt. I'll get them for ye. for never let it be said that a McGregor ever went back on his girl, even if she has abused him. Noo jist listen tae me. I went down yesterday to Rawbone's, Yonge street, wi' a lot o' the lads that were ganging out tae the woods tae shoot, one wanted a breech loading shot gun, another a knife, and another a revolver, and they a' wanted traps of a' sorts tae equip themselves for the camp, and while they were occupied in getting what they required, (which was a long time, for Rawbone has an immense stock of a' sorts on hand, and they dootless found it difficult to choose), I amused myself in looking at the articles in the store. There were as many rifles as would fit out a respectable batallion of infantry, and cartridges, belts, pouches, and hunting guns of a' descriptions. But what took my ee' especially, was their new style of skates, cai'd the CLIMAX SKATE, which by a vera neat contrivance, a turn or two of a screw adjusts itself firmly to the boot, na matter of what size. I was just thinking of you at the time, and if I had known that you were gain' tae skate, I'd hae' bought ye a pair. So Iolanthe dry yer weeping ees, and to-morrow deo volante ye'll have the finest pair o' skates in Toronto."

Next afternoon, having visited Rawbone's, Roderick duly appeared with the CLIMAX SKATES, Iolanthe was charmed, and when she tried them at the rink she was fairly in extasies! She glided round like a swan, the envy and admiration of the beholders, some of whom had laughed at her previous discomfitures.

"Oh, Roderick! how can I repay you for all your kindness and for your consideration at my petulant behavior yesterday."

"By accepting me, and becoming Mrs. Roderick McGregor," said the imperturbable Mac.

"Oh, Roderick!" said the agitated maiden, who trembled so that the new skates she carried jingled an obligato in B flat, "but we must wait until after Lent."

"The deil much I care,' said Roderic, "before or after as long as no time is lost." Which remark we must confess was somewhat inconsistent with the supposed characteristics of a Divinity student.

However, here we see an interesting young invalid lady brought to robust health, and two hearts made to beat as one, and all through a pair of skates.—Toronto Truth.

The First Shot.

Just as the paling of the stars showed dawn to be near, but while it was still as dark as ever, a few scattered shots were fired in our front, probably from some sentries or small pickets outside the enemy's lines. No notice was taken of this, though one of the shots killed a Highlander; the movement was unchanged—and then a single bugle sounded within the enemy's lines. These were most welcome sounds, assuring us that we should close with the foe before daylight, which just before he had seemed very doubtful. Yet a minute or two of dead silence elapsed after the bugle was blown, and then the whole extent of entrenchment in our front, hitherto unseen and unknown of, poured forth a stream of rifle fire. Then, for the first time that night, I could really be said to see my men, lighted by the flashes—the dim phantom lines which I had been looking on all night suddenly woke to life, as our bugles sounded the charge, and responding with lusty continued cheers, and without a moments's pause or hesitation, the ranks sprang forward in steady array. The distance from the blazing line of intrenchment was judged to be about 150 yards—in that interval nearly 200 men went down, the Seventy-fourth on the left losing 5 officers and 60 men before it got to the ditch. The obstacle was, (as the engineers afterwards recorded) 6 feet wide and 4 feet deep, and beyond was a parapet 4 feet high. Over it, or into and out of it, went the whole of the first line, mounting the parapet and attacking the Egyptians who lined it, and most of the second line followed, but I stopped the parts of it that were nearest to me as they came up, wishing to keep a support in hand which should be more readily available than such as the brigade in rear could supply.—Lieut.-Gen. Hamley in the Nineteenth Century.

LATE CANADIAN NEWS.

MANITOBA AND THE NORTH-WEST.

Hay is coming in large quantities into Brandom and seems to be a drug in the market.

The cut of timber for the sason at the Hudson Bay Company's mill, Edmonton, was 52S,866 feet, board measure.

The mumps are going around among the Indians at Edmonton just now, and some of the whites are catching.

The snow fall has been exceptionally heavy at Prince Albert. More snow has already fallen than during the whole of last winter.

It is reported at Calgarry that the C. P. Railway engineers engaged in the mountains have discovered rich gold bearing quartz.

Last winter river water cost 33 1-3 cts, a barrel at Edmonton. It now costs from 50 cts. to $1, according to the situation of the place of delivery, and no jawbone allowed.

The first birth in Wapella, N. W. T., took place on Christmas day, the happy mother being Mrs. M. Currie. Under the rule generally observed in such cases, the youngster is entitled to a corner lot at the hands of the C. P. Railway.

A letter from Peace River written by W. Lloyd, who went in last spring, says the crops there were ahead of anything he had ever seen anywhere. It was reported that two miners near Fort St. John had been making from ten to thirty dollars a day.

A convention of veterinary surgeons was recently held in Winnipeg to devise means for putting a stop to the rapid spreading of glanders among the horses in the vicinity of Winnipeg and other parts of Manitoba. Twelve glandered horses had been shot on one day lately near Morriss.

Messrs. Harvey and Grant of Kamloops, B. C., arrived at Edmonton on Nov. 10th with W. F. Buxton's train of pack horses. They say that the trail this side of the Jasper House is very bad, being much obstructed by fallen timber and muskeg. In many places it can scarcely been seen.

It is generally supposed that Saskatewan coal will crumble and lose its burning properties after having been out of the pit some time. Ross' coal which was taken out the winter before last is still being used, and is nearly if not quite as good as when first taken out.

The Brandon Sun says claim jumping is assuming a very serious character in that community. Cases have come under its observation where parties have made affidavits in support of cancellations. Afterwards, conscience stricken, or through fear of the consequences, they have made affidavits setting forth that their first statement was false.

A petition is now in circulation among the vessel owners and others interested in the navigation of Lake Winnipeg and of the Red River, asking the Dominion Government to take such steps as will not only improve navigation, but will also lessen the dangers to navigators of the lake and stream referred to.

The Brandon Sun says: The western mail for Brandon goes through to Winnipeg, where it is re-assorted and then returned to us. As the Times would say, if it were not for the post-office department we would have no mail at all, so we had better show our gratitude by being satisfied with what we have got.

Somewhere near Medicine Hat a large manufacturing city—the Pittsburg of the North-West will be located. Specimens of cannel coal have been brought from that vicinity which are fully equal to the best Pennsylvania coal. It is of a bright black color, so hard and solid that it can be cut and polished, and burns readily with a clear yellow flame. This district has long been noted for its iron ore, and with fuel near by to reduce the ore to merchantable shape, a promising industry is sure to spring up in the near future. The only drawback is the lack of limestone. Search has been made for the wherewithal to make lime, which is required to be used in reducing the ore, but in vain. About forty squatters are located in the vicinity of Medicine Hat.

The lowest temperature at Edmonton last April was nine degrees above zero on the 3rd, the highest was 63° on the 18th. Wheat was sown on the 13th. There was a slight fall of snow on the 16th, but there was no rain whatever and no high winds. In May the highest temperature was seventy-two above zero, and the lowest on the 8th, twenty-six above. The average for the month was fifty-one above. The highest wind was on the 10th, being forty-two miles per hour, and the average for the month was six miles per hour. Rainfall for the month. 1.16 inches. In June the highest temperature was eighty-six above zero, and the lowest, on the 21st thirty-nine above, while the average was fifty-eight. The highest wind was on the 12th, 12 miles per hour. Rain fall for the month 3.75 inches. The weather throughout the month was simply superb, and the growth astonnding. In July the highest temprature was 85 above zero, and the lowest 45 above, average for the month 62 above. Highest wind on the 10th, 23 miles per hour; average for the month, 3 2-3 miles. Rainfall 1.04 inches. In August the highest temperature was 87 above zero, and the lowest 45 above, average 59 above. Highest wind on the 18th, 27 miles per hour; average for the month 4½ miles. Rain fell 2.15 inches. The first barley was cut on the 1st and the first wheat on the 8th, both perfectly ripe, and before the end of the month almost all the grain was ripe and the bulk of it was cut. In September the highest temperature was 79 above, and the lowest 26 above, average 50 above. Highest wind on the 30th, 13 miles per hour, and the average for the month 3½ miles. Rainfall 0.66 inches, and the snow fell in the last days of the month, 1½. The earlier part of the month was fully as good for growth and ripening as the four former months, but about the 13th the weather became damp and cool, and on the night of the 16th the first frost of the season occurred.

QUEBEC.

The Rev. Pere Lesage has determined on a crusade against the sale of intoxicating drinks in Chambly.

The road of the Canada Atlantic Railway is now graded between the Richelieu and the Seigniory line, with the exception of about three miles.

A fearful cold-blooded murder has just been reported from Arthabaskaville. On Wednesday night last, a respectable farmer, from St. Norbert, named Mr. Goyette, came into the village to the mill and to the station on business. Near the station, on his return, he met four men, Messrs. Chabot, father and son, Brown and Blanchet. All were slightly under the influence of liquor, and words passed between them which quickly led to blows. All at once the younger Chabot stepped up to Goyette, and, with his knife, struck into the abdomen of his victim and cut open the body upward to the top of the stomach, inflicting a wound from which the bowels protruded, and which was necessarily attended by almost immediate fatal results. After striking the fatal blow, the murderer simply said: "Come along, father, I've given him enough." All the parties have been arrested and are now carefully watched in the Arthabaska gaol, where they are confined. The prisoners will be tried at the next term of the Criminal Court, in February.

MARITIME PROVINCES.

Owen Connolly, of Charlottetown, P. E. I., has donated one hundred pairs of blankets and sixty tons of coal to the poor of that city.

The product of the new woollen cloth mills at Hopewell, N. S., is highly spoken of, its admirers predicting extensive sale for it throughout the Dominion.

The local option law has been worked in Pictou County to the extent of making it difficult but not impossible to procure the ardent.

PEARLS OF TRUTH.

The only happiness in this world's gift that is really worth the having is the happiness which springs up, free and unsought, by the wayside of duty.

Things that are to last require time for building. And, when a man is living for honor and glory and immortality, it takes time for him to bring out the full fruit of that which he is seeking.

Flatterers are the worst kind of traitors, for they will strengthen your imperfections, encourage you in all evils, correct you in nothing, but so shadow and paint your follies and vices as you shall never, by their will, discover good from evil or vice from virtue.

There are certain times when a hearty greeting, a word of cheer, a token of sympathy, or a little friendly assistance are most valuable and life-giving; but let the moment slip by and they are needed no longer and lose all their virtue. How often has the help that might have saved the sick and suffering arrived too late to be of any avail!

In all the pursuits of life we find that those who achieve honor and distinction are strong and self-reliant in their own powers, exercise faith in their own ability, and carry out plans conceived in their own brain. Morse had faith in telegraph wires, and Field in submarine cables, and to-day, in consequence thereof, the lightning is harnessed to convey the news of the world to every part of the inhabited globe within the compass of a few hours.

Girls, if they intend to become useful members of society and make good wives for "honest men and true," ought to be perfectly acquainted with all kinds of domestic work. They should know how things are done. "Knowledge is power," and such power renders a woman very independent in this age of inferior servants. She may perhaps never be required to use her knowledge in a practical way by performing household work, but it is well to possess the knowledge.

MARRIAGE.—What should be sought, and what is sought, as a rule, in a husband or a wife, whose arbitrary conventional customs and considerations of rank, wealth, and position are not allowed to interfere, is not a counterpart, but a complement—something to supply a lack—the other self, which shall round out one's being, and form a perfect symmetrical whole. As in music it is not contagious notes which combine to form chords, but those separated from each other, as a first and a third, or a third and a fifth; so we produce domestic harmony by associating graduated differences.

BANTER.—Jesting should have its limits, even at home. Among brothers and sisters a little harmless banter is perfectly admissable, and even perhaps desirable; but a family whose members are always snapping at each other in the style at present approved as clever, both in fiction and reality, can scarcely be upheld as a model of courtesy at home. Both among brothers and sisters, and husbands and wives, a great deal of talk which begins in chaff ends in rudeness. In society, conventional politeness sets certain limits to repartee, but at home there are no such barriers. In private life, when the more refined weapons of conversational dispute fail, the combatants are apt to resort to personal abuse. Wit is a dangerous weapon, and must be used with caution.

Saskatchewan Railway.

Col. Sproat, Hon. L. Clark and R. Fuller, of Hamilton, Ont., started from Winnipeg on Wednesday to Prince Albert, on the business of the South Saskatchewan Railway. They have been fortunate enough at Ottawa to receive the usual land grant of 6,400 acres per mile to aid in the construction of the line, and the intention is to commence operations at the western end next spring. Twenty miles of line from Prince Albert will reach the river, whence steamboats can proceed from points lower down. Thus it is intended to supply a rail and water route for the people of that town before the closing of navigation in 1883. The gentlemen mentioned started out with the intention of purchasing a right of way, so that no obstacle will be in the way of the rapid construction of this railway. It is asserted that inside of three years the journey will be made by rail from Winnipeg to Prince Albert in 24 hours.—Winnipeg Commercial.

The musicians of Boston have resolved upon a fixed standard of pitch. This doesn't refer to the stories they tell about each other.

Making a Night of It.

I had been at dinner. There was a [illegible] good fellows there. They were dining [illegible] other good fellow who was going away. [illegible] dined him, we wined him. The sitting protracted. It was a very damp night. was a humid night.

And then, as the night was liquo[illegible] and the star-dials hinted of morn, I thought me of home. Ah, home! It great thing to have a home. They say in the French language there is no wor[illegible] home. Home, sweet home. 'Tis sw[illegible] hear the watch dog's honest bark. [illegible] that sort of thing.

But then sometimes you don't want home.

I didn't want to go home. But I afraid to stay away. So I took a cab my homeward route together.

When I reached my stately mansion I missed the cab and reflected. Was I a condition to appear at the domestic that awful tribunal? I determined to it over; en reflechant, I took a walk a the block.

I thought I might pass off my hiccoughs for heart disease, or something like Something sudden—something dang[illegible] Apoplexy might do.

But no. I smiled sadly and reflected Zulana knew me pretty well. She was familiar with the symptoms of my pro[illegible] heart disease.

I cautiously unlatched the door, with little trouble. When within, I [illegible] again. I think I see the cynical upon the face of some beardless [illegible] Ah, little reck ye, ye mateless ones, or no matter.

When I entered the hallway I recollect man stood before me. He was a tall ugly looking customer in the [illegible] But I soon saw that I had been mis[illegible] It was only a most hideous suit of Jap[illegible] armor, which is the very apple of Zu[illegible] eye. A bright idea struck me. wouldn't it do for me to don the wa[illegible] gery of the defunct daimaio? Thus [illegible] tred I would enter the chamber of Zu[illegible] I would surprise her. I would then plain. In the midst of the laughter, slight yet pleasant glow created by my joke, my late arrival and my hiccough perhaps pass unnoticed.

Happy thought.

I began the task of donning the armor was longer and more difficult than I [illegible] ticipated. How in the name of all the [illegible] inflamamable those Japs ever get their [illegible] on without bursting a blood-vessel is [illegible] than I can guess.

However, at last I got into the thing started up-stairs. I trod as gently could, but when I entered the [illegible] where Zulana lay enshrined, my helmet vented me from seeing distinctly. I tum[illegible] over an ottoman, and came to the floor an awful crash.

I rose with much difficulty. But I scarcely got upon my feet when I startled by the most awful, the most piercing, the most blood-curdling sou[illegible] ever heard in my life.

It was Zulana.

Apparently the wife of my bosom failed to see the joke.

I advanced toward her and endeavore explain, but she fled from before me—in her garments of night fled she, li[illegible] ghost through the hallway.

I followed, entreating her to be [illegible] But she only shrieked the louder.

When I reached the foot of the stairs had evidently fallen back for reinf[illegible] ments, She appeared presently, flanke the cook and the housemaid. But my rival threw them into disorder, and they back.

I made a short and impressive sp[illegible] from my post at the foot of the stairway did it with as much dignity as was com[illegible] ble with my raiment. I implored the[illegible] be calm. Already a policeman was kn[illegible] ing at our portal. Finally I succeede[illegible] quieting these insane creatures.

But I had a very long and elaborate s[illegible] of explanations to make. First to policeman. He was firmly convinced th[illegible] murder had been committed, and that body was secreted on the premises. It [illegible] much time to remove this impression [illegible] his mind, and to convince him that my [illegible] was a sleep-walker, and that I had been masquerade ball. Next the servants. ordinary dignified intercourse with t[illegible] was much impaired by reason of my ab[illegible]

Last came Zulana. I will not dwell on this painful scene. Suffice it to say what I endured that night would have the early Christian martyrs think their tures were as naught in comparison. I thought of those whom Nero had dip[illegible] in oil, kindled and used as a torchlight cession, I laughed bitterly.

I am still of the opinion that my scheme was an excellent one, and that in it all the elements of a side-splitting With almost any other woman it would succeeded perfectly.

Elopement..

The wife of Sir Francis MacNaughten Coleraine, has eloped with a young agent for the Macartney estates. Sir MacNaughten has several children. She the daughter of Dr. William Howard Russell, the well-known newspaper correspondent.

The two hackmen who robbed Texas [illegible] ellers are evidently trying to raise mo[illegible] enough to go to Niagara Falls, [illegible] they can charge $1 per minute and live [illegible] est.

"So you have got twins at your house," said Mrs. Bezumbe to little Tommy Sm[illegible] son.

"Yes, ma'am, two of 'em."

"What are you going to call them?"

"Thunder and Lightning."

"Why, those are strange names to [illegible] children."

"Well, that is what pa called them soon as he heard they were in the house.

A Bugaboo once Crawled Down a Ch[illegible] ney to Run away with a Child who had Afternoon previous been Detected in one the Prevarications peculiar to Y[illegible] "Pray, do not Harm me," cried the ter[illegible] fied youngster. "But if you Insist u[illegible] Wreaking your Revenge upon a Liar, [illegible] step into the next Room and Tackle [illegible] Parents, who have been Giving me [illegible] Traditional Stiff about Santa Claus." Denver Tribune.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

St Louis clergyman was brought into ...ch, which has led to a law suit, chief... he had bought a set of false teeth ...rl whom he was believed to admire.

...lighting of the Royal Library at ... electricity has not been success... ...ls by electricity of the lamps was found ... The flickering of the lamps was found ...rying to the sight, and on one occa... the reading room was left in sudden ...ness.

...reason of the sale of Parnell's Wick... ...roperty has given rise to much conjec... Probably Mr. Parnell thinks that he ...t able to turn his money to much ...paying purposes, a consideration for ...o moderate means.

...the half-yearly meeting of the Goat ... it transpired that the Duke of ...gton was a great breeder of goats, ...that his choice animals were called ...Gladstone and Billy Doux. The con... ...tempers had given rise to their ...

...decree just issued by the French Min... ...of War affords a fresh illustration of ...minor inconvenience to which the fre... ...change of government in France gave ... The white gloves of the troopers, the ...ion of which was ordered by General ...ne late Minister, are to be reinstated ... It appears that the order for the ...ession has not even had time to be car... ...into effect.

...long-vexed question of the extreme ...of human life, as proved by authentic ...es, gives an interest to the view taken ...subject not by mere curious spec... ...but by grave actuaries. Dr. Farr, in ...ables of the expectation of human life at ...ious ages, not only accepted 100 as a re... ...age, but estimates the average dura... ...life beyond that limit, as in the case ...males about one year nine months, and ...ales a half days, and in the case of ...about one month less than that ...

...Spanish court in Madrid, the other ...of Deputies, Count Xiquena, the Gov... ...the capital, and Senior Romero ..., who was the Minister of the In... ...the last Conservative Cabinet, got ...violent altercation. After some high ...had passed between them each from ...openly challenged the other. There... ...President and the Premier inter... ...and, the Chamber having ordered ...ers to withdraw, a reconciliation was, ...short time effected between the two ..., and the debate was resumed.

...female smuggler named Bronar met ...serious accident at Lyons the other ...ale in the exercise of her illegal call... ...she had concealed several bladders of ...under her petticoats in order to pass ...through the octroi free of duty. Being ...a suspicion of smuggling, she pierc... ...bladders with a pin, and the liquor ...before she reached the police station. ...ring there, however, she incautiously ...ed to dry her clothes before a red... ...being saturated with alcohol, they ...took fire. Mme. Bromar received ...ries that her life is in danger.

...Mr. Fawcett, the Postmaster... ...of England, is close upon 50 years ...parents are still alive, and 'cele... ...their golden wedding at his place a ...ago. At dinner on that occasion ...fare consisted of a fine salmon ...by their blind son. The old lady and ...sat down to whist afterward ...the aid of spectacles; and when ...company produced a reprint of an ...of the Times containing an ac... ...of the battle of Waterloo, old Mr. ...related how he was in the market ...when the London coach arrived ...the glorious news, and how he was ...on top of the coach to read aloud ...aud the famous despatch of Wel... ...ing details of his great achieve...

Sacred Monkeys.

...Jacquemont estimates that the ...Presidency alone contains 1,600 mon... ...troops, supported chiefly by the very ...classes of the population. In the ...districts of Nepaul the hanumans have ...sacred groves, and keep together in ...of fifty or sixty adults, and, in spite ...of times, these associations multiply ...the monastic order of mediæval Europe; ...they must all be provided for, though ...fruits should have to eke out their ...on the wild rice of the Jumna swamp ...

...strangest part of the superstition is ...its charity results by no means from a ...of benevolence toward animals in ...but from the exclusive venera... ...a special sub division of the monkey ...An orthodox Hindu must not willing... ...the life of the humblest fellow... ...but he would not move a finger to ...a starving dog, and has no hesitation ...ering a beast of burden with a ...stick goad and other contrivances that ...among the avenging powers of the ...Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Ani... ...Nor would he shrink from extreme ...in defending his fields from the ...of low-caste monkeys. Dr. Allen ...once saw a swarm of excited ...running toward an orchard where ...shaking of branches betrayed the ...of arboreal marauders. Some of ...carried slings, others clubs and cane ...But soon they came back crest... ..."What's the matter?" inquir... ...doctor; "did they get away from ...

...Haga-Mani," was the laconic reply, ...monkeys." Holy baboons that ...not be interrupted in their little pas... ...They had expected to find a troop ...common makaques, wanderoos, or other ...four-handers, and returned on tiptoe ...Marryat's sergeant who went to arrest ...a scrupulous drunkard, and recognized ...commanding officer. Unarmed Europeans ...not afford to brave these prejudices. ...Sir Elphinstone's gardiner nearly lost ...life for shooting a thievish hanuman; a ...mob of raging bigots chased him from street ...to street till he gave them the slip in a Ma... ...Christian suburb, where a sympathizing ...Christian helped him to escape through the ...back alleys. The interference of his coun... ...would hardly have saved him, for ...the crowd increased from minute to minute, ...and even women joined in the chase and ...threatened to cure his impiety with a turnip ...." —[Felex L. Oswald in the Popular Monthly for January.

At a Bad Time.

Commander J. B. Coghlan, U. S. N., writes to us from the Navy Yard at Mare Island, Cal.—An enforced residence of two years in California made me the subject of most painful attacks of rheumatism. Consultation upon my case by eminent Naval and other surgeons failed to afford me the slightest relief. Dr. Hoyle recommended to me St. Jacobs Oil, the happy result of the use of which was my complete and wonderful cure.—Washington (D. C.) Army and Navy Register.

A man's curiosity never reaches the female standard until some one tells him his name was in yesterday's paper.

Persons prematurely gray can have their hair restored to its youthful beauty, by using Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer, the best article in the market.

Thirsting for knowledge—wondering if you can hang up the barkeeper for a drink.

The Chinese must go, and all Americans should go—and buy a bottle of Carboline, the deodorized petroleum hair renewer and dresser. Since the recent improvement, no preparation ever had such a sale or gave such general satisfaction as Carboline. Sold by all druggists.

There is only one thing worse than the cold grave, and that is cold gravy.

A RUN FOR LIFE—Sixteen miles were covered in two hours and ten minutes by a lad sent for a bottle of Briggs' Electric Oil. Good time, but poor policy to be so far from a drug store without it.

There has been quite a commotion among the Russian colony in Paris on the discovery that the young Count A., belonging to one of the best families in Russia, has been swindling a number of Paris jewellers for some time past. The Count is now in custody.

W. T. Bray, Pharmacist, Wingham, Ont., writes that the sale of Burdock Blood Bitters has very largely increased in that locality, and adds that he hears very favorable opinions expressed regarding it, and, if time permited, could send many names of benefitted parties, 22.

A somnambulistic girl got out of bed at Prescott, Minn., and walked across half a mile of ice and snow to the railroad station, clad in her night clothes only, and was waiting for a train when awakened.

A Cure for Croup. There is no better remedy for Croup than Hagyard's Yellow Oil taken internally and applied according to the special directions, this is the great household panacea for Rheumatism, Stiff Joints, Pain Inflammation &c. 23.

Man destroys with horns like a bull, or with paws like a bear; woman by nibbling like a mouse, or embracing like a serpent.

A Sure Thing

In the treatment of Chronic disease with that great system renovator and restorative, Burdock Blood Bitters, there is no uncertainty as to its action, its curative powers are speedily manifest by its marked effect upon the Liver, the Bowels and the Kidneys. Every dose performing its work in a perceptible manner. 24.

There should always be some foundation of fact for the most airy fabric, and pure invention is but the talent of a deceiver.

Keep it in your family. The best remedy for accidents and emergencies, for Burns, Scalds, Bruises, Soreness, Sore Throat, Croup, Rheumatism, Chilblains, and Pain or Soreness of all kinds, is that marvellous healing remedy, Hagyard's Yellow Oil. 19.

A woman emits sometimes a daring opinion; but she retires shocked if she is taken at her word.

Testimonial from Mr. W. S. Wisner, of J. O. Wisner & Son, Manufacturers of Agricultural Implements:—

Brantford, Ont., July 28th, 1880.

J. N. Sutherland, Esq.: Dear Sir,—I take pleasure in bearing testimony to the efficacy of your Rheumatine. Last spring I was completely disabled with Rheumatism, and tried various remedies, baths, &c., and finally heard of your cure. I purchased and used three bottles of it, and it effected a complete cure, for I have not had a return of the disease since.

Yours truly, W. S. WISNER.

In matters of science women are so much accustomed to be treated as of no account that they mistrust savans who treat them seriously.

Important.

When you visit or leave New York City, save Baggage Expressage and Carriage Hire, and stop at GRAND UNION HOTEL, opposite Grand Central Depot. 450 elegant rooms, fitted up at a cost of one million dollars, reduced to $1 and upwards per day. European plan. Elevator. Restaurant supplied with the best. Horse cars, stages and elevated railroads to all depots. Families can live better for less money at the Grand Union Hotel than at any other first-class hotel in the city.

He alone is wise who can accomodate himself to all the contingincies of life; but the fool contends, and is struggling like a swimmer against the stream.

"Twenty-four year's experience," says an eminent Physician," convinces me that the only cure for "Nervous Exhaustion" and weakness of the generative organs is to repair the waste by giving Brain and Nerve Foods, and of all the remedies I have used Mack's Magnetic Medicine is the best. This remedy is now sold by all our Druggists at 50 cts. per box, or 6 for $2.50, and on receipt of an order for 12 boxes, accompanied with $5.00, addressed to Mack's Magnetic Medicine Co., Windsor, Ont., they will forward the goods free by mail, and send their "written guarantee" to refund the money, if the treatment does not effect a cure. See adv't in another column.

A.P. 107

St. Jacobs Oil

THE GREAT GERMAN REMEDY

FOR PAIN.

Relieves and cures

RHEUMATISM,

Neuralgia,

Sciatica, Lumbago,

BACKACHE,

HEADACHE, TOOTHACHE,

SORE THROAT,

QUINSY, SWELLINGS,

SPRAINS,

Soreness, Cuts, Bruises,

FROSTBITES,

BURNS, SCALDS,

And all other bodily aches and pains.

FIFTY CENTS A BOTTLE.

Sold by all Druggists and Dealers. Directions in 11 languages.

The Charles A. Vogeler Co.

(Successors to A. VOGELER & CO.)

Baltimore, Md., U. S. A.

A Wise Maxim.

"A stitch in time saves nine," especially in making garments, but also in mending health. If Hagyard's Pectorial Balsam were used in the earlier stages of Colds and Coughs, many a "stitch in the side" and many a case of torn lungs might be avoided, that neglected, rapidly develope into irreparable Consumption. 21.

A woman is stoned for an action, which may be committed by a man of perfect honor.

Daughters, Wives, Mothers, look to your health! The many painful and weakening diseases from which you suffer, despairing of a cure, can be remedied by that unfailing regulator and purifying tonic, Burdock Blood Bitters. Ask your druggist for proof. 20.

The eagle in one house is the fool in another.

The Source of Much Ill Temper.

When your husband comes home in bad humor, jerks off his boots, and appears to be generally miserable, do not attribute it to business cares or hard times, but to its real cause—those terrible corns constantly annoying him. A word to the wise will be sufficient—buy a bottle of Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. His corns will be quickly and painlessly removed, and his gratitude will be unbounded. Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor sold everywhere.

It is impossible to live pleasurably without living prudently, honorably and justly; or to live prudently, honorably and justly without living pleasurably.

PROFESSIONAL.

MR. FORSTER, ARTIST, HAS RETURNED from Europe and opened a Studio, 81 King-st. East, Toronto. Portraits in oil life size.

LADIES—YOU CAN BUY $5 MANTLES for $3 at PETLEY'.

LADIES—YOU CAN BUY $10 MANTLES for $6 at PETLEYS'.

LADIES—ATTEND THE SPECIAL SALE of Mantles now going on at PETLEYS'.

LADIES—YOU CAN BUY $15 MANTLES for $10 at PETLEYS'.

LADIES—YOU CAN BUY $25 MANTLES for $15 at PETLEYS'.

LADIES—YOU CAN BUY FINE LINEN Handkerchiefs for sixty cents per dezen at PETLEYS'.

LADIES—YOU CAN BUY $3.50 MANTLES for $2 at PETLEYS'.

LADIES' 25 CENT DRESS GOODS FOR 15 cents per yard at PETLEYS'.

LADIES—SEE OUR STOCK OF FINE Wool Hose, retail at wholesale prices at PETLEYS'.

LADIES—SEE THE 10c. HOSIERY Counter at PETLE

LADIES, SEE THE 25c. HOSIERY Counter at PETLEYS'.

LADIES, YOU CAN BUY GREY AND White Cottons at mill prices at PETLEYS'.

LADIES, YOU CAN BUY FINE ALL-Wool Blankets at $2.50 per pair at PETLEYS'.

LADIES, YOU CAN BUY $30 MANTLES for $18 at PETLEYS'.

LADIES, FOR BEST FRENCH SILKS GO to PETLEYS'.

LADIES, FOR WINTER DRESS GOODS go to PETLEYS'.

LADIES, FOR CRAPES AND MOURNING Goods go to PETLEYS'.

LADIES, FOR ORDERED MANTLES GO to PETLEYS'.

LADIES, ATTEND THE SPECIAL SALE of Mantles now going on at PETLEYS'.

LAWYERS WILL SAVE MONEY BY buying their Overcoats at PETLEYS'.

MANTLES AT TEN TO TWENTY-FIVE per cent. below wholesale prices at PETLEYS'.

MERCHANTS HAVING AN EYE TO business, will save money by buying at PETLEYS'.

PUBLISHERS WILL SAVE MONEY BY attending the great sale of Overcoats now going on at PETLEYS'.

WHY PAY FIFTEEN DOLLARS FOR AN Overcoat, when you can buy the same for ten dollars at PETLEYS'?

WHY PAY $15 FOR A TWEED ULSTER when you can buy one for $10 at PETLEYS'?

WHY PAY $12 FOR A HEAVY WINTER Overcoat when you can buy one for $10 at PETLEYS'?

WORKINGMEN, WHY PAY $3.50 FOR Working Pants when you can buy them for $2.50 at PETLEYS'?

BUY YOUR WIFE ONE OF OUR $5 MANTLES for a Xmas present, and you will save $4 at PETLEYS'.

BUY YOUR WIFE ONE OF OUR $15 MANTLES, and save $10 at PETLEYS'.

$2.50 WILL BUY A PAIR OF FINE all-wool Blankets at PETLEYS'.

$4.50 WILL BUY A PAIR OF EXTRA heavy all-wool Blankets at PETLEYS'.

25C. WILL BUY A HANDSOME WAX Doll at PETLEYS'.

50C. WILL BUY AN EXTRA LARGE WAX Doll at PETLEYS'.

WHY PAY NINETY CENTS FOR A DOLL when you can buy the same for 50 cts. at PETLEYS'?

WORKINGMEN, SEE OUR HEAVY ALL-WOOL Pants; well made, heavily lined, and with strong pockets, only $2.50 at PETLEYS'.

50C. WILL BUY A SPLENDID FINE wool cloud at PETLEYS'.

$1.50 WILL BUY AN ELEGANT large cloud, sold at 2.50 elsewhere; price 1.50 at PETLEYS'.

GREY COTTONS RETAIL AT LESS THAN wholesale prices at PETLEYS'.

GREY COTTONS BY THE PIECE OR BY the bale at mill prices, at PETLEYS'.

PAISLEY SHAWLS AT COST PRICES—the most suitable Xmas present for an old lady.

BEST QUALITY BRUSSELS CARPETS—only one dollar per yard at PETLEYS'.

FINE WILTON CARPETS—ONLY $1 50 per yard at PETLEYS'.

AXMINSTER CARPETS—ONLY $1 50 PER yard at PETLEYS'.

Advice to Consumptives.

On the appearance of the first symptoms, of general debility, loss of appetite, pallor, chilly sensations, followed by night-sweats and cough, prompt measures of relief should be taken. Consumption is scrofulous disease of the lungs; therefore use the great anti-scrofulous or blood-purifier and strength-restorer, Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery." Superior to cod liver oil as a nutritive, and unsurpassed as a pectoral. For weak lungs, spitting of blood, and kindred affections, it has no equal. Sold by druggists. For Dr. Pierce's treatise on Consumption send two stamps. WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Buffalo, N. Y.

All those things which are now held to be of the greatest antiquity were, at one time, new; and what we to-day hold up by example, will rank hereafter as a precedent.

"Sigh no More, Ladies!"

for Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" is a prompt and certain remedy for the painful disorders peculiar to your sex. By all druggists.

There is poetry and there is beauty in real sympathy, but there is more—there is action. The noblest and most powerful form of sympathy is not merely the responsive tears, the echoed sigh, the answering look; it is the embodiment of the sentimient in actual help.

Woman and Her Diseases is the title of a large illustrated treatise, by Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., sent to any address for three stamps. It teaches successful self-treatment.

Vegetine

WILL CURE.

Scrofula, Scrofulous Humor, Cancer, Cancerous Humor, Erysipelas, Canker, Salt Rheum, Pimples or Humor in the Face, Coughs and Colds, Ulcers, Bronchitis, Neuralgia, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Pains in the Side, Constipation, Costiveness, Piles, Dizziness, Headache, Nervousness, Pains in the Back, Faintness at the Stomach, Kidney Complaints, Female Weakness, and General Debility.

This preparation is scientifically and chemically combined, and so strongly concentrated from roots, herbs, and barks, that its good effects are realized immediately after commencing to take it. There is no disease of the human system for which the Vegetine cannot be used with perfect safety, as it does not contain any metallic compound. For eradicating the system of all impurities of the blood it has no equal. It has never failed to effect a cure, giving tone and strength to the system debilitated by disease. Its wonderful effects upon the complaints named are surprising to all. Many have been cured by the Vegetine that have tried many other remedies. It can well be called

The Great Blood Purifier.

Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint Cured.

Newcastle, Ont., Apr. 26, 1880.

This is to certify that I have been afflicted with Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint for the last 15 years and have used Vegetine for the last six months with great satisfaction and would recommend it to any who are afflicted with the same. I found after using the second bottle that I had gained ten pounds of flesh.

Yours truly,
THOMAS DOUGLAS,
Express Agent.

I am personally acquainted with Mr. Thos. Douglas and know him to be reliable and also that the above is true.

Yours truly,
R. FATHERGILL
Pharmaceutical Chemist,
Newcastle.

Vegetine is Sold by all Druggists.

$6.25 FOR 39 CTS

Any person sending me 39 cts and the addresses of 10 acquaintances will receive by return mail goods (no recipes) that net $6.25 This is an honest offer to introduce staple goods. If you want a fortune, act now. J. D. HENRY, P. O. Box 127, Buffalo, N. Y.

RUBBER STAMPS.—ADDRESS R. H. COX, 4 King St. East, Toronto. Agents wanted.

WATCHES repaired. Trade work a specialty. A. BALLABEY, 8 King St. E., Toronto.

CHRIS. SHEPPARD, Manufr of Masonic and other Society Jewels, 154 King E., Toronto.

$5 PER DAY can be made by agents, male or female. C. W. DENNIS, Toronto.

PRICE TICKETS, SHOW CARDS, WINDOW SHADES. Newest designs. Send for price list. F. WILLIAMS, 4 King E., Toronto.

CARDS Christmas, New Year, Birthday and other Cards, at H. J. MATTHEWS & BROS. art depot, Toronto.

WATCHES. Send for free illustrated catalogue to RYRIE, the Jeweler, 113 Yonge Street, Toronto.

ILLUSTRATED RELIGIOUS WEEKLY story paper—containing Spurgeon's and Talmage's sermons—$1.50 per year; specimens free. Box 383, Port Hope.

R. S. WOOD & CO., OAKVILLE—MANUFACTURERS of outside and inside Blinds, Sash, Doors, and Mouldings. Send for prices, Oakville, Ont.

TAGS. Patent evelet, smooth surface, heavy and very tough. Send for new price list. J. G. WOODLAND & CO.; Steam Printers, Toronto.

ONTARIO VETERINARY COLLEGE, TORONTO. Students can enter from October until January. PROF. SMITH, S.,V. Edin., Principal. Fees, fifty dollars.

OWNERS OF FARM LANDS, CITY AND Town Properties, desiring to realize, will find purchasers by sending me full descriptions, lowest prices, and terms of payment. J. W. G. WHITNEY, Estate Agent, 25 Toronto street, Toronto.

FOR SALE OR EXCHANGE FOR FARM property in the village of Port Sydney, excellent business stand, with lots; also convenient, improved farm of three hundred acres, with frame buildings. Address Box 46, Port Sydney.

THE BELL TELEPHONE CO. OF CANADA having purchased patents of Telephones; which can be rented at reduced rates for private line purposes, parties desiring to obtain same will be furnished on application to the Company at its Head Office, Montreal, or to agents, or Manager of Ontario Department Bell Telephone Co., Hamilton.

CANADIAN MUTUAL AID ASSOCIATION. Co-operative Life Assurance. Provide for families in case of death. W. PEMBERTON PAGE, Sec., 87 King St. West, Toronto. Agents wanted.

WANTED PARTIES OWNING A PORTABLE Saw Mill, to tender for sawing the lumber off 200 acres of bush land. For particulars address, AUTHORS & COX, Manufacturers of Artificial Limbs, 91 Church street, Toronto.

THOSE WISHING TO DISPOSE OF OR purchase a business of any description in the city or elsewhere should call or send particulars to C. J. PALIN, 53 and 55 King-street East, Business Agent and Valuer.

QU'APPELLE LAND COMPANY OFFER Free Homesteads and Pre-emptions (Government terms) on east side of Long Lake, near Regina: loam soil, rolling prairie; good opening for merchants, &c. For particulars address W. H. GIBBS, Pres., Oshawa, or W. H. GIBBS, JR., Managing Director, Regina, N. W. T.

Old and young should use "TEABERRY
Then your laugh may be quite merry;
Fragrant breath shall pass your lips
And your Teeth shall pearls eclipse.

BRACE UP—Your system for work. ZOPESA, the new Dyspepsia and Liver remedy Atends strictly to business in correcting the Stomach, Liver, and Kidneys. Sample bottles, 10 cents; large bottles, 75 cents.

DYSPEPSIA!

And the severer forms of INDIGESTION. A small pamphlet on the above most distressing maladies and their complete cures, post free, 5 cents in stamps. By R. KING, Esq., Staff Surgeon, Royal Navy, England.

Apply to RICHARD KING, Box 346, Windsor, Ont

General & Financial Agency.

Sums of from $200 to $50,000 to invest in Patent Rights, Business Chances, Manufactures, Hotels, Saloons, and any kind of merchantable or exchangeable property.

J. I. EVANS & CO.,
Leader Lane, Toronto.

Valuable New Grape Vines By Mail.

The undersigned will send by mail to any part of Ontario or Quebec, and guarantee them to come in good order, good, strong, well-rooted Vines of the following new and valuable varieties of Grapes at the annexed prices:

Brighton, Burnett, Lady, Moor's Early, or Worden, 50 cts. each, or 5 for $2.

Belinda, Duchess, Jefferson, Pocklington Prentis, or Vergenes, $1 each, 6 for $5.

Also, a large assortment of other varieties of GRAPES, GOOSEBERRIES, CURRANTS, RASPBERRIES, BLACKBERRIES, STRAWBERRIES, ETC., cheap by mail or express.

Also, Fruit & Ornamental Trees.

Send for catalogue. Address
A. M. SMITH,
Box 571, St. Catharines, Ont.

P. S.—The proprietor of any paper sending a special notice of this advertisement in his paper to the undersigned will receive $1 worth of vines. A. M. SMITH.

THE GREAT CURE FOR

RHEUMATISM

And all complaints of a Rheumatic nature,

RHEUMATINE is not a sovereign remedy for "all the ills that flesh is heir to," but for NEURALGIA, SCIATICA, RHEUMATISM, and complaints of Rheumatic nature.

IT IS A SURE CURE

Sold by all druggists. The Rheumatine Manufacturing Co., St. Catharines, Ont. Messrs. Northrop & Lyman, Wholesale Agts., Toronto.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

The few compositions which have won the confidence of mankind and become household words, among not only one but many nations must have extraordinary virtues. Perhaps no one ever secured so wide a reputation, or maintained it so long as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It has been known to the public about forty years, by a long continued series of marvelous cures, that have won for it a confidence in its virtues, never equaled by any other medicine. It still makes the most effectual cures of Coughs, Colds, Consumption, that can be made by medical skill. Indeed, the CHERRY PECTORAL has really robbed these dangerous diseases of the terrors to a great extent, and given a feeling of immunity from their painful effects, that is well founded, if the remedy be taken in season. Every family should have it in their closet for the ready and prompt relief of its members. Sickness, suffering, and even life is saved by this timely protection. The prudent should not neglect it, and the wise will not. Keep it by you for the protection it affords by its early use in sudden attacks.

PREPARED BY 1

DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.,

Practical and Analytical Chemists.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS AND DEALERS IN MEDICINE.

Carnival to-morrow night

SHILOH'S CONSUMPTION CURE.

This is beyond question the most successful Cough Medicine we have ever sold, a few doses invariably cure the worst cases of Cough, Croup, and Bronchitis, while its wonderful success in the cure of Consumption is without a parallel in the history of medicine. Since its first discovery it has been sold on a guarantee, a test which no other medicine can stand. If you have a Cough we earnestly ask you to try it. Price 10cts, 50 cts. and $1. 0. If your Lungs are sore, Chest, or Back, Lame, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Sold by Wm. Brown's General Store Markdale

This being a week of prayer throughout the world the Presbyterian and Methodist denominations of this village have united and are holding services in each church every alternate night, this week in the Methodist

ANSWER THIS QUESTION

Why do so many people who are afflicted, seem to prefer to suffer and be made miserable by Indigestion, Constipation, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, Coming up of the Food, Yellow Skin, when for 75 cents we will sell them Shiloh's Vitalizer guaranteed to cure them. Sold by Wm. Brown's General Store Markdale.

BERKSHIRE BOAR.—Mr. C. Littlejohns, living two miles south of Markdale, has a fine bred Berkshire boar for service on his farm this season. 75 cts. cash, $1 if not so paid. 118-123

SHILOH'S CATARRH REMEDY

A marvelous cure for Catarrh Diphtheria, Canker mouth, and Head Ache. With each bottle there is an ingenious nasal Injector for the more successful treatment of these complaints without extra charge. Price 50c. Sold by Wm. Brown's General Store Markdale.

Wm. Lucas & Co, brokers, Markdale have $200,000.00 to loan on real estate. Straight loan system No fines. Low interest; moderate charges.

A VEXED CLERGYMAN.

Even the patience of Job would become exhausted were he a preacher and endeavoring to interest his audience while they were keeping up an incessant coughing, making it impossible for him to be heard. Yet, how very easy can all this be avoided by simply using Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. Trial Bottles given away at A Turner & Co's Drug Store.

A report comes from Biddulph that one of the Maher boys, alleged to have been implicated in the Donnelly murder, has become insane, and expresses a constant desire to interview County Crown Attorney Hutchinson.

DO NOT BE DECEIVED.

In these times of quack medicine advertisements everywhere, it is truly gratifying to find one remedy that is worthy of praise and which really does as recommended. Electric Bitters we will do as recommended. They invariably cure Stomach and Liver Complaints, Diseases of the Kidneys and Urinary difficulties. We know whereof we speak, and can readily say, give them a trial. Sold at fifty cents a bottle, by A Turner & Co.

The Jewish refugees who went to Winnipeg last summer are said to be in destitute circumstances, and to be depending for relief on private charity.

FREE OF CHARGE,

All persons suffering from Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis Loss of Voice or any affection of the Throat and Lungs, are requested to call at A. Turner & Co's Drug Store and get a Trial Bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, free of charge, which will convince them of its wonderful Merits and show what a regular dollar-size bottle will do. Call early.

The execution of O'Rourke, the murderer of the Mahers of Milton township, took place at Milton on Friday morning. The condemned man met his fate with resignation, and the executioner accomplished his fearful task without any of the usual bungling.

BUCKLEN'S ARNICA SALVE.

The best salve in the world for Cuts, Bruises Sores, Ulcers, Salt Rheum, Fever Sores, Tetter, Chapped Hands, Chilblains, Corns, and all Skin Eruptins, and Positively cures Piles. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded Price 25 cents per box. For sale by A. Turner & Co

The ocean steamship City of Brussels was run down in a fog off Liverpool, on Sunday, the 7th inst. Eight of the crew and two passengers are reported lost.

TWO DEPARTMENTS WELL REPRESENTED

Lately walking through the Government Buildings at Ottawa, a representative of one of Ottawa's ablest journals, in the course of conversation gleaned some items of interest. Speaking with Mr. A. J. Cambie, Chief Clerk of the Agriculture Department, that gentleman replied to a certain question: "I have used St. Jacobs Oil in my family, and found it to be an excellant article indeed. It is the remedy to banish pain and has a pleasant and soothing way of doing so, that makes it valuable. I consider it a great medicine." Calling upon Mr. Sherwood of the Militia Department that gentleman thus answerd the usual query; "I have found St. Jacobs Oil a great medicine: a splendid remedy, indeed, for Rheumatism. I have recommended it to very many. When I commenced its use I had not much faith, but now my faith could not be easily shaken. I consider it by all odds the best medicine I ever tried."

ACCIDENT.—While working at a sawing machine at R. McGrowther's, one and a half miles from Flesherton, Mr. McGrother was splitting wood when his axe glanced striking Mr. Legard on the cheek bone inflicting an ugly wound, not however of a very serious nature.

Robt. S. Rae.

TAILOR,

SYDENHAM STREET,

MARKDALE.

AN IMMENSE STOCK OF
BOOTS & SHOES

JUST ARRIVED AT THE

TORONTO HOUSE

BEST QUALITY AND LOWEST PRICE.

STOCK COMPLETE IN

Dry Goods and Groceries!

PRICES ALWAYS RIGHT.

OUR THIRTY CENT TEA

Is the wonder of the day A trial solicited.

WM. BROWN.

Markdale, Oct. 11th, 1882

GROCERIES.

A. M'INTYRE

TEA! TEA! TEA!

A. M'INTYRE

Flour, Flour, Flour.

McINTYRE'S LIQUORS! LIQUORS

McINTYRE'S Cigars, Cigars.

McINTYRE'S Coffee, Coffee.

McINTYRE'S MEAL! MEAL! MEAL!

McINTYRE'S Pork, Pork, Pork

McINTYRE'S Teas, Teas.

And everything kept in a first-class Grocery and Liquor Store. always on hand, CHEAP FOR CASH.

GROCERIES.

MARKDALE

Sash and Door Factory

SASH, DOORS,
BLINDS
MOULDINGS,
HOLLOW BATTONS,
FRAMES

Lumber, Lath and Shingles,

Always on Hand. Orders Promptly Filled.

The Subscriber wishes to return thanks to the people of Markdale and vicinity, for the very liberal patronage they have given him in the past, and hopes by close attention to business to merit a continuance of the same.

I have now extended my business, and will in future keep a full Stock of

PINE LUMBER.

Direct from the North Shore.

ALL SIZES, DRESSED AND UNDRESSED,

All Kinds of Plain and Fancy Turning

Done in a first class manner.

THOS. McNEA.

Markdale May 27th. 1881. 37-tf

GENERAL

Blacksmithing

Flesherton Station.

The subscriber begs to announce to the inhabitants of Flesherton, Markdale and Priceville, and surrounding country, that he has commenced business at Flesherton Station, where he hopes by satisfactory work and moderate rates to secure a share of public patronage.

HORSE-SHOEING A SPECIALTY.

And guaranteed that in a case of interfereing horses he will cure the defect in two shoeings or no charge will be made for the second shoeing.

A TRIAL SOLICITED.

HENRY WHITE.

Flesherton Station, Oct. 17. 1882. 1:0

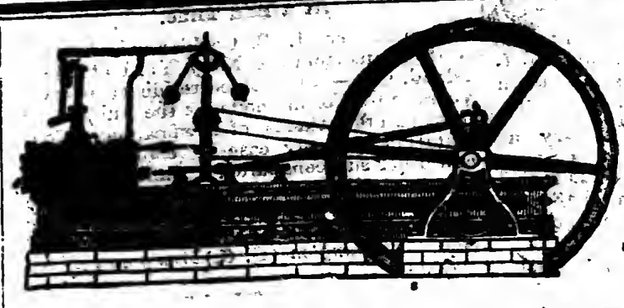
NOTICE TO FARMERS.

BUSINESS STILL INCREASING WITH

W. J. ROWE

—AT THE—

Barrhead Mill



UNDER THE OLD PROCESS.

Gristing and Chopping done every working day. Farmers from a distance can have their stuff home with them the same day.

All orders for Flour and Feed promptly filled.

W. J. ROWE, "Barrhead Mills."

October 28th 1882. 13-126

MOFFAT

M'rkdale

MAFUFACTURERS OF

Steam Engines & Shafting

Pulleys, Hangers, Gear Wocels. Shingle Jointers, &c, Also all Kinds of Mill Repairing.

PLOWS and POINTS A SPECIALTY.

MANGLES, GRATINGS, CRESTINGS, PITLARS--IRON AND BRASS CASTINGS OF EVERY DESCRIPTION.

W. BULMER,

The People's Photographer,

FLESHERTON.

Continues to take Pictures,
Do Copying and Enlarging in good style.

FRAMES and FRAME FIXINGS

in great variety and latest designs at desperate low prices.

W. BULMER.

TORONTO HOUSE,

FLESHERTON.

Stock Fully Complete. Unusually Large.

VERY ATTRACTIVE, AND

CHEAPER THAN THE CHEAPEST.

EVERY DEPARTMENT SPECIALLY ATTRACTIVE

Variety and Value Unsurpassed.

DRY GOODS DEPARMENT.

Is this season very complete with a very large stock of Dress Goods, comprising in part Cashmeres in all colors. Worsted Wool Goods in endless variety.

Boot and Shoe Department.

Would call special attention of close buyers as my stock is unusually large, from the best manufacturers and at rock bottom prices.

ORDERED CLOTHING.

Has been exceedingly brisk this season, on account of which I have laid in the largest and best stock of Tweeds, Coatings, Trowserings, and Overcoatings in this section of country. As I have always led the trade in this department buyers will find it to their advantage to call before purchasing elsewhere.

Millinery Department.

Under the able management of a first-class milliner, with plenty of assistance, will be found unusually attractive with the prettiest and most fashionable, and cheapest stock to be found in the county. Ladies, it would do you good to call and look at the stock.

Hardware and Grocery Department.

Is always fully assorted and complete with the best goods, at the lowest possible price

☞ I am the only constant and reliable buyer of Grain and Farm Produce in Flesherton, and for which I will pay the highest price in cash for any quantity of good dry, sound grain, which I would specially ask farmers to clean well. A call solicited.

R. J. SPROULE.

Flesherton, Oct. 3rd, 1882.

Markdale PUMP Factory

J. G. IRVING,

MAKER OF ALL KINDS OF PUMPS,

DROP VALVE PUMPS, CYLINDER PUMPS, CISTERN PUMPS, FORCE PUMPS,

Also, ALL KINDS OF IRON PUMPS SUPPLIED.

Satisfaction guaranteed on all my work; the proof of it is found in the fact that I am doing a larger business now than ever was done in Markdale in the Pump business. Remember the stand, 1 door north of Rutledge's Hotel

Sydenham Street, Markdale.

Markdale Standard

VOL. 3.--No. 19. MARKDALE, ONT., JAN. 18, 1883. No. 123.

The Markdale Standard

IS PUBLISHED

EVERY THURSDAY EVENING

At Markdale Ontario

$1 Per Anumn

IN ADVANCE.

If in three months, $2 if not paid till the end of the year. No paper discontinued till arrears are paid up, except at the option of the publisher, and parties refusing to continue paying up will be held responsible for the years subscriptions until they comply with the rules.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING:

One inch one year	$50 00
Two inches do.	27 50
Three inches do.	15 00
Four inches do.	8 00
Five inches do.	4 00
Ten lines, first insertion per line	8
Each subsequent insertion	3

The number of lines to be reckoned by the space they occupy measured by a scale of solid lines. Advertisements without specific directions will be published till forbid and charged accordingly. All transitory advertisements must be in the office or publication day by 10 o'clock on the wednesday proceed the week of publication.

JOB PRINTING

Of every description executed with neatness and despatch at the Office of the STANDARD, Markdale.

C. W. RUTLEDGE.

EDITOR & PROPRIETOR.

SAMUEL WARDELL,

WELL DIGGER AND DRILLER. ALL orders promptly attended to. Residence—Snider's Hill, Owen Sound. 122-35

Vincent, M.D., M.R.C.P. & S., O. Physician and Surgeon, Priceville, Graduate of University. Vict. College. " New York, and Graduate, of the same, " Aylesth Medical Institute. " Opthalmic Hospital, N.Y. Member Coll. Physicians & Surgeons, O. 104

Dental Card.

Cameron & Knight,

DENTAL SURGEONS,

Office over D. A. Cameron and Co's Drug Store, Poulett St., OWEN SOUND.

Special attention given to the preservation of the natural teeth. Artificial Dentures mounted on Gold, Celluloid, and Rubber bases.

Will be at Markdale the last Tuesday in each month,

D. Cameron, M.D., & J.P. & S. Glasgow, L.D.S., Out. C. F. Knight, L.D.S. Medalist Royal College Den. Sur., Ont

Legal.

Frost & Frost,

BARRISTERS, AND ATTORNEYS-AT Law, Solicitors in Chancery, Conveyancers, &c., Owen Sound, have resumed at Markdale, Office open every Thursday, as before.

W. Frost, J. W. Frost, LL. B. County Crown Attorney. 1

J. MASSON,

BARRISTER, MASTER AND DEP. REG in Chancery, Notary Public, Conveyancer &c.

MONEY TO LEND AT SIX PER CENT. Offices—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block Poulett St.; and in Markdale, over McFarlane's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week. 57.ly

Creasor & Morrison,

BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, CONVEYANCERS, &c. &c.

Offices in Owen Sound, Dufferin Block, over W. F. Wolf's Store and in

MARKDALE;

over W. J. McFarland's Store on Thursday and Friday of each week.

Private Funds to lend on reasonable terms.

J. Creasor, Q.C. Duncan Morison

Markdale, March 15, 1882. 79-1y

Alexander Brown.

ISSUER of Marriage Licenses, Fire and Life Insurance Agent. Commissioner in B. R. &c. Conveyancer and Licensed Auctioneer for the County of Grey. Farmers, Sales, and Land Sales, Punctually attended to and charges made very moderate.

Priceville, Sept. 17. 1880. 1-y

Hotels.

REVERE HOTEL,

MARKDALE.

JOHN SPROULE, - Proprietor.

This popular Hotel has had a large addition added to it, thoroughly refitted, and is now second to none in the county. Good stabling and attentive ostler. First-class accommodation for commercial travel $1 per day. Barber's shop in connection.

Markdale Hotel.

Good Accommodation for Travellers. 'Bus to and from all trains. Charges moderate.

Markdale. A. Rutledge, Prop.

COMMERCIAL HOTEL,

PRICEVILLE, Ont.

Large and commodious Sample Rooms Good Bed Rooms, &c. The Bar and larder well supplied with the best the market affords; good Stabling and attentive Hostler's

THOS. ATKINSON, Proprietor

CHATSWORTH HOUSE

(LATE MORROW HOUSE,)

CHATSWORTH, Ont.

THE undersigned having purchased the above property has had it thoroughly renovated and refurnished throughout beside making other new improvements, which will greatly add to the comfort and convenience of his guests, would respectfully solicit the patronage of the public generally. The best brands of liquors and cigars always in stock. Good meal and comfortable rooms guaranteed. Good stabling and attentive hostler.

—C. H. Mathews, Prop. 114.

Miscellaneous.

John McDonald,

CHATSWORTH,

DIVISION Court Clerk, Issuer of Marriage Licenses, Commissioner in B.R., Conveyancer, &c. Deeds, Mortgages, Wills, &c. attended to, promptly, accurately, neatly, and cheaply. Private funds to lend in small sums on easy terms. Notes discounted

MISS LAMB,

DRESS-MAKER. UP-STAIRS IN Douglas' Block. Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges moderate.

Markdale, Nov. 15th, 1882. 114-3m.

R. M. Galbraith,

AUCTIONEER AND GENERAL LAND Agent, Williamsford Station. Auction Sales attended in all parts of the County. Goods sold on commission. Rates moderate. Pianos, Organs, and Sewing Machines; also Fruit and Ornamental Trees, Vines, Agricultural Implemennts, and Machinery of all kinds on sale.

Williamsford, Jan. 27, 1881.

T. E. DAVIS,

BUILDER & CONTRACTOR, (Stone and Brick). After completing 13 buildings his season is still on the track and is still prepared to do all kinds of stone and brick work, plastering and tuck pointing. Those who contemplate building will find it to their advantage to give him a call.

Residence corner of Brown and Sproule Stetes. Markdale. 16-y

MISS WELSH,

Dress & Mantlemaker. Charges moderate. Satisfaction guaranteed. Hill's Block, Sydenham street.

Markdale, Nov. 6th, 1882. 113-126

Wm. Brown,

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.

Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.

N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate security.

LOYAL MARKDALE LODGE,

Of C. O. O. F. No. 78, will meet in their hall on Monday evening, Jan. 22nd, at eight o'clock p. m.

108 W. L. YOUNG, Sec'y.

EUGENIA

Grist, Saw and Lath Mills

Having made eqtensive improvements in my Grist Mill I feel confident I can give good satisfaction.

GOOD FLOUR ALWAYS ON HAND.

Chopping Done Every Day.

Custom Sawing and Bills Filled on the shortest notice.

LUMBER AND LATH ALWAYS ON HAND.

Cherry, Butternut, White Ash, Black Ash Basswood, Pine and Hemlock Logs wanted

69ly. M. AKITT, Eugenia.

$66 a week in your own town. $5 outfit free. No risk. Everything new. Capital not required. We will furnish you everything. Many are making fortunes. Ladies make as much as men, and boys and girls make great pay. Reader, if you want a business at which you can make great pay all the time you work, write for particulars to H. Hallett & Co., Portland, Maine. 71-126

$2 Watches, issued without $2.00. Watches and Chains $4. Imitation gold $6. Solid gold $12. Cheapest and best for your own use or speculative purposes. Catalogue sent free. Address Hallett & Co., 120 Exchange, New York.

ROBT. ASKIN,

MARKDALE,

Has opened out a First-Class

Furniture!

—AND—

UNDERTKING ESTABLISHMENT,

And therefore has supplied a want long felt, especially in the Undertaking Line.

COFFINS,

CASKETS,

SHROUDS,

and all

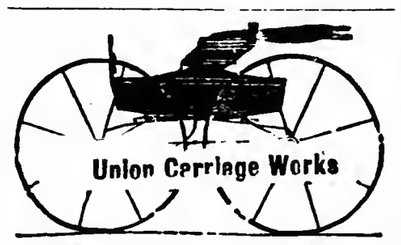
FUNERAL FURNISHINGS,

supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse

for hire at moderate rates.

FURNITURE!



From the Common to the

Best and Latest Styles,

in everything in the line.

Call and see for yourselves.

ROBT. ASKIN.

Union Carriage Works.

All work manufactured from

FIRST CLASS MATERIA

In the Latest and Best Improved Style, and finished with English Varnish.

Painting & Trimming Rigs

will receive prompt attention.

All Repairs executed in the shortest possible time consistent with good workmanship.

GOOD WORK A SPECIALITY.

Remember the Shop, opposite the Cheapside

D. J. SHANAHAN,

Proprietor.

Markdale, Dec. 2nd, 1881. 64.

HAIR CUTTING AND SHAVING

By T. D. Smith,

Razors, Straps, and Shaving Brushes for sale. Razors sharpened.

☞ Orders filled for Tomb Stones.

STARTLING DISCOVERY!

LOST MANHOOD RESTORED.

A victim of youthful imprudence causing Premature Decay, Nervous Debility, Lost Manhood, etc., having tried in vain every known remedy, has discovered a simple cure, which he will send FREE to his fellow-sufferers, address J. H. REEVES, 43 Chatham st., N. Y

WARNING!

There is great danger of taking cold from wet feet If you want to Guard Against Sickness!

Keep your feet dry and warm by procuring your

BOOTS!

—FROM—

KAY & THOMAS.

Satisfaction Guaranteed. Medicated Cork Soles, all sizes, kept on hand. Remember the place opposite the new Standard Office. 49

Best business now before the public. You can make money faster at work for us than at anything else. Capital not needed. We will start you. $12 a day and upwards made at home by the industrious. Men, women, boys and girls wanted everywhere to work for us. Now is the time. You can work in spare time only or give your whole time to the business. You can live at home and do the work. No other business will pay you nearly as well. No one can fail to make enormous pay by engaging at once. Costly outfit and terms free. Money made fast, easily and honorably. Address True & Co., Augusta, Maine. 71-126

REST AND COMFORT TO THE SUFFERING

Brown's Household Panacea has no equal for relieving pain, both internal and external. It cures pain in the Side, Back or Bowels, Sore Throat, Rheumatism, Toothache, Lumbago and any kind of a Pain or Ache. "It will most surely quicken the Blood and heal, as its acting power is wonderful." "Brown's Household Panacea," being acknowledged as the great Pain Reliever, and of double the strength of any other Elixer or Liniment in the world, should be in every family handy for use when wanted "as it really is the best remedy in the world for Cramps in the Stomach, and Pains and Aches of all kinds," and is for sale by all Druggists at 25 cents a bottle 75-127

EARS FOR THE MILLION

HOO CHOO'S BALSAM OF SHARK'S OIL positively Restores the Hearing, and is the Only Absolute Cure for Deafness known This Oil is abstracted from peculiar species of small White Shark, caught in the Yellow Sea, known as Carcharodon Rondeletii. Every Chinese fisherman knows it. Its virtues as a restorative of hearing were discovered by a Buddhist Priest were discovered about the year 1410. Its cures were so numerous, and many so seemingly miraculous, that the remedy was officially proclaimed over the entire Empire. Its use became so universal, that for over 300 years no Deafness has existed among the Chinese people. Sent, charges prepaid, to any address at $1.00 per bottle.

Hear what the Deaf say:

It has performed a miracle in my case.

I have no unearthly noises in my head, and hear much better.

I have been greatly benefited.

My deafness helped a great deal—think another bottle will cure me.

Its virtues are unquestionable and its curative character absolute, as the writer can personally testify, both from experience and observation. Write at once to Haylock and Jenney, 7 Dey Street, New York, inclosing $1 and you will receive by return a remedy that will enable you to hear like anybody else, and whose curative effects will be permanent. You will never regret doing so."—Editor of Mercantile Review.

☞To avoid loss in the mails, please send money by Registered Letter.

Only imported by HAYLOCK & JENNEY, late Haylock & Co.,

Sole Agents for America. 7 Dey St New York 93-145.

Wm. Lucas & Co.,

BANKERS,

Money Loaned

IN large or small amounts, at all times, on good endorsed notes, or on collateral security.

INTEREST AT 6 PER CENT.

Allowed on Savings Deposits.

☞Drafts issued and Collections made on points, at lowest rates.

W.M. LUCAS, Manager.

September 23, 1880. 2-ly

JOHN NOBLE,

MARKDALE,

GENER'L BLACKSMITH

HORSE SHOEING

A SPECIALTY.

A CARD.

To all who are suffering from the errors and indiscretions of youth, nervous weakness, early decay, loss of manhood, &c., I will send a receipe that will cure you, FREE OF CHARGE. This great Remedy was discovered by a missionary in South America. Send a self-addressed envelope to Rev. Joseph T. Inman, Station D, New York City.

BILLIARD ROOM

D. M. HOGAN, Proprietor.

Next door to Trimble & Wright's, Reid's Blk.

First-class tables. Cigars and temperance drinks to be had. 116.ly.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

INTERESTING ITEMS GATHERED FROM OUR EXCHANGES AND OTHERWISE FOR THE READERS OF THE "STANDARD."

Priceville.

Monday (Fair day) was an extra busy day here, quite a number of cattle changed hands at fair prices. If a large number of cattle were fed for beef, it would not only improve the farms, but also put money in the farmers pockets.

On Tuesday of last week, a lad named McKay, while attending a machine at T. Ferguson's, met with an accident which has not proved to be very serious however. In standing beside the machine, the cylender belt caught his jacket and tore a large portion of clothes off his body; being a pretty stout lad he succeeded in getting away, thus dividing his garments with the greedy machine.

Miss Effie McKinnon is improving nicely now under Dr. Jamieson's skilful treatment.

Since Dr. Bennett has removed from this place, the coming of a sober, steady, skilful physician is very much desired, and would be hailed with delight by a large number of people, in this vicinity.

Owen Sound.

Capt. Kennedy, one of the oldest and most experienced navigators on the lakes, and well known to our citizens as Captain of the City of Owen Sound, and aferwards of the City of Winnipeg, died at Toronto on Monday morning last.—O. S. Times.

Mr. R. Notter is retiring from business.

A nephew of B. Allen, Esq., aged 25 years, died here suddenly last week from inflamatory rheumatism. His ents reside in Sligo, Ireland. He was the only son and was on a visit to his friends.

The firm of Kennedy & Sons are likely to remove to Collingwood. This will be a serious loss to Owen Sound, as this firm pay out annualy in wages about $12,000.

The work of building the new lighthouse is now in active progress.

Williamsford.

Mr. Price is pushing his new building towards completion, and will have it ready for a tenant in the spring. Mr. Vogan is likely to be the man who will cater to the wants of the public in the new Hotel.

Mr. James Ireton returned last week from Manitoba.

Berkeley.

Large quantities of wood, telegraph poles, &c., are coming in at this station.

Mr. G. S. Brown, having purchased the saw mill from Mr. Alfred Williams, is fitting it up in first class order and will be sawing before spring. A shingle machine is being fitted up to be run in connection, and will be under the management of Mr. Henry West.

Meaford Road.

The annual meeting of the United Sabbath School was held in the Wesley Methodist Church for the election of officers and teachers, with the following result:—W. Buchanan, jr., Superintendent; P. Sparling, Asst. Supt.; J. I. Graham, Secretary; J. Brodie, Treasurer; Jas. Buchanan, Librarian; G. Wright, Asst. Lib.; Mrs. T. Boland, teacher B. class, Females; J. Hansom, Ass. teacher B. Class; Miss Buchanan, teacher 2nd B. Class, Females; Miss E. Boland, teacher 1st class, Females; Miss I. Jimby, teacher 2nd class, Females; Miss Sparling, teacher. Infant class; Miss M. Shannan, Ass. teacher Infant class. T. Boland, teacher B. Class, Males; A. Johnston, teacher 1st T. class, Males; J. Freman, teacher 2nd T. class, Males; H. Sparling, teacher Infant class, males.

The Anniversary in connection with te above Sabbath School will be held in the W. M. [illegible], on the 14th of February.

A Bachelor.

Too poor for a nob;
Too proud for a snob;
Too fine for the mob,
Poor devil!

Too mystic for trade;
Too honest, 'tis said,
For gain that is made
By evil.

Too high his ideal;
Too humble the zeal;
To duty too leal
For grieving.

Too patient for haing;
Too mirthless for mating;
Life's pleasures belating
And leaving.

Too little a poet,
To make the world know it;
Too weak to forego it,
Still trying.

Too frank, too forgiving;
Too prone to believing;
Too lonesome for living,
Or dying.

LOSS OF THE S.S. "CITY OF BRUSSELS."

Run Into in a fog and Cut to the Water's Edge—She Sinks in a few minutes —Ten Lives Lost—Marvellous Escape of Those on Board.

The steamer "Kirby Hall," which collided with the "City of Brussels," has arrived at Liverpool, and reports that the collision occurred at the estuary of the Mersey. The "City of Brussels" foundered almost imediately. Eight of her crew and two passengers were drowned. When the "City of Brussels" arrived in the vicinity of the North-West light-ship at six o'clock on Saturday morning the fog was so dense that the captain decided not to attempt to make any headway, bnt to remain under steam near the light-ship. A careful look-out was kept, the captain and second and four h officers being on the bridge, and a pilot also looking out. Bells were kept ringing and fog horns frequently sounded. For some time the steamer lay in safety. Extra lookout men were posted in every part of the vessel. These measures had a reassuring effect on the passengers. Suddenly the sound of a vessel approaching was heard, and a large steamer only a few yards distant, and moving quickly through the water, loomed out in the fog. Almost instantly, and before any steps could be taken to avert it, a tremendous collision was seen to be inevitable. The bow of the "Kirby Hall" struck the starboard bow of the "City of Brussels" with tremendous force, cutting her down to the waters' edge, and almost half through. The "Kirby Hall" was on her maiden voyage, having left Glasgow a few hours before, and was calling at Liverpool to complete loading and embark passengers for the East. The moment the collision was seen to be inevitable everything possible was done aboard the "City of Brussels" to protect the lives of the passengers and crew. Even after the collision the passengers seemed unconscious of the gravity of the situation and the terrible gap made in the forward part of the vessel. She was known, however, to be leaking very rapidly. All the passengers were marshalled into their appointed places so that there was no hurry or confusion. Life buoys were served out, boats were swung and every preparation made for an emergency. This proved to be a more critical and immediate danger than was anticipated. The passengers had been put into the boats and some of the crew told off to man these crafts, the captain and the remainder of the men continuing aboard until the safety of the rest was assured. The vessel got visibly lower in the water and those of the crew who had not escaped in the boats climbed into the rigging. In twenty minutes after the impact the vessel gave a tremendous lurch, flinging off those in the rigging and plunging into the depths with a fearful swirl. The scene was heart-rending in the extreme. The people in the boats were enveloped in darkness and those in the water without help. The "Kirby Hall" immediately after the collision, rebounded through the violence of the impact, and was soon obscured by the fog and unable to lower her boats or render active assistance. The "City of Brussels'" boats picked up all that could be recovered, and, the fog lifting, all were taken aboard the "Kirby Hall," when it was found that only two passengers was drowned. Eight of the crew were lost, including the second officer, Young, and the carpenter, Woods. All the others are believed to have escaped. The "Kirby Hall," after searching for several hours, proceeded to Liverpool. The captain, when rescued, was floating on a spar. Only the vessel's top masts are visible. Young and Woods were taken on the "Kirby Hall" apparently lifeless. All efforts to restore animation were fruitless. The "Kirby Hall's" bow was stove in.

Cairo After the War.

A correspondent of the London Globe writes from Cairo: The rolling stock of the railway station has certainly not improved since I was in Egypt. The leather and springs of the cushions and seats are the worse for wear. The oilcloth on the floor is all cut up. Absolutely nothing has suffered in my house from the four months' neglect. As regards dust, some of those old offices Dickens describes were clean compared to the thick brown coating which covered everything in my rooms. The two bedrooms and dining room were cleared of it somewhat in view of my return, but there is a week's work of cleaning and turning out to be done in the house before it is again respectable. I found everything just as I had left it on June 21st, the dirty tea things used at our last meal, some fossil bread and butter, a tea pot with mouldy tea leaves in it, and cobwebs from chair to chair, and from table to floor.

The sheets, towels and other coverings used to throw over piano and other furniture looked like old leather in color, and one could not tell what objects were until shaken free from this clothing of dust. The broken windows, of course, let in latterly no end of this. I was glad we had taken down and carefully folded every curtain in the house before leaving on that never-to-be-forgotten occasion. They come out now fresh and clean, and untouched by moth or mouse. Beetles and silvertails were plentiful, but do not seem to have done any damage. I took off the carpet and sheet I had thrown over the piano tremblingly, expecting to find the instrument innocent of red cloth or felt, but wonderful to relate everything was intact. I struck a few chords, the tone was as rich as ever and in good tune. I breathed again, and played "God Save the Queen." The English [illegible] I noticed, were sadly reduced in flesh and looked all like old Germans. Many troopers were mounted on horses taken from the Arab cavalry, bearing the Egyptian war office brand on the flank. Soldiers taking their way to or from the camp bestrode the Cairo donkeys, and looked of course, ridiculous, especially the long cavalrymen, booted and spurred. Beyond a few houses having been robbed by unfaithful servants who thought their padroni would never return, Cairo has in no wise suffered from the state of affairs. Every now and then (in Alexandria at least), a rumor gets about there is going to be a row, and the Europeans at nightfall keep within their houses. A similar rumor that the Christions are going to pitch into the Arabs gains ground in the native circles, and they stop at home. Neither has any foundation, and all ends in smoke.

These scares are but natural, and until time soothes the still excited imagination on both sides, such rumors may from time to time crop up. Native dogs and cats, especially dogs, are fewer about the city now. The Arab roughs all over the country were wont to put a fez on one dog and something like a European hat or helmet on another, and call them Seymori (Seymour). The last word, I am informed, is another Arab term for dog or mongrel! then these dogs were dragged about with cords round their necks and subjected to every species of torture, until finally they were dispatched—hence the scarcity of dogs. Many cats died, as numbers of families left and the cats could not all find food.

The Best Door to Stop Fire.

A number of experiments have been made in this country to test the value of different materials for doors that may be exposed to fire. from which it appears that perhaps the best door yet devised is one made of wood and covered with tin. The door is formed of solid planks, or boards matched and fastened together and crossing at a right angle, or at forty-five degrees. There should not be less than two thicknesses in any door, and as many more should be used as the size of the opening to be closed demands. This solid wooden door is then to be completely covered on every side with tinned sheet-iron. all the joints being soddered as in making tin roofs. The tinned door is supported by hangers moving on an inclined rail or track over the doorway, so that when free to move it will close by its own weight. At the door jamb opposite the door, when it is open, should be a wooden casing covered on every side with tin, and into which the door will fit tightly when it closes by moving on its track, the inside of the casing being wedge-shaped, The casing on the opposite side must fit the door closely so as to leave no cracks at the sides of the door. To keep the door open a small bolt is placed on the inside of the door-jamb, the pressure of the door keeping the bolt in position. On the under side of the arch or top of the door is a wire having a joint or link in the centre, this link being soldered with fusible metal that will melt at 160 degs. Fahr. Just above the bolt that holds the door open is a weight supported by a wire connected with the wire holding the fusible link. This weight moves in guides and is wedge-shaped below. The threshold of the door should be of brick or stone to resist fire, and high enough to keep out water in case the room is flooded. From the reports and experiments it appears that such a door is thoroughly reliable. The soft metal link parting even in the heat of a fire in a building on the opposite side of the street, and allowing the weight to fall, pushing the bolt to one side and permitting the door to close. Such wooden tin-covered doors and window shutters are reported to stand unharmed through severe trials when iron doors have failed, melted, or warped under less exposure to fire. The door and the automatic device for closing it are officially recommended by some of the leading fire insurance companies of this country.—Fireman's Journal.

Skin-Grafting in Paris.

The Paris papers contain detailed accounts of the really remarkable operation of skin-grafting performed by M. Lamalleree of that city, in which case grafts were employed obtained from two different sources, a human being and a rabbit—those from the latter evincing a superior amount of vitality. In this case, the patient, a man 37 years old, has suffered for six years from a varicose ulcer of the left thigh, which resisted every form of treatment; the ulcer was fourteen centimeters long and eight deep. At the request of the patient, Dr. Lamalleree resorted to skin-grafting, procuring for the purpose six grafts from the shaven abdomen of a rabbit and two from the forearm of a man. These having been placed in a position, a Lister dressing was applied; after the lapse of eight days this was removed, and it was found that those furnished by the rabbit had become adherent and that new skin was forming rapidly in their immediate neighborhood; while, on the other hand, the two human pieces had not adhered. The dressing was continued eight days longer, and when removed an islet of skin, ten centimeters long and seven wide, was seen to have established itself upon the center of the ulcer. The dressing was again reapplied and maintained in place for eight days, at the completion of which it was taken off and the sore was found completely cicatrized. Two months later the healing was progressing favorably, the newly-formed skin showno trace of its origin.

How a Lawyer Treated the Case.

I, David Strouse, of New Haven Connecticut, was attacked with a severe rheumatism in my right arm, hand and foot,, so that I walked with difficulty and could hardly use my hand to eat with. I used one bottle of St. Jacobs Oil, rubbing well three times a day, and obtained instant relief and a perfect cure. DAVID STROUSE, Attorney-at-Law.

The first society for the exclusive purpose of circulating the Bible was organized in 1805, under the name of the British and Foreign Bible Society.

THE PHENOMENA OF DEATH.

A Physician's Observations as to the Form the Final Summons Takes.—The Hours at Which Dissolution Most Frequently Occurs.

A physician of Philadelphia has made the phenomena of death a special study by careful observation and lengthy consultation with his brother doctors, he has acquired a fund of interesting facts and suppositions regarding the fatal moment which all humanity sooner or later have to experience.

"One of the things of which I am convinced," said the doctor in conversation recently, "Is that death is painless. I mean that the moment of dissolution approaches as unconsciously as sleep—the soul leaves the world as painless as it enters it. Whatever be the cause of death, whether by lingering malady or sudden violence, dissolution comes either through syncope or asphyxia. In the latter case, when resulting from disease, the struggle is long, protracted and accompanied by all the visible marks of agony which the imagination associates with the closing scenes of life—the pinched and pallid features, the cold, clammy skin, the upturned eye, and the heavy, laborious rattling respiration. Death does not strike all the organs of the body at the same time; some may be said to survive others, and the lungs are the last to give up the performance of their functions. As death approaches the latter becomes gradually more and more oppressed; the air-cells are loaded with an increased quantity of the fluid which naturally lubricates the surfaces; the atmosphere can then no longer come into contact with the minute blood vessels spread over the air-cells without first permeating this viscous fluid—hence the rattle. Nor is the contact sufficiently perfect to change the black venous into the red arterial blood; an unprepared fluid consequently issues from the lungs in to the heart, and is thence transmitted to every other organ of the body. The brain receives it and its energies appear to be lulled thereby into sleep—generally tranquil sleep—filled with dreams which impel the dying to murmur out the names of friends and the occupants and recollections of past life. The rustic 'babbles of green fields,' and the hero expires amid vision of battle."

"A very large number of deaths are attributed to old age," continued the physician, "yet few, even of the oldest, die merely of exhaustion or gradual decay; some positive disease, in most cases, overwhelms the small remains of vitality. Yet death from actual old age is not impossible and must be the sweetest death of all—a sleep indeed that wakes in eternity. In regard to longevity, it is asserted that the United States is more favorable to long life than any other country. If I cannot abide entirely by that opinion, I can at least agree that this country has and can produce ten centerians to any one of any other land, and I think Washington's body-servants affirm my statement. The average of human life is 33 years. One-quarter die previous to the age of 7 years; one-half before reaching 17; so those who pass their teens enjoy a felicity refused to one half the human specie. In every 1,000 persons only one reaches beyond the nineties; in every 100 only six reach the age of 65, and not more than one in the 500 lives to 80. Of the upward of 1,000,000,000 inhabitants of the globe one-third die every year, 91,824 every day, 3,730 every hour, and 60 every minute. Married persons live longer than single; tall men longer than short ones, and women have more chances of life in their favor, previous to being 50 years of age than men have, but fewer afterward. Persons who are born in spring generally grow more robust than those who come into the world at other seasons. Deaths are more frequent by night than by day."

"Have the hours most fatal to life ever been ascertained?"

"Yes, to a certain extent. I have the data here of some very interesting conclusions ascertained in 2,880 instances of death at all ages. The examples are taken from all conditions of life and during a period of several years. If the deaths of the 2,880 had occured indifferently at any hour during the twenty-four hours, 119 would have occured at each hour. But this was by no means the case. There are two hours in which the proportion was remarkably below this—two minama in fact—namely, from midnight to 1 o'clock, when the deaths were 83 per cent, below the average, and from noon to 1 o'clock, when they were 20¾ per cent. below. From 3 to 6 o'clock a.m. inclusive, and from 3 to 7 p.m., there is a gradual increase in the former of 23½ per cent above the average, in the latter 5½ per cent. The maximum of death is from 5 to 6 o'clock a.m., when it is 40 per cent above the average; the next, during the hour before midnight, when it is 25 per cent in excess; a third hour of excess is that from 9 to 10 o'clock in the morning, being 17¾ per cent. above. From 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. the deaths are less numerous, being 16½ per cent below the average, the hour before noon being most fatal. From 3 o'clock p. m. to 7 p. m. the deaths rise 5½ per cent. above the average, and the fall from that hour to 11 p.m., averaging 6½ per cent. below the mean. During the hours from 9 to 11 o clock in the evening there is a minimum of 6½ per cent, below the average. Thus the least mortality is during midday hours, namely from 10 to 3 o clock, the greatest during early morning hours, from 3 to 6 o'clock."

"By the way," remarked the doctor as his visitor got up to leave. "I said just now that America could produce more cases of longevity than any other country. I must except the coldest regions of Russia, as I understand there is a level country of about one hundred leagues square, sloping to the south on the borders of Siberia, where a year rarely passes in the course of which some person does not die at the age of 130. I asked a Russian physician whether the report, could be depended upon, and he says they are kept by the priest of the Greek church, who, for reasons of faith are most rigid in regard to the exactitude of age of the dead. In one year, the foreign doctor informed me, 416 persons of 100 years and upwards, died in the Russian empire. The oldest was, 136 years, and there were 111 over 110 years old. I regret to own that an American record can be beaten in anything, but in this instance the land of the czar walks over the course. Many happy new years."—Philadelphia Press.

"GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY" (Trademark registered) is not only a sovereign remedy for consumption, but also for consumptive night-sweats, bronchitis, coughs, spitting of blood, weak lungs, shortness of breath, and kindred affections of the throat and chest. By druggists.

The Queen has tendered her regret for Archbishop Tait's death by appearing in the deepest mourning at the splendid ceremony of the opening of the Law Courts.

For Ladies suffering from functional derangements or any of the painful disorders or weaknesses incident to their sex, Dr. Pierce's treatise, illustrated with wood-cuts and colored plates, suggests sure means of complete self-cure. Sent for three letter postage stamps. ADDRESS WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Buffalo, N. Y.

"Beecher has been pitching into hell," says an exchange. What, already?

Unlike other cathartics, Dr. Pierce's "Pellets" do not render the bowels costive after operation, but, on the contrary, establish a permanently healthy action. Being entirely vegetable no particular care is required while using them. By druggists.

The sleeve is now made a prominent feature of the dress by such modistes as Worth and Pingat.

Notice.

Each bottle of BRIGGS' ELECTRIC OIL will hereafter be accompanied by a corkscrew, as it is important the cork should be preserved and the bottle well corked when not in use to retain the strength of the medicine. It cures Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Liver and Kidney Complaints or of the Urinary Organs; cures complaints arising from Colds, such as Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Diptheria, Cough, Asthma and Difficult Bredthing.

Victor Hugo never suffered a bird or a plant to be kept prisoner in any house of his.

No one whose blood is impure can feel well. There is a weary, languid feeling, and often a sense of discouragement and despondency. Persons having this feeling of lassitude and depression, should take Ayer's Sarsaparilla to purify and vitalize the blood.

The Duke of Sutherland is buying land in America. He owns a large part of Scotland now.

The Very Latest News.

"Have you heard the latest news?" said one city swell to another. "No, do tell me what it is." "Well, I have at last got rid of my corns by one trial of Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor, and I know yours were even worse than mine were, I couldn't pass without telling you to get a bottle at your druggists. I'll guarantee it will fix 'em completely." It is sure, prompt and painless, taking the corns out at once. Sold everywhere. Beware of substitutes and imitations.

The mouthpiece of the telephone may be perfectly respectable, but there are a great many things said against it.

A Secret.

The secret of beauty lies in pure blood and good health, without the one the other is impossible. Burdock Blood Bitters is the grand key that unlocks all the secretions, opens the avenue to health by purifying and regulating all the organs to a proper action. It cures all Scrofulous Diseases, acts on the Blood, Liver, Kidneys, Skin and Bowels, and brings the bloom of health to the pallid cheek. 14

An Ohio woman armed with a broomstick and a flat-iron put to flight two masked burglars the other day. When lovely woman stoops to flat-irony she makes a success of it.

